NATIONAL CITY BANK CIRCULAR

The National City Bank circular for January is a virile document, as such should be. It says in part that "it may be said that there is less unrest now than there was before the ending of the extraordinary McNamara cases at Los Angeles. This one episode alone has been of more significance than most people realize, as it has been influential in subduing those labor leaders who aim to accomplish their ends at all hazards, even if violence is necessary. While the best men in the labor unions have always discountenanced such methods, the fact is that they were practiced by irresponsible leaders, who had a large following, which made it possible for them to work immense injury to all concerned. For these reasons it is gratifying that the worst element among labor men has been made to see that the continuance of such practices will not be tolerated in the United States. Because of the recent period of slow times which the country has witnessed, there is a less insistent demand on the part of labor for higher wages, and the tendency seems to be in the direction for both employers and employees to work more harmoniously."

J. B. FORGAN REVIEWS BANK YEAR

In reviewing the year's business of the First National and the First Trust and Savings, President James B. Forgan sent the following résumé of condition to stockholders accompanying the annual statement for the banks:

"The demand for money for industrial purposes has been limited, the supply having been fully equal to the demand, and low rates of interest have prevailed throughout the year. These low rates are reflected in the reduced earnings of the First National Bank as compared with those of the previous year, but as the amount necessary to be deducted from gross profits to provide for losses is this year about $200,000 less than last year, the net profits for 1911 fall short of those of 1910 by only $44,601.02.

"In the First Trust and Savings Bank the profits have been well maintained, showing an increase over the previous year. This is a satisfactory outcome of the year's business, considering the more or less depressed condition of the investment security market, the comparatively small number of new bond issues brought out and the low rates of interest prevailing on collaterally secured loans during the year.

"Such losses as have occurred or can be anticipated have been provided for out of gross earnings and there are no past due or defaulted obligations either as to principal or interest among the current assets of either bank. The affiliated banks again show satisfactory earnings for the year on their average aggregate capital employed, viz., 10.8 per cent. The net profits for 1911 (all losses provided for) of the First National Bank are $1,778,571.25, as compared with $1,823,172.27 last year, and the net profits of the First Trust and Savings Bank for the year are $1,094,973.81, as compared with $940,604.63 last year.

"On the recommendation of the directors the shareholders of the First Trust and Savings Bank at a special meeting held on De-Each shareholder has now a beneficial interest of half a share in the First Trust and Savings Bank stock for every share of First National Bank stock owned."

SWIFT & CO. HAS GOOD YEAR

Net profits of Swift & Co., for the company's fiscal year, ended September 30, 1911, were $7,137,500. This compares with profits of $7,050,000 for the previous fiscal year ended September 30, 1910.

In the distribution of these profits, however, the percentage on $75,000,000, the outstanding capital in 1911, was 8.53 per cent, whereas the profits in 1910 were equal to 11.75 per cent on the then outstanding capital of $60,000,000. The company had for three-quarters of the 1911 fiscal year $15,000,000 more capital employed than in 1910.

At the close of the annual meeting directors were elected, and the directors in turn re-elected officers. Following is the roster: President, L. F. Swift; vice-presidents, Edward F. Swift and Charles H. Swift; treasurer, L. A. Carton; secretary, F. S. Hayward;

CHICAGO TITLE EARNS 16 PER CENT

Net earnings of the Chicago Title and Trust Company in 1911 were by far the largest the company ever reported. The amount—$808,513—figures 16.07 per cent on the $5,000,000 capital, compared with earnings of $708,838, or 14.18 per cent on the capital, in 1910. In the last year the earnings were a shade more than twice the dividend paid. Of the $403,513 of undivided profits for the year $250,000 was carried to surplus, making the total in that account $1,750,000.

The De Quincey State Bank of De Quincey, La., has been organized with a capital stock of $15,000. W. S. Furguson is president, J. M. Gill is vice-president and J. H. Beall is cashier.

Mainly About Banks and Bankers

BANKERS as a rule are optimistic for 1912. Those who have expressed themselves have gone on record about as follows:

JAMES B. FORGAN: From the standpoint of the banks there seems no likelihood of the demoralization of interest rates which a short time ago it was feared might take place after the first of the year. There is enough business in sight now to keep bank funds fully employed at fairly profitable rates well into the spring, and the probabilities are that the same conditions will last throughout the year.

ERNEST A. HAMILL: The most important question calling for adjustment is that of labor. There is an unequitable balance between the present prices for labor (which have been continually working higher) and the reduction of, or absence of, equalizing freight rates upon which axis labor adjustments largely revolve. It is, I believe, generally conceded we may not hope for marked improvement in present economic conditions until the more pertinent questions attaching to labor are solved.

NELSON N. LAMPERT: The country is all right. Collections are a little slow because much of the farm surplus is being held back for better prices, but nevertheless, nearly all the banks will still have considerable idle money after taking care of the January disbursements. While it is only natural to look for a slowing up of trade through the campaign, I am sure the nation has regained its courage, and that a decided improvement will be recorded in the year's business.

CHARLES G. DAWES: I do not think that during the next year we will have any marked difficulty in credits, and that the volume of business, while still done on the close margins that have been incident to the business of the last year, will be somewhat larger.

DAVID R. FORGAN: The regulating, or destroying, of the so-called trusts and the revision of the tariff are both questions of vital importance to business. Can any man at this time form any definite idea regarding either? If the republicans are elected, what will they do? If the democrats win, what will they do? No man knows. I therefore look for a slow-going year for 1912, with easy money, no snap to business and a waiting policy generally.

IN 1900 we had approximately 10,000 banks with assets aggregating $10,785,000,000. The population of the country at that time was 76,000,000, and the wealth, as computed by the bureau of the census, $88,000,000,000. At this time the number of reporting banks has increased, as heretofore stated, to more than 24,000 and their assets to $23,631,000,000. Hence it is seen that while population has increased 25 per cent and wealth in general 47 per cent, the volume of business of the banks, as evidenced by their assets, has increased 119 per cent.

NOTWITHSTANDING the great increase in the number of banks, there is a growing tendency toward consolidation, and, generally speaking, this is in the interest of better conditions. Statistics are not at command in relation to the extent of activity in this direction on the part of state banks, but during the past year about 100 national banks were liquidated, over 80 per cent of which were closed for the purpose of merging their business with other national or state banks.

"IF nominated I will not accept, if elected I will not serve," which was General Sheridan's formula when his friends wanted him to run, is commended to the chief Faber pusher on the Outlook.

WELL, if Lincoln Steffens and Samuel Gompers lose their jobs, they can go into vaudeville. Many persons discredited in other lines have done well there.

A DISCHARGED life insurance agent, at Chicago, has sued his company on a contract whereby he was to get 75 per cent of the first year's premium, 10 per cent for the next ten years, and 7½ per cent for the life of the policy. Now you know where your good money goes and why your friend (the agent) is so solicitous to have you properly provide for your (and his) family.

ONLY thing that beats it is a western bank giving an ad. contract to a New York solicitor, who gets a commission of 52½ per cent.

WHAT puzzles us is, how the packers ever got prices up so high by meeting only once a week? Wonderful!

SEVEN different times we tried to make up a list of the men we'd like to see head the democratic ticket, and regular as taxes, Wilson came to the top.

COL. GEO. (B. M.) HARVEY, of Harper's, says he's for Wilson because "he is thoroughly equipped mentally, morally, by birth, training and experience; because his conception of public office is true; because he is constructive and efficient; because he is free; because he is a democrat; because he would be elected."

WG. STURGES figures that the average quotation on New York exchange between banks in Chicago in 1911 was 12½ cents premium per $1,000. This is the highest average reached, except in 1908, when it was 15 cents.

THE State Bank of Chicago has transferred $500,000 from the bank's undivided earnings to surplus account. This makes a total surplus of $2,000,000. The bank's capital is $1,500,000 and its deposits about $25,000,000.

OWEN J. REEVES will be the only national bank examiner assigned to the Chicago district hereafter. Heretofore there have been two. The strong supervision of the Chicago clearing house is the real reason and hereafter the national examiner will be in once in eight or ten months instead of twice yearly.

C. H. MEYER, who was an examiner last year, now is president of the Security banks on the West Side in which Mr. Forgan is interested.

CHICAGO Italians are smarter than their brothers in Philadelphia, where the Italian private banks are fighting state inspection under the new law in the courts. In Chicago Italian citizens in connection with downtown bankers are organizing the State Bank of Italy to be started with $200,000 capital and $50,000 surplus.

JUDGE LANDIS was again reversed, this week, by the federal circuit court. Probably used to it by now?

CHAS. EUGENE CLARK is president of the Kentucky State League of Building Associations, but he ought to have been a poet. His apostrophe to his natal state and to what the B. and L. associations do for the people will hold the record for some time in the grandiloquent line of English as she is spoke in Kaintuck. A postal will reach the fountain at Covington.

NORTHERN TRUST only required 20,000 dollars more to make it thirty millions deposits in the annual statement.

TOO much oil being pumped in California. Six months' supply now in storage. Bankers should hold back advances in such a field and thus naturally restrict production. Prices and notes both would be made better by such a course.

COL. I. S. AISTHORPE. First Bank and Trust, Cairo, sent out one of the neatest New Year's cards seen in these precincts.

ALLERTON, GREENE & KING send out one of the best of the January investment circulars. Might pay you to have a look at it?

JAPS are a queer lot. One has named one of his boys "Pushing to the Front," and the other, "Rising in the World," using the titles of two of Orison Swett Marden's popular books for boys. In Japanese the titles are condensed into one word.

THE recent sudden death in New York of Henry Snowden Ward, the distinguished secretary of the Dickens Fellowship in England, is as sincerely deplored in America as in the land of his birth. His delightful lectures on Dickens and Shakespeare have been popular literary features of this season; and one of his latest acts was the preparation of an illuminating article for Lippincott's Magazine on "Charles Dickens and Women," which will be published in February when the Dickens centenary is due.

JUST one week later came the death of Alfred Tennyson Dickens, also in New York. (Continued on page 31)

CHICAGO, JANUARY 6, 1912

Principal Financial and Economic Events in 1911

President Schurman of Cornell named the capture of the McNamaras by Detective W. J. Burns as the greatest individual feat accomplished in 1911. Not less than three other public men gave the same opinion.

Weighty Trust Decisions

Trust decisions, reciprocity in trade with Canada and tariff legislation held the center of the stage in the United States. Few court utterances in modern times have attracted more general comment than the verdicts of the supreme tribunal of the land in the Standard Oil and tobacco trust cases, delivered in Washington, D. C., May 15th and May 29th. The finding in each case was that the corporation was a combination in restraint of trade and therefore in violation of the Sherman anti-trust law. Both combinations were ordered dissolved within a specified time, and this was done toward the close of the year.

In each case Justice John M. Harlan, since deceased, filed an opinion concurring in part and dissenting in part with the views of the majority of the court. The substance of his objection was that while the majority held, notwithstanding the language of the Sherman act, that it excepted contracts which were not in unreasonable restraint of trade, he considered every contract in restraint of trade to be in violation of the act.

"If," he said, "the act ought to read as contended for by the defendants, congress is the body to amend it, and not this court, by a process of judicial legislation wholly unjustifiable."

The conflicting opinions of the supreme court were reflected in congress, in the press and in legal and business circles generally, and the discussion has not yet ceased.

Prosecutions under the Sherman act against the United States Steel corporation, the so-called wire trust and various other concerns were begun during the year and those started previously, especially that against the packers, were pushed with vigor. There were complaints in some quarters that the energy displayed by the government in this direction was tending to revive destructive competition in business and that annihilation rather than regulation would be the result. This was denied by the administration and its friends.

Reciprocity Plan Fails

President Taft sent to congress January 26th a reciprocity agreement with Canada, with a message recommending that it be enacted into law. A bill embodying the terms of the agreement passed the house February 14th, but no action was taken in the senate before the expiration of the 61st congress by limitation March 4th. The president thereupon called a special session of the 62d congress to begin April 4th to consider the measure. The house passed the bill April 21st, and the senate concurred July 26th, the bill becoming a law July 26th, when it was signed by the president.

Strong opposition developed in the Canadian parliament, and as filibustering tactics were adopted Premier Laurier caused the law-making body to be dissolved, and orders were issued for the election of new members September 21st. At the election the government was decisively defeated and hope of agreement with the United States in the matter of reciprocity had to be abandoned. Laurier and his cabinet resigned to give way to an antireciprocity administration, headed by R. L. Borden.

Reciprocity, had it been approved by Canada, would have made possible the free exchange of many agricultural products and the importation of many articles at reduced duties. It was contended by its champions that it would ultimately have reduced the cost of living and would have promoted closer and friendlier relations between the two countries. There was considerable opposition to the measure in some of the northwestern states, especially in farming communities, while in Canada many persons otherwise well disposed toward the measure were turned from it by a remark made by Champ Clark, speaker of the house in Washington, that he favored the annexation of the dominion to the United States.

Tariff Bills Are Vetoed

While the extra session of the 62d congress was called particularly to dispose of the reciprocity issue, it was not content with that. It passed three tariff bills, known respectively as the farmers' free list bill, the bill to reduce duties on wool and manufactures of wool, and the bill to reduce the duties on manufactures of cotton. All were vetoed by President Taft, who held that in the absence of expert information the bills were crude and unscientific, and therefore not such legislation as he could approve.

Territories Are Admitted

Congress at this session enacted three important laws. One was for making public campaign contributions made for the purpose of influencing the election of representatives in congress; another was for the apportionment of representatives in congress; and the third was for the admission of New Mexico and Arizona under the condition that they amend their constitutions. The change in the New Mexico constitution was merely to make it easier of amendment. Arizona was asked to omit the provision for the recall of judges. In the first bill passed by congress this was retained, but President Taft, in a vigorous message, vetoed it. It may be added that both the prospective states complied with the conditions imposed by congress. Under the new apportionment bill the total number of representatives was fixed at 433, to be increased to 435 in case New Mexico and Arizona became states.

Dynamiters Are Sentenced

John J. McNamara, secretary and treasurer of the International Bridge and Structural Iron Workers' Union, with headquarters in Indianapolis, Ind.; his brother, James B. McNamara, and Ortie E. McManigal were arrested in April on the charge of having caused the dynamiting of a large number of structures throughout the country where there had been labor troubles. The most serious instance was that of the destruction, through an explosion of the Los Angeles Times building, resulting in the loss of twenty-one lives. The arrests were made by Detective William J. Burns and the prisoners were taken at once to Los Angeles, Cal. Large sums of money were raised for their defense and when James B. McNamara was placed on trial, October 11th, it was expected that the hearing would occupy many weeks.

December 1st, before a jury was secured, the McNamara brothers caused a sensation by pleading guilty, Jas. B. to having blown up the Times building and John J. to being implicated in the dynamiting of the Llewellyn iron works, in Los Angeles. Judge Walter Bordwell, who presided, sentenced the former to imprisonment for life and the latter to fifteen years imprisonment. Both men were taken to San Quentin prison. The Times explosion took place only the day before the big Chicago special to the Los Angeles, 1910, A. B. A. convention, and bankers never will forget the event. Charles H. Huttig offered a resolution in the convention giving $5,000 to the families of the twenty-one who were killed, and to help the maimed and injured. This money was made instantly available.

Work of Illinois Legislature

Illinois had a quiet year politically. There was no state election and the statesmen had to content themselves with planning for the future. The legislature held two sessions, the first, or regular, meeting lasting from January 4th to June 1st. The second, or extra, session began June 14th, but after a few days it adjourned to October 24th, when it met again for a day or two without accomplishing anything.

At the regular session some useful legislation was enacted, including the employees' compensation law and measures for the prevention of occupational diseases, the limitation of the hours of work for women, the extension of the state and other civil service systems, the establishment of municipal and park pension funds, the acquisition of the Starved Rock property for state park purposes, the creation of a rivers and lakes commission and the prohibition of the common drinking cup. Attempts were made to pass a deep waterway bill, but both at the regular and special sessions it encountered opposition which could not be overcome.

Business Needs to be Reassured

In the course of the strenuous campaign waged by the government against the so called trusts within the last year, business, uncertain of its ground, has picked its way cautiously and with hesitation; capital has been reluctant to venture into new enterprises and the commercial life of the nation as a whole has assumed a subdued tone. Only within the last few weeks has this feeling of restraint given signs of relaxing. It has yielded to a better understanding of the Sherman act and the relation of "big business" to that law.

Well informed business men and bankers are beginning to discard the notion that the law is a stumbling block to progress and prosperity. Rather they are inclined to argue that business honestly conducted need no longer have any fear of the law now that the path has been pointed by the supreme court in ordering the dissolution of the Standard Oil and American Tobacco trusts. Agitation against "big business" for political effect has not entirely subsided, but conservative opinion holds that the nation after its campaign of "trust busting" has entered upon a constructive period in which business sentiment is to regulate political opinion rather than the reverse.

The Fourth National Bank of the City of New York

It invites the correspondence of banks, corporations, firms and individuals throughout the country.

CAPITAL AND SURPLUS, $10,000,000.00

Money Is Plentiful

Throughout the year money has been plentiful and borrowers have found no difficulty in securing accommodations at reasonable rates of interest. The conservative attitude of legitimate business curtailed the demand for funds somewhat, while the movement to curb reckless speculation which was started by the banks the year before rendered much capital idle. This is one reason why the banks in this country were able to lend in the neighborhood of $100,000,000 to Germany in the fall when that country was facing a crisis. Also it explains the large absorption by banks and fiduciary institutions of bonds and high class securities.

A large amount of new securities was brought out by the railroads in the first half of the year, many of which were under the necessity of refinancing former issues, chiefly short term notes; but industrial corporations did a comparatively small amount of new financing.

Aid Given German Bankers

German bankers, who for some time had been under a strain to finance an industrial and speculative "boom" in that country, were suddenly called upon to pay off loans aggregating many millions secured from Paris and London bankers. Good securities had to be sacrificed to meet these demands and large holdings of American stocks and bonds were thrown over. The selling was on a tremendous scale for several days and American bankers, becoming alarmed over the situation, hurried to the aid of the Germans with large loans. In this way the slump in this country was checked, but not until the "average price" had gone down to 67.11. Here the market had the appearance of being sold out and there was a gradual recovery on trade of small dimensions, an "average price" of 71.89 being recorded October 20th. Then came the filing of the suit against the United States Steel corporation by the government and with it another spasm of liquidation under which "Steel common" broke sensationally to 50 and the average price of twenty stocks dropped back to 69.21.

Financial Returns Large

While the yields of the leading crops of the country were smaller by far than in the previous year, corn alone showing a decrease of 355,000,000 bushels, there was a sound basis for agricultural prosperity in that the price returns made the farmers for their crops were in excess of those of 1910. This more than made up for the reductions in the crops. Naturally, with a partial failure of crops in some sections, the conditions in those localities were less favorable from a financial standpoint, but, taking the country as a whole, the farmers had an extremely good year.

The total value of the eleven principal farm crops, outside of cotton, was $3,769,000,000, which was $190,000,000 more than was received by the farmers in the preceding year. Notwithstanding the big reductions in corn and oats compared to the 1910 figures, the net returns as the result of higher prices more than compensated growers as a class for the light yields. Corn values, based on the price on the farm December 1st, were $181,000,000 more than the preceding year, while oats were worth $8,000,000 more. Barley sold at the highest level in years, and possibly the highest on record, the top figure for choice malting grades being $1.30. Corn prices were the highest at the end of the crop year and oats showed a steady enhancement in value from the early part of the season until after harvest.

The value of the entire wheat crop was $543,000,000, compared to $564,000,000 the previous year and $658,000,000 in 1910. Hay and other crops have held at substantial prices throughout the season.

Reynolds Sees Currency Reform Near

President George M. Reynolds of the Continental and Commercial National, gave his views on the nearness and benefits of currency reform as follows: "I believe that there will be currency legislation in the not far distant future. I believe it will come earlier than is generally expected. I believe the American public is too intelligent to delay much longer the settlement of the prime need of the country. It is not the banks alone that are affected. Indeed, it may be said to be secondary with the banks, affecting first of all legitimate business, and through the business situation affecting the banks.

"With all commercial and industrial interests vitally involved it seems hardly likely there will long delay allowed.

"Briefly, the need of the country is the protection of credits up to the extent to which they can be granted for the reasonable and conservative requirements of business. That end, I think, the present plan promises to serve.

"The chief objections raised against it are that the National Reserve Association will be a 'political football,' and that has been disproved by the clear evidence that the fundamental points of the plan preclude that possibility; that it will be susceptible to Wall Street influence, and that chance was obviated by the rule that not more than four men could be chosen from any one of the fifteen sections; that the concentration of the country's reserves would mean the concentration of the money power.

Will Aid Small Banks

"This objection is based on a confusion of what a reserve really is, failure to distinguish between reserves and money power. Credit, the prime necessity of business, must be furnished. Now, the result of this centralization of reserves as proposed is not the returning to a few banks of the money power. It is the scattering of credit power through the 25,000 banks that will make up the association all through the country. It is a decentralization of the money power. The little bank in Texas will have the same right that the big bank in Chicago or New York or St. Louis will have. It may take its commercial paper to the nearest branch of the association and discount it precisely as we can.

"Of the total business of the country, 96 per cent is done on credit in one form or another. Just 4 per cent is in money transactions. It is easy to see how essential is the building up of credits. It is the business man who is affected most vitally by the lack of credit at critical times, and it is certain the business interests of the country will do all that is possible to push through constructive legislation.

"So, with a better public sentiment in all quarters, better understanding of conditions, the buying power of the country as great as it ever was it is reasonable to look forward to a good year, and that I think 1912 will be."

INDORSE POSITION OF ILLINOIS BANKERS

The State Teachers Association, at Springfield, indorsed the position taken by the Illinois Bankers Association in regard to agricultural education in the following resolution:

Whereas, The Illinois State Teachers Association in annual convention assembled, is glad to know that the Illinois Bankers Association, through its committee on agricultural and vocational education, has taken up the matter of better educational methods, for Illinois, and hopes to draft a bill with especial reference to agricultural and vocational features, therefore be it

Resolved, That we express our appreciation of their interest in the cause of education, and that we offer them our help and support. And further, that we appoint a committee of five that will stand ready, at their call, to co-operate with them in every way, and to report progress at the next regular meeting of this association.

Banking Results in Chicago for 1911 "Satisfactory"

Bankers have known, of course, that 1911 was not a record, nor a record breaker in their line. This is true of centers, cities and of towns. Business did not justify any greater credits than were extended, and thus the line of exchanges and deposits were somewhat restricted. The year in Chicago differed little from experiences in other places and profits were not up to the best years. "Satisfactory" is the word most often heard by way of comment. While profits were not as large as in some former years, neither were the losses. A few banks were "stung" hard enough on two or three occasions to make them notice the loss, but, taking it all in all, the amount written off during the year was comparatively small. Nearly all through the year money rates were low. In most of the prominent banks this was more than balanced by increased deposits and loanable funds. And in a general way the banks of the city kept their funds well employed.

Deposits Nearly Billion

The growth in deposits during the year was large, the total in all the banks being so close to the billion dollar mark that the bankers expect to pass it in the present year. Early in January the deposits reported by all the banks in Chicago reached a total of $840,000,000. Two months later the amount had increased $70,000,000 and by June 7th it was up to virtually $945,000,000. There was a further increase of about $4,000,000 by September and the local banks were then at their top mark in deposits—$948,000,000. Owing to the withdrawal of country balances on account of the movement of the crops, the total had sagged to $938,700,000 on December 5th, the date of the last official statement published. This volume of deposits, local bankers claim, establishes Chicago firmly as a financial center of the first importance, and its prestige appears to be growing rapidly and steadily.

Consolidations Are Few

Bank consolidations during the year were few in number and not of particular significance in the general situation. The first change of particular interest in this direction was the purchase of the Hibernian Banking Association by the Continental and Commercial National, the $1,500,000 capital stock of the former being exchanged for an equal amount of the stock of the latter and then being deposited in trust. The Hibernian was not merged into the purchasing bank, however, but is still operated as a separate institution. Earlier in the year the new Peoples Trust and Savings Bank had purchased the business of the Railway Exchange. Toward the end of the year the Central Trust purchased two state banks older than itself and one small national bank. The institutions taken over were the Western Trust and Savings, the Metropolitan Trust and Savings and the Monroe National. In order to effect these purchases the Central Trust increased its capital from $2,000,000 to $3,500,000.

Increases in Capital

During the year several banks increased their capital to take care of the requirements of larger business. In May the Fort Dearborn National issued $500,000 of new stock at 125 in order to provide capital for its trust company and savings bank. At the same time the National City issued $500,000 of new stock at par. The Chicago Savings Bank doubled its capital in May by the issue of $500,000 of new stock at 120. The Northwestern Trust added $50,000 to its former $200,000 of capital, selling the new shares at 150. The Union Bank added $300,000 to its capital, the issue being at 125. Besides these regular increases, several of the banks declared stock dividends out of surplus account. The principal one of these was the 100 per cent stock dividend declared by the First Trust and Savings, that institution having capitalized $2,500,000 of surplus on December 30th. Earlier in the year the Harris Trust and Savings gave its stockholders a stock dividend of 20 per cent, or $250,000 in par value. On stock for which $500 a share is bid a dividend of that kind is worth $1,250,000.

Stock Dividends Bid

During the summer the Kaspar State Bank paid a stock dividend of 65 per cent on its old $200,000 of capital and sold enough more at par to raise the total capital to $400,000. The Security Bank had previously provided the capital of the Second Security by issuing $100,000 of its own stock at par and then declaring a stock dividend of 50 per cent, or $200,000. Late in the year the stockholders of the West Side Trust and Savings Bank

American Telephone & Telegraph Co.

A dividend of Two Dollars per share will be paid on Monday, January 15, 1912, to stockholders of record at the close of business on Saturday, December 30, 1911.

authorized the payment of a 50 per cent stock dividend amounting to $100,000, and the issue of another $100,000 of capital at par, making the total capital $400,000. This change will be effective early this year. Only one banking institution in the city went on the rocks during the year, and that—the Farwell Trust—was not in reality a bank, but a promotion company. The small amount of money it held on deposit was paid off before any announcement of its trouble was published.

New Banks Established

Several new banks were started in the city during the year, but nearly all of them were in the outlying districts. The only deal of the kind involving an important amount of capital in the downtown district was the conversion of a private into a state chartered institution. This is the Greenebaum Sons Bank and Trust Company, with $1,500,000 capital. Other banks started during the year are the American State, the Douglas State, the Guaranty Trust and Savings, the Home Bank and Trust Company, the Mid-City Trust and Savings and the Old Colony Trust and Savings. Only a few banks increased the dividend rates on their capital stock. It was not considered good policy to incur this extra expenditure in a period when there was so much business uncertainty and so moderate a demand for money. Prices of bank stocks, however, were nearly all higher at the end of the year than at the beginning. In some cases excellent price gains were made. Trading in bank stocks was not active during the year, but there were spasmodic spurts of buying in issues that were affected by consolidation or capital increase.

FARMERS LIKE AGRICULTURAL EDUCATION

Geneseo, Ill., January 2.—The school of agriculture and household science for the fifteenth congressional district opened to-day with a large registration. Farmers and their wives are taking advantage of the opportunities offered. About 100 boys already are enrolled for study of grain and stock. The girls' household science class numbers 50. The farmers appreciate the privileges extended by the state farmers' institute and the state university.

POSTAL SAVINGS DURING 1911

Within the year just ended 5,185 postal savings banks have been established, and their combined deposits now exceed $14,000,000.

Only forty-eight postal banks were established in the first four months of the year. During practically half of the year the system was in its experimental stage, and not until it was found to work admirably did the postmaster-general begin to create postal banks on a wholesale plan. When the system is installed to its full extent there will be more than 10,000 banks doing business, and it is estimated that not less than $200,000,000 will be deposited annually. More than 25,000 individual postal bank accounts are now in existence. The figures show that 27 per cent of the depositors are foreign born.

PITTSBURGH BANKS PROSPEROUS

Banks of Pittsburgh, both state and national institutions, have enjoyed a year of prosperity and enter the new year with wonderful prospects considering the present expansion in general trade, and the likelihood of the industries on which Pittsburgh prides itself having a major share in the revival. Deposits have been maintained at record levels throughout the year. The twenty-eight national banks at their last statement were somewhat below the best figure reached during the year, which was also the best twelve-month in the history of the city's national banking, but reasons of only momentary force brought about the decrease. The twenty-five state banks and thirty-one trust companies at their last statement were at the best deposit figures in their histories. The surplus and undivided profits accounts of the institutions display a healthy growth and demonstrate the soundness of the banking power of the community.

The year was not a very eventful one for the institutions. No developments of extraordinary importance took place, there were no mergers and comparatively few changes in personnel. The First National Bank was the most prominent institution in a new sense. Its most important move was in transferring its property to a new corporation, which is now erecting additional floors to the original beautiful banking structure of three stories, the result to be one of the most imposing office buildings in the country. It gained a new president in the person of Oscar L. Telling formerly connected with the office of the comptroller of the currency in Washington. James S. Kuhn retired from the presidency, but was elevated to the office of chairman of the board of directors.

The First National Bank, Kenosha, Wis., has increased its capital stock to $150,000. Charles C. Brown, president of the Wisconsin State Bankers Association, was re-elected president.

BEFORE AND AFTER

The interest aroused by our December advertisement makes it desirable that we should more fully illustrate the Re-enforced Concrete Dam at Pittsfield, Mass., that tried to go out and couldn't and a "blow-out" formed 53 feet wide, 20 feet deep, and extending 50 feet above and below the dam. With any other type of dam the whole structure would have immediately collapsed into the pit and the disaster would have been final. How completely, although unwittingly, our dam escaped this catastrophe is best shown in the photograph. By close scrutiny a sag of about 5 inches can barely be detected in the down-stream view.

What happened was that the steel used in reinforcing the floor to distribute base pressures chanced to be sufficient to convert the floor into the bottom chord of a girder so that the dam sagged only to an amount representing the elasticity of the steel. The deck was not cracked nor was any damage done to the structure itself. The cut-off wall was afterwards carried down to rock and piers built under the exposed buttresses, which were jacked up level. The hole was then filled up and the dam is today doing service as if nothing had happened—as witness, the photograph. The location of the "blow-out" on the cut is about half an inch from the further end of the dam.

It is proper to say that by their express stipulation written into the contract the owners assumed all responsibility for the foundations, the responsibility of this Company beginning with the superstructure itself.

Respectfully submitted,

In December of 1908 occurred one of the most remarkable events in the annals of Hydraulics. During that year we had built a reservoir dam with a small spillway, 42 feet high, on a clay foundation, the rock being at too great a depth to warrant excavation. While the clay was apparently sound, it developed that there was a water-bearing stratum some 20 feet below the surface, which communicated with the pond.

After a period of soaking fall rains, when the reservoir was full and running over the spillway, the attendant noted water boiling up through the soft earth some 50 feet below the dam. This rapidly increased and in a few minutes the water broke through in volume and in less than an hour the whole reservoir was empty.

CAPITAL ONE MILLION DOLLARS

A STRONG APPEAL FOR SUPPORT

P. W. Hall, secretary for Iowa, sends out the following strong appeal for loyal support: "Do you know that we pay out thousands of dollars to protect you from burglars and frauds, and that not one dollar of this money is paid out of the membership dues, which you pay? Our only source of revenue for protective work is from the profits on burglary insurance and bonds which pass through this office. Now don't you think every bank in Iowa should place all of its burglary and bond business here, so we can thereby increase the efficiency of this protective department?" Then, too, they have employed W. J. Burns, king of all living detectives, to do the work.

LAWSON JOINS FIRST NATIONAL, DETROIT

Detroit, Mich.—George E. Lawson, for 31 years associated with the Peoples State Bank and its predecessor, the Peoples Savings Bank, has been elected vice-president of the First National to fill the vacancy caused by the election of Emory W. Clark to the presidency, succeeding John T. Shaw. Mr. Lawson's new position will require active executive service and will mean his retirement from the vice-presidency of the Peoples State, in which he is also a director. He is likewise a director of the Security Trust Company, and a vice-president of the Bankers Club of Detroit.

PITTSBURGH BANKS MAKE PROTEST

Three of the largest banks in Pittsburgh have filed a bill in court asking a preliminary injunction against the Pittsburgh clearing house, attacking the new rule referring to bills in transit. Farmers Deposit, Mellon National, and Lincoln National are the complainants. It is the first case of the kind upon record, and will be watched carefully by all clearing house banks.

NEW YORK BANK MERGER

New York.—At a meeting on Wednesday night of the directors of the Savoy Trust Company and the Broadway Trust Company the merger of the two institutions was approved. After February 1st all business of the Savoy Trust Company will be transacted in the name and at the offices of the Broadway Trust Company. The combined deposits of the institutions are nearly $7,000,000.

Bank Elections

The national and most of the state banks of Chicago will hold their annual meetings and elections on next Tuesday, January 9th. Those which met Tuesday of this week made few changes in their official lists.

Stockholders of the Merchants Loan and Trust Company elected five new directors. They are Frank H. Armstrong, Henry P. Crowell, Seymour Morris, John G. Shedd and Albert A. Sprague II. The directors re-elected the old officers without change. The list is as follows:

President—Orson Smith.
Vice-presidents—E. D. Hulbert, F. G. Nelson and J. E. Blunt, Jr.
Cashier—J. G. Orchard.
Assistant Cashiers—P. C. Peterson and C. E. Estes.
Secretary—Leon L. Loehr.
Directors—Frank H. Armstrong, Enos M. Barton, Clarence A. Burley, Henry P. Crowell, William A. Gardner, Elbert H. Gary, Edmund D. Hulbert, Chauncey Keep, Thies J. Lefens, Cyrus H. McCormick, Seymour Morris, John S. Runnells, Edward L. Ryerson, John G. Shedd, Orson Smith, Albert A. Sprague II, and Moses J. Wentworth.

The directors ordered the transfer of another $1,000,000 from undivided profits to surplus, making the latter account $6,000,000, or twice the capital stock.

At the annual meeting of stockholders of the Colonial Trust and Savings Bank, W. R. Moorhouse and J. M. Hopkins were elected to the board of directors and S. B. Thomas dropped out. The officers were re-elected and the list is as follows:

President—L. C. Rose.
Vice-president—Jacob Mortenson.
Vice-President and Cashier—R. C. Keller.
Assistant Cashiers—Emil Stuedli, W. F. Dogget, H. A. Sadler and W. J. Feldmann.

BOUQUET FOR NATIONAL SURETY

Secretary Hall of Iowa says in his recent letter to members that "we place all of our insurance and bonds through the National Surety Company, which is known everywhere as 'The Leading Surety Company,' but some of our members place their business with competitive companies and such companies are chuckling over it because they get the business away from this office, and also get the full benefit of our protective work and don't pay us a cent for it. Remember, the National Surety Company stands ready and willing to meet any rates quoted by reputable companies."

MILWAUKEE

NEWS LETTER By Mortimer I. Stevens

WISCONSIN

In summing up the year of 1911, Gardner Stickney, vice-president of the Wisconsin Trust Company, Milwaukee, says:

"The year 1911 was remarkable in financial circles. It began with slight improvement in values compared with the close of the previous year, which continued with comparatively small trading until late in February, when decisions of the Interstate Commerce Commission in the freight rate matters, which it had had under consideration since June of the preceding year, were announced. The commission refused to consent to general increases of any kind, and the decisions in their entirety came as a complete surprise.

"For nearly three months the market for securities remained quiet, not marked by large events. Then in May came the supreme court anti-trust decisions, that in the Standard Oil case, on the 15th of the month, and the American Tobacco Company on May 29th. While the decisions in both of these cases were considered adverse to the companies concerned, the court's liberal construction of the Sherman anti-trust law of 1890 caused a marked revival in investment trading and a sharp advance in prices. By the end of the month there was a very decided upward tendency, with the general tone of the market good.

"June contributed an event, strongly reassuring, in the sale by the government of $50,000,000 of Panama Canal 3's. More than 10,000 bids were received, and the bonds were subscribed for more than three times, selling at a price making the average yield to the purchaser 2.905 per cent, a lower interest basis than that commanded by the government obligations of the three leading European nations.

"The uncertain crop situation and the Interstate Commerce Commission's decision in what was known as the Spokane matter, covering the long and short haul clause, were influences of a disturbing nature during July. Unfavorable features predominated during the following month, and the supporting influences seemed to be almost entirely withdrawn from the investment market. Public utterances of prominent men contributed largely to a continuance of this disquietude during September, and it was not until well into October that conditions seemed to show any marked improvement. This improvement has continued to the present. Undoubtedly one of the most important things contributing to this condition is the demonstrated fact that practically all bankers of the country united in their support of the amended report and recommendations of the National Monetary Commission.

"Locally, the security market has been practically without feature during the year, with about the usual volume of business. A number of Wisconsin public utility issues have been successfully handled, chiefly in the local market, and there has also seemed to be a strong liking evidenced for preferred stocks of well established industrial corporations."

Presents New Line of Argument

James K. Ilsley, president of the Marshall & Ilsley Bank, Milwaukee, in the January number of the Wisconsin Banker, presents a new line of argument in favor of the Central Reserve Association. Mr. Ilsley says in part:

"The task which confronts those of us who honestly believe in the soundness of the provisions of the proposed bill is to make clear some of the fundamental principles of banking, and to show why a central reserve association representing the combined banks of the country will be a safe institution, and will round out our now incomplete banking system.

"With that end in view, I first want to point out what I conceive to be a quite common misconception as to banking functions. Comparatively few understand what banking really is; commonly, people think yet it chiefly consists in receiving and loaning out money, and do not grasp the fact that buying and selling credit is the much more important function of the business. Receiving and paying actual money (largely in the way of settling balances), is of course a necessary part of banking, but if this were all, the enormous exchanges of the products of the soil and of the factory, that daily take place, could not possibly be made. Credit, and credit only, through a banking system enables our vast industrial system to exist. Let banking credit be withdrawn, business would stop at once and starvation would stare us in the face.

"Without such an association bankers can largely protect themselves and their stockholders in times of trouble, but as in 1907, it is at the expense of the customers and the public. . . . The avowed purpose is, that the Central Association shall be a conservator and protector of banking credit. . . . I venture the hope that after a full and fair discussion, people generally will be convinced of the soundness of the principles underlying the plan which the monetary commission is expected to recommend to congress. . . ."

Banks Prosperous in This County

Notwithstanding the large amount of money invested by the people of Iowa county, Wisconsin, in western land during the last few years, there still remains a goodly sum in the banks of the county as shown by the last official statements. Taking the items of time and demand certificates and individual and savings deposits, which represent the people's money, we find that such deposits in the four larger banking institutions of the county aggregate $1,703,101.13, distributed as follows:

Iowa County Bank, Mineral Point, $816,835.84; Strong's Bank, Dodgeville, $306,901.64; First National Bank, Dodgeville, $293,330.17; Barneveld State Bank, Barneveld, $286,033.48.

Wisconsin Banking Notes

After getting along many years as a great lumbering town, Onalaska is to have a bank with a capital of $10,000 and a surplus of $2,500. The directors of the new institution are A. N. Moore, T. G. Aiken, A. E. Smith, R. D. Gordon and G. A. Kaeppler. Work has been commenced on a new building, and the bank will be open for business within a short time.

The Farmers State Bank of New London opened its doors for business on January 2d. The stockholders are made up of the leading farmers and merchants of that vicinity and the new institution is reported as having started off with a splendid showing in the way of deposits.

The old State Bank at Wanamingo is to increase its capital stock from $10,000 to $25,000.

ALBION, MICH., BANK CLOSED

Albion, Mich., January 2.—The Albion National Bank was closed to-day and a notice posted saying it is in the hands of the comptroller of the currency. Intense excitement followed the receipt this afternoon of a telegram from Washington saying that Herbert E. Johnson, the federal examiner placed in charge, had reported by telegraph to Comptroller Murray that the bank had been defrauded of $90,000 by forgeries and that the forgeries had been admitted. No arrests have been made up to a late hour to-day, and, so far as known, no warrants have been issued.

The Albion National in 1904 succeeded the First National Bank, which was organized in 1864. W. O. Donohue is president and H. M. Dearing cashier.

According to Dr. Donohue, the condition of the bank is due principally to loans, estimated at about $20,000, to the Cook Manufacturing Company of this city, a small concern, employing only a few men. H. M. Dearing, cashier of the bank, is president of the Cook Manufacturing Company, which also was closed to-day.

Plead Guilty

H. M. Dearing, cashier of the failed Albion (Michigan) National Bank, and his son, P. M. Dearing, on January 3d, pleaded guilty to charges of embezzlement and forgery. They were bound over to the Detroit grand jury and bonds were placed at $25,000 each by United States Commissioner Clark.

May Change Requirements

Washington, January 2.—An important change in the requirements imposed upon national banks may result from the failure of the Albion National Bank in Michigan, announced to-day as due to forgeries.

To safeguard the public against such fraud Comptroller of the Currency Murray has given some consideration to the suggestion that directors of national banks should be required to certify to the genuineness of all signatures upon papers held among the assets of their respective banks at the time of the visit of the national bank examiner. He has found opposition to the proposition among certain directors of national banks, who, because of their unfamiliarity with the affairs of these banks, are unwilling to certify and render themselves liable for the accuracy and genuineness of paper held by their banks.

Some solution is thought certain to follow the failure of the Albion National Bank and it seems that none will meet with stronger approval from the comptroller of the currency than the plan outlined above.

NEW BOOK ON "COMMERCIAL PAPER"

Pocket size and bound in flexible leather comes in a new volume on "Commercial Paper," written for bank officers who buy primarily and for makers and handlers as well. The authors are Ralph May and Roger W. Babson. Mr. Babson is connected with three New England banks and serves numerous other institutions in an advisory capacity, and he has aimed at making this book of practical use to the officers and employees of banks. Mr. May, who is connected with a large Boston firm, is actively engaged in the sale of commercial paper and has knowledge of the point of view of both borrower and lender through commercial paper. The publishers believe that the entire situation in regard to commercial paper has been thoroughly covered and that the book is a conservative analysis of this most important factor in our finance. In addition to being a theoretical study of commercial paper and suitable as a text book for colleges and universities, great attention has been given to making the book practical both to the buyer and the seller of paper. In other words, the book shows the business man how to make his notes safe and attractive to banks, and also shows the banker and investor how to select paper which will be promptly paid at maturity. Published by Babson's Statistical Organization, Wellsley Hills (Boston), Mass., at $2.00.

FOR the next four or five months responsible party will be open for position as Auditor, Cashier or in advisory capacity. Many years' practical experience in banking. Best of references furnished. Address,

Southwestern reserve city news and gossip
—Special correspondence concerning also
the tributary territory, by J. Vion Papin

St. Louis, January 3.—The year opened with a good demand for credits, and fair activity along general lines with St. Louis banks. Certain bankers who have been rather pessimistic relative to the prospects for lending money during January and February are expressing themselves more hopefully. The inquiry from commercial sources is exceeding their expectations, and in spots which were thought hopeless, a demand has developed. Slowness continues in the return flow of funds from the South and Southwest, notably Arkansas and northern Texas, but in spite of this fact, deposits are holding their own in good shape. Another pleasing factor in the situation is signs of activity among the railroads. Many lines centering here will doubtless be in the market as borrowers before the first quarter has elapsed, as plans for purchasing equipment are well matured. Speaking of the outlook the president of a national said: "I am disposed to believe we are starting into 1912 with a far better prospect than at the beginning of last year. Many of the factors that confronted the financial and commercial world then were worked out thoroughly, and now we are bound to reap some of the benefits. In spite of the fact that this is presidential year, there will be new enterprise, and expansion in old ones. It has gotten to a point where buying is necessary if even the routine conduct of life is to be pursued. Stocks throughout the country, and especially in the territory adjacent and tributary to St. Louis, are depleted and must be built up. The overexpansion of a few years back has been absorbed into the blood of consumption, and now the scale must begin to work back to normal. It is true the political aspect is a detrimental factor, and the present congress may prove a catastrophe, but I believe the business interests of the country can exert enough influence to prevent any radical legislation or threatened legislation. I feel thoroughly convinced that with the conventions over, and some measure of certainty established as to the next administration, there will be a wave of business activity sweep over the country, such as has not been experienced in years."

Missouri-Lincoln Reorganization

Stockholders of the Missouri-Lincoln Trust Company will be given a plan of reorganization to consider at the annual meeting next week. This company suspended business on September 23, 1907, at which time the Mercantile Trust took over its assets and backed by the clearing house banks, guaranteed the deposits. The company has remained as such during the process of liquidation. The plan proposes a new company, to be known as the Missouri Savings and Trust Company, with a capital stock of $750,000 and surplus of $400,000. Those now holding the capital stock, which is $2,500,000, may exchange it for new stock on a basis of one share of old for five shares of new. This would represent $500,000, and the other $250,000 it is proposed to sell at par. Each holder of new stock is entitled to subscribe to 50 per cent of the new $250,000 cash stock. It is claimed the new stock is worth $150 on the books, and that not $1 of assets or value is taken out of the company or from the shareholders under the reorganization. It is the purpose to confine the new company to a savings and trust company business, while collecting and conserving the resources.

President Carter's Statement

Speaking of the reorganization plan, W. F. Carter, president of the Missouri-Lincoln Trust Company said: "At a recent meeting of the company a statement of the assets and financial condition was submitted. Some of the stockholders presented a plan to reorganize under a new name, so that it might conduct its own liquidation of a portion of its assets and continue certain branches of the business. The directors thought it prudent to submit this plan to the stockholders at large, which was done without recommendation by myself or the board, so that any action will be determined by the stockholders. As president of the company—now in liquidation—it is my duty to assist in realizing all that is possible. Further than that I shall have no connection with the proposed new company. For several years I have been connected with the Mercantile Trust Company, and will continue this connection, regardless of whether the proposed plan of Missouri-Lincoln Trust is effected."

Some Capitol Bonds Sold

The state board of fund commissioners has accepted bids for the state capitol bonds in the sum of $158,000. This is a small portion of the whole issue, but will furnish funds sufficient to purchase all the additional land required. In spite of the slowness of the sale, the board is still hopeful, and the members are racking their brains to accomplish the feat. The general run of financiers of the state, however, continue dubious. The issue is $3,500,000 and bears 3½ per cent. That rate would not be so small, considering the security, if it were not for the fact that the bonds are taxable. In St. Louis, for instance, where the tax rate is over 2 per cent an owner of capital bonds would receive less than 1½ per cent on his investment, which is not tempting even to the ultra conservative. Further, the state is loath to pay a commission for disposing of the bonds, believing patriotism among Missouri bankers and financiers will make a commission unnecessary. Thus far, however, the patriotism has not been rampant. The committee which is assisting the board to market the bonds consists of David R. Francis, Festus J. Wade, president of the Mercantile Trust Company; Charles H. Huttig, president of the Third National, and William H. Lee of the Merchants-Laclede National, all of St. Louis; H. C. Fowler, president of the Fidelity Trust Company, Kansas City, and D. D. Burnes, president of the Burnes National of St. Joseph.

Johnson Heads International

Jackson Johnson has been elected president of the International Shoe Company, the new $25,000,000 corporation formed by the union of the Peters & Roberts and Johnson & Rand Shoe Companies. Henry Peters was elected first vice-president. Other officers are: Vice-presidents, J. C. Roberts, F. H. Peters, Oscar Johnson, F. C. Rand, J. T. Pettus, C. D. F. Hamilton, R. N. Warmack, T. Moreno, H. Watkins, W. H. Moulton, and C. H. Peters; comptroller, R. C. Wood; secretary, F. A. Sudholt; treasurer, D. C. Biggs.

Postal Receipts Increase

Another indication of the relative prosperity of St. Louis in 1911 was an increase of $100,000 in the postoffice receipts as compared with 1910. In 1910 the receipts were $4,539,185, while those for 1911 will show something over $4,640,000. During the past year the office handled 3,636,831 pounds of first-class mail, comprised of 62,814,016 pieces. Of sec-

B. L. WINCHELL REVIEWS 1911

President B. L. Winchell of the Frisco lines in writing of 1911 says:

1911 has been a year more of doubt than of danger to the railways of the Southwest. Speaking more particularly of the Frisco, business has moved more freely than most of our officials expected; whenever the outlook seemed doubtful, more traffic than we thought possible came into view, and our results, while not extravagant, were encouraging.

One of our most pleasing features is the continued rapid development of the fertile Gulf Coast country of Texas, but new-comers are locating on many of our other lines in encouraging numbers.

I am confident that our citizens are beginning to take this important fact into serious consideration, and that from this time on the needs and treatment of American railroad properties are going to be worked out on the basis of present and future requirements, instead of devoting much time to the discussion of what has happened.

The country's business development depends now only upon what takes place in 1912, and the years to follow. The year 1911 and the preceding years of strife are behind us.

PRIVATE BANKERS WAR IN PENNSYLVANIA

Philadelphia, January 2.—The private bank act of this state went into effect December 1st, but up to date, but two events have transpired. When the state went in the front door of the Mangini bank, Mangini went out the back way with $40,000 and hasn't been seen since. The other is the raising of a large contingent fee to be paid W. M. Montgomery, a lawyer in Attorney-General Bell's office, for having the private bank act declared to be unconstitutional. Another case of dirty Pennsylvania politics. Though the new private banking act specifies arrests, imprisonment and fines as penalties for failing to observe the terms of the law, and though the small Italian bankers in this city have banded together and refused to comply with the law, no arrests have been made here and no prosecutions instituted in the month that has elapsed since the new law went into effect. Mr. Montgomery has supplied each of the Italian bankers with a signed statement to the effect that they are acting under his advice, and the bankers have been given to understand that that protects them against prosecution and that no court will imprison them for accepting the advice of their lawyer, even in the matter of opposing the state banking department.

Bank Commissioner Smith denies that he has failed to prosecute because Attorney Montgomery, acting for the private banks, is in Attorney-General Bell's office, or any knowledge of the reason they went to him in preference to other better known lawyers already engaged.

"I just want to say, in conclusion," said Smith, "that this trouble is not of our making. These fellows have brought it on themselves. That private bank act is regarded as one of the best acts of its kind in recent years. We believe it will stand the test. Back of us are virtually all of the bankers and many private bankers of the state who believe state regulation is a good thing. We don't want trouble, but we are not in the dodging business, either."

Perhaps this Pennsylvania case will make revelations, if it goes to trial, which will help other states to see their way to put all forms of banking under supervision and inspection. Rumor has it here that very many Pennsylvania private banks are in no condition to stand inspection by the state.

DEATH OF FREDERICK M. RAMSAY

Frederick Mason Ramsay, for years teller of the First National Bank, and well known in banking and Masonic circles, died Sunday last at his home, 4872 Winthrop Avenue, after a five weeks' illness, from heart trouble.

Mr. Ramsay was born October 5, 1848, in Boston, Mass., and was educated in the public schools. After completing a high school course he entered the Winthrop National Bank as a clerk and worked his way upward until he was made assistant teller. After being five years with the Boston institution he went to New York City, where he was made assistant teller of the National City Bank.

Twenty-five years ago Mr. Ramsay came to Chicago as teller of the old Metropolitan Bank, where he remained until that institution merged with the First National Bank in 1902. Mr. Ramsay then went to the First National as teller, which position he held until his death.

Editorial Comment

KANSAS IS A GREAT STATE

Kansas has two bankers associations, yet the banks co-operate to the extent of furnishing depository and other bonds at about one-third the going rate of the established companies. They have a guaranty law and a banking department second to none in the United States. Neither is Kansas backward in other things. Having a warm friend at Wichita, we hear constantly of the state's greatness. With him we readily agree (for the time) that she takes the lead in many things. Kansas is rich; has banished the housefly; one man in every five has an auto and she teaches agriculture in her country schools. "Back to the farm" is being taught by 10,000 women teachers in more than seven thousand rural schools. Out of five hundred high schools, four hundred are teaching agriculture and two hundred domestic science. For five years this lesson of the farm has been drilled into the minds of Kansas boys and girls. Instead of wrestling with the rudiments of algebra and the tenses of dead languages, half a million students have been steeped in the beauty, the dignity and the rewards of intensive agriculture. This field had much to do with convincing states farther north to enter the work. Let this good work continue. Ten states (including Kansas) were represented at the Northwest conference called by Joseph Chapman, Jr., at Minneapolis and St. Paul last year. Bankers are in the soil preservation, soil fertility work in every state. The schools have taken up the educational features of the great problem and better men and women, better times and less of "human default" will be the result. Keep at it, Kansas.

LA FOLLETTE AND THE PLAN

Confirming Washington advices, noted in recent issues, that both republican progressives and democrats in congress likely would oppose the new monetary commission plan bill at this session, Senator LaFollette went on record in his Chicago address at Orchestra Hall. Among other things, he said:

"When a new banking control proposition comes from the man who has been chairman of the finance committee of the senate during most of that time I am here to say to you that Mr. Aldrich's banking scheme, so far as I am concerned, is going to be examined with a microscope before it gets by me.

"Now, I don't want anybody to think I am such a fool that I won't be able to see the good there is in this new proposition. Everything there is in it that is good I am for. But I want to tell you the craftiest man in public life, in shaping and framing the phraseology of a proposition so that it looks good on its surface and has lurking in its dangers, is behind this scheme."

The senator then had a fling at the down-and-outers on the commission with Aldrich and advised that any financial remedy from such "should not be swallowed with the eyes closed." In conclusion, Senator La Follette paid a fine tribute to Wisconsin bankers and Wisconsin banking laws. He said that "Since the progressives have been in power and adopted a new banking code and new system of examining the state banks of Wisconsin, the banks over which we have control, we have not had a bank failure in the state. No state has any business to have a bank failure, and let me remind you again, one thing in the creed of the progressives is this: Service to the public; never, never service to any special interest. That is all there is in our platform." There was a fine, enthusiastic audience to hear the Wisconsin statesman and he was liberally applauded.

LABOR STRIKES IN RESTRAINT OF TRADE

Perhaps a new meaning may be given to the Sherman anti-trust law, at the end of a hearing about to begin at Danville in this state. Two hundred labor officials and strike leaders have been summoned to appear in the federal court, eastern district of Illinois, charged with operating labor unions in restraint of trade. The Illinois Central railway is the plaintiff and Judge Wright's action in the matter has been approved by Chief Justice Edward D. White, so that it appears to be strictly a business proceeding which cannot be evaded. Five big labor unions have joined forces to push the strike on all of the Harriman lines, and attorneys say they are just the same kind of a combine as is alleged against the beef packers now on trial. The sudden move of the Illinois Central is one of the most startling to the unions ever made in a labor dispute. It places an almost entirely new question before the labor organizations, that of whether they can be sued or prosecuted under the Sherman anti-trust law. The consequences of the suit will be far reaching. It will determine practically whether labor organizations can exist under the law or not. Illinois Central officials have professed ignorance of the whole matter. Attorney Lee, counsel for the railroad, said he knew nothing of the suit. In view of the fact that this suit is one of the most important the road ever has filed, it is supposed the attorneys for the company are anxious to keep the charges from the public as long as possible. There was some talk of acting under the Sherman law when the strike started, October 1st. The date on the complaints shows that the bill was filed three days after the strike started. Now that the strike has continued three months and the company is in straits for rolling stock this suit is brought out in what the unions believe is an effort to break the strike, and to end in a large measure the strike features of unionism. Perhaps if the Sherman act helps to solve the labor problem much will be forgiven by "the Interests" against whom chiefly it has been invoked. Labor leaders do not feel very sanguine of the outcome, not knowing what evidence is in the hands of the government attorneys.

THE FIELD JOURNALISTIC

A most beautiful story is running as a serial in the Century. It is by W. J. Locke and in the lines Stella Maris is a young girl confined to her bed by spinal trouble, but living in a land of fancies. Of one of the favored few admitted to this land, John Risca, the "Great High Belovedest," she inquires one day the nature of his work.

"I teach the great and good men who are the king's ministers of state how to govern the country," he replies, "I show philanthropists how to spend their money. I read many books and tell people how beautiful and wise the books are, so that people should read them and become beautiful and wise, too. Sometimes I preach to foreign sovereigns on the way in which their countries should be ruled. I am what is called a journalist, dear."

"It must be the most wonderful work in the world," cries Stella, aglow with enthusiasm.

Risca somewhat idealized the calling, since first of all the daily must print the news (or suppress) and thus make the people better able to think for themselves. Had John Risca been in the financial field he might have claimed authorship of banking and economic doctrines; to control the policy of the A. B. A.; of the U. S. treasury; of the committee on banking and currency and to furnish argument for public speakers on the monetary plan. Truly, journalists do not do these things, nor those which John Risca claimed to do. They give publicity to plans, to emergencies and to schemes and the public polishes them off, or up, as it likes. The press is the agent of the thinker, the dreamer, the reformer, and it mercilessly exposes the crooks and the shams. It has a power all its own. Its best work is building up toward higher standards in public and professional life and in the home. A paper actuated by right motives and conducted with ability is a power in any community. Only the square deal paper is entitled to support. No other kind gets it for long.

CENTRAL RESERVE BANKS LOSE

Washington, D. C., January 3.—All the national banks in the United States lost $4,301,246 in loans between September 1 and December 5, 1911, according to the report of the condition of these institutions, made public to-day. There was a loss in cash of $32,681,210, but a gain in deposits of $46,047,269.

"Banks in the city of Chicago," says the report, "show losses in all three items as follows: Loans, $17,533,135.97; cash, $4,847,433.22; deposits, $3,264,625.67. St. Louis banks likewise show losses in each: Loans, $5,955,563.02; cash, $737,904.05; deposits, 4,544,933.13. The reserve city banks in this section show losses in loans of $674,289.29, in cash of $1,653,008.33, but a gain in deposits of $7,816,640.91.

"While the country banks show gains in loans of $13,856.16 and in cash of $1,053,504.90, they report a loss in deposits of $1,653,049.00.

"All the banks in middle western section show the following losses: Loans, $9,306,465.12; cash, $5,584,840.70; deposits, $1,645,926.89."

The total reserve was $1,404,400,973, which is $66,192,393 in excess of the amount required by law. The banks in the New England, southern, western, and Pacific states showed gains in loans cash, and deposits, while those in the eastern and middle western states disclosed losses. Compared with the figures for November 10, 1910, all the banks of the country gained $208,465,440 in loans, $46,723,536 in cash, and $501,253,974 in deposits.

HUTTIG HAS SECOND OPERATION

Charles H. Huttig, president of Third National, St. Louis, who has been in New York several weeks recuperating from a recent operation for intestinal trouble, was operated on again ten days ago in the Presbyterian Hospital, New York. The second operation is said not to have been a serious one, but of a nature that often follows the operation which Mr. Huttig underwent at first. He is reported as recuperating satisfactorily, and when he is enough improved to travel he will go South to pass the rest of the winter.

ANNUAL DINNER OF GROUP 8

The annual dinner of Group 8 of the New York Bankers Association, which comprises banks of the borough of Manhattan, will be held at the Waldorf-Astoria on Monday evening, January 15th. The speakers for the evening will be Darwin P. Kingsley, president New York Life Insurance Company; Lieutenant Governor Robert Bruce of Massachusetts, and Colonel Norris G. Osborne of the Hartford "Journal and Courier" of Hartford, Conn.

WILL ENFORCE PRIVATE BANK ACT

Philadelphia, January 4.—The private bankers' attack upon the Pennsylvania banking law, effective since December 1, 1911, has not deterred the attorney-general of the state, who says: "It makes no difference to me who attacks the new act. I shall uphold it with all the power of the attorney-general's office in the courts if an attempt is made to dispute its constitutionality. Governor Tener, the banking commissioner and I have had several consultations about the needs for some state regulation of private banking firms, and the new law will be vigorously enforced."

The equity proceedings attacking the constitutionality of the new law are based on several clauses tacked on the law in the legislature. These amendments to the original draft of the act specify that private bankers who are citizens of Pennsylvania and have been in the banking business here for seven years are exempt from its provisions, and it is asserted by the lawyers attacking the new law that this provision conflicts with the United States constitution, which guarantees citizens of one state all privileges and immunities of citizens in all other states.

Evidence Being Collected

Harrisburg, December 28.—State Banking Commissioner William H. Smith said to-day that the state would vigorously defend the new private bank act against the equity proceedings instituted in Philadelphia to test its constitutionality. Attorney-General Bell will represent the state banking department in this action, and every effort will be made to secure an early decision.

Meantime, the department is collecting evidence against private bankers who have been doing business without a state license since December 1st, when the new law went into effect. Commissioner Smith estimates that there are 350 private banks in the state. Thus far 105 have applied for licences. The others are mostly small foreign banks.

SOIL EXPERT GOING SOUTH

THE CHICAGO BANKER is pleased to announce for the benefit of its readers in Kentucky, Tennessee, Mississippi, Louisiana, Arkansas, and Oklahoma, that Dr. R. E. Taylor, soil expert, with Deere & Co., of Moline, will visit the following points in the states named on the dates (all in January) given below. Farmers, planters and bankers will find Dr. Taylor well prepared to instruct them in matters pertaining to agricultural subjects. His addresses delivered before the members of the Illinois Bankers Association aroused great interest among the farmers and bankers of Illinois during the past summer, and he can undoubtedly render valuable service to the people of the communities he expects to visit in his coming trip:

Fulton, Ky., January 3d. In Tennessee he will appear at Dyersburg, January 4th; Tiptonville, January 5th; Newbern, January 6th-7th; Covington, January 8th; Memphis, January 9th. In Mississippi at Clarksdale, January 10th; Greenwood, January 11th; Greenville, January 12th; Vicksburg, January 13th-14th; Natchez, January 15th-16th-17th. In Louisiana at Monroe, January 18th-19th-20th; Shreveport, January 21st-22d. In Arkansas at Ashdown, January 23d; Nashville, January 24th; Idabel, Okla., January 25th-26th; Russellville, Ark., January 27th.

FORT SMITH BANKER ARRESTED

Advices from Fort Smith state that M. D. Martin, cashier of the Central Bank and Trust Company of that city, which was recently placed in the hands of a receiver, has been arrested on charges of perjury and with receiving funds while the bank was in a failing condition. The Central Bank and Trust Company was financed by men connected with the American Trust Company of Kansas City, which closed its doors the last week of December. The perjury charge against Martin is in connection with an affidavit made by him as to the amount of the capital of the bank actually paid in. A warrant was issued on January 1st for the arrest of J. H. Hirschley of Olathe, Kansas, former assistant treasurer and secretary of the Central Bank and Trust Company.

BANKS SHOW PROSPERITY

That the past year in Milwaukee (Wis.) was reasonably prosperous seems to be borne out by the conditions of most of the local banks, which will declare dividends at their annual meetings next week.

Business from a banking standpoint has been satisfactory. Not only were two new banks established last year, but the prices of stocks in most of the established institutions have advanced.

Country banks in the state are in a more stable condition than they have been in a long time, and farmers are reported to be well satisfied. Milwaukee trust companies, too, report a good year. All of them will declare dividends.

INDIANA BANK CLOSED

Terre Haute, Ind., January 3.—An alleged shortage of $45,000 in the accounts of W. H. Taber, president of the American State Bank, was disclosed to-day when that bank suspended business and was taken in charge by H. L. Arnold from the office of the state auditor.

CHAPTER RECORD

An Open Forum Dedicated to the American Institute of Banking in Which to Advance the Great Movement for Systematic Education and Universal Membership

Scientific Management as Applied to Banks

Address before the Minneapolis Chapter by Edgar L. Mattson of the Northwestern National

Scientific management is an exact science, it is not a theory, it is knowledge evident and certain in itself; it is not an idea newly created, it is understanding of laws that have existed always. It is the organized and systematic application of business to these laws. Newton did not create the law of gravity. He discovered it. Franklin discovered electricity. Columbus did not make the world round. Scientific management is finding the best way to do work, and always doing it that way. The best way is reducible to dollars and cents. It is not scientific unless it is best for all concerned, the employer and the employees. A speaker recently addressing a Minneapolis audience said that the eighteenth century was the century of dependence; the nineteenth the century of independence; the twentieth the century of interdependence. Any employer or employee who does not recognize the necessity for and the benefits of co-operation belongs to a century that is past; without the employee capital is helpless, without the employer labor is futile. The employer and employee are inter-dependent, they are not only important one to the other, they are absolutely essential. Scientific management is not a cost system, it is not time study; it is not fixing a price on piece work; it is not haphazard guess work. Frederick W. Taylor sums up the elements of scientific management as follows:

1. The development of a science for each man's work, which replaced the old "rule of thumb" method.
2. The scientific selection and training of the workers, so that each is given instruction in the work for which he is naturally best fitted.
3. Hearty co-operation with the workers so as to insure that all of the work is done in accordance with the principles of the science which has been developed.
4. A division of the work and the responsibility between the management and the workers.

The Northwestern National is engaged in commercial banking, it also has a savings department. It has a force of nearly 200 officers and employees; its capital, surplus and profits amount to $5,418,000.00; its resources are about $34,000,000.00; it has been in existence some forty years; it has absorbed three other banks, the largest of which was the National Bank of Commerce, followed in less than six months by the Swedish-American National. The application of the principles of scientific management to the business of banking has not been tried elsewhere as far as may be learned; this lack of precedent made its introduction in our office a matter of some difficulty. There were, however, several circumstances which were favorable. After the consolidations already mentioned, which occurred in 1908, this bank was in possession of practically all of the "rule of thumb" methods in use in Minneapolis, those having been brought in by clerks from other banks being in some instances superior to those formerly in use in the Northwestern. The office force was divided into twelve departments, the oldest and most experienced clerk in each department was appointed manager and made responsible for the proper conduct of each day's work. A system of time and cost study was introduced based upon a daily work report from each clerk. Nearly two years' reports are now tabulated in a form which makes yearly comparisons and deductions possible and furnishes a means of determining the principle elements of cost of all our office operations. The next movement toward a higher state of efficiency was a class that was undertaken to educate the junior clerks. This was a voluntary matter. One meeting is held each week and lectures are given by one of the older members of the force on elementary commercial law and the practice of banking. The best feature of these meetings is the answering of the many questions propounded by the class. Later on a penmanship class was started with very satisfactory results.

One of the officers devotes most of his time to the internal administration of the bank. Once a month this officer meets with the department managers. This takes the form of dinners followed by evening discussions of matters pertaining to the bank. This officer also calls in all men of one department, and then of another, and talks with them about their work. These meetings are not at stated times, but when occasion requires them. In the March, 1911, meeting of department managers the Taylor System of Scientific Management was first discussed. Mr. Taylor's writings were read aloud, and it was determined to apply his methods to the work of the office. The department managers with their chief now constitute a permanent planning department and co-operate with one another in solving the problems of the various branches of the work, thus giving to each department the benefit of the thought of all. A chart was made up at this time of all clerical positions in the bank based on their relative importance as a basis on which to move clerks from one job to another. This assured fair promotion to those who deserved it. The greatest benefit of this process has shown itself in the attitude of the clerks to the bank. A spirit of confidence in the managers prevails, and splendid support is given to every new demand made upon the force. Every effort has been made by transferring men back and forth to find the worker best suited to each job and to train everyone along the lines in which his record shows he is deficient.

Mr. Taylor has often been asked by sympathetic people what became of the shovelers who could not make good, and he has satisfactorily answered that they were tried first on one thing and then on another until they were placed according to their capacity; generally in work that required less physical strength and more mental ability, which generally resulted in great benefit to the men.

In our office much has been accomplished by moving men from one job to another; office men, particularly with increasing age, are prone to get into a rut; the management fails to do its part when it does not do its utmost to see that its men are well and properly placed.

In banking where education, initiative, tact and brains are essential, and where repetition of operation, as for instance in the handling of machinery, is unimportant, there is no place for certain types of men who never rise above mediocrity. We feel that a man is going backward who does not progress in capacity, which in turn means increased pay. There is no such thing as standing still. It is no kindness to such a man or to the men working with him that he be retained. This brings up the question of hiring men. The management is under certain obligations to its employees. This increases with time, and should be fairly and humanely considered. I therefore feel that I cannot too strongly emphasize the importance of using the principles of scientific management in the selection of office men.

The next step was the organization of a general staff, consisting of men not attached to a particular department, and directly under the supervision of the chief. These men are not messengers or bell-hops, but men who have made good in various responsible positions, and from whom, as vacancies occur will be recruited department heads. These men are competent to fill positions of all grades, during temporary absences on account of vacations or sickness; when not so engaged they devote their time to experimental work, under the direction of the planning department, and also act as instructors to junior men. This department is being organized slowly and with extreme care; so far its work has been largely elementary, but it will develop into the largest and most important department in this bank.

Mr. Taylor calls attention to the fact that management voluntarily undertakes large burdens for the ultimate benefit of all concerned; he also sounds a warning against fakirs, conscious or otherwise, who claim to be able in a short time to scientifically reorganize a business. The more I study the matter, the more convinced do I become that we have undertaken a large proposition, the fruition of which is dependent upon conscientious effort and much time. At first the possibilities of experimentation for the best possible way of doing things in our office seemed very limited, but careful consideration of the subject has removed all doubt from our minds. The problem is how can we ever hope to be able to do anywhere near all now contemplated.

We are progressing step by step, each change being subjected to complete and thorough investigation from every standpoint, the purpose being to correct something that was apparently wrong. A very minute cost per item system more complete than any in the country, as far as can be learned, is now perfected. A book of experiments is maintained and a book of standards is in preparation, which when completed will give in writing every minute detail of every job in the office with every possible instruction for new men.

I will outline briefly some of the specific improvements accomplished during the last year. Certain department routine was handicapped, and it in turn handicapped the work of the other departments, owing to the fact that work had to be done on the third floor which should properly have been done on the main floor. Items were taken upstairs from the main floor, proved and recorded, and then returned to the main floor for final handling. The proper adjustment of this difficulty was a matter for much serious study, the solution coming from the suggestion that the useless top of the vault be made into an office room. This was done as soon as carpenters and painters could place the quarters in order, after which our audit department was moved up there, which gives a view of the whole banking room, and secures a privacy and concentration which is of particular value, and which it did not have before. The space gained made possible re-adjustments involving six departments, each change being carefully planned, and the result in each instance was a material improvement. Our elevator which then was taxed to its capacity now is idle part of the time and never is full. Consider, if you please, the value of the time formerly lost in travel, which in turn delayed work. This was not guess work; every move was carefully considered. Not one mistake was made; while the resulting benefits are clearly apparent we are unable to measure these results in dollars and cents. Stationery and supplies were scattered over the bank in cupboards, drawers, and under desks; much of it got dirty and quantities were destroyed. Frequently printing was ordered in the belief that the supply was exhausted, when such was not the case. A stock room was established with a custodian in charge; card records show prices, and of whom bought, quantity on hand, when received, when used and by what department, when to order, how much and where. Order has succeeded disorder. It pays. Every detail was worked out by our planning department before the changes were made. Contracts, subscriptions and advertising were reduced to a system; card information enables the man in charge instantly to secure any necessary information. Auditing and the paying of bills was placed upon a modern and scientific basis, avoiding duplication of payments. The number of receiving tellers has been reduced, and at the same time service to customers has been improved. The filing room has been improved, and economies have resulted. The mail department methods have been improved, fewer clerks are needed, while Sunday and holiday work has been eliminated. Ledgers have been improved, resulting in material reduction in the number of men needed. The writing of advices formerly done by two girls is now done by one. This one has enjoyed a raise in salary and the end is not yet. The general staff is made up from men relieved of work through these economies, and we could still easily get along without a number of clerks for which we now have no real need. The number of clerks who formerly were discharged, or who resigned on account of dissatisfaction, has been cut in two, the result being that we do not hire as many new men, which in turn has reduced to a minimum the necessity for the training of raw recruits.

Investigation is now on foot to determine a better way to prove the inclearings; statement machines and transit machines will be given a conclusive test during the coming year and charts are being prepared presenting all statistics in an available and permanent form. These improvements and economies are not guess work, they have been carefully and scientifically planned; while in some instances we will find opportunities for further improvements, we never will take a step backward, because we have been working in the right direction. As I have stated, so many new things claim attention that each succeeding year must bring greater and greater results. Let us give due credit to the leader of a great movement that will revolutionize business administration the world over, the man who has given to business the knowledge of a hitherto unknown science of business, a science like all other sciences, that has existed always, but was unknown until discovered by a master-mind.

RICHMOND (VA.) CHAPTER NEWS

By J. S. Haw, Secretary.

Richmond Chapter was fortunate indeed in being able to secure the services of O. Howard Wolfe of New York, secretary of the clearing house section of the American Bankers Association, to address the December meeting of the chapter on two very live subjects which are occupying the attention of bank men the country over. Mr. Wolfe spoke on the "Universal Numerical Transit System," and the "Clearing House for Country Items." These subjects are of vital interest to every bank, in that the consummation of the plans outlined by the American Bankers Association means that transit items will be much more expeditiously handled and that there will be a great reduction in the cost of handling them. Mr. Wolfe gave a clear exposition of both of his subjects and his audience, which included many of the bank officers of the city, listened with intense interest.

The chapter went on record as heartily approving both the "Numerical Transit System" and the "Clearing House for Country Items" idea, promising to do all in its power to further them and expressing a willingness to cooperate with the clearing house association in anything it might do to further them.

SAVINGS BOOKS AS GIFTS

According to W. F. McLane, cashier of the Hennepin County Savings Bank, savings deposits since December 1st have broken all records in Minneapolis. Mr. McLane attributes the increase partly to the growing popularity of the savings bank book as a Christmas present. It is now quite common, he says, for parents, husbands and guardians to present their protégés with a pass book showing a deposit in some one of the savings banks of the city.

According to Mr. McLane not only has the amount of savings deposits increased since December 1st, but there also has been an unusual number of new depositors. This he considers unusual, for as a rule, he says, people are more inclined to withdraw than to deposit money from banks during the Christmas season.

Ipswich, S. D.—Walter Morris has submitted his resignation as cashier of the First State Bank, to take effect January 9th.

CENTRAL WEST LETTER

By EDGAR P. ALLEN

Omaha

"The business men and bankers of Kansas and the Central West are optimistic over the prospects for 1912," said J. N. Dolley, bank commissioner of Kansas, on the last day of the old year, "but they are not quite sure what the situation is elsewhere and realize that the West cannot be a world fully unto itself. In the last summer and early fall the farmers sold their grain and the country merchants bought lightly. They paid their debts and balances in the country banks accumulated. While money is still in strong demand, the market might be considered quite easy with sufficient supply to meet all legitimate demands. The man who borrows from the bank to-day must show the banker before he receives it that he expects to use it in a legitimate way or in an investment that probably will prove a profitable one. We look with more or less doubt upon what may come out of the East in a financial and commercial way during the year 1912, and what effect the conditions may have upon our market and business. The year 1912 being a political year must, of course, be considered from a business standpoint, although in the West we do not apprehend any serious results from political sources."

Mr. Dolley expressed the opinion that, all things considered, banking conditions in the Middle West during 1911 have been quite satisfactory. "A general house-cleaning continued throughout the year," he said, "and the result is a decided settling down to conservative and careful banking, maintaining larger reserves, scanning closer all loans and refusing to venture into questionable investments and continuing to furnish careful business men with what funds they need to carry on their business. The present wheat crop has received sufficient moisture, rain and snow, to place in winter quarters in a most prime condition. In fact, the Middle West has never afforded more promising possibilities for a crop than at present."

Review of Year 1911 in Central West

With occasional local exceptions the record of bank clearings in the Central West for the year 1911 indicated a falling off from the previous year's business. In Kansas City the clearings for the past year amounted to $2,578,730,359. While this represents a creditable volume of business for the twelve months it is considerably less than the record for 1910. The record for 1910 was $2,634,557,738, showing a decrease of $55,829,378. It is gratifying to Kansas City bankers to remember that even under adverse conditions Kansas City still held sixth place among the cities of the United States and the old rivalry between Kansas City and Pittsburgh leaves the western city victorious at the end of another year. Omaha also suffered a falling off in clearing house business during the past year. For 1911 it had a total of $753,107,353 as compared with $832,971,607 in 1910. St. Joseph, Mo., enjoyed a substantial gain in its clearings, the year 1911 being the best in this respect in the history of the city. The aggregate of clearings in St. Joseph for 1911 was $354,711,820, an increase of $6,952,731, or 2 per cent over 1910. April was the only month of 1911 which showed a decrease in the clearings of St. Joseph over any previous record for the same month. In 1911 St. Joseph broke records for both a day's and a month's business. Oklahoma City suffered a loss, the total clearings for 1911 being $104,852,021 in comparison with $122,822,587 in 1910.

The causes assigned by bankers to the falling off in clearing house business in the Central West for the year 1911 center about the partial crop failure of the past year due to drouth. Kansas City did not handle as much grain by several millions of bushels in 1911 as it did in 1910. The same is true of Omaha. Another thing that has had a tendency to restrict the volume of clearings in this part of the country is the lower prices of most agricultural products and live stock. This was a material factor in the record. It is pointed out by the manager of the Kansas City clearing house that a year ago there was established in that city a gold depository amounting to $1,200,000 to be used in settling balances between local banks. Certificates are issued against this gold, which circulate between banks in lieu of gold. The settlements made in this way are not included in the amounts reported as bank clearings. Hence the gold depository has operated to reduce the amounts reported as bank clearings. The manager of the Kansas City clearing house believes that had it not been for this gold depository system the clearings for the year would have been at least $60,000,000 greater, thus wiping out the decrease of fifty odd millions showing in the record.

Banker Must Know His Business

The state banking board of Kansas exercises autocratic authority over the financial institutions within its jurisdiction unparalleled perhaps in any other state of the Union. Under a recent law this board is empowered to pass upon every application for a state bank charter with a view to the number and character of the banks already located in the desired location. The board also may take into consideration the character and reputation of the applicants and whether or not they are competent bankers. But this is not the limit of the board's power. It can also demand that a banker quit the business if he is not able to convince the board that he knows his business. This last prerogative was exercised only last week. C. M. Hanner of Oklahoma decided that he wanted to get into the banking business in Kansas. He negotiated with the owner of the Merchants State Bank of Derby, Kan., and bought that institution. He was running the bank according to his own notions when a state examiner appeared and began an investigation. The result was that the bank commissioner of Kansas required him to sell to J. J. Butterfield of Kansas City. Mr. Hanner yielded gracefully to the edict and stepped out of the bank.

"Blue Sky" Law Has Increasing Popularity

Kansas banking authorities are growing more and more enthusiastic over the operation of the famous "blue sky" law passed by the legislature a year ago. This law, which has now been in effect nine months, was designed to protect Kansas investors from the sellers of questionable securities of all kinds. During the nine months of the law's operation nearly one thousand individuals and concerns have applied to the state bank commissioner for authority to vend their securities in Kansas, but only forty-nine have been approved. Without this approval they cannot do business in Kansas. The law is absolutely unique and has attracted world-wide attention. Copies of the law have been sent to most of the European governments. No law enacted by a Kansas legislature has been given wider publicity than this one.

Lankford Honored Guest at New Year's Dinner

State Bank Commissioner J. D. Lankford was the guest of honor at a dinner New Year's night in Oklahoma City and which was given by the state bank examiners and other employees of the banking department. In his address Mr. Lankford declared that he had barred politics in the management and control of Oklahoma state banks and that he has set a high moral and financial standard for Oklahoma bankers. "I have been told recently that I have set the standard too high," he said, "and that few could measure up to my requirements. In my candid opinion it would be a matter of impossibility to set too high a standard in banking. The mere fact that a man is a banker should be sufficient evidence and guaranty in itself of the very highest sense of honor and integrity, but unfortunately it has not always been so in Oklahoma. Some have debased and prostituted this high calling and there may be yet some of this class in banks of Oklahoma, but very few. A banker should not be a speculator. He should be a banker and nothing else. In my judgment the final solution of this whole question is the vigorous prosecution, punishment and conviction of all crooks and defaulters and under no circumstances will the banking department of Oklahoma accept any compromise while I am at its head."

Other speakers at the dinner were Governor Lee Cruce, former Bank Commissioner A. M. Young, Fred Dennis, treasurer of the banking board, and W. M. Malone, state building and loan auditor.

American Union Trust Company of Kansas City has given up the ghost and is now in the hands of the Missouri banking department. Notice was given that the bank and trust company would not open for business December 30th and Charles W. Bartlett, deputy state bank examiner, was in temporary charge. For a week Mr. Bartlett and W. B. Planck, another examiner, had been examining the condition of the trust company, then the directors decided that the best interests of all concerned recommended the action that finally was taken. The American Union Trust Company was capitalized for $162,950, with deposits of $203,000. Its total assets are $395,000 and it had over 3,000 depositors. The officers of the company were: L. H. Musser, president; H. L. Coombs, vice-president; M. E. Dixon, secretary, and W. J. Madden, treasurer. The directors were: L. H. Musser, H. L. Coombs, James Muir, J. E. Lach, Fred Weber, J. I. Adcock, Dr. E. Lee Harrison, J. D. Havens, George L. Davis, T. L. Roberts and W. R. Madison. John W. Swanger, Missouri state bank examiner, spent several days investigating the affairs of the institution and will issue a statement soon. The depositors of the company are mostly small tradesmen. Following the failure of the American Union Trust Company of Kansas City came the announcement of the closing of the doors of the Central Bank and Trust Company of Fort Smith, Ark., which was financed by men connected with the defunct Kansas City concern. In connection with the Fort Smith failure, M. D. Martin, cashier of the Central Bank and Trust Company, was arrested charged with perjury and with receiving money while the bank was in a failing condition. He was released on bond. The two recent failures mark the climax to the disasters that have overcome the allied financial interests that were back of several All Night and Day Banks in the Southwest, and which include the All Night and Day Banks of Memphis and Oklahoma City.

The Retail Merchants Association of Hutchinson, Kan., has petitioned the local banks to devise some way in which at least one bank of that city may be kept open each Saturday night. The merchants want facilities for workingmen to get their checks cashed so as to relieve the tradespeople of this risky business.

Bank clearings in Minneapolis reached $1,068,090,894 in 1911. This is a decrease under 1910, when the clearings were $1,155,659,665 and a gain of $11,000,000 over 1908, when the clearings were $1,057,468,860. The clearings in 1909 were $1,029,914,856 and in 1907 they were still larger, or $1,145,462,150. December in 1911 went ahead of December, 1910, by nearly $11,000,000. The figures for last month were $111,083,004.

Four important banking changes of the closing year were absorption of the Minnesota National by the Scandinavian-American National; absorption of the Germania by the Metropolitan National, and the Savings Bank of Minneapolis went under the state organization law. The Hennepin County Savings Bank increased its capital and surplus to $500,000.

St. Paul Bankers on New Year Prospects

New Year prospects are outlined by St. Paul bankers as follows: E. H. Bailey, president First National: "I think the general outlook is very encouraging. I believe that the farmers' prospects for 1912 are the brightest for some time, the soil is in good condition, and if the crops turn out as they promise the farmers' prosperity will bring prosperity to all of us and the year will be a good one."

J. W. Lusk, president National German American: "I think that present indications point to a continuation of an easy money market."

George C. Power, president Second National: "I do not see anything in the present conditions that will make any material difference in next year's money market. Rates are easier now than at the same time last year."

V. W. Knapp

V. W. Knapp, cashier of the First State of Long Lake, suburb of Minneapolis, has bought an interest in the Regal Sales Company, Inc., selling Regal automobiles. He will not take an active part in the management of the business at present.

Dinner in Honor of Two Minneapolis Bankers

Directors of the Northwestern National dined President W. H. Dunwoody and Vice-President M. B. Koon, January 4th, at the Minneapolis Club. It was the first intimation that the two had passed their seventieth year, and, at that, the concrete evidence in the testimonial offered by the directors was discounted until both men admitted the impeachment.

Report of Minnesota State Banks

Summarization of the report of state banks in Minnesota on call for December 5th shows resources of $136,626,559 and deposits subject to check of $34,624,070. The time deposits are $71,394,065, which is a gain of $7,692,374 in one year. Loans and discounts reached $103,107,871, an increase of $8,206,844. There were 737 banks at the last call as compared with 686 the year previous. Capital stock has jumped from $13,228,500 to $14,084,000. Surplus a year ago was $3,076,169 as compared with $3,596,902 at the last call.

J. W. Wheeler Receives New Honors

J. W. Wheeler, formerly of Crookston, Minn., new vice-president of the Security Trust Company, which is affiliated with the Capital National, is to be made president, succeeding F. Y. Locke, resigned. Mr. Locke will give his attention to the gas company, of which he is president. This company is erecting a plant to make liquid gas for delivery in tanks.

St. Paul Bank Clearings

St. Paul bank clearings passed the half-billion mark in 1911. The total was $531,574,517. In 1910 the clearings were $576,156,228. Clearings for December were $45,402,159 as compared with $52,288,330 the previous year. Although the bank clearings for the twelve months ending December 1, 1911, were off $40,407,211 as compared with 1910, aside from that year they were larger than for any one of ten preceding years. In the year one bank, with $25,000 capital, was added, making the capital $4,650,000 for the city.

Deposits in the various banks aggregate $48,034,239.61 and the following summary for the period 1901-1911 shows growth of business.

	No. of Banks.	Surplus and Profits.	Deposits.

"Put your feet down on the floor," said father.

"Don't want to," was the answer of the unawed one. "Dey is told."

"It isn't cold here," said father. "What do you think your feet are for, anyway?"

"Wawsh," was the answer that shut father up.

Banking News Notes of Interest

The Washington Realty Company has been organized with $100,000 capital. F. A. Chamberlain is president, and L. K. Hull, a director in the Security National, is one of the organizers.

The name of the building occupied by the Minnesota Loan and Trust Company, adjoining the Northwestern National, formerly known as the Bank of Commerce building, has been included under the Northwestern National name.

C. L. Strom, cashier of the Merchants and Manufacturers State, has been elected treasurer of the Twentieth Avenue North Publicity Club.

Joseph Underleak, formerly state representative and state senator, director of the First National of Plainview, Minn., and also of the First National of Chatfield, president of the Chatfield Electric Light and Power Company, owner of the Chatfield Lumber Company, is now president of the First National of Chatfield, to succeed A. L. Ober. Mr. Ober was reported last week as lost and found in Chicago.

According to the state tax commission every resident of St. Paul has $23.39 apiece more than Minneapolitans. Returns on moneys and credits show that Minneapolis people own up to $89.38 in 1911 as compared with $19.80 each in 1910. St. Paul's residents have $112.17 as compared with $12.82. The report fails to say who spends more. Fari-bault residents, a small city, rank high with $200.32 apiece, if it were all divided up. Average money and credits disclosed by each resident of cities in the state of more than 5,000 population is $97.23. The accretion of wealth has been sudden, if the returns have been correct, for in 1911 the average was nine times more than in 1910.

A. J. Hemphill

A. J. Hemphill, president of the Guaranty Trust Company of New York, has been elected a director and member of the executive committee of the St. Louis Southwestern, succeeding Howard Gould.

SAFEGUARDS IN MONETARY PLAN

Washington, D. C., January 4.—The monetary commission's plan for a national reserve association, when it goes to congress on Tuesday, will provide for an organization so constituted that the financial institutions of New York—the seat of the money power in the United States—will control less than 10 per cent of the total representation in the central association, although they possess fully 30 per cent of the banking capital.

This has been done to guard against so-called Wall Street control of the proposed institution, which would largely supplant the United States treasury, and perform the functions of a national fiscal agent.

LINDBERGH ATTACKS CHICAGO BANKS

Washington, January 3.—A revised "money trust" resolution introduced in the house today by Representative Charles A. Lindbergh of Minnesota specifically mentions Chicago banks as a part of the power that "controls credits and the money supply."

The resolution directs the committee to ascertain whether the stockholders in the larger banks in New York, Chicago and other large cities, or the banks themselves, or their controlling directors directly or indirectly, have been using the funds on deposit with them for the purpose of buying and selling stocks and other securities for the purpose of manipulation on the stock market.

Representative Lindbergh asks that the Harvester Company and the foreign shipping combine, as well as the "money trust," be made the subject of investigation.

Antelope, Mont.—The Citizens State Bank has been incorporated with a capital of $20,000. Incorporators are Robert S. Richardson of Antelope, M. J. Wilson of Minneapolis, Minn., and others.

Proposals for Purchase of Davidson County State Fair Bonds

Sealed proposals will be received at the office of this Company up to 12 o'clock, noon, standard time, Wednesday, January 10, 1912, and then publicly opened, for the purchase of the whole or any part of $150,000.00 Davidson County, Tennessee, State Fair 4 per Cent Bonds, due January 1, 1941, optional after January 1, 1926. Denomination $500.00. Interest payable semiannually on the first days of January and July. Principal and interest payable at Nashville, Tenn. These bonds will be sold with accrued interest from January 1, 1912. A certified check for 1 per cent of the purchase price must accompany each proposal.

This is the whole of an issue of Bonds by Davidson County for the purchase of the State Fair Grounds, under an Act of the General Assembly, Chapter 42, Acts of 1909. The validity of this issue of bonds has been approved by the Supreme Court of Tennessee.

All necessary papers in regard to this issue of bonds are on file in the office of this Company.

The right is reserved to reject any and all proposals.

Pacific Northwest Banking News

Spokane, January 2.—F. M. March, president of the National Bank of Commerce of Spokane, Wash., on returning from a visit to Cranbrook, B. C., where he spent the holidays, said in an interview:

"Business conditions in Canada, as well as in the states, seem to be indicative of a good year ahead. There is a noticeable development in all lines, which ought to presage a lot of good for the coming year. Wherever I visited the banks are in good condition, and the business men are making money. Throughout British Columbia there is a very favorable sentiment toward Spokane as the hub around which a lot of business is revolving, business both for the Northwest and for parts of British Columbia. The people up there more and more are rating Spokane as an important center."

Lincoln County Banking Conditions

Lincoln county, Wash., with a population of 17,539, as reported by the late census, had per capita deposits of $143.75 in the banks on December 5th, the date on which the call for state and national banks was issued, the aggregate deposits in the 13 banking institutions of the county footing $2,521,301. Back of the deposits are guaranteed resources of $3,395,535, an increase over the resources sworn to by the bank authorities for the preceding statement, that of September 1st, of $312,890, or a little better than 10 per cent in the three months. At the same time, deposits which were three months ago given as $2,262,403 increased $258,898, or nearly 12 per cent. Every town in the county by the last statement shows increased deposits, as well as banking resources.

The two banks in Davenport had on deposit on the date of the call $748,686, as compared with $683,181 three months previous. The statement of a year ago showed Davenport deposits to be $78,064 less than at present. The resources of the Davenport banks increased in that period from $915,080 to $958,087. Deposits at Wilbur totaled $441,242, as compared with $432,246 the statement before, while resources on the last call were $520,388, an increase of $27,722.

Sprague, with $301,926, was third in point of deposits, showing an increase of $27,165, while the resources, $349,089, remained about the same as on the preceding call. Reardan's two banks certified to aggregate deposits of $282,401, backed by resources of $408,847, an increase in deposits of $15,944 and of resources of $22,048. Odessa had in bank on December 5th, $225,973, compared with $159,137, the greatest increase in deposits alone of any city in the entire county. The resources were certified to be $285,388, compared with $209,332.

The two banking institutions at Harrington, with resources of $367,807, an increase in the three months of $42,487, held on deposit an aggregate fund of $191,612, as compared with $191,699 the quarter before. At Almira resources of the bank totaled $256,306, an increase from $209,002, while the deposits in trust were at the last call $178,275, an increase in the three months of $43,923. Creston's bank reported resources of $132,785, compared with $97,207 at the previous call, and deposits of $86,639, an increase for the period of $17,845.

Deposits at Edwall were $56,807, an increase from the September statement, when the bank officials certified to $51,746. Resources in September of $78,047 were increased by the December statement to $87,997. The bank at Govan, one of the strongest in the county, though the smallest in point of business, had deposits of $17,738 and resources of $28,838 to guarantee its depositors.

William Kroll

William Kroll, formerly of Kenton, Mich., who became a director in the Fidelity National Bank of Spokane last spring, has moved to Spokane and taken up his residence on Cannon Hill. Mr. Kroll is an extensive timber and lumber operator. Mr. Kroll will give considerable of his attention to enterprises in the West, directing them from Spokane.

Oakesdale Makes Fine Showing

The remarkable showing made by the Commercial State Bank, of Oakesdale, Wash., at the last call for statement, December 5th, reflects credit upon the town, considering its population of 1,000, and especially upon the surrounding country. With deposits totaling $327,916.25 this bank now occupies fourth place among the 34 banks in Whitman county. The Colfax National Bank, the Farmers State Bank of Colfax and the Security State Bank of Palouse are the only three ahead of it. The institution was incorporated in 1891, and, after going through the panic of 1892 and 1893 with flying colors, has successfully kept its name as one of the strongest financial institutions in the country. Among the stockholders are A. Coolidge and A. F. McClaine. Mr. McClaine is president of the Traders National Bank, Spokane, and has large interests in Oregon. Mr. Coolidge is president of the Colfax National Bank. E. H. Hanford, president, owns a large part of the stock and has between 4,000 and 5,000 acres of rich Palouse land.

Overdrafts Tabooed

Patrons of Spokane's banks no longer will be permitted to overdraw their accounts. Copies of a resolution passed at the last meeting of the Spokane Clearing House Association, which condemns the practice of permitting overdrafts, have been posted in the lobbies of all banks which are members of the association. The resolution quotes a supreme court decision which characterizes the allowance of overdrafts as a misappropriation of bank funds for the benefit of a privileged few.

Banking Notes

The bank deposits as shown by the statements of December 5th are the largest ever shown at Cottonwood, Idaho. The combined deposits of the two banks was over $313,000, the First National Bank having deposits of $194,019.85, with $86,288.62 cash and exchange, and the German State Bank deposits of $118,992.47, with $75,088.83 cash and exchange.

Statements just issued by the banks in Wenatchee, Wash., show $1,264,919.54 in deposits in three institutions, while the cash reserve totals $490,712.82, being nearly 40 per cent of the deposits.

R. C. McCredie, cashier of the First National Bank of Sunnyside, Wash., has purchased the First National Bank stock owned by W. D. Perkins of Seattle.

DOROTHY DAY BY W. D. FOULKE

The Cosmopolitan Press of New York has published a story of the outgoing generation. Mr. Foulke begins his story of Dorothy Day by giving a glimpse of the life of Friends in New York in antebellum days. Their quaint ways are set forth entrancingly. Then come college days, boyish pranks, love episodes and early war experiences. The climax is a fine description of the battle of Gettysburg, all told in humor, pathos and literary style of a high order.

OREGON BANKERS TO AID FARMING

Portland, Ore., January 2.—Oregon bankers have started a movement that has for its purpose the introduction of a course of agricultural instruction in the public schools. The financiers believe this will bring about a real back-to-the-soil movement, for it will give the town boy, with a liking for agriculture, an opportunity to learn how to farm, while at the same time it will have a tendency to keep the farm boy on the land. The sole object of the bankers is to make farm life more attractive by showing the producer how to improve and increase his profit. It is believed this cannot help but increase the ranks of the producers by thinning those of the overcrowded army of consumers in the cities.

The Oregon State Bankers Association appointed an agricultural committee, and the past week this committee has been in session. Among those attending were President Kerr of the Oregon Agricultural College at Corvallis, President Campbell of the University of Oregon, L. R. Alderman, city superintendent of instruction, and several prominent bankers. President Kerr outlined the work his institution is carrying on in disseminating agricultural instruction among farmers.

Superintendent Alderman made the suggestion that the pupils of the public schools be encouraged to hold competitive exhibits of agricultural products at the county and district fairs. As an instance of what can be done, he referred to a recent exhibition by pupils of the Yamhill county schools. With a school population of 4,500 in that county, there were 1,700 participants in the contest. He urged that this plan is the most effective and direct way to arouse the interest of the pupils in agricultural instruction.

The plan provides for the employment of a competent man who will visit the various counties in the state, enlist the aid of the county school superintendents in the subject of holding competitive exhibits in which school children shall participate, and also to secure the assistance of county superintendents in introducing agricultural studies in the public schools.

The plan met with the approval of the bankers committee and the various interests represented at the meeting promised to co-operate in every possible way.

ROBBER KILLS BANK PRESIDENT

Centralia, Wash., December 31.—The young bandit who shot and killed Lawrence Bar, president of the Farmers and Merchants Bank of Centralia, in an unsuccessful attempt to rob the bank last night, talked freely today, but refused to give his name.

He said his home formerly was in Syracuse, N. Y., and that he came to the Pacific Coast a year ago. On one side of his silver watch was engraved the word "Ernest," and on the other "Riblett."

Bar's slayer expressed willingness to plead guilty to murder, and said he was aware that the penalty would be death.

MCCLEARY ON BANK REFORM

Washington, January 2.—Before the American Academy for the Advancement of Science James T. McCleary delivered on Friday evening an address on "The Reform of Our Banking System."

Mr. McCleary said in part:

"As a nation the United States has three undesirable monopolies. First, this is the only civilized country in the world that ever has a serious financial panic; second, this is the only civilized country in the world that has a series of banks instead of a system of banks; third, this is the only civilized country in the world which keeps the funds of the nation in a national treasury. The first is a result of which the second and third are prime causes.

"Here let us distinguish between a financial panic and a business depression. They are alike in being troublesome business experiences; otherwise they are fundamentally unlike. To point out one distinction, in a financial panic business men are anxious to get money or its equivalent; but, however solvent, they are unable to do so except possibly in very limited quantities and with extreme difficulty; in a business depression, on the other hand, money is easily obtainable but men are timid about accepting and using it. In a financial panic men are seeking money; in a business depression money is seeking men. From business depressions we probably suffer less than any other country; on the other hand, from financial panics we are the only country that suffers seriously at all. It is entirely practicable for us to banish our financial panics and to reduce very greatly the extent and severity of our business depressions."

JAMES G. CANNON OPTIMISTIC

James G. Cannon, president of the Fourth National Bank, New York, is not disturbed over the political outlook. He says:

"General business conditions are in very fair shape and people are feeling more reassured about the future than they did a few months ago. I think that the revival which has already been seen in the steel trade may be expected to extend to other lines of business. The sentiment of the country is more optimistic and I believe that the public mind is less disturbed than it was about the possibility of political disturbance.

"It seems to me that there has been a reaction in the last few months in favor of more conservative methods and that the whole country is becoming more than ever anxious to get down to real business again, and not to experiment with various new theories of business regulation. While there may not be any boom in general business, I believe that the year now opening will prove to be in many ways a much better year for the business interests of the whole country than the past year has been."

The forgery of all Bank of England notes is quickly detected, because of secret marks which are constantly being changed. They are visible only under the microscope.

Des Moines, January 3.—The past year was a good one for the Iowa bankers. The year just opening will be a better one, they believe. The close of 1911 finds the banks well loaned out, and keeping a better reserve than ever before. Business has been somewhat dull in many of the smaller towns, and the latter have felt the tightness of the money situation. But Des Moines bankers anticipate that money will be easier in 1912. While it is a presidential year, bankers do not fear the effect of the political unrest as they did some years ago.

So far as Des Moines is concerned, the year 1911 was most gratifying. Total clearings for the year were $209,659,412.51 an increase over the clearings for the preceding year of $3,763,413.50. This is a larger increase than has ever been shown over a preceding year in the history of Des Moines, except in 1910, which set a record that was not quite equaled by 1911. The largest clearings in any single month totaled $23,121,839.99 for the month of March. Owing to the real estate activity, March usually carries off the banner for clearings.

According to the final report of the state banking department for the year, there were 41 new state and savings banks established during the year. While statistics are not obtainable as to the number of national banks established, it is thought by Des Moines bankers that the number will approach half that number. Deposits in the state and savings banks increased over $6,000,000 throughout the year, so the same report shows.

Moral for Iowa Bankers

There is a moral for the Iowa banker who does not belong to the Iowa Bankers Association in the bold attempt to rob the Orchard bank near Charles City a fortnight ago. It will be remembered that a stranger entered the bank, knocked down Cashier Clapper, then fled, leaving some $15,000 untouched. Since then efforts have been made to secure a reward for the conviction of the assailant through the Iowa Bankers Association and Secretary Hall has received letters from the bank officials and from the county authorities asking his assistance in prosecuting one Guliver who is under arrest. But Secretary Hall has replied that the bank does not belong to the association and that he can do nothing in either the direction of reward or assisting in the capture and conviction of the guilty parties. Doubtless the bank officials are now regretting their shortsightedness in not becoming members of the association.

Iowa State Savings at Creston

The Iowa State Savings at Creston declared a $50,000 Christmas gift and shared this amount among the twenty-nine stockholders. This amount represents the surplus accumulation for several years above the modest dividend annually paid. The bank directors felt that it was unnecessary to longer carry so large a reserve fund. The bank has been in operation since 1883 and for twenty years F. D. Ball has been cashier and Scott Armstrong assistant cashier. D. Davenport is at present the president and P. C. Winter is vice-president.

Tax Ferrets

It seems like old times at Waterloo, where six suits have been started in the district court to test the power of the tax ferrets who were declared "dead issues" in Iowa by the last legislature. The cases state that Tax Ferret Ben McCoy caused to be levied assessments on money, credits and corporation shares of stock and that such assessments are illegal. F. F. McElhinney, a well-known Waterloo banker, is plaintiff in one case. He seeks to be freed from assessments on corporation shares reported at $81,000. Although the legislature passed a law putting the ban on the tax ferrets many counties are still employing them under contracts entered into prior to the enactment of the law.

New Bank for Dubuque

Dubuque is to have a new bank, the German American Savings. Articles of incorporation have been filed at Des Moines with the secretary of state giving the capital stock at $50,000. The new bank is headed by N. J. Schrup, president of the Dubuque Fire and Marine Insurance Company and a member of the Iowa senate from Dubuque county. Henry Michel is vice-president and A. C. Lantzky is cashier. The German American was formerly operated as a branch bank of the German Savings, but under the decision of the attorney-general ruling out branch banks in Iowa, the institution was incorporated as at present. There is a good field for the institution and it is anticipated that it will prove a great success.

May Establish Public Loan Bureau

The Commercial Club of Des Moines is considering the establishment of a public loan bureau which will be supported by the club and will run in opposition to the "loan sharks" of the city. A committee has been appointed to look into the situation and arrange tentative plans for its establishment. The plan contemplates the loaning of funds to the needy at reasonable rates of interest. It is expected that these will prove an attraction to the poorer class who are now driven to excessive and usurious rates by the demand of the loan agencies.

Bleakly Entertains Bank Examiners

John L. Bleakly, auditor of state, was host to the bank examiners in his department at a dinner at the Chamberlain Hotel one day last week. It was the purpose of the auditor to outline plans for the coming year and arrange for a more thorough inspection than was ever

E. E. Hart on Witness Stand

E. E. Hart, president of the First National at Council Bluffs and Iowa's member of the republican national committee, who has been involved in the public prints more or less with the Mabray gang swindling operations, was called to the witness stand in the trial of Ben Marks of that city, accused of complicity with the swindlers. Mr. Hart denied emphatically that either he or the bank had ever in any way been connected with the swindles or with the transactions in which the bank and Marks, the defendant, were coupled by the testimony for the state. T. G. Turner, president of the City National and formerly associated with Hart, testified along the same lines. Cashier J. J. Spindler was also on the stand. He testified to trying to induce one of the "Mikes" not to part with his coin, but that his advice went unheeded. He told of cashing some good-sized drafts but denied any complicity in the swindles.

Cought; Commits Suicide

An unusual case is reported from Jefferson, where one Anton Aigner stole $3000 from his father, Ignatz Aigner, and fled to Chicago. Here he fell in with some sharpers who failed to get the money but persuaded the lad to deposit all but $500 in a Chicago bank, then skip out to escape arrest. Apparently they intended to try to work some scheme to get the money but officers appeared on the scene and the boy was arrested at Milwaukee. The next day Anton committed suicide. The officers found $500 in his pockets, and some days later the father secured the remainder of the amount from the bank in which it had been placed.

Burns in Great Favor in Iowa

The employment of the W. J. Burns Detective Agency to take charge of the Iowa situation has been received with popular favor throughout the state. Secretary Hall of the Iowa Bankers Association has received many letters approving the selection and extending congratulations over the securing of the famous sleuth.

Banking Notes

The temporary tax commission which is expected to work out changes in the Iowa tax laws and suggest them to the next legislature will meet in Des Moines the middle of January. The commission is getting the work well in hand.

Postal savings banks will be established January 19th at Carson, Malcom, Morning Sun, Ocheyedan and West Point.

The Farmers Savings of South English has filed articles increasing its capital stock from $10,000 to $16,000.

David Dorn, arrested at Marshalltown on charges of forgery said to be filed in Minneapolis, owes his capture to his desire to talk over the telephone with his sister at Green Mountain. Dorn was recognized by an officer as he stepped into a telephone booth in Marshalltown. When he stepped out, the officer nabbed him. It is claimed that he has been going under the alias of H. A. Brown.

The Peoples Savings at Newton proposes to encourage the raising of good corn in Iowa by offering a prize of $10 to the exhibitor of the best ten ears of corn grown in Polk county. The prize will be awarded at the forthcoming corn show, which will be held this year at Newton.

The St. Charles Savings at St. Charles had a narrow escape from fire when the business section of that city was swept away by a conflagration. The bank building was discovered in flames but they were extinguished before the damage reached a serious stage.

The Valley Savings at Missouri Valley has filed articles of incorporation with the secretary of state. The capital stock is $50,000. The incorporators include W. J. Burke, D. C. Ford and S. C. Graham.

Richard Nash has been made bookkeeper in the First National at Charter Oak.

Ed. Scott, a Keokuk negro, wanted to purchase Christmas presents for his lady love, and was arrested charged with forging the name of B. F. Jones to two checks to procure the wherewithal. Scott was accused of cashing one $40 check at one saloon and a $10 check at another. His third attempt was disastrous for he tried to get a $40 check past the Central Savings and was arrested.

W. W. Burrell, manager of the First National at Greenfield, has disposed of his interest in that institution.

Park Chamberlain of Anamosa has been elected president of the Wyoming National, but retains his connection with the Anamosa National.

D. P. Hogan, president of the Farmers Savings at Massena and Cass county representative in the Iowa legislature, is spending the winter on the Pacific Coast with Mrs. Hogan.

R. K. Davis, representing the Farmers National at Oskaloosa, bought $33,000 in municipal bonds issued for a new structure for the city business.

Sioux City

By JOHN J. BIDDISON.

Yearly reports made by the commercial institutions of the city revealed that Sioux City has had a year prosperous beyond any reason to expect, in view of the start it had. A wholesaling trade of approximately $40,000,000, according to the estimates of the Commercial Club, and a live stock business of the same amount, according to the figures given out at the stock yards, are two of the striking figures for 1911. Bank clearings fell off quite markedly, owing in part to the general slump the country over and in part to consolidations that cut in quite deeply. The reference here is particularly to the purchase and absorption of the Merchants National by the First National, which immediately caused a shrinkage in the daily clearing house figures. The total clearings for the year were $127,326,768.61, as compared with $150,383,133.97 in 1910. The year 1910 was the greatest year of all in amount of clearings. The clearings by months were as follows: January, $10,634,103.41; February, $9,004,003.79; March, $14,176,207.87; April, $10,407,387.14; May, $10,620,449.28; June, $10,675,067.36; July, $9,520,541.00; August, $9,932,386.38; September, $10,122,942.64; October, $11,206,794.79; November, $10,160,542.14; December, $10,776,340.81. Of the jobbing figures, most interesting are those in the grocery line, $10,000,000 total; hardware, $4,000,000; dry goods, $1,000,000; fruit, $1,250,000; candies, $1,250,000; drugs, $1,250,000; agricultural implements, $2,000,000; dairy products, $4,000,000; grain and grain products, $4,000,000; automobiles, $2,250,000, and builders' supplies, $2,000,000. Sioux City attained one distinction over other packing centers by being the only one to beat its own record in cattle receipts. All others fell off. In total amount of business in live stock also this packing center beat its previous best record. Building for the year is estimated by the city engineer at $3,000,000; postal receipts were the greatest ever, topping last year's mark by totaling $285,531. An elaborate report on the city's commercial activities, written by George S. Parker, president of the Commercial Club and president of the Live Stock National Bank, was one of the features of the last business day of the year. In this he recited the accomplishments of the year and pointed out what should be done in 1912.

Newburgh, Mo. About ten days ago Scanlan started to drive out into the country, and disappeared. No trace of his body has been found.

The stockholders of the Park Bank of St. Joseph, Mo., at their annual election, December 28th, chose the following board of directors: A. P. Clayton, C. A. Frazer, John T. Merriam, Christian Block, James F. Reardon, P. D. Stinson, C. L. Wiehl and William Morrison. C. L. Wiehl is president, M. C. Powell secretary and P. D. Stinson, cashier.

The Inter-State National Bank of Kansas City has declared a semiannual dividend of 10 per cent. This bank is located at the stock yards and is the oldest bank in that district.

At the annual election of the Western Exchange Bank of Kansas City a semiannual dividend of 6 per cent was declared, and the following board of directors elected: William T. Johnston, William H. Lucas, John H. Lucas, David S. McGonigle, J. Q. Watkins, J. Z. Miller and Henry Koehler.

The New England National Bank of Kansas City followed its annual custom and made a Christmas distribution among its employees equal to 5 per cent of the salary of each. The total distributed this year was $4,250.

The directors of the Commerce Trust Company of Kansas have declared a quarterly dividend of 1½ per cent. This is on a capitalization of $1,000,000. In addition to the dividend the directors set aside $75,000 of the bank's earnings as surplus.

Among the bankers who spent part of the holiday season in Kansas City were: J. A. Menefee, vice-president, and Boon D. Hite, cashier of the Anadarko State Bank of Anadarko, Okla.; C. S. Groves, president of the Groves National Bank of Hollis, Okla.; A. D. Kendall, president of the Kendall State Bank of Valley Falls, Kan.; T. M. Walker, president of the Atchison, Kan., Savings Bank; B. B. Harris, vice-president and cashier of the South Texas National Bank of Houston; R. A. Smith, cashier of the Lawson Bank of Lawson, Mo.; C. L. Bruner, cashier of the Burns State Bank, Burns, Kan.; C. J. Drund, cashier of the Citizens State Bank, Marble City, Okla.; W. H. Bausfield, assistant cashier of the First National Bank, Auburn, Neb.; M. F. Stillwell, president, and H. V. Foster, vice-president of the American National Bank, Bartlesville, Okla.; M. T. Davis, cashier of the Bank of Aurora, Mo.; E. L. Shaepless, cashier of the Home National Bank, Caney, Kan.; S. T. Smith, secretary of the Joplin, Mo., Trust Company; A. B. Wilson of the State Bank of Akron, Colo., and J. F. Farrell, vice-president of the Fort Dearborn National Bank, Chicago.

Not long ago a number of rich farmers living in Cherokee county, Kan., were assembled informally in a store at Hallowell, one of the larger towns of the county. Someone proposed that a bank be organized then and there, and in less than ten minutes the $10,000 capital stock of the Hallowell State Bank was oversubscribed.

Within the past week officers of the National Bank of Commerce of Guthrie, Okla., purchased controlling interest in the Guthrie National Bank and merged the two institutions under the latter name. The deal also includes the liquidation of the Bank of Indian Territory, a state banking department of the Guthrie National Bank.

The stockholders of the Southwest National Bank of Kansas City have declared a dividend of 8 per cent payable quarterly after January 1st. This bank has been in existence three years and heretofore all the earnings have been put back into surplus.

A new bank will be opened soon in Guthrie, Okla., to take the place of the National Bank of Commerce of that city, which recently was merged with the Guthrie National Bank. The new bank will have $50,000 capital and it was organized by Joseph McNeal, Republican candidate for governor of Oklahoma in the last state campaign. Mr. McNeal will be president.

The Republic Surety, Fidelity and Trust Company is the name of a new concern now being organized in Dallas, Texas. It will have a capital stock of $5,000,000. Charles L. Wakefield is the moving spirit in the enterprise.

The City National Bank of Dallas, Texas, has declared a semiannual dividend of 10 per cent on a capital of $1,000,000.

The executive committee of the Oklahoma Bankers Association met in Tulsa last week and made preliminary arrangements for the state meeting to be held in that city next May. The following members of the committee were present: W. S. Guthrie, chairman, Oklahoma City; W. B. Harrison, secretary, Enid; A. E. Patrick, Chandler; O. J. Fleming, Enid; Tom Dwyer, Chickasha; D. S. Dill, Hobart; J. H. McBirney, Tulsa; H. M. Spalding, Enid; B. R. Brundage, Tishomingo, and A. W. Thomas, McAlester.

BIG WESTERN BANK MERGER

Los Angeles.—The merger of three banks here, Security Savings, Equitable Savings, and Southern Trust Company, into one great institution to be known as the Security Trust and Savings Bank, which will be one of the largest, if not the largest, of its kind west of Chicago, is about to be consummated, according to Joseph F. Sartori, president of the Security Savings Bank. The new bank will have total resources of $44,000,000, deposits of $40,000,000 and 80,000 depositors.

BANK CLEARINGS INCREASED

Milwaukee, Wis.—President J. W. P. Lombard of the Milwaukee Clearing House Association says that while the past year has been fair from a business standpoint, profits were small. He thinks that the coming year will show some improvement. Total bank clearings were $692,807,381.95 up to December 28th, an increase of more than $34,000 over 1910.

"While the bank clearings show an increase over the previous year, it must be remembered that the city is growing and an increase is to be expected," he said. "However, we have reason to believe that business in 1912 will be better than it has been. The country has been living from hand to mouth, so to speak, and a change for the better is bound to come.

"Even though a president is to be elected in 1912, it ought not to make a difference so far as the prosperity of the country is concerned. Politicians have learned better than to flaunt the prospect of hard times in the faces of people as an excuse to keep them in power or to make changes.

"The sentiment points to a renewed confidence in the business world, and sentiment goes a long way to determine a condition. Milwaukee will share whatever prosperity comes to the country."

INDIANAPOLIS BANK OPENED

The new National City Bank, formed by the consolidation of the Union National and the Columbia National banks, opened for business on Tuesday at the Columbia Bank quarters in East Washington Street. Other banks in Indianapolis, friends of the two banks, and correspondents of the banks in Chicago and New York, had sent flowers, and the banking house showed an abundant display of these. Hundreds of patrons of the banks were visitors.

Both the Columbia and the Union closed business Saturday. The New Year's holiday afforded the new bank an opportunity to get things in readiness for the opening. Other officers in addition to President McIntosh, who was president of the Union, are: F. M. Millikan, vice-president, formerly president of the Columbia; John R. Welch and L. P. Newby, vice-presidents. W. K. Sproule is cashier, and Harry B. Wilson, assistant cashier. The board of directors of the new bank consists of the combined boards of the two banks which consolidated.

BRANCH BANKS PROPOSED

H. M. P. Eckhardt, author of "A Rational Banking System," holds the view that all the faults of the present methods would be remedied by the introduction of branch banks. The recent National Citizens League proposal for a wide campaign of education on the subject does not go so far. Mr. Eckhardt, in "A Rational Banking System," enumerates twenty-five points showing the good results which he believes would follow the inauguration of the branch-bank system.

SWEET SET FREE

George R. Sweet, the Detroit and Munith banker, who was accused of defrauding the bank's depositors out of several thousand dollars, has been discharged from custody, the prosecutor holding that not enough evidence of criminality exists to make a conviction possible. Sweet testified before the commissioner in bankruptcy that he had nothing when he bought the bank, that he was in debt and that he made the purchase for other parties.

Special Banking Services

THIS bank makes a specialty of handling inactive reserve accounts for banks and bankers, and of supplying carefully selected bonds for investment or circulation purposes.

During the past twenty-nine years its officers and directors selected and purchased, after careful investigations, over one thousand million dollars of bonds, which have been sold to a constantly growing list of conservative clients. In buying bonds of this institution the investor secures the benefit of the extensive experience and trained judgment gained through the selection of this large amount of safe investment. The special character of our business permits of liberal interest terms on inactive or reserve accounts of banks, bankers, corporations, firms and individuals.

Books on Banking, Finance and Economics

Credit. By J. LAWRENCE LAUGHLIN, of the Department of Political Economy, University of Chicago. Postpaid, 53c.

The nature of credit and its effect on prices have long been a subject of disagreement among economists. Its basis is commonly assumed to be money or bank reserves.

Essentials of Business Law. By FRANCIS M. BURDICK, LL. D., Professor of Law in Columbia University. 12mo. Postpaid, $1.50.

This book shows how the rules of law governing the commonest business transactions have been developed, and it tells what they are to-day. Technical law terms have been discarded as far as possible, and when they are used they are so explained and illustrated as to be easily understood. The principles of law are simplified and expressed in clear, lucid everyday speech.

Foreign Exchange. Tables converting foreign money into United States money, and United States money into foreign money at all commercial rates of exchange used in financial transactions between the United States and foreign countries. All about foreign exchange, including various forms of foreign commercial paper and terms, abbreviations, etc. For banks, bankers, steamship agents, importers, exporters and manufacturers. Cloth, $5.00.

Government Regulation of Railway Rates. By HUGO R. MEYER. A Professor of Political Economy in the University of Chicago. Postpaid, $1.60 net.

Investment Bonds. By F. LOWNHAUPT. Postpaid, $1.50.

Prospective investors who wish to make advantageous use of their money will do well to take notice of this volume. The author does not theorize, but tells only plain facts of the relation of the bond to its issuing corporation, and of the general investment aspect of the instrument.

Money and Credit. By WILBUR ALDRICH. Postpaid, $1.37. This volume contains much valuable information and much sound discussion on money and credit.

The Banking and Currency Problems in the United States. By VICTOR MORAWETZ. The author takes up the problem of the national monetary commission, appointed by congress, and discusses the means of providing a permanent safe-guard against money stringencies and panics. Postpaid, $1.10.

The Principles of Money and Banking. By CHARLES A. CONANT. It is a new and complete exposition of its subject. Two volumes. Postpaid, $4.25.

The Pitfalls of Speculation. By THOMAS GIBSON. Postpaid, $1.20.

A book dealing exclusively with marginal speculation, and analyzing in a clear and simple manner the causes of failure in speculation, with a suggestion as to the remedies.

The Investors' Catechism. By M. M. REYNOLDS. Cloth, by mail, $1.10.

"Investors' Catechism." Contains all that it is essential for the beginner to know, and opens the way for a thorough study of the whole subject of investment. The author has for the sake of clearness and simplicity adopted a catechetical style which is somewhat novel in this sort of literature.

The above books are the best of their kind, and will be promptly forwarded upon receipt of price.

GATES PREDICTS PROSPEROUS YEAR

Cheerfully optimistic concerning the entire United States of America, Charles G. Gates, of Texas, during a ten days' visit to Minneapolis expressed his belief that business conditions in the country have made a permanent turn for the better and that Minneapolis is going to feel the result.

"Were not a presidential year ahead, I should not hesitate to predict a pronounced increase in general business activity," Mr. Gates said. "There will probably be some holding down by reason of the election. I believe, however, that there will be distinct gains in all business and that every advance will be legitimate and not artificial. I have just come from the South and the cotton crop is so big it looks as if they will never get it all picked. The Northwest ought to start in 1912 with good steady business, no boom, but a healthy condition of advance, and then, if we get good crops next year, Minneapolis ought to grow rapidly. That's the way it looks to me."

"One thing that makes me feel that way is the fact that $80,000,000 represents the equipment orders that ought to be placed because the equipment is needed. When these orders will be placed depends upon the word from the men in authority on the railroads and other big companies, but it is a condition that bears good promise. When I was here last everything was pretty dull in the East. There has been improvement, and it has encouraged me to believe that there is much more improvement to come."

and also on an American lecture tour. Both men lectured on Dickens, and the coincidence is remarkable.

DEPOSITS of the 473 state banks in Kentucky at the close of the year reached almost sixty-nine millions. Dr. Ben. L. Bruner, secretary of state, continues to examine state and private banks "by contract," the law having been assailed and rendered null in the courts.

THE annual convention of the Oklahoma Bankers Association will be held in Tulsa, May 10-11, 1912.

SPOKANE Clearing House has decided to pass no overdrafts on Spokane banks. The comptroller has taken a decided stand on this subject. The clearing house at Spokane calls the attention to a decision of the U. S. courts on the subject of overdrafts which reads:

CCOURT of the United States on overdrafts in I Peters, page 71, as follows: "A usage to allow customers to overdraw, and to have their checks and notes charged up, without present funds in the banks, stripped of all technical disguise, the usage and practice thus attempted to be sanctioned is a usage and practice to misapply the funds of the bank, and to connive at the withdrawal of the same, without any security, in favor of certain privileged persons, is surely a manifest departure from the duty, both of the directors and the cashier, as cannot receive any countenance in a court of justice. It could not be supported by any vote of the directors, however formal, and, therefore, whenever done by the cashier is at his own peril, and upon the responsibility of himself and his sureties. It is anything but 'well and truly executing his duties as cashier.'"

IT wasn't surprising then to note in the December 5th report of the Old National to the comptroller that overdrafts had been kept down to $37.03. Pretty nice work for a ten million bank.

MICHIGAN association at a recent meeting of the executive council added the educational feature to the association work, "in order to stimulate a deeper interest on the part of bank clerks in the work of the American Institute of Banking." President Monroe requests members to please send in, at once, a typewritten list of names of all clerks under the cashier, so that the association may co-operate with them "in this great work of education of bankers in Banking and Finance and Commercial and Banking Law."

SECRETARY BROWN is being congratulated upon the capture of "A. G. Stevens of the Chicago Haddock Company," who had been operating in Oakland and Jackson counties. Prompt notice to the association is the real secret of these captures, just as it was in this case.

W. G. EDENS got a hurry-up call to come out to Elgin to talk to the Elgin Commercial Club banqueters on Thursday evening. It hurt to have to refuse, but here is what he sent out:

"I REGRET greatly my inability to be with you on the date mentioned, as during the past sixty days Central Trust Company of Illinois has almost doubled its deposits through the taking over of the banking business heretofore transacted by the Monroe National, the Metropolitan Trust and Savings, and the Western Trust and Savings, making our deposits now thirty-six millions. Naturally we are terribly rushed with work here; otherwise I would gladly make the trip as you request. At some future date I hope to have the pleasure of meeting your members."

NOW comes W. C. Macfadden, secretary of North Dakota. He has sent "night letter" requests to all officers and members to send samples of corn to the Grain Growers convention to be held at Fargo January 16-20. North Dakota is getting into the diversified crop and live stock game with a will. Agriculture is being taught in the schools. Why not, with butter in Chicago at 50 cents and bacon 38?

MACFADDEN also promises that "soon after the first of the new year another strenuous effort will be made to arrange for group meetings in the various judicial districts of the state. Members are earnestly urged to assist in perfecting arrangements for these group meetings. Where no group organizations have been perfected it is the duty of the member of the executive council for that district to take upon himself the responsibility of arranging for a meeting. These meetings are very pleasant and very profitable. Some of the officers of the state association will attend all group meetings and assist in arranging a profitable and interesting program. 'Better Farming' will be the slogan at these meetings and we are trying to arrange to have Mr. Cooper, general manager of the Better Farming Association of North Dakota, attend and outline the work of that association."

STEWART S. HATHAWAY has been admitted to membership in the firm of Hathaway, Smith, Folds & Co.

LEE, HIGGINSON & CO., Boston, are making a big hit with a list of stuff "non-taxable in Massachusetts."

"BUSINESS EXPERIENCE" is a neat little house-organ sent out by the Everitt Audit Company, 79 West Monroe, Chicago. The best thing about it is that it is virile and original and thus different from the bunch. You can get on the list by asking for it.

MINNEAPOLIS banks showed $106,647,000 in deposits for December 5th, the new high record. Probably no city in the country turns its bank money over so often as they do up there. The bankers are the liveliest known to the business.

CAPTAIN E. A. MADDOX, cashier of the Fayette County Bank, Somerville, Tenn., has moved into a new, high-class residence built on modern lines.

DON S. CULVER (president of Minnesota Bankers) says this is what St. Paul expects to accomplish in 1912: The beginning of work on a new Union Depot; a new charter; an improved lighting system; much sewer construction; new playgrounds and the commencing of work on the Capitol approaches; several new club houses and other large buildings; pronounced activity on the part of the Association of Commerce and the Commercial Club; brilliant outlook for new library; four new high schools in operation, and a smooth running public school system; prospects of two new interurban lines connecting the city with southern points in the state; prosperous conditions in the realty market; the erection of a fresh-air school; the completion of the Wilder Charities building.

CASHIER.

The First State Bank of New Pierz, Minn., will open for business the fifteenth of January. It is capitalized at $100,000 with a surplus of $2,000. The officers are G. F. Kirscher, president; Charles Sprandel, vice-president, and N. J. Fichtinger, cashier.

N. W. HARRIS' GIFT TO CHILDREN

N. W. Harris' gift of a quarter million to bring the benefits of the Field Columbian museum to school children is more than a generous and public spirited act. It marks an advance in the use of our educational facilities. To give maximum effect to our libraries, our museums, our galleries, we are realizing more and more that we must make them dynamic, not merely repositories of useful knowledge, beauty, and inspiration which the few informed will seek out. The library under Mr. Legler is now going to the people, not merely waiting for the people to come to it, and with Mr. Harris' farsighted gift the Field museum becomes an active and widely effective part of our popular school system.

This gift will make practically for good citizenship, which is really nothing but intelligent, informed citizenship, and Mr. Harris deserves the thanks of every one interested in the progress of the community.—The Tribune.

POOR BANKING CAUSE OF FAILURE

Portland.—That the men who were actively engaged in the conduct of its affairs did not have the necessary experience to run a bank and showed poor judgment in making investments, is the verdict of Bank Superintendent Will Wright in the matter of the recent failure of the American Bank and Trust Company. "I have discovered nothing whatever to indicate there were any shady or criminal transactions on the part of the directors or officers of the bank," said Wright. "There simply were not enough quick assets to meet pressing obligations, and I had no other recourse than to take possession. The bank was unfortunate in taking over the assets of the Union Bank and Trust Company. Those securities were worse than useless." The institution was hopelessly insolvent when it was closed, for not only had its capital stock of $150,000, all paid up, been wiped out, but the surplus of over $10,000 was gone and more than $65,000 worth of depositors' money had vanished. There is only about $115,000 of cash and good assets on hand with which to meet the $179,000 deposits, although something may be realized on the balance of $225,000 listed as bad assets.

INDIANA BANKS PROSPEROUS

The comptroller of the currency finds that the 251 national banks in Indiana were never more prosperous or in better condition than at present. He has given out a statement showing that on December 5th, the date of the last call, they held individual deposits amounting to $113,540,098, and had loans and discounts aggregating $99,204,413. The average per centum of legal reserve on that date was 17.34.

MOTHERS

Look, mother-sheep in the pasture,

Look, mother-bird on your nest—

Rose-mother, with your roses,

See the child that is on my breast!

O mother-earth, with your children—

Cattle and corn and vine—

Rich were you in your fulness,

And naught was there ever of mine!

I envied you, bird, your nestlings,

I envied you, tree, your leaves;

O corn-field in the valley,

I was woe for your golden sheaves!

But now I may walk among you,

A mother along with the rest,

Be glad with me, my neighbors,

For the child that is on my breast!

10 CENTS A COPY

The thirty-year dinner to President W. H. Dunwoody and Vice-President M. B. Koon, by the staff of the Northwestern National, at Minneapolis, easily was the banking event of the week. At the speaker's table—left to right—are T. B. Janney, D. R. Forgan, James J. Hill, W. H. Dunwoody, Toastmaster E. W. Decker, Judge M. B. Koon, J. B. Forgan, Dr. Joseph W. Mauck, O. C. Wyman. In the upper left corner is Joseph Chapman—far from the spot light—talking with Howard Elliott, president of the N. P. R. R. He merely was telling him a funny story, not kissing him as it appears.

Bank Elections

Practically every bank in the city of Chicago, except those which held elections on Tuesday of last week, completed their annual meetings on Tuesday of this week. No changes of note occurred except in those cases in which it was necessary to fill vacancies. The official list of names is entirely too long for the space at our disposal, but the interesting features of the annual elections are included in the following summary:

William G. Schroeder was elected a vice-president of the Continental and Commercial National Bank. Mr. Schroeder has held the office of secretary in the trust company. George B. Caldwell was elected vice-president, but will continue in charge of the bond department. W. H. Rehm succeeded John F. Harris as a director. Two important changes were made in the directorate of the First National, George F. Baker of New York, and Charles Deering retiring. Mr. Deering's place will be filled by W. J. Louderback, who, it is said, will represent the Deering interests, while that of Mr. Baker will be filled by Marvin Hughitt. C. N. Gillett, who has held the title of cashier in addition to that of vice-president, continues as vice-president, and H. A. Howland is now cashier. The Union Trust Company added $100,000 of undivided profits to its surplus, which was increased to $1,300,000. At a directors' meeting in December the Chicago City Bank increased its surplus from $200,000 to $250,000 out of its undivided profits. Among the smaller institutions, the Citizens Trust and Savings increased its surplus from $7,500 to $12,000 in a similar manner and the dividend rate was increased from 10 to 12 per cent. A. A. Sprague II. and John G. Shedd were elected directors of the Merchants Loan and Trust, the directorate of which was increased from twelve to fourteen. The death of Robert Mather and in the increasing of the number of directors of the National Bank of the Republic from thirteen to fourteen made way for the election of Ira M. Cobe and Samuel Scotten as directors of that institution. H. W. Mahan was elected president of the Washington Park National Bank in place of Isaac M. Powell, while Werner A. Wieboldt was elected vice-president of the Union Bank, the position of second vice-president being abolished. Isaac N. Powell succeeded John W. Venable as president of the Ashland State Bank, and E. H. Nichols was elected vice-president of the Englewood State Bank in place of F. G. Thearle. R. H. Griffin, formerly cashier, was elected vice-president of the Peoples Trust and Savings Bank. His former place as cashier will be filled by Earle H. Reynolds, a son of G. M. Reynolds. John A. Spoor retired as a vice-president of the Live Stock Exchange National Bank, but was re-elected a director. F. A. Fowler was elected vice-president of the Kenwood Trust and Savings Bank in place of D. E. Hartwell, who retired. Edward F. Swift, Averill Tilden, and L. P. Patterson were elected directors of the Fort Dearborn National, the directorate being increased from thirteen to sixteen. John Fletcher and Averill Tilden were elected directors of the Drovers Trust and Savings Bank, the number of which was increased from five to seven. S. M. Felton, president of the Chicago Great Western Railway, and Alexander H. Revell were elected directors of the North Side State Savings Bank.

George M. Reynolds was yesterday elected president of the Hibernian Banking Association. D. R. Lewis retired from that position and became first vice-president. At the annual meeting of stockholders three new directors were elected. Ralph Van Vechten became president of the South Chicago Savings.

John R. Lindgren

John R. Lindgren, who retired on Tuesday from the vice-presidency and from the board of directors of the State Bank of Chicago, was one of the founders of that institution in 1879. Associated with him then were H. A. Haugan, the late president of the bank, and H. G. Haugan, who still is a member of the board. Because of ill health Mr. Lindgren has not been active in the management for three or four years.

E. A. Strause

E. A. Strause, president of the Inter State Bank and Trust Company, Peoria, visited Chicago Monday. Mr. Strause says their deposits are around six hundred thousand, and that about February 10th the Inter State will move into new banking quarters on Jefferson Street just opposite the new Jefferson Hotel, and that at that time they will establish a trust department in charge of Clifford Ireland, a Peoria lawyer who is a member of the old banking family of Irelands, at Washburn, Illinois.

PROMOTIONS FOR FIRST NATIONAL BOYS

The annual meeting of the stockholders of the First National was held January 9th. At the meeting of the directors following, the official staff was re-elected with these changes and additions: C. N. Gillett, who has held the title of cashier in addition to that of vice-president, gives up the former position, continuing as vice-president; H. A. Howland, formerly assistant cashier, was elected cashier; W. J. Lawlor, R. F. Newhall, and George H. Dunscomb, three very active men, were elected assistant cashiers; C. R. McKay, who helped the A. B. A. to its numerical transit system, becomes an official of the bank as manager of the transit and general books department, and J. W. Lynch as manager of the credit and statistical department. Orville Peckham, who has been attorney for the bank for many years, recently met with a serious accident and, though recovering, decided to retire. He is succeeded by Judge Edward Eagle Brown as attorney. John Nash Ott becomes assistant attorney. All officers of the First Trust and Savings Bank were re-elected.

B. F. Harris, president of the Illinois Bankers Association, recently addressed the bankers and farmers of DeKalb county at a meeting held in DeKalb. The farmers and bankers of that county are working hard on the suggested ideas for better farming advanced by the Illinois Bankers Association.

TEXAS group meetings most likely will be held this year as follows: Dallas, February 13th; Houston, February 14th; San Antonio, February 16th; Austin, February 17th; Waco, February 19th; Brownwood, February 20th, and Fort Worth, February 22d. The state convention is to be held the 7th to 9th of May at San Antonio.

WE have a very clever little picture of the "First Lesson in Agriculture," which shows Honorable Chapman, turning, razor in hand, to instruct Elizabeth, Jr., aged four, in the tenets of the new Northwest banking cult—farming. It's early and late with Joe, when he's got anything on.

THIRTY years in the service was the excuse for a staff banquet up at Minneapolis, to President W. H. Dunwoody, and Vice-President M. B. Koon, of the Northwestern National. The spread was de luxe, which means some eats in the milling metropolis. E. W. Decker was toastmaster, and the talking was up to the requirements.

THE millers claim Dinwoody as of their cult, but the bankers were in the majority, so it goes down in history as thirty years a banker and not thirty years the boss miller. The Forgans, J. B. and D. R., went up for the occasion. On the right of the toastmaster sat Mr. Dunwoody, and next were James J. Hill, D. R. Forgan, and T. B. Janney. On the toastmaster's left were Judge M. B. Koon, James B. Forgan, Dr. J. W. Mauck and O. C. Wyman. In the room were one hundred and seventy men of Minneapolis, St. Paul, from the state, the financial centers of the Atlantic seaboard, the Pacific coast, Chicago, and from the cities of the Northwest. It was a gathering noteworthy for the presence of men of high position in financial, commercial and professional life, and presidents of great banks and great railroads, heads of great industries and men of eminence in professional life sat about the room.

THE most beautiful souvenirs that good taste and the desire to give something that should be treasured could devise were at the plates of the guests in the form of silver bound frames with large portraits of Mr. Dunwoody and Judge Koon on either side. These contained the announcement of the dinner and the occasion for it and the names of the directors of the bank who were the hosts.

RECENTLY there appeared in this department a claim made by the city of Helena, Mont., that it is the richest city per capita, as shown by bank returns. The paragraph closed with the query "Can you beat it?"

MONDAY morning's mail brings from David G. Brown, president of the Stockmans National at Fort Benton (Mont.) a letter containing a very hard call-down for Helena. Fort Benton has two banks—the Stockmans National with $1,192,293.43 and the Benton State Bank with $207,739.61, a total of $1,400,033.04. This, when divided up among the population, which is given in the last census report at 1,004, puts Fort Benton in a class by itself.

HELENA people, men, women and babies, have an average of $800.00 per capita in the banks. Fort Benton men, women and babies have an average of $1,394.45, which leads our good friends in Helena by about 75 per cent. The bankers of both these cities and the newspapers which represent the bankers are having quite a time over these statistics. Now can any city beat Fort Benton?

MONTICELLO (IA.) STATE BANK has shown over the signature of President H. M. Carpenter a comparative statement of deposits and loans running back to July, 1875. The first statement shows $73,792 deposits, and from the date until December 31, 1911, the growth is gradual but insistent. Every annual statement shows a growth over the previous year, and not any of the statements shows any growth from consolidation or "boom" operations. The deposits at the bank now stand at $1,537,929.00.

THE loans in 1875 were slightly above one hundred thousand dollars and have kept pace with the deposits, so that on December 31, 1911, they stood at $1,572,372.00. Mr. Carpenter remarks at the foot of this splendid showing that "very few people carry statement figures long in their minds." For this reason he issued the comparative statement to recall the history of his institution to its patrons.

A VERY careful reading of our Iowa exchanges confirms our belief that the election of Arthur Reynolds to the chairmanship of the Big Council was a mighty popular event in that state. There may be those who suspected a region of low barometer in and around Waterloo, to whom this will come as pleasant information. Everybody in Iowa, and outside of it, is, or ought to be, very happy over the result.

IT is not known at the present time where the mid-year meeting of the Big Council will be held this year. President F. O. Watts established a very clever precedent last year by having the event brought off in his city of Nashville. He wished to do some honor to the association, and Nashville did not have the capacity to entertain the national convention, so a social compromise was struck. There were those who demurred at first because of the custom of going to New York or some of her suburban resorts for this meeting, but in the end all were convinced of the correctness of Mr. Watts' judgment.

THERE was a very full attendance and a very strict attention to business—so much so that these features were remarked by many of the veterans. The remark has been heard that probably Des Moines would invite the council, this year. No other city of its size could attempt with any likelihood of success to beat or equal the record made at Nashville.

GUARANTY TRUST (N. Y.) has sent out a beautiful photographic calendar, substantially mounted for hanging. It shows the famous New York sky line more perfectly than those particular "commercial Alps" have been shown before. If you have not a balance at the Guaranty, you might send a modest little postal card request to F. W. Ellsworth, and you will have a prompt response.

"HUGHEY" JENNINGS, manager of the Detroit "Tigers," has been elected a director of the Treasurers National at Scranton, which shows that "Hughey" has not been wasting his money, and that he is in high standing and good favor in his home town. Some day he may rival "Jake" Stahl, the ex-diamond star, now cashier of the Washington Park National.

W. H. MAHER, of the Union Savings at Toledo, has written an account of the Ohio bankers trip to the New Orleans convention for the "Ohio Banker," which would do credit to a professional. The Ohio train visited all of the principal cities of the South, either on its going or return trip, and Mr. Maher has recorded what was seen and the impressions left in a most unusually interesting and entertaining way.

OHIO has been making great progress in the way of new bank buildings. The Farmers and Traders National at Hillsboro is in its new banking house, and the Ohio National at Columbus has been running nearly a month in its new building. It is estimated that the Ohio National was visited by not less than five thousand persons on opening day. Both of the buildings mentioned are in the A1 class.

POLITICAL banking in Cincinnati has provided another example of what usually happens in such cases. The trust company organized and operated by George B. Cox, the famous Cincinnati boss, has been taken over by another institution. Quoting President Cox, it may be stated that "certain loans and investments among the assets were objectionable to the banking department." Just bear this in mind.

J. W. HOOPES, of the Austin (Texas) National, has found it advantageous to print the bank statement even in the newspapers in several foreign languages. The head of the secretaries section is right up to the minute on all of these little advantages.

M. A. TRAYLOR, vice-president of the National Stockyards National Bank, has been remembering his friends with a desk calendar. If you did not receive one, it may be that, like ours, it was lost in the mail.

WINTON MOTOR CAR CO., of Cleveland, pays out twenty annual prizes in money to chauffeurs who drive the famous "Winton Six," the largest number of miles on the least up-keep expense. The first prize of $1,000 this year was paid to R. R. Reilly's chauffeur in Cincinnati. His car ran 27,325

Chicago Loyal to the New Monetary Plan

Leading bankers, business and professional men, and others hope to see the new law adopted as an all-American measure of greatest importance

Bankers and business men generally have given careful study to the report the national monetary commission made to congress Monday. From all sides came approval for the work of the commission and for suggestion of the plan. Most of those interviewed hope congress will see fit to follow the recommendations made and enact legislation needed to establish the National Reserve Association.

There will be strong opposition to the measure in some quarters, and politicians will not pass the opportunity to make capital out of the pending measure, thought prominent Chicagoans. A campaign of education, it was asserted, would be necessary to enable the public in general to estimate the intricacies of the reforms suggested. But once understood, the plan will be accepted as the most necessary and important legislation enacted by congress in years.

George M. Reynolds, president of the Continental and Commercial National Bank of Chicago, was intimately connected with the framing of the report and attended virtually every session of the commission. Although he expected there would be strong opposition to the passage of the bill for a time, he predicted its enactment practically as framed by the commission.

"The bill itself follows the line of the report of the commission exactly," said Mr. Reynolds, "except for the necessary change of verbiage. The bill and the report are not the work of one man or one set of men, but represent the ideas of the greatest financial minds in the world. The Aldrich plan is not a departure from the present banking system, but augments our present law and strengthens the weaker links. Any business man or citizen who studies the report of the commission carefully will be forced to admit the report is a great piece of work, and that it fulfills in every detail what the commission set about to do from the first.

"I recognize in securing the final enactment of the law that there will be much political discussion, but I think that the education of the business world and the public as a whole to the need of this legislation can be brought about. I have no doubt that the bill will be passed. Whether in three or eighteen months I do not care to predict—but the country must have the law and it will have it.

"The National Citizens League has been doing this work of education already and has done good work. Every criticism of the different points in the proposed reforms was gone over and over again by members of the commission. I do not think that after a close study of the bill any of these criticisms will be found to be of merit.

"The cry that the assembling of the cash reserves of the banks of the United States will be putting the money power of the country in the hands of a few is unfounded. It will do just the opposite.

"It will create credit upon a firm basis, and it is a known fact that as 96 per cent of the business of the country is done upon credit this must be done before we can feel secure.

This provision will decentralize the money power a thousand times more than it will centralize it. I think that it is the most important bit of legislation since the Civil War. There certainly will be political pulling and hauling before it is passed, but passed it will be, and the people will soon realize its importance and worth."

Charles G. Dawes, president of the Central Trust Company, who has criticised several proposed features of the Aldrich measure at different times, said he was satisfied to accept the report in full.

"I think the men on the commission have worked out the matter fully and for the best interests of the country," he said. "I am willing to accept the report in full."

"Financial legislation never has received the proper attention it deserved," said Walter H. Wilson, former city comptroller. "We always have waited until the last moment and then shot through some sort of legislation without really understanding what was needed. In the present case the monetary commission has made an exhaustive study of the needs of the country, and I firmly believe that if the Aldrich bill is enacted the country will find itself upon a firm footing."

Bankers, who have been following the work of the commission more closely probably than any other class of citizens, expressed themselves for the most part as heartily in favor of the recommendations.

"I am thoroughly in favor of the report of the commission," asserted J. B. Forgan, president of the First National Bank. "The United States must have some remedy for its present system. We are the only country in the world that has financial panics and we have had half a dozen. The members of the commission have worked for three years on the subject and their report is the most complete and scientific work on the monetary situation ever given out. I anticipate that there will be opposition—there are always cranks and fools who are willing to shout out against anything, but when the report is studied the 'man in the street' will find that he has been making a fool of himself by his uproar."

"The principles of the bill, if enacted into law, will work out for the benefit of the entire country," said Byron L. Smith, president of the Northern Trust Company. "I am heartily in favor of all the recommendations as expressed in the report of the monetary commission. It is much for the interest of the public that an effort be made to understand what is being attempted by the reforms and what the changes mean. If this is done and the public allows itself to be educated on the subject or makes an honest attempt to study the matter, the result will be of great benefit."

"I endorse the report of the commission unqualifiedly," said Ralph Van Vechten, vice-president of the Continental and Commercial National Bank. "I suppose there will be minor changes made during the discussions in congress when the bill comes up, but the fundamental principles of the measure are sound and will be of value to this country that cannot be placed in figures.

"The recommendations, if followed out and enacted into a law, will prevent the possibility of recurrence of financial disasters such as we had in 1907 and before that. The bill should be passed at once so credit will be on a firm basis before the coming business revival. With our present banking system with its lack of flexibility there is always a danger of a strain of credit where the country is doing a large volume of business. The passage of the bill always would operate to prevent this danger.

"I think nearly all the bankers in the country are as heartily in favor of the report as I am, and the general public, too, when it understands the provisions, also will see that it is absolutely necessary that something be done along the lines suggested."

"The adoption of the recommendations of the monetary commission is the most necessary thing for the country to-day," said Frederick H. Rawson, president of the Union Trust Company. "It is absolutely necessary that the finances of the country be put on a firm basis. There is nothing new or startling in the report—it merely is bringing into play a system in use in every country in the world, except the United States and China. Even Japan has adopted a system along the same lines.

"I expect that there will be a fight made on the plan—that has already started. But in my opinion, the critics of the measure will stop as soon as they study it.

"The suspicion that the bill is prepared to give Wall Street more power is unfounded. It is a great bill, carefully worked out, and will be hailed with delight by the business men when they understand it.

"The greatest feature will be the reserve question, which will enable a business man to know that, when he is promised a loan by a bank, he will get it, and that he will not be confronted by some sudden flurry or panic that will force him to the wall when the bank is unable to grant the promised loan.

"Our business is done on credit, and the business man should stand for anything that makes our system more stable and firm."

"The fundamental principles outlined in the report of the commission are sound and good," was the comment of H. A. Wheeler, vice-president of the Union Trust Company, "but I cannot say what my ideas are until I have seen the bill itself. Everyone will agree that the form of organization outlined is the best possible and something that the business of the country needs, but whether or not the details can be worked out remains to be seen. I think that before anything final is done the bankers will have to make a practical test of some of the suggestions of the reforms. But basically, the organization presents the best and most feasible plan for the establishment of a sound monetary system."

That the business men of the country will stand behind the report almost as a unit is the opinion of John G. Shedd, president of Marshall Field and Company.

"I think that when the public understands the full scope of the recommendations of the national monetary commission," he said, "it will find that the commission has done the country a great favor. A hasty reading of the report indicates its recommendations are even more exhaustive than was anticipated. It would seem that if they are enacted into a law they will place the United States in the foremost rank as a stable money power. All have a common interest in this measure and it should be studied carefully and digested. I hope congress will disregard all political pressure and act as far as possible along the general lines laid down in the report. All interests, large and small, will be benefited by the reforms suggested."

BANKING COMMISSION

Frankfort, Ky., January 9.—One of the most important measures that will come before the legislature is the passage of a measure creating a banking commission. That it is needed is no longer debated, for the work of Secretary of State Bruner with bank examinations demonstrated its need. Bruner in retiring from office has prepared a statement covering the banks and trust companies in Kentucky. He says:

"When it was first decided in this department to put into effect the present system of state bank examination it seemed to the casual observer that, while the idea might be a good one, it would be almost impossible to successfully put the plan into execution. Time, experience and many hours of work, and I might say worry, have proved that the consummation of the plan has been far more successful than the most optimistic would have dared anticipate. With four men almost constantly in the field, with the aid of the force in the office, the department has been enabled to make over 700 examinations—that is, every one of the more than 500 institutions have been examined once and a number of them the second time, while there have been 66 institutions closed during my term of office and about 30 new charters have been granted, so that there are to-day doing business in Kentucky 473 state banking institutions, 14 of these being trust companies and 33 being combined bank and trust companies. These 473 institutions have a combined capital and surplus of $27,000,000, with deposits of $70,000,000, and total assets of $104,000,000."

Bloomer, Wis.—William Larson, the manager of the Farmers Store here, and his associates are planning the formation of a new bank for the village.

MISS TARBELL ON THE TARIFF

Ida M. Tarbell, whose able account of "The Tariff in Our Times" is likely to play a part in the coming presidential campaign, is best known for her "History of the Standard Oil Company," which is accepted by the public as a reference book on that subject, and her admirable "Life of Abraham Lincoln." She is also the author of a "Short Life of Napoleon Bonaparte" and a "Life of Madame Roland." For some years Miss Tarbell has been associate editor of the American Magazine and has written numerous magazine articles and short stories. She is a member of many professional clubs and societies and resides in New York. The Macmillan Company publishes "The Tariff in Our Times."

With the same clear brain and tireless industry that made her "History of the Standard Oil Company" a memorable book, Miss Tarbell has paid her respects to the evils of excessive tariff duties in her new volume, "The Tariff in Our Times." It is impossible, says Edwin L. Shuman, in the Record-Herald, to read this book and not feel the cumulative power of its patient massing of facts and figures. It is not a free trade argument, whatever the stand-patters may say; so far as it argues at all, it is an argument for honest and reasonable protection, such as Senator Dooliver fought for, as against the monopolistic duties that have fastened the burden of high prices on the whole nation for the benefit of a favored few.

Primarily Miss Tarbell's book is a narrative history of the tariff for the last fifty years—from the Morrill bill of 1860 to the Payne-Aldrich tariff of 1909. The most important schedules, their secret history and their effects upon industry and prices are analyzed with a steady hand and a flashing intellect. It makes a fascinating story that every man in the country ought to read.

Miss Tarbell holds that the tariff never has been in accord with public opinion. The people, she says, have always been betrayed by the politicians under pressure of the lobbyists at Washington. She reminds us that the high tariff was originally a war tax, laid on the people in the '60s, with the understanding that it was to be removed after the war was over. Her charge is that it has been maintained ever since through a series of broken party pledges as numerous as the bills enacted.

The immediate bearing of the tariff upon high prices is traced through many pages of lively present interest. It is shown in various ways that the benefits of the tariff do not go to the wage-earners. A government investigation in 1906 showed that in 4,000 factories employing 334,000 persons the wages had increased 19.1 per cent in ten years, while the cost of living had increased 35 per cent. At a time when the people of this country were paying $30,000,000 a year more for shoes than they would have had to pay without the tariff, the Hide and Leather Journal declared that the beef trust was paying $12.50 apiece for cows and selling the hides alone for $9 apiece. It was this, with similar facts, Miss Tarbell says, that finally forced the duty off hides in the Payne-Aldrich bill—"after a fight of the most unusual character."

In this manner all the chief abuses of high tariff are discussed with a special view to their effect on the consumer. The true policy of protection, which Miss Tarbell uses as the standard of judgment on men and measures, is this: That the duty laid upon an American product shall be just high enough to compensate the manufacturer for the higher wages of American workmen (our wages were higher than those of Europe before we ever had a protective tariff), so that he could compete on even terms with foreign factories, thus still leaving the consumer to enjoy a healthy competitive market. Everything above this tends toward monopoly and becomes a subsidy for the manufacturer. It is this extra and unrighteous tax—over and above protection—at which Miss Tarbell hurls her impressive array of facts and figures.

The wool schedule makes an especially bad showing under the author's hands. The fact that we pay twice as much as English people for woolen garments, and that poor people can no longer afford any but inferior cotton imitations of wool, moves her to indignation. The chapter on "Where Every Penny Counts" is a stirring revelation of the cruelty of this burden on the working girl and on the man who is trying to raise a family on a small income. One finds this comment on Mr. Taft:

"It was the spirit of tariff reform, the zeal for honest schedules, the determination that discriminations should be done away with, indignation at the wretched and shameless alliances back of the bills, that it was for Mr. Taft to feel and foster. But it is evident that

Trust Company Service in New York City

This company, with ample capital, large resources, and an efficient and well-systematized organization, which dates back to 1864, has the ability and disposition to give good trust-company service.

Our various departments, including banking, foreign exchange, bond, trust, transfer, reorganization and collection, are well equipped with modern facilities for transacting business promptly and economically.

For these reasons we feel justified in cordially inviting the New York accounts of banks and trust companies.

he did not feel these things, and so could not foster them. He had an opportunity to lead in a great moral awakening on the most serious matter since the days of slavery. He did not understand the issue. He merely saw the chance of doing some tinkering, which he did manfully and effectively."

The history of each of the tariff bills is told in detail—the mongrel bill of 1883, the attempt at reform under Cleveland, the Mills and Allison bills, the McKinley bill, the Wilson and Dingley bills and the inside history of the Payne-Aldrich bill, with an extra chapter on Rhode Island as an example of what high tariff accomplishes when it has its own way. In spite of the millions of tribute which the country pays annually to protect the woolen and cotton mills of Rhode Island, the operatives barely get a living, and get it under conditions which force wives and children into the factory to sustain life. Miss Tarbell says:

"The tax we pay on textiles never gets beyond the stockholders, who in Rhode Island are usually a family that for generations have run their mills and absorbed the profits. Not only has the average factory owner absorbed the lion's share of the profits, but he set his face like flint against spending a cent of the protection he enjoys in humane efforts to make the industry more tolerable. This man, who periodically appears as a suppliant before congress, praying for a continuation of benefits which cost this whole people dearly, will not, unless driven to it by law and outraged public opinion, protect even the children who work in his mills."

Indeed, the closing and most significant charge against the whole system of exorbitant duties is—not that it has destroyed the ship building industry, not that it has legislated money from the pockets of the many into those of the few, but that it has debauched our politics and corrupted the morals of the nation. "The history of protection in this country is one long story of injured manhood."

No one with an honest desire of social service can read Miss Tarbell's book and deny the force and honesty of her reasoning. Her book is a veritable arsenal of sound information of the sort that the insurgent republican movement most needs. It is a new and brilliant proof that Miss Tarbell has brains of unusual quality as well as a heart and a social conscience.

ART OF RAISING MORE CAPITAL

Several years ago a Chicago corporation, capitalized for $500,000.00, found it necessary to issue additional capital stock to redeem an outstanding bond issue and reduce its line of commercial paper.

The redemption of the bonds was necessary in six months and all the bills payable that could be marketed were outstanding. The business was growing and needed more working capital.

The issuance of new stock to take the place of these liabilities would enable the company to enjoy a large line of credit with banks when it required future accommodation.

The raising of $500,000.00 from the sale of stock is no small undertaking and the expense connected with it amounts usually to a considerable sum. Several conservative brokerage firms stated the cost would not be less than $25,000.00 and newspaper publicity would be necessary to dispose of the stock.

This expense was considered too great, and it was feared publicity might tend to impair the corporation's credit. A better method had to be evolved to attain the desired result. The Everett Audit Company was consulted and a plan formulated.

An Everett financial prospectus of the business was prepared with the necessary data arranged in an intelligent and suitable form that makes a proposition to be financial attractive to investors.

The prospectus included a statement of the business in a complete, concise and self-explanatory manner, including the vital points pertaining to the financial as well as the legal details.

Compiled from the innvestors' standpoint, the prospectus contained the actual facts as far as could be determined from the records and other data obtainable, conservative in predicting future business possibilities.

The prospectus made possible the success of marketing the stock. The president of the corporation was able to gain the confidence and interest of men with money, because he had the facts of a meritorious proposition, that could not be refuted.

The new shares of stock were sold at par and no publicity attended it. The expense was comparatively small when you consider that ten copies of the Everett prospectus cost $1,600.00.

After allowing liberally for the time of the executive and his expense to New York, it was estimated the cost attending the raising of $500,000.00 was approximately $2,500.00.

FAREWELL DINNER FOR PERRIN

Indianapolis.—A number of University Club friends of John Perrin, who has long been a prominent member of the club, gave a dinner in his honor at the club last Saturday evening. Mr. Perrin was formerly president of the American National Bank, and later when that institution consolidated with the Fletcher National Bank was chairman of the board of directors of the Fletcher-American National Bank. He is going to California to live, but will retain an interest in the bank. Dr. Carleton B. McCulloch was toastmaster at the dinner, and a number of talks were given by prominent men in praise of Mr. Perrin as a citizen. Men formerly associated with Mr. Perrin in the banking business will give him a dinner at the German House before his departure.

Big Pittsburgh Clearing House Banks File Protest

Last week THE CHICAGO BANKER had mention of a protest signed by three big Pittsburgh banks against certain acts of the Pittsburgh Clearing House, even to the filing of proceedings in court. Banks all over the country have written in to know the details, which are herewith furnished.

To test an alleged "combination" in the clearing house which it is claimed by the complainants passed an amendment to its constitution last December and made a new rule prescribing regulations which they opposed, a bill has been filed in common pleas court by three of the largest banks in Pittsburgh. They ask a preliminary injunction to prevent the carrying out of the rule passed under this amendment, and ask also that the amendment under dispute be declared null and void. The plaintiffs are the Farmers Deposit National Bank, the Mellon National Bank and the Lincoln National Bank; the defendants are the 17 other institutions comprising the clearing house association and the association itself.

The action, outside of its technical feature, is unique, according to President Robert Wardrop of the association and several other bankers. This is the first action of its kind since the organization of the clearing house association, and while more or less of a friendly nature, is creating widespread interest among local financiers. Members of the association declare that in their opinion the chief question at issue is to determine through court action the power of that body to create rules governing the interchange agreements of the banks.

Combination Alleged

The plaintiffs charge that the defendants have combined to deprive the banks, both members and non-members of the clearing house, of their right of individual action in respect of the conduct and management of their affairs, and to require all banking institutions in the city to conduct their affairs only in accordance with regulations prescribed and directions given by the defendants, or a committee or committees acting under the authority of the clearing house association.

The means of promoting this "illegal combination and conspiracy," which was opposed by the defendants, were worked out, it is alleged, after a meeting had been held with bank representatives of Cleveland, Columbus, Louisville and Cincinnati to organize a combination whereby all the banks in these cities would be required to make uniform charges, pay uniform rates of interest on balances and regulate other details of similar nature in the conduct of the banks. Subsequently, after it had been set forth that it is the custom of banks in central reserve cities to make time deductions from interest balances for items in transit and that similar rules had been adopted by the clearing house association of such cities as Philadelphia, Cincinnati, Cleveland, and other cities would adopt them when the Pittsburgh association took similar action, a resolution was offered carrying this rule:

"In computing interest on balances of banks, bankers and trust companies, and other banking institutions, time deductions should be made on such local items as are not available for the day's clearings, and for all items while in transit." This carried with it a schedule of minimum deductions and penalties for violations.

Protest Against Rule

The plaintiffs declare they protested against this rule, but it was declared adopted by the votes of the defendants, but did not go into effect because it was discovered that under the association's constitution it was unauthorized and illegal. To make this rule binding, it is then alleged, an amendment to the constitution was declared passed through an irregular process, and it is charged in addition that the defendants propose to compel the complainants, "under penalty of expulsion from the clearing house association, to submit and abide by the rules and regulations which may be prescribed in pursuance of said amendment." The principal item in the plaintiffs' bill of complaint follows:

And your orators aver and charge that it is the purpose of the said principal defendants by the combination and scheme aforesaid, and acting under the cloak of the clearing house association, by means of the amendment to its constitution, to fix and prescribe not only the period during which interest may be paid to customers on deposits consisting of drafts, checks, bills of exchange and other items which are required to be collected in other places, but also to fix and prescribe the rates of interest to be paid by banks upon the moneys deposited with them by their customers, to fix minimum rates to be charged for collections, and other services, and generally to regulate and supervise the management and affairs of the individual banks in such way as said principal defendants shall deem for their individual advantage and of benefit to themselves, without regard to the advantage, rights or welfare of your orators and the other banks required to submit to and abide by such regulations, instructions, directions and supervision; and they propose and intend by coercion to compel all of the banks doing business in the community to conform to the regulations, instructions, directions so given, and the supervision prescribed, by the imposition of penalties for failure to observe such regulations, instructions and directions, or to submit to such supervision, and, especially in the case of non-members of the clearing house association, by depriving them of the privileges of the clearing house, and in the case of members by expelling them from the clearing house, thereby depriving them not only of their interest and rights in the property of the association, but, what is of far more importance, the right of making their exchanges through the medium of the clearing house association as heretofore.

Charges Summed Up

They then charge that the combination is illegal; that the amendment is void; that interstate trade is involved and, therefore, in violation of the Sherman anti-trust law; that the original aims and purposes of the association have been overstepped; that the individual business relations of the complaining banks are being regulated against their wish; that the votes under which these rules were declared in effect were not authorized by the various boards of directors, and that the action does not represent the true majority of the banks in the community represented directly or indirectly in the clearing house.

In support of this last charge, it is shown that, although there are but 20 members in the clearing house, there are in all 138 banks, including state banks and trust companies, that do business through the association. Thus it is claimed that there is an attempt to control the business of 138 banks through the two-thirds vote of 20 members composing the clearing house association. The plaintiffs are represented by Reed, Smith, Shaw & Beal.

BANK DOUBLES CAPITAL

Los Angeles, Cal.—The change of name of the Security Saving Bank to the Security Saving Bank and Trust Company, which order was made by Judge Hutton in the superior court Thursday, was followed Saturday by the recording in the county clerk's office of a certificate showing that the stock of the institution has been increased from $1,000,000 to $2,000,000. The increase is in compliance with a resolution adopted by the directors September 19th.

TO DIRECT POSTAL SAVINGS

Theodore L. Weed, chief clerk of the post-office department and Postmaster-General Hitchcock's principal executive assistant, has been appointed director of the postal savings system at a salary of $5,000 a year.

NOVEL BY LEADING CHICAGO LAWYER

"The Shadow Men," by Donald Richberg, a prominent member of the Chicago bar, is a novel dealing with the crimes of corporate greed. The book contains a severe arraignment of that class of individuals who seek to escape the penalty of their misdeeds by offering up an innocent victim on the sacrificial altar of the temple of justice. It is a struggle of a scapegoat to escape an apparent destiny, inspired by his love for a woman and aided by a loyal friend. Though dealing with a subject against which public opinion is pretty clearly defined, the novel is far from mere sensationalism. It is written in a vigorous and lucid style; the characters are interesting and natural, exhibiting due appreciation of the seriousness of life with all its responsibilities. The plot is very well balanced, and shows a seriousness of artistic as well as ethical purpose. This is a book which ought to appeal very strongly to the public on account of its being different from the light fiction of the day, and on account of the interesting and forceful manner in which the author has told his story.

The Harrisburg (S. D.) State Bank has been reorganized, and the capital increased to $25,000. The following are officers: President, W. H. Wasum; vice-president, M. A. Wasum, and cashier, G. D. Searles.

HIGHLAND (ILL.) HAS NO USE FOR POSTAL SAVINGS

Postmaster John A. Leu of Highland, Ill., has found it easy to take care of the postal bank of his office since the only depositor, Avery Carp, has withdrawn his $1. Indications are that no more deposits will be made. Although the bank is four months old Carp has been the only person to show any inclination to take advantage of the depository. He waited until after the bank was open a month and residents referred to it as a joke before his account was opened.

It seems the city in general has no use for the bank. After Carp made his deposit Postmaster Leu looked around for some bank as a depository. The three banks of Highland refused to accept the money. Conditions were reported to the officials at Washington, and Postmaster Leu was directed to forward the money to a Collinsville bank. While the postmaster was preparing to send the money away Carp entered the office and made a request to withdraw his savings.

Now the debit and credit sales of the ledger balance with three ciphers on each side.

OREGON BANK DEPOSITS LARGE

Deposits in the banks in the state of Oregon totaled $121,834,644, according to the last statement issued by Superintendent of Banks Wright, the report representing the condition of banks at the close of business December 5th. This report is compared with the report for November 10, 1910, when the deposits amounted to $119,056,963, or an increase of $2,777,681. The total amount of deposits for postal savings banks is $249,217. The deposits due the state treasurer show a decrease from $401,272 to $370,000. Loans and discounts show an increase from $75,886,961 to $79,623,461. Overdrafts show a decrease of $509,072, and securities an increase of $446,921. The number of banks in the state have increased from 232 to 250. The number of state banks have increased from 155 to 169 and of national banks from 77 to 81, or a total increase of 18 banks.

FOUR BANKS MERGED

Jackson, Ky.—The four banks of Jackson will be consolidated into one national bank, to be known as the First National Bank of Jackson. The capital will be $100,000 and a trust company will be operated with a capital of $50,000. The banks are the First National, Jackson Deposit Bank, the Breathitt County Bank and the Hargis Commercial Bank.

ILLINOIS BANKING NEWS

By C. C. Burford

The report of the Illinois Traction System, or better known as the McKinley syndicate, states the fact that 50,000,000 passengers were carried by the lines during the past year. Of this number 10,000,000 were carried by the interurban lines and 40,000,000 by the city lines in the various cities where the McKinley interests own and operate the local street car lines, as in Bloomington, Peoria, Springfield, Decatur, Champaign, Danville, and other Illinois cities. 220,155 passenger cars and 21,765 freight cars were operated during the year. There are sixty-five cities and towns in the state served by the system, over one million people are tributary to the lines and 460 miles of track reach 100 stations. About twenty of these towns and cities have population of 4,000 and upwards.

The Illinois Traction System is rapidly pushing its service, operating parlor cars, sleepers, diners, and freight trains, building grain elevators along the lines and having traffic relations with the Rock Island at Peoria, and with the Chicago & Eastern Illinois at Glover and Danville. The United States Express Company operates over the road, while the mails are also carried. The freight terminals in St. Louis as well as those planned for Springfield and other cities are colossal in their size and appointment. A new direct line from Bloomington to Champaign is expected this coming summer.

The Illinois Traction System is a friend of the local banks along its lines and accounts are kept with one or more banks in each locality. The Trevett-Mattis Banking Company of Champaign is the principal Illinois depository of the company, although substantial accounts are placed with banks in Peoria, Springfield, Decatur, Bloomington, Danville, and other points. Local agents along the lines transact their business through local banks.

J. S. McFerren

The First National Bank of Hoopston, with deposits of $464,465, at the time of the last call, has enjoyed a continuous growth since its incorporation in 1872. J. S. McFerren has been the president of this bank since he was a young man, being called in the middle seventies the "boy banker" of Hoopston. Rapid increase in the value of real estate and fortunate investments have made the interests of Mr. McFerren very valuable, and he is today one of the wealthy men of Eastern Illinois. His interests in the canning industries of Hoopston are large and his home city is known everywhere as the canning center of Illinois. Mr. McFerren has been as conservative and safe as he has been successful, and the First National of Hoopston has a most enviable reputation for sound banking. E. C. Griffith has been the cashier for a quarter of a century, and is also a director. William McFerren is vice-president and J. A. Webster and J. E. Whitman are assistant cashiers. The directors are J. S. McFerren, Lottie McFerren, William McFerren, E. C. Griffith, and A. H. Trego.

Negro Shows Remarkable Thrift

Bankers are preaching the gospel of thrift in these latter days and the life history of the late George W. Smith of Champaign county furnishes abundant proof of conservative financial management among negroes. Born in slavery, G. W. Smith died in possession of 440 acres of as good corn land as there is in Central Illinois, and all of it was paid for except eighty acres, for which debt the will provides payment. Smith was born a slave in Tennessee in 1836 and joined the Union army in 1862. He acted as a guide to General John A. Logan. After the war he engaged in farming and accumulated property. He gave his children college educations.

Smith was highly esteemed among his neighbors. A few years ago when Governor Deneen was making an automobile tour of Champaign county the executive met the negro farmer personally. Smith was one of the largest negro land holders in the northern states.

A postal savings bank will be opened at McLeansboro, January 17, 1912.

The officers of the Paxton State Bank, which succeeded the Paxton Bank January 2d, which change has been mentioned before in THE CHICAGO BANKER, are as follows: William J. Lateer, president; W. D. Rankin, vice-president; O. J. Egnell, cashier, and N. V. Lateer, assistant cashier. The directors will be as follows: W. A. Rankin, W. D. Rankin, W. J. Lateer, N. V. Lateer, M. L. McQuiston, and O. J. Egnell. President Lateer of this new state bank has a host of friends among the bankers of Illinois.

Governor Deneen has appointed Alexander L. Metzel, vice-president of the Union National of Elgin, and Jason C. Ayers, president of the Dixon National, members of the northern Illinois school board which has supervision over the state normal school at DeKalb. L. A. Goddard, president of the State Bank of Chicago, is also a member of this board.

The Farmers First State Bank of Sadorus suffered a heavy fire loss Monday night, January 8th. R. E. Cathcart is the teacher.

BUILDING OWNED BY THE BANK

MILWAUKEE

NEWS LETTER By Mortimer I. Stevens

WISCONSIN

The condition of the banks of the state of Wisconsin is shown in the annual report of Commissioner of Banking A. E. Kuolt, just made public. The report shows that the aggregate resources of the 573 state banks and trust companies of Wisconsin on December 5, 1911, were $186,003,546.94, a gain of $13,951,289.97 for the year. The aggregate capital is $16,591,650, a net gain for the year of $1,499,000. Twenty-five state banks have increased their capital, the total increase being from $613,500 to $1,112,000.

The report further says: "These figures reflect the growth and development of the resources of the state. Such growth, while not rapid, has been constant, and the figures quoted indicate the important rôle played by banks of Wisconsin in the progress of the state. Curiously enough, a comparison of the abstract of reports of the 129 national banks operating in Wisconsin on December 5, 1911, with a similar abstract of the several banking corporations doing business under the state law, shows the volume of business in the two classes to be about equal. The national banks show total resources of $186,053,594.51 on December 5, 1911, and the same item in state, savings and trust company banks on the same date amounts to $186,003,546.94.

"The banking institutions under the supervision of this department are, on the whole, in an excellent condition and well worthy of the confidence of the people. For this, credit is due primarily to the executive officers of the various banks, and to their boards of directors, all of whom have been displaying marked interest in the conduct of their respective institutions, and have been invariably anxious to comply with such requirements as this department deemed it necessary to make."

In another part of his report Commissioner Kuolt makes some interesting remarks about competition in banks. He says: "The number of banks—fifty-six—organized during the last twelve months is out of proportion to the present need of the state. While some of these new banks were needed in new communities, or in places which have outgrown their banking facilities, others, located where such facilities are adequate to the existing business, create needless and unprofitable competition. Untrammelled competition is a menace to the stability of the affected banks. Since it is the intent of bank regulation to strengthen, and unnecessary competition weakens, the need arises of some rule to restrict competition."

Few Changes in Milwaukee Banks

All of the national banks, with one exception, and most of the state banks of Milwaukee held their annual meeting on Tuesday, January 9th. The exception among the national banks is the Wisconsin National, and among the state banks, the Merchants and Manufacturers. These two banks will hold their meeting January 27th and the Second Ward Savings Bank will hold its meeting next week.

There was no change in the present directorate of the Marshall & Ilsley Bank, except the addition of A. F. Gallun to the board. Herman A. Wagner was elected a director of the Germania National Bank. Aside from these changes all the banks and trust companies re-elected their directors, and where directors met Tuesday the same officers were re-elected.

Albert F. Gallun, who was elected a director of the Marshall & Ilsley Bank, was born in Milwaukee in 1865, the son of A. F. Gallun, founder of the great leather firm of A. F. Gallun & Son. The firm is one of the largest tannery concerns in the country. It is an odd coincidence that nearly sixty years ago Mr. Gallun, senior, deposited his first savings in the bank of which his son has now become a director.

Milwaukee Banks Declare Dividends

Milwaukee banks have all declared the regular dividends at the close of the year, and without exception the dividend rate has remained the same, no dividends having been passed or lowered. This speaks well for the stability of Milwaukee banks and trust companies, inasmuch as the year has been a light one in many mercantile lines.

The bank clearings for the month of December showed a decrease of $920,000 over those of the same period last year, traceable to the fact that wholesale business has been discouraging this year, the wholesale clothing and dry goods business suffering most. Country banks are in excellent condition and farmers throughout the state were never more prosperous.

The prices of bank stocks, which have ruled a shade higher than last year, reflect the conservative management of these institutions. Most of the bank stocks of this city are closely held and none are quoted at lower figures than last year; as a matter of fact, in many cases, there has been no record of transfers for some time.

Vexatious Delays Experienced

Work on the new Marshall & Ilsley Bank building, East Water Street, Milwaukee, has been temporarily suspended during the last few weeks, owing to the extreme difficulty experienced by the contractors in securing from the quarries at Phenix, Mo., some of the stone necessary in the construction of the massive pillars, which form part of the front of the building.

Supporting these columns, which, when completed, weigh approximately 125 tons each, is a solid piece of stone measuring eight feet square. The original block was damaged in transportation to such an extent that it was deemed necessary to replace it, and in the attempt to do this several of these high blocks of stone have been spoiled at the quarry or discarded for other reasons. In every branch of the masonry or steel work used in connection with this building the utmost care has been used and each component part has been subjected to the strictest kind of inspection before final acceptance.

With the arrival of the foundation stone, which is expected almost daily, work upon the new building will be rushed forward to completion at as early a date as possible.

Clinton Bank Increases Capital

At the recent annual meeting of the stockholders of the Citizens Bank of Clinton, Wis., the capital stock was increased from $25,000 to $50,000. This additional stock has all been subscribed for, and the full amount has been paid in. Henry A. Moehlenpach, cashier, says that this increase was made necessary on account of the large and increasing amount of business being done by the bank, making it necessary to have more funds in reserve and a large working capital. The Citizens Bank was established thirty years ago, and during the past eight years its deposits and volume of business transacted have been more than doubled.

A New Departure

The Eau Claire National Bank will issue monthly a general letter on trade conditions throughout the United States and a forecast of the natural trend of important business events for the immediate future. This service is furnished by the bank in the belief that it will naturally assist in the upbuilding of the business in that section.

New Bank Secures Building

The newly organized Farmers State Bank of Waukesha has just purchased a site for their new building at a cost of $11,000. The site was purchased by President John A. Rodgers. The work of remodeling and installing the vaults and other equipment will be started March 1st. The bank will, if the plans are carried out, be opened for business May 1st. The bank will occupy the front portion of the lower floor.

News Notes of Wisconsin

The Chili State Bank of Chili has been granted a charter. The capital stock will be $13,000. The incorporators are E. B. Behringer, L. A. Reichert, George A. Ure, and others.

W. O. Newhouse, who six years ago resigned the office of district attorney to become cashier of the First National Bank of Janesville, has resigned from the bank. He will become vice-president of the Gold-Starbank Loan and Credit Company of Minneapolis, and will open a branch office in Janesville.

The charter for the new Farmers State Bank of New London has been issued and the bank will open for business at once. E. C. Jost is cashier.

JERSEYVILLE BANK CHANGES

William F. Shephard, son of Henry A. Shephard, cashier of the State Bank of Jerseyville, Ill., has been appointed assistant cashier of the State Bank to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Thos. Wedding. George W. Campbell, late of the National Bank of Commerce, St. Louis, has been employed as bookkeeper.

KENTUCKY BANKS

The loans, discounts and overdrafts of the 474 banking institutions of Kentucky have increased $14,000,000 during the last four years. Secretary of State Bruner has given out his final report of 473 state banking institutions at the close of business December 5, 1911. The last report showed but $62,000,000 loans, discounts and overdrafts, while the present report shows $69,728,093.91, making a total gain of over $7,000,000. There is one bank that failed to report the loans, discounts and overdrafts, amounting to $100,000, so that Bruner's final report should have been over $70,000,000 if all of the banks had reported.

DETROIT BANK CLEARINGS, 1911

While at the close of 1911 it was believed by many in local banking circles that bank clearings for the year just closed would reach one billion dollars in Detroit, the real figures are somewhat below that estimate. The total for the year just closed was $968,647,059, as compared to $910,835,008 for 1910, a gain of $57,812,051. Only one month of 1911 fell below that of 1910, April showing a decrease of $747,724. For the month of December, 1911, a total of $90,891,884 is shown, compared to $76,780,804 for the same month of 1910.

ALASKA BANKERS PLEAD NOT GUILTY

Juneau, Alaska, January 9.—Clem H. Summers, formerly president of the First National Bank of Juneau, and Stuart G. Holt, formerly cashier of the Juneau bank, entered pleas of not guilty to-day to the indictments returned against them by the federal grand jury last week, charging fraudulent banking. Both men are at liberty under $5,000 bond. The indictment against the two former bankers contains fifty-six counts.

PRISON FOR MINNESOTA CASHIER

New Ulm, Minn., January 8.—Rollin M. West, former cashier of the State Bank of Cobden, who recently pleaded guilty to the charge of grand larceny in the third degree on one of three indictments accusing him of embezzling $12,271.04 of the bank's funds, last week was given an indeterminate sentence in the state penitentiary at hard labor.

Southwestern reserve city news and gossip
—Special correspondence concerning also
the tributary territory, by J. Vion Papin

St. Louis, Mo., January 11.—The past week has developed no change in the local monetary situation worthy of note. A fair demand from local commercial sources exists, but the general market continues quiet, with rates soft. The easing off in commercial paper East has had a rather depressing effect on rates here, and while quotably the range remains unchanged, there are more loans being made toward the minor end. Several of the leading nationals report southern bank loans pretty well paid up, and arrivals of funds from that section have decreased materially. Deposits are holding their own in pretty good shape, all considered, and the position of banks at this point is about as strong as at any time in the history of the city. Clearings are showing up in excellent shape, reflecting fair activity in general business lines. Wholesalers for the most part seem extremely hopeful relative to the outlook, though just at present sales in certain lines are relatively light.

Annual Elections Held

Monday's annual stockholders' meetings developed but few changes in the personnel of directors and officers. The old Missouri-Lincoln Trust Company decided to leave the matter of reorganization to a committee, appointed by President W. F. Carter. This committee will report to the stockholders on March 11th. The appointment of a committee was due to the fact that two reorganization plans were presented, both containing some good points, and it was thought these might be combined and other suggestions incorporated in the committee's report. John S. Blake and C. C. Collins were re-elected directors, and Judge Moses N. Sale was chosen to succeed E. S. Lewis, resigned.

Reinholdt Goes to International

Julius W. Reinholdt, assistant cashier of the National Bank of Commerce, with which institution he has been connected for the past twenty-five years, was chosen vice-president of the International Bank. Mr. Reinholdt will assume the duties of his new office at once. The International Bank also elected nine directors, which number will be later increased to thirteen. The directors elected are: Charles D. Boynton, Otto Cramer, Theodore Hemmelmann, Jr., George A. Held, Edward Horrmann, Hugo H. Koehler, George A. Meyer, J. H. A. Meyer, and E. L. Preetorius.

One Change at Boatmen's Bank

One change was made at the Boatmen's Bank. W. K. Stanard was elected a director to succeed his father, former Governor E. O.

Stanard, the latter being desirous of retiring from all active business affairs. The other directors elected were: Samuel D. Capen, Hanford Crawford, E. M. Hubbard, R. McKittrick Jones, Henry W. Peters, F. E. Sheldon, D. S. H. Smith, William H. Thomson, and Edwards Whitaker.

German Savings and Franklin

The Franklin Bank stockholders elected the following directors: W. R. Colcord, to succeed G. W. Garrels, deceased; Fred W. Drosen, C. H. Dunker, H. W. Kroeger, Henry Meier, Jr., F. W. Reipschlaeger, George T. Riddle, G. Reismeyer, and G. O. Wipern. The German Savings Institution elected directors as follows: William Koenig, Louis Fusz, Charles A. Stockstrom, Otto F. Meister, William C. Uhri, Charles Stoeffregen, Nelson W. McLeod, William J. Lemp, Edwin H. Conrades, H. Hunicke, Fred Opp, H. A. Trorlicht, and E. Barklage.

Big Business Done in 1911

A healthy gain in practically every line of industry in St. Louis is shown by the report of the Missouri State Bureau of Labor and Statistics. The figures given are preliminary, but indicate that big returns on the $230,000,000 capital invested in the concerns investigated made excellent returns. The number of persons employed shows heavy gains over the preceding year, and the amount of materials used in manufacturing is the largest on record. The total capital invested in 1910 was $228,773,000, and the total of salaries paid reached $67,534,000 in that year. A goodly increase in both of these items is shown in 1911. Among the principal industries which will run above $15,000,000 for the year are boots and shoes, tobacco, printing and binding, packing-houses, malt liquor, groceries, foundries and machine shops, car works, bakeries. As in 1910, the heaviest business was done in boots and shoes.

Mortgage and Share Company

St. Louis capitalists have completed the organization of the Mortgage and Share Company, a $500,000 corporation, the purpose of which is to conduct a general development business in the Southwest. This was the first corporation of any size launched here since the opening of the new year. Sidney Bixby is president, Archer W. Douglas, vice-president and treasurer. A secretary is still to be chosen. The organizers of the company are: W. K. Bixby, August A. Busch, Charles A. Lemp, Alonzo C. Church, H. L. Block, G. H. Walker, W. B. Dean, Jr., J. H. Wear of St. Louis, and Alonzo Potter of New York. It is stated that the company will handle all kinds of general development business, such as public utilities, municipals, water-power development, irrigation and railroads. In addition, it intends to carry a farm-loan business throughout the South and Southwest. The powers of the company are unusually extensive. It is incorporated under the laws of Missouri, but will also incorporate in other states, and the capital will be raised as more funds are required.

Hoenschild Heads Bank

A. S. White, for the past eighteen months president of the Night and Day Bank, has resigned to enter another field, and H. H. Hoenschild was unanimously elected to succeed him. Mr. Hoenschild is an architect, and has designed several of the newer state institutions, including a hospital building at Farmington. He has offices in the Navarre building and resided in Rolla, Mo.

Henry Sexton Chosen President

At its annual election this week, the Citizens Savings and Trust Company of East St. Louis elected the following officers and directors: Henry D. Sexton, president; Henry J. Buerki and W. H. Hauss, vice-presidents; directors, Paul S. Abt, Henry Albrecht, Curtis S. Dodson, Edmond Goedde, H. C. W. Grabe, Charles Hezel, William H. Hill, Doctor A. C. Housh, Martin Martell, Thomas Knoebel, Joseph Nestor and S. D. Sexton.

Missouri-Lincoln Litigation

The end of litigation in which the Missouri-Lincoln Trust Company is involved seems far distant. The most recent suit is that brought by Jacob Erb, who brought an action in the circuit court to prevent the trust company selling bonds of the Nevada Water, Light and Traction Company. A temporary injunction was granted the plaintiff. Erb claims he purchased a gold brick when he got the Nevada properties. In his petition he claims that it was represented by the Missouri-Lincoln Trust Company, which owned the Nevada utilities, that they were worth $288,415, and earning $40,000 a year. He paid $25,000 cash and gave his note for $140,000. Then the property was bonded for $200,000. These bonds were pledged as collateral for the $140,000 loan. Erb alleges he found the properties to be in an obsolete condition and practically worthless, and the new corporation was unable to earn the $20,000 annual interest on the bond issue.

Some Southwestern Development

Signs of activity and new enterprise are beginning to appear, especially in the Southwest. The Missouri, Arkansas & Gulf Railroad has executed a mortgage to the St. Louis Union Trust Company, as trustee, to secure an issue of $1,600,000 of 5 per cent gold bonds for the completion of the company's "Ozark Short Line," from Rolla to Bakersfield, Mo.

Big Beer and Tobacco Production

St. Louis produced 3,591,685 barrels of beer and 5,710,957 barrels of tobacco in 1911. These are the figures of E. B. Allen, collector of internal revenue. The tax collections from these two sources approximate $81,000,000. The beer tax of $1 a barrel is imposed only on that which leaves the brewery during the year. Eight cents a pound or $1 a barrel is the tobacco tax. The collections in 1911 were the largest in the history of Missouri.

PINKERTONS SUE BURNS

Montreal, January 9.—William and Allan Pinkerton, in their personal capacities, are suing (common pleas court of Montreal) William J. Burns, detective and head of the William J. Burns Detective Agency, who exposed the Los Angeles Times dynamiting outrage, for $50,000 damages arising out of statements said to have been made by Burns. The writ in the suit is in the hands of Mr. Kenneth R. Macpherson, attorney, who will no doubt send it to a sheriff residing in the United States for service. Mr. Macpherson has been unavailable all day.

Note.—The Pinkerton main office is in Chicago, and but three blocks from the Burns main office in the First National Bank building, and Montreal is a long way off, legally and otherwise. Wouldn't it just tickle Honorable Gompers nearly to death to hear that the Pinkertons had "kidnaped" Honorable Burns, à la McNamara, and carried him out of the country? Does union labor take the hint or is it groggy still?

MICHIGAN BANKS

In 1911 there were 24 new state banks organized in Michigan with a total capital of $765,000, according to a report just issued by Edward H. Doyle, commissioner of banking. In addition 20 banks and trust companies increased their capital.

The report shows that the 416 state banks and trust companies have total resources of $343,269,424. They have surplus funds of $13,941,895; undivided profits, less losses, expenses, interest and taxes paid amounting to $6,150,191, and unpaid dividends amounting to $17,001. The banks show an increase in aggregate business since the last report of September 1st, of $9,040,852. Compared, the condition of the banks with that shown in the corresponding report of a year ago, shows a total increase in loans of $25,694,272, an increase of $12,623,930, and an increase in savings deposits of $21,517,863, and a capital stock increase of $2,873,785. The total reserve maintained by these banks is $16,931,641 over the amount required by the state banking law to carry to protect their deposits. During the year the department has made 855 examinations of banks.

SEATTLE BANK MERGER

Permission to proceed with the consolidation of the Mercantile Bank and the Citizens National Bank has been received from the comptroller of the currency, and the merger became effective January 2d. The combined business of the two banks will be carried on in the quarters now occupied by the Mercantile Bank at Second Avenue and Marion Street and under the name of the Mercantile National Bank.

ITALIAN BANK'S BRANCHES

The Banca Commerciale Italiana has opened a London office. This gives evidence of the continual expansion of Italian commerce and the consequent necessity for increased banking facilities. Trade between Italy and England is steadily increasing, and is now upwards of £25,000,000 per annum. The bank, whose head office is in Milan, has some 35 branches, besides agents in all parts of the world, and is naturally very closely related with the Argentine and other South American countries.

Editorial Comment

A NEW SAVINGS BANK PLAN

The front-page, Christmas article in the "Star-Independent," of Harrisburg, Pa., was devoted to a description of the paying out by the Union Trust Company of Christmas savings funds to 3,500 people. So many and so eager were those who had patronized the Christmas savings club plan, that rain checks were issued to those who could not be accommodated so that they might return the next day. The sums paid out to individuals ranged from $12.75 to $63.75. Andrew S. Patterson, treasurer of the Union Trust Company, was the Santa Claus of the occasion.

The Christmas check is a new idea in banking which has had its origin and growth thus far chiefly in Pennsylvania. The Union Trust is a pioneer in the matter. Two or three years ago it began organizing Christmas savings clubs, a part of the plan being that those who paid in a certain amount weekly for a year would have the privilege of withdrawing the entire sum with interest for shopping purposes at holiday time. The checks issued by the Union Trust Company were special checks decorated in green and red holly leaves and berries. Every merchant in Harrisburg had agreed to cash the checks on presentation at their counters. Some of the depositors represented only a weekly deposit of one, two or five cent pieces. Last year the plan worked admirably and this year it is expected to be something overwhelming.

This plan of saving took on all sorts of diversified forms. In one church one hundred members each started an account and devoted the entire savings to church work. One fraternal organization took out eighty-one membership tickets and devoted the accumulated funds to charity at Christmas time.

Class 1—By paying 1 cent the first week, 2 cents the second week, 3 cents the third week, 4 cents the fourth week, and so on for fifty weeks, two weeks before Christmas a check will be mailed the depositor for $12.75, with or without interest as you elect.

Class 2—By paying 2 cents the first week, 4 cents the second week, 6 cents the third week, 8 cents the fourth week, two weeks before Christmas a check will be mailed the depositor for $25.50, with or without interest as you elect.

Class 5—By paying 5 cents the first week, 10 cents the second week, 15 cents the third week, 20 cents the fourth week, and so on for fifty weeks, two weeks before Christmas a check will be mailed the depositor for $63.75, with or without interest as you elect.

The order of payments may be reversed if desired. For instance, in Class 5, going up, payments start with 5 cents and end with $2.50. If it is desired they may start with $2.50 the first week and pay 5 cents less every week until the last week's payment will be 5 cents, and the same may be done in the other classes.

Company, has organized an association of leading bankers of Pennsylvania to promote the plan. The incorporation is called the "Landis Christmas Savings Club Company," which is the sole owner of the scheme. This company has had printed forms, tickets, envelopes and everything necessary for the operation of the plan.

In the first sixteen weeks after this system had been put into the Union Trust Company of Harrisburg, the savings increased $140,000. It was absolutely new business from a field which had never been reached by the bankers. It will pay any bank to look into the matter with the purpose of adopting it. Full information will be furnished by Mr. Patterson as above, without any cost or obligation on the part of those who may inquire.

THE NEW MONETARY PLAN

There is little need to retail the history or scope of the new monetary plan which was given to congress this week by the National Monetary Commission. It was discussed at every bankers' meeting for the past two years, from the most humble group or club meeting clear up to the national convention at New Orleans. There the general subject had been subdivided and was presented by the ablest bankers, college men, financiers and writers in the country. Well, finally it has come to congress, and many fear a hostile congress at that. Changes will be made, no doubt, before it gets even a fair start. However, the summary of the report as presented will give to its advocates, in brief, its details as to scope, control and powers. They are:

(1) It will hold the cash reserves of the banks of the United States, with provisions for their use only for specific purposes.

(2) It will be granted the power to issue circulating notes under strict governmental regulations.

(3) Through the maintenance of its own reserve and the character and extent of its resources, it will be required to sustain the credit of the banks and of the country under all circumstances.

(4) All of its operations will be confined to or will be incidental or collateral to these purposes, the only exception being the transaction of business connected with it as a fiscal agent for the government.

(5) In times of trouble it will take individual banks from a condition of helpless isolation and dependence and place them in a position where their integrity and independence will be assured.

(6) It is outside of and supplemental to the existing system and not a competitor in any sense of the existing banks.

(7) It will provide for an equality of privileges and advantages for all banks, great and small, wherever located.

(8) Its organization will be of a form and character that will effectually prevent control of its operations by political interests, local or national.

(9) Power and control of the association are so distributed as to prevent their exercise by Wall Street or any group of financiers.

(10) Provision is made for the maintenance at all times of the gold standard.

(11) The association will fix its rates of discount from time to time, which, when fixed, will be uniform throughout the United States.

(12) The net earnings of the association, after payment of the dividend, not exceeding 5 per cent, to the shareholders, and the accumulation of a surplus not exceeding 20 per cent of the paid-in capital, must be paid to the government.

If this reform movement is to be enacted into law it will require the co-operative effort of all of its friends from now until the presidential signature is affixed.

EXAMINERS MUST REPORT

The comptroller of the currency has announced that his office has never had any system of either daily or weekly reports from examiners showing the way in which their time is being employed during a given period, and it has not been possible to tell in any case as to the amount of work an examiner had been doing except by checking up the reports of the examinations signed by him. Nor has the comptroller's office been advised at regular intervals as to the place where the examiners are working, and it has been sometimes impossible to reach them even by telegraph for days at a time in urgent cases.

The comptroller proposes to remedy this by requiring a weekly report from every examiner, stating what he has done during the previous week and what he proposes to do during the coming week. In that report every working day must be accounted for, unless the examiner has been relieved from duty by reason of sickness or for vacation purposes.

The comptroller of the currency has issued a charter to the First National Bank of Parlier, Cal., capital $25,000.

Difficulties in Taxation of Intangible Property

PART I

No function of government is more important than the imposition of taxes. No power is more essential to the maintenance of any government than the power to secure from its citizens an income sufficient to pay for the things which the legislature has decreed. No task is more difficult than the establishment and administration of a system of taxation which will produce sufficient revenue, and will be fair as between individual citizens and in its relations to different classes of property and privileges. Any discussion of taxation, therefore, goes to the fundamentals of government; a limited discussion of a single phase of the great question of revenue for public purposes must necessarily leave untouched many economic and fiscal considerations which are worthy of the most searching attention.

The purpose of this paper is to treat of what is termed the general property tax, with reference to its relation to cash, credits and securities. We are not now concerned with the taxation of corporate and other franchises, nor with the many devices of the several states to raise revenue by methods other than the taxation of property. According to the twelfth census 75.6 per cent of all revenue raised in this country in 1902 for the purposes of state, county and municipal government was raised by taxes upon property—by the general property tax. Whether this exact per cent holds for the year 1911 is immaterial; it is within bounds to say that three-quarters of the revenue of our state, county and municipal governments is derived from taxes on property. The theory of the general property tax as this term is used by students and writers upon economic and fiscal matters in this country is that all property of every class, which is not by law exempted from taxation shall be taxed at a uniform rate upon its capital value. The general property tax as thus defined is at the present time prescribed by the constitutions of thirty-one states. In the New England states the general property tax was established in colonial times; in the other states upon the Atlantic coast it was adopted not later than immediately after the Revolution; in the younger states this system of taxation is at least as old as statehood.

The general property tax makes no distinction as to assessment upon capital value at a uniform rate between real estate and personal property, or between the two general classes of personal property—tangible and intangible. Neither does it consider the uses to which property is put, nor its productivity, except as such uses and productivity affect its value. Nor does it stop to consider that credits and securities may be only the evidences of ownership in tangible property which as such has been taxed. It seems to be founded upon the belief that it is humanly possible to know equally well the ownership of land, and of cattle, and of merchandise, and of credits and of cash, even though the owners of property may desire to conceal from the tax-gatherer their ownership.

When this system of taxation was established in this country, and for many years thereafter, securities, credits and cash were a comparatively small part of the property of the people. What property there was was largely in the form of real estate, cattle and other domestic animals and merchandise. The ownership of these classes of property was a reasonably just basis upon which to determine a person's ability or duty to support government. The determination of ownership and of value was comparatively easy and thus the general property tax worked fairly well. In the general condemnation of the property tax as a system adequate to present-day conditions, it ought to be remembered that in a simpler organization of society this system has had a distinct value. Its failure has become increasingly evident with the increase of moneyed capital in the form of cash, credits, stocks and bonds. A further fact which has had its effect upon the operation of the general property tax is the increase of public expenditures during the last fifty years. In 1860 property was taxed throughout the United States at an average of $7.80 per thousand, while in 1902 the rate was $20.50. In 1860, taxes upon property were at the rate of $3.00 per capita, and in 1902 this rate had become $9.22. With the increase of taxation persons became less willing to pay taxes.

Patriotism may be willing in times of peace to give 10 per cent of income to government, but not 40 or 50 per cent. More and more intangible personalty disappeared from the sight of assessors while revenues were increasingly raised by assessments upon property which could not be concealed.

During the last forty years there have been as many as forty commissions appointed in the different states to investigate the workings of tax laws. Almost without exception these commissions have condemned the general property tax, at least in so far as it relates to the taxation of intangible personalty—cash, credits and securities. In 1893 the Special Tax Commission of Ohio said:

The system as it is actually administered results in debauching the moral sense. It is a school of perjury. It sends large amounts of property into hiding. It drives capital in large quantities from the state. Worst of all, it imposes unjust burdens upon various classes in the community. . . . This inequality of taxes weighs most heavily upon those whose thrift and prudence have resulted in affording to themselves or their children a competence. It is evident that this burden rests with peculiar force upon those persons whose scrupulous honesty induces them to make full and complete returns of all their property."

The Ohio Commission of 1908 says:

"The widespread concealment of intangible property, increasing in amount year by year, is the most convincing proof of the failure of the general property tax. It shows that after more than fifty years of experience, with all conceivable methods in the way of inquisitor laws, severe penalties, and criminal statutes, designed to force the owners of moneys and credits, stocks and bonds, to put their holdings upon the tax duplicate, not only is the percentage of such property less than ever before, but public sentiment seems to be more and more openly approving an evasion of the law. Such a condition of affairs is so manifestly wrong and so inimical to good government that its longer continuance is a grave injury to the state."

The 1893 report showed that in 1866 more money was taxed in Ohio than was taxed in 1893, and that in Hamilton county, which included the city of Cincinnati, in 1892 only one-fifth as much money and one-half the amount of credits were taxed as in 1866, despite the fact that the wealth of Ohio had increased very greatly. The 1908 Ohio commission reported that comparing 1906 with 1890 taxed credits were less by $34,000,000 and stocks and bonds by $2,575,000.

In its report for 1907 the New York state board of tax commissioners says:

"Our observation and experience teach us that it has become impracticable and is impossible to equitably tax personal property on the same basis as real estate, and such is the conclusion reached by nearly all students of taxation; in fact, the attempt to do so works injustice and inequality."

In 1907 the New Jersey state board of equalization reported:

"The troublesome question of the assessment of personal property seems no nearer a solution than it has been for a long time. It is fair to say that in the main personal property is not taxed in New Jersey. This refers especially to the intangible property."

And again in 1908 the same board:

"The total personal shows a decrease over the past year of $19,582,005. No one will doubt that the personal estate in New Jersey, when both tangible and intangible personalty are included, is worth very much more than the real estate. While the tangible is hard enough to rate, it is practically impossible to rate the intangible, except by inquisitorial methods that public opinion will not sanction. This condition of affairs is not peculiar to New Jersey. It prevails everywhere that the same system prevails."

A Massachusetts tax commission reporting in 1897, after a most careful and searching investigation, said:

"Consequently, the taxation of this form of property is in a high degree uncertain, irregular and unsatisfactory. It rests mainly on guesswork; it is blind, and therefore unequal. Here is its greatest evil, though not its only evil. It is haphazard in its practical working, and hence demoralizing alike to tax payers and to tax officials."

These reports were made in states of great wealth and of large commercial and manufacturing interests. But the system has failed and has been condemned in states of very different economic condition. The Louisiana special tax commission in 1908 said:

"If other states did or have ever done any better, it might be plausibly contended that our assessors were to blame and that by replacing them with others, equality could be attained. But such is not the case. The universal experience of mankind shows that the tax on this kind of property cannot be collected with fairness and impartiality. Some states have required the taxpayer to answer as many as 100 categorical questions ingeniously framed so as to prevent evasion. Others have employed spies and detectives to search out concealed property of this kind. If anything can be demonstrated by human experience, the impossibility of reaching such property must be regarded as settled. The opinions of political economists, taxing officials and tax commissions are absolutely unanimous on this question.

"That the evil is in the system itself and not merely in its administration is shown by the fact that Louisiana's experience in this regard is identical with that of the civilized world. It has been tried in every state in the Union. Those whose constitutions permit such a course have abandoned, or are abandoning it. The system is condemned by political economists, writing from a theoretical standpoint; by practical tax officials, speaking from actual experience; and by dozens of select tax commissions, appointed to investigate its workings. Indeed, its failure is shown by testimony overwhelming in quantity, unimpeachable in quality, and so far as we have read, without a dissenting voice."

These reports could be matched with many others in condemnation of the attempt to tax intangible personalty upon its capital value at the high rates prevailing in most parts of the country. But the average intelligent citizen does not need to refer to official reports for evidence that the system works badly. Who has not known of many cases where upon the probate of an estate it appears that thousands of dollars of taxable securities have been long untaxed? Who can not look at the tax statistics of his own city and be appalled at its poverty in personal property—if he believes the figures tell a true story? What reader can examine his own case and give himself a clean bill of health? We all know that when the tax is assessed upon this class of property the tax gatherer takes as his toll 25 or 40 or even fifty per cent of its income. And the American tax payer does not call this taxation.

By some it has been contended that failure to tax intangibles is largely a matter of administration: that with adequate administrative machinery the law can be enforced, and that there will result a tax rate so low as to be endurable. The experience of Ohio is instructive. This idea prevailed in that state with the result that stringent laws were passed. The special tax commission which we have already quoted said:

"We have in Ohio the most efficient and minute scheme of bringing upon the duplicate (i. e., assessment roll) all of these classes of property which has been devised in any state. Every citizen is bound under oath to make a complete return of his property. The list which he returns is to embrace all forms of personal property; if he declines to make the oath required by law, a penalty of 50 per cent is added. The statutes also provide a method by which the auditor may bring before him the citizen and examine him, if he suspect that the return is not a complete one. In addition to all this, the county commissioners have authority to make a contract with such persons as may give information, which will result in personal property being placed upon the duplicate. These persons are rewarded with a large proportion of the amount recovered through their efforts."

With this ferret system in operation the taxed intangibles steadily decreased, wealth left the state, evasion increased until the last condition was worse than the first. It is a significant fact that no state has devised a system of enforcement which enforces. No less significant is the other fact that no state which has discarded the general property tax has returned to it.

This tax has been without doubt more successfully administered in Massachusetts than elsewhere in this country. Massachusetts is a very wealthy state, not only in her industrial properties within the commonwealth, but also in her investments in bonds and in foreign securities. The total assessed valuation of real estate for 1911 is $3,092,791,011; of personal property, $984,444,252. It is impossible to tell other than by estimate the part of this latter item which represents intangible personalty. Perhaps $450,000,000 is a reasonable statement. What proportion this amount is of the whole of such property belonging to the people of Massachusetts cannot be stated, but the usual estimates do not place it at more than 25 per cent, and many careful students believe it to be less than 10 per cent of the whole. The fact is that in Massachusetts and in the other states only a small part of the intangible personal property which by the constitution and the law is subject to taxation is actually taxed. And the primary reason for this failure to tax is not lax administration. The primary reason is that

(Department of Chicago Banker)

An Open Forum Dedicated to the American Institute of Banking in Which to Advance the Great Movement for Systematic Education and Universal Membership

Chicago Chapter News

By OTTO J. KRAMPIKOWSKY.

Because of the very cold weather, the attendance of the chapter members on Tuesday evening, January 9th, was not as large as usual. The meeting was called to order by Chairman Harry S. Smale. After several very excellent vocal selections by Will J. Doherty, Mr. Smale introduced the speaker of the evening, George B. Caldwell, manager of the bond department of the Continental and Commercial Trust and Savings Bank, who was promoted to the office of a vice-president but a few hours previous by the board of directors. An extract from Mr. Caldwell's speech is as follows:

Address of George B. Caldwell

Gentlemen of the Chicago Chapter of the American Institute of Banking: It was in January, 1904, that I had the pleasure of having this association for an audience on the topic of "Investments." Your association was then young and much smaller than now and while I was then given good attention to a dry subject, yet I know that I am expected to do better myself, and that I have a very much larger and more critical audience, for since then you have been gaining in wisdom, both individually and as an organization, and most of you have come in contact with bonds, either as investors, as dealers in collateral, or as dealers in bonds themselves. My paper to-night will, therefore, be rather more technical than elementary, and will in the main be devoted to the general heading, "Classification and Description of Bonds."

I shall assume that we all know that property as the possession of civilized man is fundamentally divided into two kinds—land, with whatever is permanently attached to it; and personal property, meaning movable goods and chattels, to which classification bonds belong. Let us start this discussion then with the premise that all pure investments are loans. Then must follow that all investment securities are credit instruments, or contracts, for the future delivery of money. Since there can be no contract without consideration, loans may be divided according to the nature of this consideration into (A) Those with no monetary rental value, meaning credit balances in open account not interest bearing; (B) those with fixed periodic rental or interest, meaning commercial loans, secured and unsecured and bonds, and (C) those with indeterminate time or rate of interest, of which income bonds are a typical class. Another classification may be made according to the contract for redemption, in which case we have loans payable as to principal: First, at the will of the lender—for example, the demand loan; second, at the will of the borrower—the time loan; and third, at a prearranged time,—like a perpetual loan, with an option, or an endowment insurance policy, whereby the principal and interest is returned, if certain things prearranged are fulfilled. Bonds and mortgages are among the various kinds of investments that dominate all others, the prime fundamental difference being that bonds are merely fractional parts of ownership in a mortgage and possess a liquid value, or market value, that cannot be said of mortgage investments—at least of those for large amounts.

In the financial forms, no topic furnishes material for a livelier debate than the question, "Which are the better investments, bonds or mortgages?" The contest is fought over and over again without casualties to either side, and with neither side convincing the other. If we try to answer the question by the record of defaults, we find that only by visiting at every office of record could one ascertain the number and value of mortgages that go wrong every year, while the census of bond defaults are given greater publicity, and are quite easily determined. Not only are trustees' records available, but the records of the Interstate Commerce Commission will show accurately the default in railroad bonds, and the records of various state public utility commissions will likewise show the default of such public utility bond issues in their state as come under their control. The obligations of industrial corporations will likely give meager statistical information for years to come, unless the bureau of corporations of the department of labor and commerce should take up this work. While on this subject, there is one thought I would leave with you—that American municipal bonds have been for the past twenty years a safer investment than American real estate mortgages, so that any debatable ground relates to railroad, public service and industrial bonds, as compared to real estate mortgages, and without debating the question I will add that this form of bond has grown in favor only as it has improved in security, and is to-day quite a popular form of investment.

The statement is frequently made that real estate mortgages are always worth par, because the principal will be paid promptly at maturity. It is obvious the same can be said of bonds, either long or short time, regardless of the price they are selling at. While it is doubtless true that a real estate mortgage cannot decline to the same extent as a long time bond, yet the price of money must be reckoned with, if either are sold before maturity, and while a mortgage may not decline in market value like a long time bond, neither can it appreciate. It is also true that an investor in long time bonds, if made at the proper period, when they are selling low, has the benefit of the high yield until maturity, and is not called upon to reinvest his money at low rates, as is frequently true of purely mortgage investors. I, of course, believe there is little to choose between a mortgage and a bond in the investment essentials, but those who will acquaint themselves with the collateral advantages of bonds will purchase them instead of mortgages, as is evidenced by the great growth of the bond business in general, and in real estate mortgage bonds in particular.

I will leave this discussion here, and ask your attention for a moment to the question of listed versus unlisted bonds. One of the stock opinions arising from half-truths in financial matters is this, "Listed bonds are the only kind to buy." Of the nine or ten desirable elements in an ideal investment only three can be advanced seriously as being affected by listing on the stock exchanges:—

First, the security of the investment; second, the negotiability of it; and third, the rate of income it yields.

As to security, it is true that the listing committees of some of the exchanges require certain definite statements concerning the companies whose securities are to be listed, and it is also true that the New York stock exchange requires all bonds to be dealt in there shall be certified to as to their genuineness by a trust company, but the information of any listing committee concerning the value of the security is blackest ignorance compared with the intimate knowledge any bond house must have of the condition of the company whose obligation it floats. The members of the listing committee are handed a financial statement and brief answers to set meetings, while the bond house employs engineers for appraising, auditors for verification of accounts and attorneys for passing upon all legal questions. This is reasonable when it is understood that bankers in investment securities usually own the bonds they sell, while stock exchanges are merely associations of agents who sell for the account of others. What possible assurance of safety, in the ordinary sense, can be found in listing when Erie common and Southern Railway common are to be found listed on the New York board, while Standard Oil is not, or when Wabash-Pittsburgh terminal second 4s, selling at 4 cents to 11½ cents on the dollar are listed, when state of Massachusetts 3½s or various issues of first mortgage public service bonds are not?

The buyer who holds up his hands at unlisted bonds usually makes one of two errors, either he calls what he wants by the wrong name, or else he buys what he does not need. If current bonds are what he wishes, he can get them on the curb, or at the bond counter, as well as on the board. If he is buying for investment (the purpose for which funded loans are made), he not asking himself this question, "If I buy this unlisted and inactive bond at 95 I may have to sell it at 90 to get rid of it, but if I buy this active bond at 95 I can turn around and sell it again, say at 94 to 94½, including commissions both ways," and allowing nothing for market changes, in which case he would be paying 5 per cent for activity and 90 per cent for investment value.

I am making no plea for unlisted bonds, or uncurrent issues. It is merely the application of sound investment principles to all bond buying and selling that I desire to call to your attention. It is fitting that the fallacy of listed bonds be exposed, in order to emphasize the desirability of analyzing one's investment needs before buying, and herein the judgment of the bond house and salesman who is, or should be, an expert in his line has much of value to the investor.

In making loans upon collateral, other conditions enter in, which give listed bonds and listed stocks a decided advantage. A bank has not the time or personal interest to investigate and frequently does not have an expert at hand. Personal credit is his specialty, collateral credit, or credit instruments are secondary. In taking them the bank moves along the line of least resistance, the loan clerk has less thinking to do. For ordinary investment purposes, it may be truthfully said that

By EDGAR P. ALLEN

Omaha

Few changes of importance have resulted from the annual meetings of various large banks in Kansas City, Omaha, and other cities of the Central West. For the most part old officers have been retained. Although the year just past was not as prosperous as several before it, the banks as a rule declared satisfactory dividends. One of the interesting developments was the sudden rise of stock of the Commerce Trust Company of Kansas City, which jumped ten points in two days, as a result of the business showing. A sale of ten shares of First National Bank stock in Kansas City at 52½ was the first sale of this stock reported for more than a year. This stock has doubled twice out of its earnings. The highest priced bank stock in Kansas City is that of the Missouri Savings Bank, for which 750 is bid. This stock paid 18 per cent last year.

According to bankers in the Central West the year that has just closed was entirely satisfactory, under somewhat adverse conditions. Although the volume of business was not great there were no failures of consequence and there was a disposition toward conservatism that has placed the financial situation on a safe basis. For the most part merchants in this territory have allowed their stocks of merchandise to run down and it is predicted that there will be heavy buying as soon as inventories are completed. For more than a week snowstorms raged over the agricultural districts and put the wheat in fine condition. A year ago wheat was practically killed as a result of the drouth. There is a strong feeling of hope for a prosperous year among bankers and other business men in the Central West, based upon unusually bright crop conditions.

Review of Guarantee System

Just one year has elapsed since the United States supreme court held the Kansas bank deposit guarantee law constitutional. At that time the bank guarantee system was a burning political issue in Kansas, Oklahoma and Nebraska, and the bank guarantee laws of all these states depended upon the decision of the highest court. A year ago there were 390 state banks in Kansas under the guarantee system and in the year that has passed forty-eight more state banks have come in, making a total of 438 state banks at present under the Kansas guarantee law. There are 897 state banks in Kansas, so that just a few less than half are under the guarantee law. The total amount of outstanding certificates under the law is approximately $30,000. When a bank under the law fails, certificates are issued to the depositors for the amount of their deposits, bearing 6 per cent interest. When a dividend is paid, depositors bring their certificates and receive their proportion of the dividend, which is noted on the certificate. If after all the dividends are paid there is still money due the depositors, this is paid from the bank guarantee fund. There are 105 banks in the Bankers Deposit Guarantee and Surety Company of Kansas, which insures the deposits of state and national banks. National banks cannot come under the state guarantee law. There are 209 national banks in Kansas and the total amount in the Bankers Deposit Guarantee and Surety Company is $366,550. The total amount of bonds and cash in the Kansas state guarantee fund is $355,880. Of this $58,368 is in cash. When a bank comes under the law it puts up bonds, $500 for each $100,000 of deposits, to guarantee the payment of the assessments. An annual assessment of 50 cents on every $1,000 of deposits is made, until the assessments total $500,000. No special assessments have been made since the law went into effect. The annual assessment for 1912 will be made January 20th and will add $35,000 to the fund.

Concerning Failure of Night and Day Bank

Following close upon the failure of the Night and Day Bank of Kansas City, Mo., last week, came the closing of the doors of the Night and Day Bank of Kansas City, Kan. In a statement concerning the failure J. N. Dolley, state bank commissioner of Kansas, said: "The failure of the American Union Trust Company, which had taken over the Night and Day Bank of Kansas City, Mo., had a direct bearing on the failure of the Night and Day Bank of Kansas City, Kan. They were more or less connected in a business way, and since the failure of the American Union Trust Company a strong lack of confidence has developed and there has been a steady drain by depositors on the Night and Day Bank of Kansas City, Kan. The bank is not a guaranteed bank. It has deposits of about $60,000 and cash and sight exchange of about $10,000. I am not fully informed at this time as to the real value of the bank's assets, but what information I have leads me to believe that the depositors will not sustain very much loss, if any." J. M. McDonald was president of the bank and owned 85 per cent of the stock. He lives at Pleasant Hill, Mo. J. W. Yardley, vice-president, lives in Kansas City, Kan. E. J. Wolf was cashier. There has been no announcement concerning a settlement of the affairs of the American Union Trust Company of Kansas City, Mo., which failed two weeks ago. The institution is still in the hands of the Missouri banking department. John E. Swanger, Missouri bank commissioner, in his last statement as to the condition of the bank and trust company said: "We continue to collect from the local business men and others who owe the American Union Trust Company, and are making a satisfactory showing toward meeting the obligations of the defunct company. I can promise nothing as yet to depositors—that is, nothing more than I have promised right along. We will do our best. In a week or two, perhaps, we will be able to make a division of some sort, if those who owed the trust company when it failed continue to take up their paper."

Must Nationalized Banks Pay Guarantee Assessment?

An important suit in connection with the enforcement of the Oklahoma bank guarantee law has been argued in the federal court at Guthrie and bankers generally are awaiting with interest the opinion which is promised soon. The point at issue is the power of the state banking board to compel the Peoples National Bank of Kingfisher, Okla., to pay a guarantee fund assessment made by the board before the bank was nationalized. The assessment was made March 2d, last, and the bank was nationalized March 18th. Former Justice Burwell of the Oklahoma supreme court argued that the assessment made last March was not for the purpose of paying off depositors in failed banks, but instead was simply to fortify the guarantee fund against future developments; therefore, the Kingfisher bank, having nationalized, expects no guarantee benefits in the future and cannot be held for such assessment. On the determination of this case depends the payment of the same guarantee assessment of some fifty former state banks that nationalized after the assessment was made.

Oklahoma Guarantee Fund

In a statement of the condition of the Oklahoma state guarantee fund, it is shown that while $85,520 has been paid out during the past three months to depositors in defunct banks, the amount of cash in the guarantee fund has increased from $44,237 on October 1st, to $61,119 on December 30, 1911, the end of the quarterly period. During the three months the fund was replenished to the amount of $103,078 by assessments from state banks, while there was collected from the assets of failed banks $4,927. The board paid depositors in the Farmers State Bank of Tushka $26,867; the depositors in the Alamo State Bank of Muskogee $20,125 and the depositors in the Creek Bank and Trust Company of Sapulpa $20,125. The last named is the institution formerly conducted by the Westfall Brothers, and for the wrecking of which Frank S. Westfall is in jail awaiting trial.

Topeka Bank Clearings Show Large Increase

Topeka bankers are jubilant over the fact that the bank clearings in that city showed an increase during the year 1911 over the previous year of 16.9 per cent. This is the best record of any city in the Central West, as the prevailing increase in the smaller cities averaged only about 8 per cent while most of the larger cities, notably Kansas City and Omaha, had a falling off in clearings. The reason for Topeka's prosperity was the unexpected excellence of the crops in that district, which suffered less from the drouth of the summer than in most other parts of the Central West. Wichita, Kan., also made a good showing for the year 1911. In 1910 Wichita banks cleared $160,247,935 and in 1911 this was increased by about $7,000,000.

Condition of Nebraska Banks

An abstract of the condition of the 669 state banks and trust companies in Nebraska shows that since the last report in August there has been a decrease of $1,694,799 in deposits and an increase of seven in the number of the banks under state charter. Compared with practically the same period a year ago there is a gratifying increase in deposits of $2,209,674. The average reserve is 27 per cent, being 3 per cent more than a year ago. There has been one state bank failure in Nebraska since 1904 and that was due to an officer of a small bank absconding in 1907. The failed bank finally paid back 95 per cent of its deposits without the help of the deposit guarantee law, which was not in effect then. Bank Commissioner Royse also finds that a number of the soundest banks in Nebraska at present at one time several years ago under less stringent regulation and supervision were on the verge of insolvency.

Warrant Out for Herschey

A warrant has been issued for the arrest of J. H. Herschey of Olathe, Kan., former assistant and treasurer of the Central Bank and Trust Company of Fort Smith, Ark., which failed two weeks ago. He will be charged with receiving deposits when he knew the bank to be in a failing condition. The prosecutor declares that he may issue warrants for all persons connected with the bank. E. D. Martin, secretary and treasurer, who was arrested December 30th, has been remanded to jail in default of bond. A. S. Dowd, receiver for the bank, announced that the books of the company only showed $500 capital stock paid in, although the books show that $53,500 of the $100,000 authorized capital had been subscribed. It also developed that all of the officers of the bank had resigned a few days before the crash came.

Condition of Oklahoma Banks

On September 1st, last, Oklahoma had 271 national banks outside of the reserve banks, with $37,154,391 deposits. These same banks showed a total deposit of $42,017,904 on the first of last December. The national reserve banks not shown in the foregoing statement have approximately $23,500,000 in deposits. There are 633 state banks in Oklahoma with total deposits amounting to $58,170,999. As the totals given by Comptroller Murray show that the national banks listed held $42,017,904, on the same day, the grand total of deposits in all banks of Oklahoma is about $100,000,000. To this must be added, of course, the $23,500,000 in reserve banks. These figures show that the people of Oklahoma were able to increase their bank deposits nearly nine million dollars under the adverse conditions that prevailed in 1911, which is cause for general gratification in the new state.

Texas Banks

The Texas department of banking has issued a statement covering the condition of state banks during the period from September 1, 1911, to December 5, 1911, being the dates of the last two calls. In that time twenty-one banks with a capital of $829,500 have been authorized to begin business. Six have discontinued by liquidation, consolidation or otherwise, leaving in existence 688 banks and trust companies under state charter, with a combined capital of $23,520,500, and surplus and undivided profits of $6,473,602, or a net increase of fifteen banks and $1,262,579 in capital, surplus and undivided profits. Loans and discounts decreased in the same period $5-221,283. Overdrafts increased $1,929,208. There are fourteen state banks maintaining savings departments. The cash reserve required is 15 per cent of the total deposits but the statement shows an excess of about three per cent.

Central West Notes

The Nebraska state banking board has made its second assessment under the guarantee law. The assessment is $\frac{1}{4}$ of one per cent upon the average deposits for the six months preceding December 1st. These total \$72,809,632 and will produce \$182,024. This is to be added to the \$172,000 raised by the first assessment of July last.

In accordance with a new policy the custodians of the Nebraska school fund are selling bonds of municipalities and counties outside the state and are investing in Nebraska securities exclusively.

There is a persistent rumor that James A. Flack, the absconding cashier of the Abilene (Kan.) State Bank, has been located and will be brought back to Kansas for trial. He is said to be now in a distant part of the United States under the eye of a detective working for the Burns agency.

An involuntary petition in bankruptcy has been filed against the New State Loan Company of Oklahoma City by five Chicago concerns. They allege the loan company committed acts of bankruptcy recently in making payments to the Oklahoma state guarantee fund and Farmers National Bank of Oklahoma City.

The Durland Trust Company of Norfolk, Neb., has begun business by depositing $10,000 with the state auditor. The company has a capital of $36,000.

The bank officials of all the banks of Wichita, Kan., held a dinner one night last week whereat they discussed the history of the financial year just passed. It was a most delightful affair and the bankers left the dinner better acquainted and in a most optimistic frame of mind.

Three ways of writing the same transit item—the hand way, the typewriter way and the Burroughs way. It requires more work to write the spaces on a typewriter than to write the whole item on a Burroughs.

3 Ways of Writing Same Transit Item

Twelve strokes on a Burroughs Transit Machine writes the above transit item in full numerically.

Forty-four strokes are required to write it the typewriter way, abbreviated to the bone, with punctuation left out.

The more strokes necessary to write anything, the more it costs—every motion requires energy, takes time, costs money.

It requires more work to write the spaces in the above item with a typewriter than to write the whole item with a Burroughs.

It would take twice as much work to punctuate the item with a typewriter as to write it complete on a Burroughs.

The American Bankers' Association has approved the numerical way as the best way. Not because it is cheapest, but because it is best.

Will you use the best way or pay more for the old way?

Will you write your transit items in full, numerically, or abbreviate them in the old way?

Let the Burroughs man demonstrate without obligation or cost to you, how a transit machine will eliminate waste motion in your bank figure work.

Burroughs Transit Machine—for transit letters and bank figure work. Carriage entirely automatic—eliminates waste motion.

Wouldn't today be a good time to ask for the Transit Folder?

Banking news from Minneapolis—St. Paul financial center, and surrounding States, compiled by J. Edwards Smith

E. W. Decker, since January, 1903, managing vice-president of the Northwestern National Bank, was on Tuesday elected president. W. H. Dunwoody, for many years president of the bank, was advanced to chairman of the board, a position which will give him the desired relief from active work in connection with the bank business. He recently passed the age of seventy.

Mr. Decker was forty-two years old, August 24, 1911. He was born in Austin, Minn., and graduated from the high school in 1887. He came at once the Minneapolis and started banking as messenger. In 1895 he was made assistant cashier of the Metropolitan Bank. Later he was elected cashier. In 1901 he returned to the Northwestern as cashier, and two years later became manager with the title of vice-president. Mr. Decker is one of the best known financial men of the Northwest. He has held several positions including the presidency of the Twin City Bankers Club, presidency of the Minneapolis Clearing House Association, a director in the Northwestern National Life Insurance Company, and is now president of the Minnesota Loan and Trust Company.

Other vice-presidents remain, Judge M. B. Koon, Joseph Chapman, Jr., and J. A. Latta. F. E. Holton retains the cashiership, and the assistants are: C. W. Farwell, R. E. Macgregor, A. V. Ostrom, H. P. Newcomb and W. M. Koon.

Mattson to Go with Scandinavian-American National

Edgar Lincoln Mattson was on Tuesday elected cashier of the Scandinavian-American National, a position heretofore filled by Vice-President C. L. Grandin. Three years and two months ago, when the Swedish-American National was absorbed by the Northwestern National, Mr. Mattson was cashier. In the interim he has been assistant cashier at the latter bank. He now returns to a bank which makes a strong bid for the business of the Scandinavian-Americans, organized after the dissolution of the Swedish-American.

Mr. Mattson is not alone a banker, although he has been in the business since he was seventeen years old, twenty-three years ago, when he left the Central High school to work. He is also treasurer of the Minnesota State Agricultural Society, an office he held two years ago, to which he was re-elected after one year, and to which he was re-elected yesterday. He lives at Wildhurst, Lake Minnetonka, until the invasion of his comfortable lake shore yard by Jack Frost. Then he hies himself to the city. As a Viking he is a member of the Minnetonka Yacht Club. As a patriot he belongs to the Loyal Legion—his father was a colonel in the famous Third Minnesota of the Civil War. As a business man he belongs to the Commercial Club, and as officer in charge of bank advertising he became a member of the Publicity Club. Harking back to ancestry he belongs to the Odin Club, of which he has served as president. Hans Mattson, his father, helped organize the old Swedish-American Bank with which the son was connected through its nationalization up to its liquidation; had also been secretary of state several terms and consul general in India, transmitting his diplomatic strain to his son. The Scandinavian-American National has $500,000 capital, and $90,000 surplus. The president is Theodore Wold, late of Winona.

MacFadden in a Train Accident

W. C. MacFadden, secretary for North Dakota, had a rude awakening January 7th. The awakening was at 4 A. M. Mr. MacFadden was on a Northern Pacific train from the Twin Cities to Fargo. At Cushing Siding, Minn., the train struck a broken rail. Cars left the track, but remained upright, except Mr. MacFadden's sleeper. He says: "We were all asleep. The first we knew glass began to crash. I imagined the chandeliers were breaking. The man on the other side of the car came rolling in on my berth. A fence-post rammed the next berth, missing a woman. The glass in my berth did not break. It took us a long time to find our things. They were so mixed up."

On a West Indies Cruise

J. A. Latta, Mrs. Latta, Mrs. John A. Weber, Mrs. Latta's mother, and Lorenzo Weber, cashier of the Webber State Savings Bank, Portland, Mich., Mrs. Latta's brother, sailed to-day from New York on the Bermudian for the West Indies trip. They will change boats at Bermuda and the Barbadoes. After the canal trip they will come north by way of Cuba, Havana, and Florida.

Promotions at Minnesota Loan and Trust Company

W. A. Durst was advanced from secretary to vice-president at the annual meeting of the Minnesota Loan and Trust Company; H. L. Moore, treasurer, becomes secretary-treasurer; C. V. Smith, advanced from assistant trust officer to trust officer, succeeding J. M. Martin, elected general counsel. H. D. Thrall was made assistant secretary. E. W. Decker was re-elected president; Judge M. B. Koon, W. H. Dunwoody, and A. M. Keith, vice-presidents, I. W. Chambers, assistant treasurer; S. S. Cook, cashier, and J. R. Byers, assistant cashier. The surplus was advanced $50,000 to $200,000.

New York Banker is for Taft

G. C. McNeir, vice-president of the Bank of the Metropolis, New York, said in Minneapolis last week: "If Taft is renominated he will carry New York, New Jersey and Connecticut. He is the choice of Eastern business men. While some of his policies toward capital have not been admired, we are sure he will give a much more stable and dignified attention to business legislation than any of the other candidates for office, or Theodore Roosevelt. The underlying tone of business in the East is good. Money is going into legitimate business channels. There is a lack of speculation. This shows business is on a firm footing. Money is very cheap in New York. Stocks are low. A conservative tone is marked. This matter of monetary reform should be divorced entirely from politics. It should be a business proposition. There should be an elasticity that would take away from New York the burden of being responsible for finances like in 1907.

Boston Growing

T. P. Beal, president of the Second National of Boston, said: "Boston has seen a great gain in her wool and cotton industries in the last few years. Then, too, the city is realizing fast its aspirations as a greater seaport. The dock commission recently appropriated $9,000,000 for building greater docks."

How J. B. Forgan Became Cashier of Northwestern National

J. B. Forgan told how, twenty years ago, when he was in charge of the little office of the Bank of Nova Scotia in Minneapolis, he took the big job of being cashier of the Northwestern National. The incident that turned the scale after he had been approached by W. H. Dunwoody and M. B. Koon, was as follows: "One of the directors came to my house and my little boy was playing outside. The director got into conversation with the boy and asked him about his father's habits and many things.

"Does your father smoke?" he asked.

"Well," said my boy, 'dad never buys any cigars, but he always smokes all the cigars that people give him.'

"That's the man we want for cashier," said the director, and I was slated for the job."

St. Paul Bank Elections

At the St. Paul bank elections presidents were retained. J. W. Wheeler, recently of Crookston, was confirmed as president of the Security Trust Company, a position he has acted in since January 1st, when F. Y. Locke resigned as vice-president of the Capital National. C. A. Boalt and F. P. Fellows were made directors to succeed Mr. Locke, and Mr. Wheeler succeeded Ambrose Tighe as director. M. L. H. Ickler, cashier of the American National, was slated to succeed C. J. Peebles as vice-president, and H. B. Humason, assistant, to be cashier, and Mr. Humason and J. W. Cooper for directors of the Northern Savings Bank, a savings department. C. H. F. Smith was the man selected to name as an additional vice-president for the bank. To the bank surplus $35,000 was added, making it $75,000, and leaving $10,000 undivided. The capital is $200,000.

Increases Capital

The Minneapolis State Bank voted to increase capital to $50,000, carried $500 to surplus, and left $500 undivided. The capital now is $25,000. L. M. Chamberlain succeeds E. E. MacGill as vice-president. C. E. Hill is advanced from assistant to cashier to succeed A. L. Arnold, removed to Beach, N. D. The dividend of 6 per cent annual was declared.

Other Bank Changes

G. W. LaLone was elected assistant cashier of the Minnehaha State, and G. R. Frissell was elected to the directory of the Camden Park State. The Security National is now on a 16 per cent dividend basis, the first quarterly of 4 per cent having been recently declared. No change was made in officers at the First, Metropolitan National or the Security. The Scandinavian American National continues to put its profits into surplus and has not yet established a dividend rate.

Banking Notes of Interest

V. E. Neudeck, former member of the board of directors of the Merriam Park Bank, has been elected cashier and E. W. Eames assistant cashier. Mr. Neudeck succeeds W. J. McPettridge, Jr., who was advanced to vice-president.

O'Connor Brothers of Renville, Minn., have bought the interest of E. B. Page and of the Gold-Stabeck Company of Minneapolis in the Devil's Lake State Bank, N. D. J. M. Thompson, cashier, will remain with the institution. Mr. Page has been president one year.

F. H. Peterson, president of the Union State Bank, spent $7 last week, perforce. He was held up on his way home, and beside the money the thugs took a watch, which Mr. Peterson received from his father on his twenty-first birthday, some time ago, also a diamond set locket presented by bank employees when he was elected president. As the men were not masked, who held him up, Mr. Peterson will require no alibi of any of the bank directors. He did not recognize the men as depositors in his bank, applicants for loans, or as even having a passing acquaintance with him. Mr. Peterson had no more money on his person.

F. N. Burrows and N. J. Thompson have sold their interests in the Citizens State of Bathgate, N. D., to A. T. Helgerson of Gettysburg, S. D. Mr. Helgerson will be cashier, succeeding Mr. Thompson.

The Northwestern Trust Company, Grand Forks, N. D., has elected officers as follows: President, F. L. Goodman; vice-president, E. Y. Sarles, Hillsboro; second vice-president, J. D. Bacon; secretary-treasurer, J. R. Carley.

J. P. R. Reinhard has resigned as cashier of the Monroe County Bank, Sparta, Wis., to become cashier of the Warrens bank at a better salary.

Upon resignation of President J. E. Wheeler and Vice-President Orlando Holway of the Exchange State Bank, LaCrosse, Wis., W. B. Tscharner and J. P. Gohres were elected respectively. R. B. Lowry is cashier, and W. G. Lowry, assistant. The directors are R. B. Lowry, G. B. Phillips, C. P. Thompson, J. P. Gohres and W. B. Tscharner.

Edward Lyons retired from the presidency of the Security Savings of LaCrosse and Dr. A. Gunderson was elected to succeed him. Other officers chosen are: Vice-president, F. A. Cotton; cashier, J. A. Thwing; assistant, J. B. Brenner; directors, O. R. Skaar, B. F. Keeler, L. J. Kilian, Ole Elbertson, N. Frey, and L. P. Benezot.

W. H. Dunwoody, chairman of the board of directors of the Northwestern National Bank, was elected director of the Great Northern road on January 2d, to succeed Edward Sawyer, resigned.

The First National Bank of Minneapolis has adopted a pension system for employees, making three national banks now provided with a plan. The general features are those of the Chicago First National, after which the other two local banks have also patterned.

SEATTLE TO RUN CITY BANK

Seattle, Wash., January 10.—The council passed a resolution to-day calling for the creation of a municipal bank and trust department to handle the city's moneys. The resolution instructs the mayor to appoint a commission of five members to draw up plans for the city's bank.

The city carries balances in Seattle banks ranging from $4,000,000 to $5,000,000, which draws 2 per cent interest.

The resolution proposes to have these funds handled by the municipal bank.

To-day's action resulted from the refusal of members of the local clearing house association to bid on an $800,000 municipal street railway bond issue.

BECOMES BANK PRESIDENT

Washington, Ind., January 9.—Judge William Ray Gardiner, one of the best-known lawyers in this section of Indiana, was elected president of the State Bank of Washington at the directors' meeting, replacing George Godwin, former county treasurer. J. M. Twitty was re-elected cashier.

The Izard County Bank of Guion, Little Rock, Ark., has been chartered by the state. Its capital stock is $10,000. J. W. Williamson is president; Austin Billingsley, vice-president, and E. L. Collier, secretary and treasurer.

Pacific Northwest Banking News

Spokane, Wash., January 9.—Prosperity reigned in Spokane and throughout the Inland Empire during the year 1911, according to facts and figures submitted by the business and state and county officers in their yearly reports. During 1911, Spokane jobbers disposed of goods valued at $60,000,000, on which freight bills amounting to $5,000,000 were paid. More than 3,500 employees owe their positions to the jobbing houses of Spokane, among which are 500 traveling salesmen. One million dollars' worth of cigars and tobacco, it is estimated, were shipped into the Inland Empire by Spokane jobbing houses during the year. Wholesale lumber houses handled approximately $9,000,000 worth of timber products. Hardware houses handled $6,000,000 worth of their products. Property owners of Spokane paid improvement assessments amounting to $1,133,443.77 during 1911, exceeding the amount paid in 1910 by nearly $100,000 and breaking all records in the city. The year was a record breaker so far as street improvements in Spokane were concerned. Figures just given out from the city engineer's office show the improvements to be far ahead of those of any other year in the amount of paving, curbing, guttering and sidewalks built. There was a $30,000 increase of water rentals and all lines show prosperity.

4 Per Cent Interest on Savings

Spokane bank depositors will get 4 per cent on their savings deposits from January 1, 1912. The new rate was inaugurated with the opening of the new year by the Exchange National Bank, which raised the interest from 3 to 4 per cent. While no action has been taken it is understood there is a general agreement among the national banks that they will meet the 4 per cent interest rate on savings accounts, which has always been paid by the trust companies of the city. "The advance of the interest rate to 4 per cent was made because the profits in the banking business in Spokane warranted it," declared E. T. Coman, president of the Exchange National Bank. "Four per cent is being paid by banks in San Francisco, Portland and Seattle. In New York 3½ and 4 per cent is being paid. If the other financial centers can pay 4 per cent, Spokane banks, with their high rates of interest obtained, ought to be able to do as well. The fact is, we are making enough money to be able to pay 4 per cent, and the depositors are entitled to all we can afford to pay."

Good Standing in East

Spokane's credit is good with the banks of the East. A Spokane city warrant drawing the usual 6 per cent interest is welcomed by eastern financiers, six of whom have written to City Treasurer Arthur Lewis, asserting their readiness to purchase Spokane warrants at any time. These letters come from bankers as far east as New Hampshire, who held $300,000 of the city water extension warrants now being retired. Among the banks that have written to City Treasurer Lewis are the Lancaster National Bank of Lancaster, Ohio; the German-American Trust Company, Denver; Central National Bank, Omaha; First National Bank, Manchester, N. H. The New Hampshire bank held $24,000 of the warrants. Deputy City Treasurer Fred May handled the details of paying off the holders of the $938,000 of water extensions. "Spokane city warrants and improvement bonds have received a boost since the sale of the water extension warrants," said Mr. May. "Improvement bonds, which two or three years ago sold at as low as 94 and 95, are to-day commanding 97½ to 98½. The wiping out of the floating water debt has greatly improved the city's credit." At the close of business at the city treasurer's office last night $867,741.31 of the water extension warrants had been paid, leaving $39,000. The total amount paid in interest on the warrants is a little over $54,000. Over $500,000 of the warrants were held by Spokane banks.

Review of Idaho for 1911

Idaho, during 1911, enjoyed a year of prosperity. In manufacturing, commerce, farming and in all lines of industry the Gem state marched forward and set new standards of achievement. The estimated mineral output of the state for 1911 is $19,000,000, an increase over 1910 of nearly $2,000,000. The value of farm products for the year is placed at $36,701,752, an increase of 20 per cent over the previous year. The fruit crop of the year is valued at $6,000,000, about the same as 1910, while nearly $50,000,000 is placed to the credit of the live stock industry. With irrigation projects under way that mean the ultimate reclamation of 600,000 acres of arid land, of which perhaps 20 per cent has already been reclaimed, the future of the state is bright.

Refuses Presidency of League

F. M. March, president of the National Bank of Commerce of Spokane, has definitely refused the presidency of the Spokane County Progressive Republican League, which has been tendered to him at intervals by the league for the last month.

Receive Dividend

The stockholders of the defunct Commerce State Bank of St. Joe, Idaho, have received a dividend of $10 a share on the stock of the bank. The Commercial State Bank closed operation last July and its business was taken over by the Kootenai County State Bank of St. Maries. Since that time enough collections have been made to pay up the depositors in full and a dividend.

Will Pay 5 per cent Dividend

Although organized only three years the First National Bank of Hillyard, Wash., will, to-day, pay its annual dividend of 5 per cent, or $1,250, on its capital of $25,000. The company has set aside to surplus in the last two years 15 per cent, making the earnings of the bank since it opened $5,000.

Fidelity Building and Loan Association

An annual dividend of 7 per cent, or about $5,000, was paid by the Fidelity Building and Loan Association in 1911. Dividends were paid on $93,357 of stock. The association is operated on the co-operation plan. The annual statement of the association is as follows: Resources: Loans, $91,781.45; bonds and warrants, $1,103.30; accrued interest, $896.59; furniture and fixtures, $350; contingent fund, $734.84; cash on hand, $2,953.90. Total, $97,820.08. Liabilities: Paid up stock, $21,100; instalment stock, $72,257.34; uncompleted loans, $1,216.95; undivided profits, $3,136.79; bills payable, $109. Total, $97,820.08. The officers and trustees of the association are: Otto W. Sperling, president; O. C. Jensen, vice-president; F. S. McWilliams, secretary; C. D. Robinson, assistant secretary; McWilliams, Weller and McWilliams, attorneys; E. F. Cartier VanDissel, J. Grier Long, M. C. Dunne, Robert Weir, Thomas F. Conlan, and M. B. Connelly.

The First National Bank of Coeur d'Alene, Idaho, to-day declared a 6 per cent semi-annual dividend. The last year has been the banner year of the bank's business.

C. E. Funkhouser, manager of the Washington Grain and Feed Company's offices at Palouse, Wash., has resigned to accept a position with the Creston State Bank, which is soon to open a branch exchange at Peach, Wash. Mr. Funkhouser is succeeded by A. M. Boyd of Almira.

RECOVERED FROM EQUITABLE VAULTS

New York, January 11.—Between $300,000.00 and $400,000.00 in cash and securities were removed intact late to-day from the vaults of two of the financial institutions whose quarters were destroyed in the fire that gutted the Equitable Life Assurance Society building Tuesday.

The vaults of the Equitable Trust Company alone yielded $300,000.00. Many millions more were taken from the vaults of the Mercantile Trust Company. Six million dollars was represented in a single box of gold certificates, which an officer in the institution carried through the streets tucked under an arm, with only a lone policeman to protect him. There remains to be opened the great vault of the Equitable Assurance Society, with its treasure of $300,000,000, which was still buried so deep to-day under tons of ice-cemented debris, that the doors could not be reached.

LAWSON TO STAY AT PEOPLES STATE BANK

George E. Lawson will not leave the Peoples State Bank and go to the First National as vice-president, to take the position vacated by Emory W. Clark. It has been officially announced that the plans have been changed and Mr. Lawson will remain with the Peoples State. It is reported that the sudden death of M. W. O'Brien, and the cordial expressions of the board of directors in connection with Mr. Lawson's proposed change were the controlling reasons which caused him to remain.

THE NEW A. B. A. COMMITTEES

You will find the full list of A. B. A. committee appointments made by the administrative committee, at its New York session, in all of the other banking papers this week. The complete list with committee designations (and other interesting items) was printed in THE CHICAGO BANKER, front page, in the issue for the week ending December 23, 1911. This journal gets its A. B. A. information by "live wire" and not by bulletin.

Seattle

Seattle now has passed the point where her bank clearings may be used for unfair comparison with the next preceding year. The end came with the close of the calendar year 1911. On the face of the 1911 report the clearings showed a decrease of $37,453,014 from 1910. Segregation of parts of the year for comparison with periods when like conditions prevailed show that without the consolidations effected in May and August, 1910, the last year doubtless would have shown a comfortable gain over the preceding year. Comparison of the last four months of 1911 with the corresponding period of 1910 shows a gain of $6,244,469. The period selected is the one in which the number of banks in the clearing house were the same.—Pacific Banker.

MERCHANTS NATIONAL OF RALEIGH

One of the most flourishing of the banks in the South is the Merchants National of Raleigh, North Carolina. Although in existence only two and one-half years, it already had, at its last statement, deposits of $1,499,708.25—exceeding those of any other bank in its home city, and pays dividends of 6 per cent. This enterprising institution has for its cashier, W. B. Drake, Jr., who, with the co-operation of the other officers, has brought it up to its present prosperity and high standing in the community. The Merchants National has a capital, surplus and undivided profits of $137,388.15; and total resources of $1,837,096.41. The officers are E. C. Duncan, president; Wm. H. Williamson and W. F. Utley, vice-presidents; W. B. Drake, Jr., cashier, and S. J. Hinsdale, assistant cashier.

INDIANA BANK CASE

H. L. Arnold, chief clerk in the bank department in the office of the auditor of state, who has returned from Terre Haute, where he went to look after the affairs of the American State Bank, now closed, said the depositors of the bank would probably be paid in full, but that the stockholders would probably be compelled to stand an assessment to meet the situation. He found, he said, the total shortage to be about fifty thousand dollars. Of this approximately twenty-five thousand dollars is covered by securities put up by W. H. Taber, the president of the bank, who is held responsible for the shortage.

The Taber shortage is covered by a note signed by Taber's father, Mr. Arnold said, but after the note had been delivered to the bank, the elder Taber transferred his real estate to two daughters. Mr. Arnold believes the transfers can not stand, as the elder Taber, in turning the note over to the bank, made affidavit as to his assets at the time, which included the real estate since transferred to his daughters.

Mr. Arnold was unable to find, he said, where Taber has spent the money he took. The books of the banks were found in bad condition, especially the stock subscription and transfer record, and the department has not yet straightened them out.

BANKS CASH WARRANTS

Austin, Texas, January 9.—With the near approach of the time when the state will be again on a cash basis the banks here and also over the state are cashing state warrants without any discount, according to information received by the state treasury department.

For the past several months the comptroller has been forced to issue each individual warrant for the employees of the state eleemosynary institutions, due to the fact that some of the employees had to discount their warrants, while others could afford to wait until the state had the money.

Several of the banks over the state have advised that they will cash all such warrants without discount, so it is now possible to make for the entire pay-roll of an institution, and the pay-roll sent to the bank where such institution is situated, and the employees to go there and get their monthly salaries.

The Manchester (S. D.) State Bank has changed hands, John Glen and son Henry being the new proprietors.

Reserve Agents for National Banks

Des Moines, January 10.—Homer A. Miller, president of the Iowa National of Des Moines, in his summary for the month of December, declares that the year 1911, was a good one on the whole. He does not expect a business boom in 1912, however. This monthly survey has become quite popular with Iowa bankers. Among other things, it says "the final summing up of the figures on basic conditions for the year 1911 will disclose the fact that the year, taken as a whole, with the averages of previous years, was in reality a very good one for business. Considerably less active, but comparing favorably with 1910, it will go down in history as a business year slightly above the average. Too much should not be expected of 1912. There are many things to hamper it, and although business has recovered from the stagnation it suffered during the summer months the presidential election, the tariff agitation, the trust investigations and the prospective labor troubles will all tend against a record making business for 1912. Conditions are sound, but a business boom could not be expected."

Banks Aid School Board

The banks of Des Moines have come to the rescue of the Des Moines school board, which had found difficulty in paying the interest on outstanding bonds because of injunction proceedings which stopped the levying of a tax for that purpose. The injunction was issued on a showing that the board had not conformed in every way with the law as to the tax levy. The banks, according to School Treasurer John Hogan, who is cashier of the German Savings Bank, will accept 6 per cent warrants, and in return will furnish the $80,000 required for the interest. The warrants, Mr. Hogan says, are good investments, and he anticipates little difficulty in their disposal. If the banks should quit taking them before the first of April, 1913, when taxes for that purpose will be due, Mr. Hogan suggests appealing to the wealthy people of the city.

Review of Iowa Banks for 1911

Frank E. Roberts, chief state bank examiner, has written a statement of the work of the department during the past year, that is of especial value in showing of facts. He shows that there are in Iowa 1,665 banks, of which 1,007 are under the control of the state auditor. During 1911 there were 33 new banks established, 25 renewed their charters, 10 liquidated. There have been no bank failures of the institutions under state supervision since November, 1907. The annual fees paid to the state department total $20,099.70, and the salaries paid out of this fund total $15,008.70 leaving a balance of $5,091 turned over to the state as revenue. During the year there were 1,085 examinations. The total number of reports handled, mailed and checked runs into the thousands. Mr. Roberts in concluding shows that the banks of the state are at present in better condition than ever before. Each of the five state bank examiners will have 200 banks to examine in 1912. This is too many, but the law limits the number of examiners that may be employed to six, and one of these is kept busy supervising the remainder. Mr. Roberts points out the importance of amending the statute in this respect.

Condition of National Banks

The abstract of the condition of the national banks of Iowa outside of the reserve cities following the response to the call issued for December 5th shows the average reserve held at 15.93 per cent as compared to 15.78 per cent on September 1st. Loans and discounts increased from $95,619,468 to $97,716,771. Gold coin from $2,308,412 to $2,463,218.

More About the Tax Ferret

The controversy at Waterloo, which resulted in suits started to enjoin the county officials from spreading taxes levied in accordance with the reports of Tax Ferret McCoy has taken a new turn. The county treasurer has now brought suit to collect from three capitalists several thousand dollars, which plaintiff claims was discovered by the tax ferret and "fraudulently concealed" prior to that time. Thus the suits are now working both ways. And this in spite of the fact that Iowa has a law making the tax ferret illegal.

New Law Troublesome

The new law on moneys and credits enacted by the last legislature is causing some little annoyance to the assessors who have started out in Iowa on their biennial roundup. Under the old law the assessor took 25 per cent of the total as assessable value, and now money is taxed on a flat rate. The old law provided for 90 mill tax on a fourth valuation of 2.3 per cent, while now it is $5 per $1,000, or one-half of 1 per cent. This is a big reduction, and it was enacted by the legislature because it was discovered that many people were leaving Iowa on account of what they considered an excessive tax along this line.

Bank Meetings Held in Des Moines

The bank meetings have been held in Des Moines this week. The nationals met Tuesday, and most of the savings banks met the following day. There were few changes. The Central State, which met last week, voted to increase its surplus from $40,000 to $118,000. A semiannual 5 per cent dividend was declared. The Iowa Trust and Savings also met last week, paid its usual dividend and set aside a 10 per cent surplus. Old officers and directors were re-elected in both cases.

Death of Capt. Warren

Capt. John H. Warren, pioneer banker at Oskaloosa, died suddenly, December 30th, while seated at a table telling anecdotes to Overly, N. D.—The First National Bank here has changed from a national to a state bank, and will be known as the Farmers and Merchants Bank.

some friends, who had gathered to help him celebrate his eightieth birthday. Capt Warren was one of the best known of Iowa financiers, and was active in business affairs some years ago. He had been in excellent health apparently a few moments prior to his sudden illness.

Will Serve Another Term

George L. Dobson, county treasurer of Polk county, has announced his candidacy for another term. Mr. Dobson claims to have fathered the bill, which forces Iowa public officials to place the public money at interest. He avers in his announcement for another term that Polk county is now getting $8,000 interest annually from the county funds that it never got before he became treasurer. Mr. Dobson has also been an active advocate of a law abolishing the office of school treasurer and turning the duties over to the county treasurer.

Secretary Hall Issues Letters of Warning

Secretary P. W. Hall of the Iowa Bankers Association has issued a letter warning Iowa bankers against the following: A. H. Woods, alias H. Clark, aged 35, who has been drawing drafts on "Southern Land and Investment Company of St. Louis," securing endorsements of hotel keepers; Jos. Fowler, aged 48, all around crook and forger; E. B. Roan, alias F. L. Fullen, aged 25, dangerous forger; L. M. Moss, claims to be printer. Unknown man, aged 50, with one eye and crippled in left arm.

Burglary Insurance

Along with the warning, Secretary Hall has issued a statement on protective work in which he urges the members of the association to write burglary insurance and fidelity bonds through the association so as to obtain funds for the protective work of the order. Another statement explains the universal numerical system adopted and recommended by the members of the association at the Mason City convention last summer.

Atlantic National Will Soon Have New Building

The fine new building of the Atlantic National is nearing completion, and will shortly be occupied. The structure will be a distinct credit to itself and to Atlantic. It is built of hardened building blocks and terra cotta, one story in height, with high ceiling and row of high windows that give it plenty of light. The interior finish is mahogany with birch for basic wood, tile floors, modern counters, and private rooms for the convenience of officials and patrons.

Wealth per Capita

Secretary Bolton of the Greater Des Moines committee has been doing some figuring on per capita wealth of Iowa. He places it at about $4,200. The farm land increase as shown by this figure has been about 103 per cent in the past ten years. He figures that city and town property has increased at the same ratio. Hence his per capita valuation of over $4,000.

Mechanics Savings To Have New Building

Gilger E. MacKinnon, president of the Mechanics Savings, Des Moines, is preparing to start work on the new bank building May 1st. Plans are now being drawn and the structure will be strictly for business purposes.

Cook Resigns

S. B. Cook, well known for years as the cashier of the Muscatine State, has resigned. B. S. Alnutt has been elected his successor. Mr. Alnutt came to Muscatine from Excelsior Springs, Mo., in August, 1910, to be assistant cashier. Mr. Cook has been connected with the Cook-Musser Co. since it was first organized, forty years ago. He proposes to retire and rest.

Banking Notes

The Home Savings, Des Moines, has filed suit in district court to mandamus the city council into paying the institution tax assessed by the city on $32,675 in 1902. The assessment has been before the highest courts in the country and the bank was declared winner. It now wants the fruits of its victory.

Frank Cook, president of the First National at Marengo, is recovering from a severe attack of typhoid fever.

Fort Dodge newspapers state that the two local savings banks have paid out in interest in 1911 over $18,000, which is much in excess of the amount paid on savings accounts for the preceding year.

Capitalists from Garner and Titonka have organized a new bank at Woden. The capital stock will be $15,000. The institution will erect a new $4,000 bank building this next summer. A. C. Ripley of Garner, well known member of the Iowa legislature, will be president; James Hansen will be vice-president, and J. J. Cosgrove, cashier.

Roy Alber, son of Fred Alber of the Iowa banking department, was robbed by two men who stopped a team of horses he was driving, after taking a party bob sleigh riding. The young man was knocked unconscious, and was found several hours later by passersby. His pockets were turned inside out, but he was not deprived of a great amount of money. It was several days before he was able to return to duty at the state house.

G. D. Ellyson, formerly president of the Commercial Savings, who has been at Colorado Springs for his health, returned to Des Moines last week, for two weeks before starting to Hot Springs and St. Augustine.

The postoffice savings bank at Alton has been having hard luck. It had one depositor for several weeks, but last week he withdrew his deposit and at this writing, it hasn't any.

T. C. Lundy has been elected cashier of the Peoples Savings at Bayard, succeeding W. H. Strauser.

George Freeman has been elected assistant cashier of the First National of Emmetsburg to succeed Leo Streater.

Cashier Harry Blackburn, Iowa National, who has been laid up with a broken leg following an automobile accident, has been able to be at the bank a portion of the time the past few days.

A fourth bank is to be started at Manchester. It will be capitalized at $50,000. It will be known as the "Farmers and Merchants State." Officers will be announced later.

Arthur Reynolds, president of the Des Moines National has gone with his family to Pasadena, Cal., to spend the remainder of the winter.

J. H. Lowry has disposed of his interests in the Pomeroy State.

The Clarinda National at Clarinda has offered a cash prize for Page county boys who will grow alfalfa. The institution wishes to get this crop started in Iowa.

The First National of Corydon has applied for permission to organize. The capital stock is given at $175,000. Organizers are C. W. Steele, L. Kimple, C. L. Clark, F. R. Fry, and F. B. Fry.

By JOHN J. BIDDISON.

Six banks elected officers in Sioux City Tuesday, and only three minor changes all told were made. Craig Van Dyke was elected to the directorship in the Live Stock National vacated by the resignation and removal of Walter P. Dickey, formerly cashier. Frank B. Buckwalter took the place on the board of the First National vacated by the death of H. A. Jandt, and Philip Forsberg was elected to take the place of Herman Galinsky, who resigned from the board of the American Savings. A rumor that of course is baseless has it that there would have been no election to fill the First National vacancy but for the fact that the board as constituted number the unlucky thirteen. All officers and directors except those noted were re-elected. The banks to hold annual meetings were the First National, Security National, Northwestern National, Live Stock National, American Savings and Woodbury County Savings.

Failed to Rob Bank

A bit of "comedy yegg" work that has been the cause of not a little amusement to those who knew of it was uncovered this week by the confession of Art Shoan, a neighboring Nebraska farmer, that he was a party to the three burglaries of the South Sioux City Bank last summer, all of which were unsuccessful. He has been held to the grand jury, as has also Bill Cornwall, who, maintaining silence and confessing innocence, is considered to be the real "bad man" of the pair. According to Shoan, the first borrowed a crowbar, then a team of horses and then a wagon and, after capturing a barking little toy dog that threatened to expose them to the sleeping town constable, undertook to carry off the bank safe and dump it in a convenient hiding place, expecting it to open of its own accord by "time lock" in the morning. Their plans fell through because their operations with the crowbar only served to tip over the safe into such a position that they could not get it into the wagon they had waiting in front. They became frightened and "beat it." They had made two previous entrances of the banking room but never got away with more than a few pennies.

Banking News Notes

The Meade County Bank, of Sturgis, S. D., has closed its doors and suspended payment. Following an investigation, State Examiner Wingfield gave out a statement that the net cash assets amount to $855,000, the liabilities to $791,000 and the net cash balance $64,000. He was of the opinion that depositors would be paid in full.

A sequel to the suspension of the Meade County Bank is the incorporation of a new institution known as the American Exchange Bank; capital, $25,000. The incorporators are Joseph Meyer, Henry S. Burch and Jas. McNenny. E. Franklin, president of the First National of Deadwood, S. D., is authority for the statement that he, together with New York, Chicago, St. Paul and Sioux City associates, will open a bank in Sturgis next month. It also will be capitalized at $25,000.

The Iowa Savings Bank, of Estherville, Ia., has elected the following officers at its annual meeting: F. W. Converse, president; Mack J. Groves, vice-president; W. W. Waker, cashier; V. A. Combs, assistant cashier. F. F. Hartung resigned as vice-president on account of moving West. The bank declared a 10 per cent dividend.

STATE DEPOSITS IN BANKS

California has $8,000,000 outstanding in 185 banks in the state, according to State Treasurer Roberts, and this money is drawing at the rate of 2 per cent per annum under the law which permits the state treasurer to loan state funds which lie in certain sinking funds to banks at that interest when secured by sufficient bonds or other good securities. This is the largest amount ever loaned during one year in the history of the state.

UNION TRUST COMPANY ELECTION

At the meeting of the board of trustees of the Union Trust Company of New York, held last week, Henry M. Popham, who, since 1903, has been assistant secretary of the company, was promoted to the office of secretary, succeeding John V. B. Thayer. Mr. Thayer, who has, heretofore, been second vice-president and secretary, will continue to occupy the position of vice-president.

the law requires an unreasonable and an impossible thing. It is unreasonable to attempt to take as a tax so large a part of the income; it is impossible to tax successfully at high rates that which is so easily concealed as are cash, credits and securities.

The International Tax Association, whose membership is composed of tax officials, economists and private citizens from all parts of the country, and which holds each year a conference participated in by 150 or more of these persons, appointed a committee at its meeting in 1909 to investigate and report a year later as to the effectiveness of the general property tax. This committee was composed of Judge Oscar Leser of the appeal tax court of Baltimore, Professor E. R. A. Seligman of Columbia University, James C. Forman, city assessor of Toronto, Nils P. Haugen of the Wisconsin tax commission, and Frederick N. Judson, chairman of the special tax commission (1906) of Missouri. The report of this very able committee was made to the international tax conference at Milwaukee in September, 1910, and the conference in its action upon the report adopted the following resolutions:

1. Whereas, A committee was appointed under a resolution adopted at the Louisville conference to inquire into the causes of the failure of the general property tax,

Resolved, That the conference indorses the conclusions of the said committee and finds that the general property tax, under the higher rates of taxation caused by the increase of public expenditures in the United States, has broken down in so far as it applies to personal property; and

Resolved, That this conference finds that the taxation of personal property has not been more successful under strict administration than under lax; that states which have modified or abandoned the general property tax show no intention of returning to it; and that in states where the general property tax is required by constitutional provisions, there is a growing demand for the repeal of such provisions; and

Resolved, That the failure of the general property tax, in its application to personal property, is due to the inherent defects of its theory; that even reasonably fair and effective administration is unattainable; and that attempts to strengthen such administration simply accentuate the inequalities and unjust operation of the system.

These conclusions thus put on record cannot fairly be taken to be the conclusions of the uninformed nor of those whose desire is to assist in tax dodging. They ought rather to carry conviction as being the judgment of intelligent and single-minded students of taxation who are searching for sound principles and administrative possibilities.

BIG NICARAGUA BANK CHARTERED

Hartford, Conn.—The National Bank of Nicaragua, incorporated, has filed a certificate of incorporation with the secretary of state. By the provisions of the certificate the company has the right to be and to act as the fiscal and disbursing agent of the republic of Nicaragua and to be the depository of the government funds of the republic to put into effect and maintain a plan for a currency system and to coin money. The capital stock authorized is $5,000,000 and the incorporators are James Brown and Frederick Strauss of New York and Thatcher M. Brown of Locust, N. J. The institution will not have the power to transact any banking business in Connecticut.

The new bank at Halliday, N. D., expects to open for business soon.

HOUGHTON-MIFFLIN ANNOUNCEMENTS, 1912

The name of Marks seems to be a talisman of success for Americans entering British prize-play competitions, judging from the results of the last two years. The famous Stratford Competition for a prize of $1,500 was awarded to "The Piper," written by Mrs. Lionel Marks, writing under her maiden name of Josephine Preston Peabody. Now in the Welsh prize-play competition, instituted by Lord Howard de Walden, another American, Miss Jeannette Marks, has come out with honors. For her two one-act Welsh plays, "The Cuckoo" and "A Welsh Honeymoon," she was awarded a prize of $100. Miss Marks has made Wales her own through her two volumes of Welsh stories entitled, "The End of a Song" and "Through Welsh Doorways," which have met with a very favorable reception.

Enos A. Mills, of Estes Park, Colorado, author of "The Spell of the Rockies" and "Wild Life on the Rockies," will speak on "National Parks" before the Appalachian Mountain Club of Boston on January 3d.

Professor Hiram Bingham, whose previous explorations in South America were described in his recently published book, "Across South America," returned last week from his latest trip as the head of the Yale Peruvian Expedition. He discovered Pre-Inca palaces of beautifully cut white granite which he believes no white man has seen since the days of Pizarro. These palaces or temples were three-windowed, and the stones carved in Egyptian style. On October 14th, Professor Bingham succeeded in reaching the summit of Corupuna, the second highest mountain in South America, which as far as he knows, had never been climbed before.

An English edition of A. Maurice Low's "The American People: A Study in National Psychology," the second volume of which Houghton-Mifflin Company brought out a few weeks ago, will be issued early in January by T. Fisher Unwin of London. A German edition will be issued by Morawe & Scheffelt, of Berlin, as soon as the necessary translation can be made.

The practical annexation by Russia last week of the vast province of Mongolia lends a fresh interest to the recent book by Lindon Bates, Jr., on "The Russian Road to China." Mr. Bates gives an interesting account of a journey across Mongolia, following the old Post-Road, and fully describes Urga, the Holy City of Mongolia, the "City of the Reborn God." He found that Mongolia was already much more Russian than Chinese, and foresaw that it would be only a short time before it would actually become a part of Russia. This would make possible the Trans-Mongolia Railroad along the old trade-route, opening to the plainsmen of Central Asia a prospect of civilization and advance, and giving to the world the best of the great Asian trade-routes. "For America," Mr. Bates believes, "the road will open a commercial highway into the very heart of a new and expanding empire. American rails may carry American cars—those ever-moving shuttles which weave the woof of trade. American woolens and felts may protect the Siberians against their Arctic cold. American machinery mine and refine their gold. New England cottons, utilizing the Panama Canal, may clothe the myriad coolies of interior China. Here is the mail-route of ten days from Paris to Peking, against the thirty-five days needed by the fastest ships. Here is the quickest passenger-route from London to Yokohama. All these potentialities lie as the fallow heritage of the Urga Road, if beyond Kalgan it is given its avenues to China and the sea. It is civilization that must profit when the equilibrium of the East is restored, and over the old Urga Road China is relinked to the West by the trains of the great Asian Railway.

Ian Hay's latest novel, "A Safety Match," is already in its sixth thousand in this country, and in England ten thousand copies have been necessary to fill the demand.

REINHARD RESIGNS FROM SPARTA (WIS.) BANK

At the annual meeting of the stockholders of the Monroe County Bank of Sparta, Wis., J. P. R. Reinhard presented his resignation as cashier of that institution, to become effective the latter part of this month. Mr. Reinhard will leave soon for Tomah, where he will accept the position of cashier in the Warrens Bank, at a greatly increased salary, and will also become a stockholder in that institution. Mr. Reinhard came to Sparta about five years ago, and during his residence here he and his estimable family have acquired a circle of friends who will sincerely regret their departure.

Books on Banking, Finance and Economics

Credit. By J. LAWRENCE LAUGHLIN, of the Department of Political Economy, University of Chicago. Postpaid, 53c.

The nature of credit and its effect on prices have long been a subject of disagreement among economists. Its basis is commonly assumed to be money or bank reserves.

Essentials of Business Law. By FRANCIS M. BURDICK, LL. D., Professor of Law in Columbia University. 12mo. Postpaid, $1.50.

This book shows how the rules of law governing the commonest business transactions have been developed, and it tells what they are to-day. Technical law terms have been discarded as far as possible, and when they are used they are so explained and illustrated as to be easily understood. The principles of law are simplified and expressed in clear, lucid everyday speech.

Foreign Exchange. Tables converting foreign money into United States money, and United States money into foreign money at all commercial rates of exchange used in financial transactions between the United States and foreign countries. All about foreign exchange, including various forms of foreign commercial paper and terms, abbreviations, etc. For banks, bankers, steamship agents, importers, exporters and manufacturers. Cloth, $5.00.

Government Regulation of Railway Rates. By HUGO R. MEYER. A Professor of Political Economy in the University of Chicago. Postpaid, $1.60 net.

Investment Bonds. By F. LOWNHAUPT. Postpaid, $1.90. Prospective investors who wish to make advantageous use of their money will do well to take notice of this volume. The author does not theorize, but tells only plain facts of the relation of the bond to its issuing corporation, and of the general investment aspect of the instrument.

Money and Credit. By WILBUR ALDRICH. Postpaid, $1.37. This volume contains much valuable information and much sound discussion on money and credit.

The Banking and Currency Problems in the United States. By VICTOR MORAWETZ. The author takes up the problem of the national monetary commission, appointed by congress, and discusses the means of providing a permanent safe-guard against money stringencies and panics. Postpaid, $1.10.

The Principles of Money and Banking. By CHARLES A. CONANT. It is a new and complete exposition of its subject. Two volumes. Postpaid, $4.25.

The Pitfalls of Speculation. By THOMAS GIBSON. Postpaid, $1.20.

A book dealing exclusively with marginal speculation, and analyzing in a clear and simple manner the causes of failure in speculation, with a suggestion as to the remedies.

The Investors' Catechism. By M. M. REYNOLDS. Cloth, by mail, $1.10.

"Investors' Catechism." Contains all that is essential for the beginner to know, and opens the way for a thorough study of the whole subject of investment. The author has for the sake of clearness and simplicity adopted a catechetical style which is somewhat novel in this sort of literature.

The above books are the best of their kind, and will be promptly forwarded upon receipt of price.

whether buying or selling, the bond business as now conducted is not done with listed bonds. Most of the listed issues are sold with a promise that "Application will be made to list on some exchange." The real market is among the bond houses, and the older and larger the house, the more likely is the investor, in buying from such houses, to buy a bond that is not only good but whose market will thereafter be protected.

In the classification of bonds, it may be said that for all practical purposes, the classification or name is established by business use. For instance, as bonds are bought above or below par, they are premium or discount bonds; likewise government issues sold at home or abroad are internal or external loans. Even the very color can give us the blue bonds or brown bonds of South Carolina.

The four general and accepted schemes of classification are:

1.—According to the character of the issuing corporation.

2.—According to the character of the security of the bonds.

3.—According to the function or purpose of the issue.

4.—According to the conditions attending payment of principal and interest.

The full title of almost every bond is derived from some or all of these four, and the possible number of classes and titles of bonds is limited only by the possible combinations of names from these four schemes of classification.

The Bond Business

I think I can say that the public which does not buy bonds has but little idea of the importance and value to the community of the bond business. In round numbers, $1,500,000,000 of American bonds are marketed every year; hence the bond business is of vast importance to the economic life of the country. As our wealth increases, the bond business increases, and it is well that our largest and strongest banking houses are prominent in this work. It brings a greater stability and assurance to every investor and aids growth of business by obtaining capital for the creation of new enterprises, or enlarging old ones in a way that twenty years ago could not have been done. By their ultra conservatism they are establishing themselves in public confidence, broadening the market and bringing together with the greatest expedition the capital necessary for municipal and industrial development.

There is a radical difference, also, between bond dealers to-day and those of twenty years ago in the matter of repurchasing securities of clients to whom they have sold them. Small houses, in some cases, still hold to the idea that a sale is a sale and that the responsibility of the house ceases upon delivery and the receipt of payment. This position is logical and just, but competition steps in to the benefit of the investor until many leading houses now say, "We make no promises, but, except in times of panic, we shall be glad to repurchase at a fair market price, the securities we have sold."

But the protective function of the bond house is most important in respect to the moral responsibility. In some instances losses have been averted or made good—interest which has been suspended is paid, while every reputable bond house may be called upon to take the active leadership in upholding the mortgage rights or other claims of the bondholders. With the organizations now handling this form of credit, the creditor class cannot help but be the gainer, if they deal with those houses having a strong personality,—strong convictions on investment matters and the capital and equipment to back them up.

I am not going to impose upon you longer, but wish to thank you for having me come before you this evening.

Close of Meeting

President Smale then called for a rising vote of thanks, to which all present responded with applause. Walter J. Johnson, vice-president of the chapter, was next called upon to speak, and accordingly delivered a lecture on the "Collection Teller and his Duties."

The amount of postal savings bonds applied for by depositors in Iowa was $8,250.

WEST VIRGINIA BANKS

Showing a gain in deposits in state banks for the year 1911 over the year 1910 of $3,632,361.27. State Commissioner of Banking Samuel V. Matthews has compiled a comparative aggregate bank statement of the two years past. The statements of November 10, 1910, are compared with those of December 5, 1911. On the latter date there were 189 state banks, a net increase of 10. There are nearly 100 national banks in the state, so that it is believed the total increase in deposits will reach about $5,000,000.

Fourteen new state banks began business during the past year, while two were changed to national banks. There were two failures, the Fidelity Banking and Trust Company, of Bluefield, and the Ritchie County Bank of Harrisville. The Ritchie County Bank has arranged to pay all its claims, and the final settlement will be completed within a few days. The Fidelity is rather heavily involved and it is doubtful if it will settle in full.

The comparative statement shows total assets in 1911 of $85,198,056.51, as compared with $79,845,007.18 in 1910, an increase of $5,353,049.33. Loans and discounts show a total of nearly $60,000,000, an increase of $4,166,268.63. Lawful money reserve is over $3,000,000. Total capital stock paid in reaches nearly $11,400,000, while the surplus is nearly $6,000,000. Savings deposits are nearly $11,500,000, an increase of $1,301,619.96.

Statistics for the national banks in the state have not yet been compiled.

A BANK CASHIER AT 24

Four years ago George J. Gilman was catching for the Kansas City, Kan., high school baseball team. Last week he was appointed cashier of the Kansas State Bank in Kansas City, Kan. He is twenty-four years old and has been a director of the bank for more than a year.

Authority has been granted for the organization of the Commercial National Bank of El Paso, Texas. It will have a capital stock of $100,000 and officers and directors will be elected January 9th.

come headquarters for the public service corporations of this city, and must ever remain one of the notable buildings of the city.

CHICAGO, in the death of R. T. Crane, has lost one of her most distinguished citizens. Mr. Crane was a pioneer, and one of the largest employers of labor in the West. He early became a convert to the profit-sharing doctrine, and that form of employment is in full operation in all of the plants over which Mr. Crane had control. If he had left no other, this will be a business monument to his memory.

INTERNATIONAL HARVESTER COMPANY has found it expedient to float a three-year loan at 5 per cent, for twenty millions of dollars. The general public continues to believe that much of the Harvester Company's anxiety was caused by the unfortunate adventure of Mr. Funk with Mr. Kohlsaat, in which the two stirred up a nasty political row in Illinois politics. The end is not yet in sight.

THERE is something about THE CHICAGO BANKER that fascinates. For several years I have been studying the paper and trying to extract that essence of fascination and analyze it, so far unsuccessfully unless it is that it is pure Wilkinsonism."—Coast Banker. CASHIER.

miles on an up-keep expense of $1.20. The second prize car ran 25,290 miles with no expense; and thus it ran down the line until James W. Stevens, president of the Illinois Life Insurance Company, of this city, whose car ran 18,960 miles with no expense, was reached. His chauffeur received a $100 prize. Mr. Stevens is one of the largest bank stock owners in the city of Chicago.

E. ST. ELMO LEWIS, of Detroit, has had his New Orleans address on "The Saving Idea and the People" printed in pamphlet form for distribution. He has been highly complimented by numerous requests for it. Send your letter in care of the Burroughs Adding Machine Co.

LOUIS H. SCHROEDER, manager of the bond department of the Western Trust and Savings, has notified all of his customers that the bond department will be continued under the new ownership at the Central Trust Company Bank. Mr. Schroeder has built up quite a fine business, which, under the new and stronger auspices, ought to be increased materially.

GROUP 7 of the Illinois Bankers, of which Irving Shuman is chairman, will hold its annual meeting this year at Sullivan, the date to be either the 14th or 22d of February. It is the intention to make this a sort of a farmer-banker meeting, and the attendance ought to be quite large.

C. A. MORGAN (or his beautiful secretary), head of the New Orleans Clearing House Association, has written to W. G. Edens, of this city, stating: "As your photograph appears on page 16 of THE CHICAGO BANKER of the 23d, it occurred to me that the editor of that journal would like to be advised through you that the total clearings of the New Orleans Clearing House Association from January 2d to December 27th, were $1,001,933,012.68."

THE billion dollar mark has been reached but once previously in the history of New Orleans, and that was in 1906, showing that without any especial expansion business has increased in that city. Bankers who visited the clearing house rooms during the sessions of the convention in New Orleans will have very pleasant recollections of Mr. Morgan's assistant manager. Thus far W. G. is the only real hit that was scored.

EITHER M. T. Herrick of Cleveland has been misquoted or he has very different information from that held by other bankers interested in the "back to the soil" movements. Mr. Herrick is quoted as saying that "the farmers are harassed over getting loans, and when they do get them, they are at high rates and under harsh provisions." B. F. Harris, who heads the farm movement in Illinois, has sent out an open letter touching upon this subject, expressing the belief that Mr. Herrick has been misquoted.

IT is the general belief among western bankers that the farmer is a very desirable client, and that he can borrow money easier than any other citizen of like actual responsibility. It is to be deplored that Mr. Herrick's activity has taken a direction which is inclined to create a misunderstanding in this important field.

D. H. (DAVE) McKEE, vice-president of the German Savings at Davenport, in sending out his best wishes to his friends and neighbors, enclosed a statement of his bank. It shows deposits of over ten millions, which is going some even for a prosperous little city in the prosperous state of Iowa.

FARMERS AND MECHANICS NATIONAL of Philadelphia sent out this year a very beautiful remembrance card, upon which attention is called to the fact that the Farmers and Mechanics National is one hundred and five years old this year and still is feeling strong and healthy. The officers of the Farmers and Mechanics enjoy a very wide acquaintance in the West, and never fail to remember their friends upon such occasions.

G. H. MUELLER, the new vice-president of the Fletcher-American, down at Indianapolis, has been in this city for several days making fifteen-minute talks to all of his many friends whom he could find at work. The Fletcher-American has sixteen millions in deposits, and is doing all that it can to corner the country balance business in Indiana.

R. S. HECHT, a former junior banker of this city, now is trust officer of the Hibernia at New Orleans. The Hibernia gets out one of the handsomest bond circulars to be found on any of the tables. It is full of accurate descriptions of first-class securities, and the prices are about as usual.

THE Oklahoma Stockyards National has closed a very prosperous year with the profits running something like $75,000. This has been done on a capital of $250,000, and might be considered for any other locality, a very remarkable showing. In fifteen months this bank has loaned something like four millions to cattle men of Oklahoma and Texas without the loss of one dollar.

THIS bank began business at the new packing plant in Oklahoma City on October 1, 1910. T. P. Martin, Jr., is the president; E. F. Bisby is vice-president and E. J. Litteer, senior assistant cashier. This bank has made this great success without once invading the regular banking field of Oklahoma City or of the state. It simply attends to the business which it was created to care for, and which it must thoroughly understand.

L. E. A. MORGAN, cashier of the German National at Beloit, has remembered this department with a very handsome calendar.

SECURITY SAVINGS at Cedar Rapids has deposits of $1,804,343.83. This prosperous institution pays 4 per cent on savings, compounded twice a year. E. R. Scott is the president; J. R. Amidon and C. D. VanVechten are the vice-presidents; Frank Filip is the cashier.

A CHICAGO scalper in theatre tickets has gone into bankruptcy. As soon as the profits began to fall below $300 per day, this enterprising gentleman "quit." Rumor has it that he also "stung" a number of the downtown theatres, for which no one will be very sorry. Scalpers in theatrical tickets are not popular favorites.

NOTHING has been done as yet about appointing a committee to look after new banking legislation in the state by the Illinois Bankers Association. At the Springfield convention the recommendation of the committee on resolutions decided that we should have a separate banking department at Springfield. A great many bankers feel that something should be done to put banking under better supervision and control throughout the state. Rumor has it that the executive council at its January meeting will take up the subject and decide what should be done.

IT is not the intention of anyone who has expressed himself to try to "legislate the private bankers out of business," but on the contrary, the expectation is that they could be legislated into much new and more profitable business, just as they have been in Wisconsin, Indiana, Michigan, Minnesota and other states.

WE have received from down state information that J. D. Phillips, the esteemed vice-president of the Illinois Bankers Association, has not given up his activity in church and Sunday school work. Mr. Phillips is a very active man. He is a leading farmer and leading banker, a politician of note and a church worker, all combined with a species of good fellowship that makes him welcome wherever he goes.

WHEN L. E. Stevens began to be president of the Century Savings at Des Moines, he was the acting president of the Iowa Bankers Association. He had friends in every part of the state. To these he wrote letters, asking them to try to influence any friends they had in Des Moines to open an account in his bank. That he was successful beyond the ordinary is shown by the fact that under his management the Century Savings, which is not a new bank, has increased its deposits more than 70 per cent. If the plan adopted by Mr. Stevens is to be judged by results, it was a hit.

SEATTLE NATIONAL leads in clearings, all the other sixteen banks in that city for 1911. The figures have been compiled by E. W. Brownell, manager of the clearing house, and show a total volume of exchanges of five hundred and fifty-three millions. Of this amount the Seattle National contributed one hundred and thirty-nine millions, its next nearest competitor being just above one hundred millions. Other statistics contributed by Mr. Brownell show that the banking year in Seattle was very prosperous.

SEATTLE AD. CLUB has been holding a series of "optimism" dinners in Seattle, to which are invited the leading business and professional men of the city. It is expected that under the auspices of these active spirits the city of Seattle will take on a new boom period.

"CHICAGO DAILY NEWS" is authority for the statement that among the 750 democrats who attended the Jackson Day banquet at Washington City, Governor Woodrow Wilson of New Jersey easily was the central figure. The assemblage included all of the prominent democratic candidates for president, and all of those who have been on the presidential ticket within recent years. The victory of Baltimore over other competing cities for the honor of holding the next democratic convention also was considered a victory for Wilson.

WHEN Mr. Reynolds had concluded his world record in bank consolidations, some of the more conservative financiers shook their heads gravely at the two large banking and office building properties thereby brought into one control. It did seem like a huge undertaking, but the problem, if ever it was one, has solved itself.

A MERICAN TRUST building was disposed of, at quite a handsome profit, to the Fort Dearborn interests, and this week the Commercial National building was disposed of to the Edison Electric Company at a profit of 30 per cent to the stockholders. All of this goes to show that good buildings in good locations in Chicago keep pace with the growth of the city and have a ready sale value such as property in other cities rarely attains.

CONTINENTAL AND COMMERCIAL banks will continue to occupy the Commercial National building for two years, or until their new building covering an entire block on LaSalle Street has been constructed. After that the Commercial National will be—

William B. Joyce

The distinguished and active president of the National Surety Company, William B. Joyce, has at last succeeded in securing control of the Empire State Surety Company. Mr. Joyce will name six of the new directors in February, and immediate changes in the official staff of the Empire will be announced. At present it has a capital of $500,000, but this will be enlarged at once, if necessary. The Empire was organized in 1901; W. M. Tomlins has been its president since 1905. Recently it has restricted itself to fidelity, surety, and burglary business, other lines not having been profitable. While the charter of the Empire permits a general surety business to be conducted, there is no immediate prospect of a change in the policy of the company.

EXECUTIVE COUNCIL MEETING CALLED

Chairman S. B. Montgomery of Quincy has called the mid-year meeting of the executive council of the Illinois Bankers Association to meet in Chicago on January 24th. The conference will take place in the English room of the Blackstone Hotel at 2:30 P. M. It is expected that the meeting will last through the remainder of the afternoon. Immediately after the adjournment dinner will be served in the ball room of the same hotel at 6:30 P. M. Chairman Montgomery was careful to give notice that invitations to the dinner are extended to all of the officials of the association, including the committeemen, and that the function will be informal.

Among the important matters to be brought up is one to be proposed by President B. F. Harris of Champaign. He expects to lay before the council an important resolution that was passed at the recent Springfield state convention. This resolution calls for the appointment of a committee to draft a bill giving Illinois a separate and complete banking department, such as is enjoyed by nearly all the other states of the Union. The many advantages of a separate banking department are really too well known to require mention. The one objection urged against the passing of such a bill is that brought up by the private bankers of the state, who fear that any legislation proposed may be amended in such a way as to put their banks under state supervision and inspection. To them any talk of bank legislation is worse than a smallpox scare. They appear even to be afraid to discuss the matter openly. It was not the intention of the committee on resolutions, nor is it the intention of the organized bankers of the state, to take advantage of the situation. All they want is a well organized, properly constituted state banking department, with such powers and authority as have been delegated to similar departments in Missouri, Michigan, Indiana, Minnesota, Pennsylvania, New York, and other states too numerous to mention.

W. E. Stone, vice-president and cashier of the First National of Peoria, was in the city, and left for Panama with the Illinois manufacturers.

Two of the Newest Vice-Presidents

G. B. Caldwell (to the right) was an Indiana banker until Chicago discovered him. He is an expert bond man and is in full charge of the bond interests of the allied Continental and Commercial Bank and Trust Companies. These interests will still be his chief care, and his modest title as "Bond Manager" will survive even in face of the more pretentious "Vice-President." To any unacquainted with Messrs. Caldwell and Schroeder, two new potential friends are in waiting—"Come in!"

W. G. Schroeder (to the left) has been for years an important member of the Continental, and of the Continental and Commercial National forces. He is a three-star transit man, and was cashier of the Continental until laid up by a serious railroad accident. Sheer pluck pulled him through and he "came back" as secretary of the present monster bank. Now he is vice-president and entitled to sit among the elect, where really he belongs.

Planning for Regular Examinations

Comptroller Murray has sent out a new order fixing regular periods for the examination of national banks. He has abolished what has been known as a list of banks overdue for examination, and hereafter extra help will be employed, so that the examination of banks will not be delayed. This will bring the business of the office up to date, and make it considerably more regular than it has been in the past.

CHICAGO MONEY MARKET

Following is a summary of money market conditions, by Vice-President August Blum, of the First National: "The principal feature in the banking position at the present time is the rise in deposits, particularly from country banks. On the other hand, there is a liberal demand for banking accommodations and increased rates for commercial paper over those hitherto obtained. Banks have been liberal buyers around 4 per cent. The general outlook is encouraging. Profits as compared with the same period last year show a handsome increase."

John V. Farwell

Chicago's distinguished merchant, John V. Farwell, has given out an interview in New York, in which he has pointed out from a business man's standpoint the best features of the banking reform bill prepared by the National Monetary Commission. He believes that the passage of this bill would stimulate business at once. He has full confidence in the integrity and fidelity with which the commission went about the preparation of the bill, and believes that they have absolutely eliminated anything like corporate or individual control of the association. The National Citizens League, of which Mr. Farwell is president, has not endorsed the Monetary Commission bill, but is in favor of it, or a bill something like it, as a measure of relief to present conditions.

THE new trust company law in Nebraska has permitted the Lincoln Safe Deposit and Trust Company of that city to incorporate as two separate organizations. There will be the Lincoln Safe Deposit Company and the Lincoln Trust Company, the latter a new organization, which will act as administrator, executor, receiver, trustee, etc., under the new trust company law.

THE officers of the trust company will be W. E. Barkley, Jr., president; W. A. Selleck, and Don L. Love, vice-presidents; Nelson C. Brock, treasurer; and on the board of directors will be C. C. Quiggle and other strong local men. The capital of the trust company is $50,000, and that of the safe deposit company $25,000.

C. C. WILLIS has retired as president of the Merchants National at Vicksburg, and will act as chairman of the board of directors. W. S. Jones, who was cashier for a number of years, and in recent times vice-president, was elected to the vacancy. The new vice-president is T. W. McCoy, and H. D. Priestley is cashier. The bank has a capital of $100,000; surplus and undivided profits $325,000.

MR. JONES also was elected president of the Peoples Savings Bank and Loan Company, an allied institution. W. H. Fitz-Hugh is vice-president of the loan company, and R. P. Jones, secretary. This is the oldest savings bank in the state. It has a capital of $50,000, with a surplus and undivided profits of $125,000. It has paid dividends ever since its organization and carries deposits of three quarters of a million.

MILLIKEN NATIONAL of Decatur, at its annual election, added two new officers to the staff. They are J. P. Gorin, second vice-president, and W. A. Hammer, second assistant cashier. President O. B. Gorin and Vice-President J. M. Brownback, along with Cashier S. E. Walker, were all re-elected.

THINGS have been so prosperous down at Quincy that even the old, conservative State Savings has decided to increase its capital stock beyond its half-million. For some time the surplus has amounted to almost as much as the capital and the deposits are five and a quarter millions, putting the State Savings almost in a class by itself.

THIS big Quincy bank carries over two millions in farm mortgages, and has more than one million dollars of country bank deposits, which it has found to be a very paying department. President E. J. Parker is one of the best-known bankers in the whole country, and S. B. Montgomery, one of the vice-presidents, is chairman of the executive council of the Illinois Bankers Association. F. W. Crane, the cashier, is receiving a great deal of credit for much of the recent growth of this fine bank. The founders of the State Savings were amongst the first to induce investments of outside capital to be made in and around Quincy. All of these investments proved to be safe and profitable and paved the way, no doubt, for the present great prosperity of the bank. Deposits are held by it from almost every state between California and Maine, and the present increase in capital is intended to prepare the way for increased usefulness in the future.

A LONG with its annual statement, President D. R. Forgan of the National City Bank sent out this year a comparative statement of business done each year during its existence. The deposit figures started with February 5, 1907, which was opening day of the new bank, and closed with December 31, 1911. The increase has been from two millions to nearly twenty-eight millions. The net profits have been $817,000, showing an average annual return on capital of 10½ per cent. President Forgan's statement gives in detail what has been done with the earnings.

AN examination of the figures for the year 1911 shows that the National City is earning 12 per cent on its average capital, which ought to be mighty satisfactory to the stockholders considering the low going rates for money. Quite a handsome business has been built up by the bond department of the National City, which has helped swell the earnings.

DON'T forget when you have any mortgage loan business in and around Kansas City to be attended to that the Chesney of the Hutt & Chesney Mortgage Loan Company is your old friend Snelson Chesney, formerly president of the National Stockvards Bank. His firm is up-to-the-minute and has ample capital and experience to do anything that ought to be done in the loan line.

THE Yale Club of Chicago seems to corroborate some of the statements of the late R. T. Crane, who believed that we are having too many college graduates turned loose on the country. The club has established an employment bureau through which it proposes to furnish men with college training to any who may want such men in their business, and to do so without any commission or charge of any kind. The movement is deserving of attention.

UNION BANK AND TRUST of Helena has added two very powerful names to its board of directors. They are Conrad Kohrs, one of the largest live stock dealers in eastern Montana, and a big owner of real estate and business property at Deer Lodge, Helena and Missoula. The other is J. E. Bower, whose business has been the production and sale of wool and mutton, in which he had the largest business in the state.

THE officers of the Union Bank and Trust now are S. M. McKennan, president; A. P. Curtin and Frank Bogart, vice-presidents; R. O. Kaufman is cashier. The office of chairman of the board, formerly held by George L. Ramsey, seems to have been abolished.

as treasurer of the Commercial Club, which office he had held for four years, was given a banquet. He is given credit with having placed expeditiously the $250,000 bond issue on the new Tacoma building, which is club headquarters. He also was chairman of the committee, which raised a fund of $50,000 for publicity purposes. The attendance at the banquet included the principal business and professional men of the city as well as a number from other places.

WALTER B. RICHIE, president First National, Lima, Ohio; A. D. Graham, cashier Citizens National, Baltimore; Francis H. Richard, cashier First National, Pittsburgh; C. E. Arnt, president Citizens Bank of Michigan City; B. F. Harris, vice-president First National, Champaign; Latham T. Souther, vice-president Sangamon Loan and Trust, Springfield; N. F. Thompson, president Manufacturers National, Rockford; J. B. Green, vice-president and cashier, Gary (Ind.) Trust and Savings, and Wilson H. Doe, cashier Home National and Home Savings banks, Elgin, were banker notables who visited the financial district of Chicago on Friday of last week.

F. E. WOODARD, president Bank of Watertown, Wisconsin; Frank T. Joyner, former president of the Illinois State Trust of East St. Louis, and Ed. J. Hughes, First National of Milwaukee, were Chicago bank callers last week.

J. C. VAN RIPER, president American J. Trust, St. Louis; C. Finley Smith, president Mercantile Trust and Savings, Evansville, are bank presidents recently seen in Chicago counting rooms.

FARMERS SAVINGS at Runnells, Ia., reports a good year's business, from which in six months $1,300 have been added to undivided profit account from earnings. This was highly satisfactory to the stockholders. The officers re-elected are F. F. Johnston, president; E. W. Hayes, vice-president, and M. B. Denny, assistant cashier.

W. W. BOWMAN, secretary for Kansas, has sent out notices that his state convention this year will be held at Topeka, and on May 23d and 24th. Mr. Bowman is among the early birds, when it comes to selecting convention dates, and always takes care that his brother secretaries have notice so that there will be no conflict in his territory.

SECRETARY P. C. KAUFMAN of Washington has offered $200 reward for the capture of the crooks who robbed the Riverside branch of the Bank of Commerce of Everett, Wash. He gives a full description of those who participated.

FRANK C. MORTIMER, who looks after the publicity work of the First National at Berkeley, Cal., has sent out to all that bank's correspondents a neatly bound booklet containing a series of one column advertisements, used with success in the local news-

Difficulties in Taxation of Intangible Property

PART II.

Many of the states have already recognized that the taxation of intangibles at their capital value is difficult or impossible, and have in part substituted other systems of raising revenue. In 1865 Massachusetts made tax-exempt in the hands of the holder shares of stock of her own corporations, and established a system known as the taxation of "corporate excess." This system has remained in force up to the present time and has worked so successfully that its discontinuance is unlikely. The corporations are taxed by the municipality upon their real estate and machinery. Whatever other value there is in their shares of stock is taxed by the state at an average rate. The revenue yielded to the state by this tax on "corporate excess" is in 1911 some $8,700,000. The value of the tax-exempt stock of the corporations is more than a billion dollars. Massachusetts has also exempted from taxation to the owner cash in her savings banks. The banks themselves pay a tax on account of their $800,000,000 of deposits which yields some $1,900,000 of revenue and is thus at a rate slightly below two and one-half mills on the dollar. In the case of mortgages on Massachusetts real estate the present law works out a virtual exemption since the mortgaged real estate is itself taxed upon its entire value. Massachusetts state and municipal bonds and notes also are now tax-exempt. But other bonds are still taxable to the holder in Massachusetts upon their capital value, and at rates which frequently take 30 or even 50 per cent of the income derived from them. Cash deposited in national banks and trust companies is likewise subject to taxation at the same high rates and net credits are treated likewise. Shares of stock of foreign corporations are treated as personal property to be taxed upon their capital value. It frequently happens, therefore, that while a foreign corporation having all its property in Massachusetts is taxed by the municipality upon this property, its shares of stock which derive their value chiefly upon this property are taxed upon their capital value. This situation presents a good example of double taxation by the same jurisdiction—a situation which receives little or no approval from any one, and which is relieved only by the general impossibility of finding the securities for taxation purposes. Thus while Massachusetts made a notable advance nearly fifty years ago she is still wedded to the taxation of intangibles as personal property—in large measure she still adheres to a system which is not and cannot be impartially administered.

New York has gone further than Massachusetts in breaking away from the general property tax. Shares of stock in domestic and foreign corporations are exempt because the corporations pay a capital stock tax based upon earnings or share value. Mortgages secured by New York real estate are exempt upon the payment once and for all of a registration fee of five mills on the dollar of the amount of the mortgage. In the passage of the "secured debt" law of 1911, New York has granted virtual exemption upon payment once and for all of a registration fee of five mills on the dollar of face value to all mortgages or mortgage bonds, notes and written obligations secured by real estate or personal property outside of New York or by securities deposited as collateral. Of all the laws which have found a place upon the statute books of the states this law is probably the nearest approach to total exemption. It does not require an annual contribution from wealth existing in this form. It cannot be said to be taxation in the ordinary sense of the term. It of course, relieves the assessor from attempting to tax this most elusive class of property, and it eliminates the inequalities which everywhere result from taxing this property only in individual cases. Owners of such property can now live comfortably in New York. But there are serious objections to the law. It must be justified in the last analysis by the arguments of those who believe in total exemption of intangible wealth. Unless one believes in total exemption he will conclude that the registration fee, while better than nothing from a revenue point of view, is extremely inadequate as a matter of taxation.

An able paper by Charles A. Andrews, a tax commissioner for Massachusetts, showing how various states have tried and failed to list and to tax personal holdings

In Pennsylvania, Maryland and Connecticut another plan has been in operation for some years. Substantially the same plan has been adopted in Minnesota and Iowa within two years. This is what has come to be called "classification of property for the purposes of taxation." The system provides, in general, that such intangibles as are not exempt because of capital stock or other taxes paid directly by the corporation shall be themselves a class of property taxable upon its capital value, but at a rate very much lower than that applying to the taxation of real estate. In Pennsylvania, where the system has been in operation many years, more than a billion of dollars' worth of taxable intangibles is taxed at four mills on the dollar, and there results $4,000,000 of revenue. This is in addition to a capital stock tax upon the shares of certain classes of both domestic and foreign corporations, which tax produces over $9,000,000 of revenue. Furthermore, shares of stock in banking and manufacturing corporations in Pennsylvania are tax-exempt.

The same general plan has been in operation in Connecticut since 1889. Upon registration with the state treasurer "bonds, notes and other choses in action" are taxed at the annual rate of four mills upon the dollar of their capital value and are exempt from other taxation. This classification includes not only the ordinary bond and note, but also mortgages other than those secured by Connecticut real estate (which latter are virtually tax-exempt the same as in Massachusetts), net credits, cash on deposit and all other cash except specie. Shares in corporations are not included, since they are entirely exempt in the hands of the holder residing in Connecticut. The receipts on account of this tax for the year ending September 30, 1911, were $159,720, which indicates that some $40,000,000 worth of this class of property availed itself of this low tax.

In Maryland in 1896 a similar system was established. Under it shares of foreign corporations and all bonds are taxed for local and state purposes at a combined rate of 4.6 mills. In the city of Baltimore, before the establishment of this system these classes of property aggregating $6,000,000 in value were taxed at the high rate of approximately $20 a thousand; in 1907 $151,000,000 of this property was taxed at the lower rate. The smaller amount taxed at the high rate undoubtedly shows lax administration, but the larger amount (which is perhaps still small for the city of Baltimore) is very significant as showing that a reasonable tax upon intangibles can be collected.

In Minnesota and Iowa this same system of classification is of so recent adoption that we cannot discuss results further than to say that in Minnesota, where a three-mill rate was established by legislation in 1911, there is appearing for taxation eight times as much intangible property as was formerly taxed at the high rates. Here again is strong evidence that intangibles will pay a tax if it is reasonable.

In one other state, Wisconsin, still another plan is being tried. The law was passed this year and of course has not yet shown results. This plan provides for the exemption of certain classes of property, including intangibles, from all taxation upon their capital value, and, in substitution, the imposition of a tax on the income produced by such property. While several states have had laws long upon their books providing for certain forms of restricted income taxation, it is true to say that this attempt of Wisconsin to levy a genuine income tax is the first serious adoption of the income tax in any American state, excepting course the different systems of taxing public service corporations upon gross or net income.

Since this paper is not intended to be a compilation of details of taxation in the several states, we have perhaps gone far enough in our examination of different systems. From the examples cited and from others certain general conclusions may be drawn as follows:

First. Through the adoption of capital stock and other excise taxes some classes of securities have been freed from taxation in the hands of the holder. These kinds of excises also cover, to some extent, cash and credits.

Second. In some states, notably New York, securities and credits have been exempted from taxation in the hands of the holder, and there has been established a system of registration fees which is scarcely taxation, but which may be called (in no opprobrious sense) the price paid for exemption.

Third. In some states the classification idea has been adopted, and intangibles are now being taxed (with more success than formerly) at low rates as compared with real estate.

Fourth. In one state there is now under way a plan by which intangibles are exempt except as to the income produced by them.

All of this serves to indicate a serious searching for something in place of the general property tax as applied to cash credits and securities; it has been brought about by the growing conviction that the general property tax works inequitably. The experience of the American states is not the only fact in point. Taxation of intangibles upon their capital value has largely ceased in Europe, where the income tax has been developed much more than here, and where there have been devised many forms of taxation which are entirely untried in the United States. It is likely that for many years to come those foreign forms of taxation, such for instance as taxation in proportion to the rental value of premises owned or occupied, will find little favor in the American states. Such alleviation as is secured from the inequalities and injustices of our present system will probably result from further adoption and modification of these four possible plans:

First. Total exemption of more or less personally, especially intangibles.

Second. Classification of property, and the taxation of different classes at different rates.

Third. The income tax.

Fourth. An extension of capital stock or other excise taxes, by which the tax on securities shall be paid by the corporation rather than by the owner of the stock or bond.

For the total exemption of cash, credits and securities there can be made a strong argument based not only on considerations of administration, but also upon the broader conceptions of the nature of property and of general economic facts. We may as well admit, however, that whatever the force of the argument, total exemption as such will not be generally adopted. We have so long considered all forms of property as fit objects of taxation that no one ought to expect the states to suddenly decide that a very large proportion of this property shall no longer be required to help support government. As a general solution of the difficulties, therefore, we must for the present eliminate the idea of total exemption.

Classification of property promises much, but the difficulty of attaining it is very great. The constitutions of a large proportion of the state provide that all classes of taxable property shall be taxed at the same rate. The amendment necessary to allow classification must be general in terms, and when it is once adopted the legislature is at liberty to make whatever classifications it desires, not only as to intangibles, but as to all other forms of property. The possibilities of classification, just or unjust, are immense. Shall the legislature be trusted to exercise this great power?

Much good could be done under it; but also much harm. We are face to face with the old question as to how much the people can be trusted to conduct wisely their own affairs of government. Timidity argues for no change. Likewise that part of the community which under the present system, through lax administration or otherwise, feels but lightly the heavy hand of the taxing power. Nor ought we to fail to say that many people believe that the present system, despite its inequalities, is correct in principle—that as a matter of right all kinds of property should be taxed at the same rate and on the same basis.

Theoretically, at least, the income tax has much to commend it. It proceeds upon the idea that all individuals shall share their receipts with government, that one's ability to support public charges may be justly measured by what he receives as income either from his profession or from his investments. The taxation of land upon the basis of its income is open to very serious objection, but the taxation of personal property on the basis of the income it produces is another matter, and the development of this idea is full of promise. If it shall prove successful in the virile state of Wisconsin other states may well adopt it. Nor need we wait for proved success in Wisconsin. The income tax is to such a degree sound in principle that it may well be hopefully undertaken by most American states. The constitutional amendments which may be necessary for its accomplishment can be more restricted than can those necessary for a classification of property and thus less open to the objections of those who fear the whims or the unwisdom of the legislature.

The fourth solution which has been suggested—the amplification of capital stock and other excise taxes—is at best but a partial solution. However much we may tax the corporations themselves we shall not thereby reach all cash, credits and securities. There will remain vast values untouched by such excise taxes, however diverse their kinds and their application. Further be it said, that in many states corporate taxation is now all that—or more than—ought to be imposed upon this form of property. It is essentially property in the possession of the individual which we have been considering. A discussion of the general property tax in its relations to intangibles is in part an inquiry as to the incidence of the tax upon the citizen. No kind of excise upon a form of doing business can in American states at present offer a real solution of the questions connected with the taxation of property owned by and affording income to persons. Only in states which have not developed taxes upon the capital stock of corporations can this fourth suggestion be of much value. And in such states it can be only a partial solution for the shortcomings of the general property tax.

These considerations offer but little encouragement for that magnum desideratum, uniformity throughout the United States. In a country of such diversity of industry, of so widely different economic, political and social conditions, and of such different rates of public expenditure, uniformity in a matter so intricate and technical as taxation is unlikely. Uniformity much better suits a monarchy than the government of a free people living under fifty distinct jurisdictions. We may reasonably hope, however, that by processes of evolution as distinguished from revolution, all the state will discard systems and laws of taxation which cannot be made to work, or which if administered result in taking from the citizen an unreasonable proportion of his property. But each state will develop its own substitutes and Wyoming will not be like Massachusetts nor South Carolina like Michigan. The whole question is immeasurably complicated by the fact that the individual can change his legal domicile from one state to another and can thus choose a tax system best suited to make him a minimum for the support of government.

There are, however, certain fundamentals which should be observed in every attempt at tax reform. Too often these general principles have been overlooked, and many of the inequalities of American tax systems are due to this fact.

First. The primary purpose of taxation is to raise revenue for the support of government.

Second. The burden of taxation ought to be supported with equality of sacrifice.

Third. Any tax system, to be worthy of acceptance, ought to be not only sound in theory but capable of thorough administration.

It was said many years ago that the clergy supported government with their prayers, the nobles with their arms, and the peasants with their taxes. Support of government by these three agencies is as necessary to-day as it ever has been, but a monopoly in any one of the three by any class of citizens does not produce the best results—it is abhorrent to our ideas of the duty of the individual to organized society. Nowadays it is altogether too common a fact that wealth escapes its fair share of taxation. The general property tax, by trying to get from certain forms of property too much tax, has succeeded in getting too little. Classification of property for purposes of taxation, and the use of the income tax, are two methods of reform which promise much for a juster distribution of the burdens of government. Both of them are worthy of the best attention of all who would create a tolerable condition.

GROUP 8, NEW YORK, BANQUET

The annual banquet of Group 8 of the New York State Bankers Association took place Monday evening at the Waldorf-Astoria. Among the speakers were: Darwin P. Kingsley of New York, who spoke on "Some Jeffersonian Maxims," Robert Luce of Massachusetts, and Norris G. Osborn. Albert H. Wiggin, president of the Chase National Bank, acted as toastmaster. Following were the guests of honor, in addition to the speakers:

Frederick E. Farnsworth, W. H. Bennett, W. J. Gilpin, Geo. C. Van Tuyl, William A. Nash, Richard Delafield, J. P. Morgan, Jr., Lee McClung, A. B. Hepburn, A. H. Higgins, Rev. J. H. Holmes, Geo. F. Baker, A. Piatt Andrew, Geo. E. Roberts, Claude Casimir Perier, Jacob H. Schiff, Wm. G. McAdoo, William Livingstone, Charles A. Hanna and Alexander Gilbert. Among the representatives of out-of-town banks were: President Walker Hill of the Mechanics-American Bank, St. Louis; President Nesbit of the Bank of Pittsburgh; Vice-President Graham of the Citizens National, Baltimore; and Colonel McAdams of the Merchants National, Richmond, Va.

YEARS OF BANKING WITHOUT CENT LOSS

In the financial district of Minneapolis where records are made in clearings and deposits that run into big rows of figures, the extraordinary fact has developed that in four years of operation one of the downtown banks has not placed a single cent on the debit side of its ledger for loss through bad account or loan insufficiently secured. The Metropolitan National Bank has this record.

With the annual summary of new officers elected, dividends declared, additions to capital or surplus that the various banks of the city had to report, the Metropolitan National, now in its fifth year of existence, failed to show the mark of a pen in that place on its ledger where such a loss would have been recorded and its officials are hoping that the unbroken record may continue. Officers of the bank have confirmed the report that the bank had gone four years without loss of any kind, and said that they had not given it much thought, except that they felt very much gratified, and believed that the record was good.

The growth of the Metropolitan National has been much commented on. In 1910 its deposits were $661,964 and in 1911 they had risen to $1,362,723. Loans and discounts that stood at $717,509 in 1910 were up to $1,201,951 a year later and within the year the cash due from banks rose from $185,772 to $503,472. Surplus rose from $32,000 to $60,000, dividends paid increased from $9,000 to $15,000.

OPPOSED TO OVERDRAFTS

Austin, Texas.—According to letters received by Commissioner of Insurance and Banking Gill, from some of the leading banks and bankers of the state, they are in hearty accord with the co-operation now being given by the Texas department of insurance and banking to Lawrence O. Murray, comptroller of the currency, in his efforts to obtain an agreement from the banks of Texas, both state and national, looking to a discontinuation of the practice of allowing overdrafts. Commissioner Gill disclaims that the department has received protests from any source on the proposed plans; on the contrary, he says that he is receiving many letters commending the plan.

"There is no banker of experience," declares Commissioner Gill, in replying to the letter of one banker, "that does not know that most of his losses begin with an overdraft, and a customer should make his arrangements with his bank for a line of accommodations, execute notes and place amounts to his credit, subject to his check, and avoid overdrafts. When this is done a bank can better finance its affairs because it knows what its obligations are, but does not know what to prepare for with a line of customers using the bank through the medium of an overdrawn account."

Commissioner Gill also points out that should an agreement be reached by all banks to abolish the practice this would be avoided. The commissioner asserts that unless the banks voluntarily agree to such a plan it is certain there will be national and state legislation on the subject. Mr. Gill says he would like to know that the other banks have taken up this matter, and act upon it at an early date.

KENTUCKY BANKS MERGE

London, Ky.—At the annual meetings of the stockholders of the National Bank of London, of this city, and the East Bernstadt Banking Company, of East Bernstadt, Ky., five miles north of here, action was taken by both consolidating the two institutions under the name of The National Bank of London. The capital stock is to be increased from $25,000 to $50,000, and $15,000 worth of stock of the increased capital will be taken up by the old stockholders of the East Bernstadt Banking Company, the remaining $10,000 to be put on the market. All the old directors of the National Bank were re-elected, and D. C. Edwards was elected president; E. H. Hackney, vice-president; W. Q. Harned, cashier, and D. F. Brown, second vice-president.

The East Bernstadt Banking Company will close its doors and all the business of that institution will be merged with the National Bank of London.

GIRARD NATIONAL OF PHILADELPHIA

Philadelphia, January 18.—A merger of the Western National Bank into the Girard National Bank may shortly be arranged. That such a proposition is in mind was admitted yesterday by interests identified with the last-named concern, but it would seem that the matter has not been officially broached, as George E. Shaw, president of the Western National Bank, stated that there is nothing in contemplation.

Both are very old banks. The Girard National Bank started April 13, 1832, but really dates back to the first Bank of the United States, chartered in 1791. The Western National Bank began April 23, 1832. It is located at 408-10 Chestnut Street. For a dozen years or more the eyes of several big banks have been upon it, but no proposition ever made met the views of the Western National Bank's stockholders.

The Western National Bank has a capital stock of $600,000, and yesterday reported deposits of $4,139,000. The Girard National Bank, with $2,000,000 capital, had $37,753,000 of deposits, and so ranked as third largest bank in Philadelphia.

Oakleigh Thorne

Having sold out the Trust Company of America to the Equitable Trust, President Oakleigh Thorne has just closed a deal for the purchase of the Corporation Trust Company of New Jersey. Mr. Thorne purchased the Corporation Trust to give permanent employment to his loyal friends and supporters in the Trust Company of America. He will turn the control of it largely over to them.

JAPANESE BANKER VISITS HOUSTON

H. Hijikata, director of the Bank of Japan, who is touring the world, spent one day last week in Houston visiting among local Japanese. Mr. Hijikata is accompanied by his secretary, and has already been on his trip for several months, spending some time in Europe. He makes his home in Tokio, where he has large interests. He was apparently much pleased with the Southwest, and said:

"There is at present a heavy cotton movement to Japan from the cotton producing states of the United States. Of course it is hard to predict, but it seems to me that the future of the trade between the two nations is unlimited. I regret very much that I must make my visit so short."

WOULD LIMIT FOREIGN LOANS

Milwaukee, Wis.—A spirited discussion ensued Wednesday at the session of the Wisconsin Association of Real Estate Brokers at the Hotel Pfister when F. L. MacGowan, Eu Claire, introduced a resolution instructing the legislative committee to prepare a bill whereby state bankers would be allowed to make only limited loans outside of their counties.

Mr. MacGowan said that many bankers are loaning their money to people outside the state. In fact, he said, they are mere collectors of money which is sent to eastern markets. He asserted he was led to make that charge by the inability of many real estate men to consummate deals because they could not borrow money required from the banks.

J. T. Kenny, Madison, said that he knew most of the banks of the state are more anxious to loan money nearer home, because they can arrange better interest rates than if they send it away from home.

The association finally decided to address congress in an effort to secure a change in the national banking law so that national banks may loan at least 25 per cent of their assets, or other deposits, on real estate.

SUCCEEDS C. T. LINDSEY

George W. Harrison, formerly cashier of the Second National, New Albany, Ind., has been elected cashier of the Citizens National at South Bend, Ind., filling the vacancy caused by the death of C. T. Lindsey. Mr. Harrison was connected with the First National, and later with the Second National of New Albany for a number of years. When he retired from the latter about ten years ago he located in South Bend as assistant cashier of the Citizens National, one of the leading financial institutions of that city.

ERNST & ERNST TO AUDIT THE CINCINNATI TRUST CO. FOR SHORTAGE

Cincinnati, Ohio, January 18.—Arrangements were completed yesterday for an audit of the books of the Cincinnati Trust Company, and at 9 o'clock this morning the corps of experts will be given possession of the books and papers in the old quarters of the bank, at Fourth Avenue and Walnut Street. The audit will be made there, and none of the books or papers will be taken from the premises.

The audit is to be made by Ernst & Ernst, New York, accountants, who specialize on bank work. One of the partners will bring an expert from the New York office, while another will come from Chicago, and one from the Cleveland office. They will work in the "little back room," behind the big safe deposit vault, which has been set apart for them.

Final consent to make the audit was received from both President Kroger, of the Provident Savings Bank and Trust Company, which absorbed the Cincinnati Trust and has charge of its books, and also from President Cox and Secretary Keith, of the Cincinnati Trust. President Kroger, of the Provident, informed the stockholders, who are represented by Attorney Albert H. Morrill, that he had no objection to the audit. Formal demand was then made on the directors of the Cincinnati Trust, through President Cox, and later in the day, after Cox and Keith had a conference with Attorney Louis Ireton, who represents the Cincinnati Trust, they granted the demand.

It is understood that all the books and accounts of the bank, as well as the minute books of the board of directors, the correspondence, files, etc., have been placed at the disposal of the experts.

A long conference of those interested in the audit, and the Cincinnati manager of Ernst & Ernst, the accountants, was held yesterday afternoon. At the conclusion of the conference the brief statement was made that all arrangements have been made for the experts to begin at once.

It is understood that another meeting of the stockholders interested will be held, at which an organization will be effected by the appointment of a chairman and a secretary, and the audit and work connected with it will be placed in the hands of a committee.

J. F. Hartwell has been elected president of the Gary Trust and Savings Bank, Gary, Indiana.

Logan C. Murray

The veteran ex-president of the American Bankers Association, Logan C. Murray, has written to the National Monetary Commission, as a representative of the Louisville clearing house, protesting against having Louisville adjoined to any other district under the new currency bill. Mr. Murray would have Kentucky in a district, which would have Louisville for its reserve association point. His city and state strenuously object to being added to the Cincinnati district, and believe that they are important enough to constitute a district of their own with Louisville as headquarters.

DEATH OF LEVIN D. GASS

Levin D. Gass, cashier of the First National at Danville, Ill., died at his home on Wednesday night, after an illness of several weeks. Mr. Gass was prominent in all civic and business movements. He was a member of the school board and a colonel in the Illinois National Guards. Fraternally he was a thirty-third degree Mason, was past-grand chancellor of the Knights of Pythias, and had been elected to the supreme lodge of the latter in October.

Gary, Ind., January 17.—A small bank roll was found imbedded in the heart of a cake of ice to-day, by Clarence Dorman, an employee of a Broadway meat market. Dorman was cutting the ice when he found the prize.

In its current circular, the Northwestern National of Minneapolis says:

"There has been no particular change in the financial situation since our last issue. The feeling of confidence that the current year is to be one of safe and satisfactory business continues to grow more settled. For a time, it looked as though there would not be a very good demand for money, but now there is a call for funds, which is sufficiently strong to be reflected slightly in the rates, which have moderately increased. Interest in possible legislation by congress affecting our national finances is strong, and it is to be hoped that some definite policy, if not entirely worked out, may be clearly outlined at the present session."

CHARGED WITH FORGERY

Owensville, Ind., January 17.—Leslie C. Hunter, a young business man of this city, was arrested at his home here on a charge of forgery filed by the American National Bank, of Princeton. Hunter is said to have signed the name of Harry Pollard to a promissory note for $2,500. This note was given at the Princeton bank a year ago. Pollard was not aware of its existence until notified by the bank that the note was due. Pollard is a wealthy farmer.

Hunter was formerly a teacher in the local schools. He resigned the position to go into business and opened up a tinshop in East Brummitt Street.

ILLINOIS BANKING NEWS

By C. C. Burford

The winter season of 1911-1912 has indeed been a hard one for the farmers to market their crop of corn. Before the opening of the new year, the roads were extremely muddy and heavy; hauling was almost entirely impossible. After the first of January the extremely cold weather came, and while this did not interfere with the delivery of the crop as did the bad roads, yet there was a considerable delay as farmers in some cases abandoned the shelling of grain on account of the cold. It is believed that the extreme cold and the snow will have a highly beneficial effect upon the soil for the coming year as the Illinois soil has not experienced a severe and deep freezing for several years. There is a marked demand for funds with the approach of the first of March, which is "moving-time" and financial house-cleaning time for farmers, and for the hundreds of country towns directly dependent upon agricultural patrons. This demand is normal, however, and with the delivery of large amounts of the corn crop of 1911, will be satisfactorily met.

Changes in Illinois Banks

A. B. Funk has been elected president of the First National of Bloomington, to succeed his late brother, Duncan M. Funk. A. B. Funk is also a director in the bank. Isaac Funk, Jr., was elected a director to take the place of Duncan M. Funk. Jacob Funk, a brother of A. B. Funk, and LaFayette Funk, are directors of the State National of Bloomington, the former being president of that institution.

Joseph Tabke has been elected president of the German-American National of Lincoln, to succeed the late L. C. Schwerdtfeger. Mr. Tabke has been connected with the bank for twenty years.

The First National of Danville has named Assistant Cashier Charles P. Nelson to be cashier, on account of the prolonged illness of former cashier, Levin D. Gass.

Death of Wilmington Banker

President Malcolm N. M. Stewart of the First National of Wilmington, is dead at the age of 78 years. Mr. Stewart was brought by his parents to Wilmington, when he was but two years of age, and has since resided there, noting profound changes in the growth and development of Illinois. He helped to organize the One Hundredth Illinois Infantry in 1861, and served throughout the Civil War in Company A of that regiment. His father, Colonel Peter Stewart, was a noted abolitionist leader.

Several New Banks

The state auditor has issued a permit for the incorporation of the Farmers State Bank of Divernon, near Springfield. Thirty farmers and business men of Divernon are interested in the project, which will have capital stock of $25,000. David L. Haire and Ernest Herlan of Divernon, and Frank H. Lowe and Charles P. Summers of Springfield are given the permit to organize the bank.

The new state bank at Armington, Logan county, has also received a permit to engage in business.

The comptroller of the currency has been asked for a charter for the Garfield National Bank of Chicago to be organized with $50,000 capital. The directors will be J. L. Simmons, G. W. Lamson, A. Walzer, and J. Nelson.

Illinois Notes

The postal savings bank at Highland, near St. Louis, which had one depositor, is now without deposits. A man who had left one dollar to the safe keeping of Uncle Sam has now withdrawn the same. A postal bank was installed at Rankin, Vermillion county, January 6th, and one at Farmer City, January 15th.

The First National of Peoria is now running a large picture of its magnificent new banking room in its ad. in the Peoria papers and needless to say the cut makes good advertising material. The new bank is one of the show-places of Peoria.

Leslie Boner, of El Paso, who has been with the Merchants Loan and Trust of Chicago, for the past four years, has resigned his position with the Chicago bank, and will take charge of a bank at Arthur, South Dakota, March 1st.

The work of rebuilding the Farmers National of Pekin is progressing rapidly. A new vault with beautiful furniture, fixtures, hardwood floors, and mural decorations of the latest approved bank style will be installed.

The Home Savings of Peoria emphasized the value of thrift among the people, when it announced that it distributed $10,000 among its depositors as interest January 1st. This bank is preaching the good doctrine of savings. Henry W. Ulrich is the cashier.

H. B. Smith is reported president, and E. D. Brady, cashier of the Peoples National of Monmouth. O. P. Bourland is reported president, and C. R. Tombaugh, cashier of the National Bank of Pontiac.

State Auditor McCollough has distributed the $2,000,000 school fund to the various counties of the state. This amount was provided by the last general assembly. Cook county receives $354,141.

The largest personal bond ever recorded in Peoria county went on record when P. A.

OPPOSES COMPULSORY BANKING INSPECTION

Toronto, Ont.—Any amendment of the Canadian banking act which would call for compulsory inspection of the banks of the bankers association was condemned by Duncan Coulson, president of the Bank of Toronto, in the course of his address to the shareholders at the annual meeting of that institution. Referring to the system of inspection of the head office by a committee of directors, which prevails in the Bank of Toronto, Mr. Coulson expressed the view that it had proved satisfactory, though he would personally be willing to see the bank submitted to some other form of auditorship under the proposed revision of the act.

FORGAN ADDRESS POSTPONED

Minneapolis.—David R. Forgan, president of the National City Bank, Chicago, who was a speaker at the Dunwoody-Koon testimonial dinner in Minneapolis last week, is ill at his home in Chicago, and a meeting of the Citizens League of Minnesota, which was to have taken part this week at Duluth, has been postponed. John H. Rich of Red Wing, president of the league, has notified Minneapolis bankers and business men who are interested. Mr. Forgan was to have spoken on the Aldrich monetary plan. H. V. Eva of the Duluth Commercial Club notified the Minneapolis members of the league, that he will arrange a meeting for two weeks from now, at which time he hopes that Mr. Forgan will be able to be present.

UNCLAIMED DEPOSITS

Columbus (Ohio) bankers are much aroused over dispatches from Cincinnati to the effect that the Western German Bank, of that city, has filed with the probate court a list of unclaimed accounts. They say this action is the first of its kind in the history of the state, and that, while a statute requiring such action has been on the books for years, the banks have always maintained that it is wholly unconstitutional and have refused to comply with its requirements. Their contention has always been that the deposits in the bank are matters of private relationship between the bank and its clients, and that the responsibility of the bank ceases when it has provided safekeeping for the funds intrusted to its care and stands ready to pay them over to the demand of the depositor. Further, they contend that because an account has not been drawn upon or added to for a period of seven years or more it does not follow that they are "unclaimed," and they cite the accounts of many depositors whom they say would actively resent such reasoning, even though their accounts have been absolutely inactive for a much longer time than seven years.

The law on the subject requires the filing of a list of unclaimed accounts with the probate court, and if these remain unclaimed for seven years after their certification to the court they become the property of the state. It has been estimated that $2,000,000 of such accounts are on deposit in Cleveland banks, and possibly $500,000 in Columbus institutions.

NEW NATIONAL BANK FOR SACRAMENTO

Sacramento, Cal.—Alden Anderson's new national bank became a fact January 9th, when the first meeting of the stockholders of the Capital National Bank of Sacramento was held and the following officers elected: President, Alden Anderson; vice-president, F. W. Biewener, Sr.; cashier, W. W. Bassett; other directors, S. S. Day, Hendy Feldhusen, A. W. O'Brien and H. C. Mud-dox. The new institution is capitalized at $100,000, and takes over the commercial business of the old Capital Banking and Trust Company, which will become the savings and trust department of the Capital National. Anderson says an office building of imposing design will replace the present structure.

BUILDING OWNED BY THE BANK

NEWS LETTER By Mortimer I. Stevens

WISCONSIN

Milwaukee's new year appears to have entered with every indication of prosperity, if the first three weeks may be taken as an example. The local merchant is pleased with the volume of trade and manufacturers in staple lines report a fairly good influx of orders and every indication of continued trade. The number of idle men in Milwaukee is far less than some of the pessimistic would have us believe, and in this respect Milwaukee appears to much better advantage than many of the other large cities of the country.

Among the manufacturers representing the iron and steel industries there is fair activity and good prospects. Traveling men report a healthy sale, and a promising prospect for the future months.

At the various banks deposits are running well up to the expected level for this time of the year, with about normal demand for loans and rates steady. Collections are reported fair.

The country banker is husbanding his resources and carrying strong balances. To some extent he appears to have left the bond market temporarily, and is more inclined to buy short time commercial paper. Bond salesmen report good sales, and a number of the leading bond houses claim that their sales thus far in 1912 are well ahead of the same period for 1911.

Bank at Clinton Reported Burned

The Citizens Bank of Clinton, H. A. Moehlenpach, cashier, is reported to have been badly damaged by fire early Tuesday morning, January 16th. Workmen had just finished making some elaborate improvements, which have been under way for several months. The damage has not yet been estimated, but is said to amount to several hundred dollars.

The fire originated when the night watchman entered the bank on his regular rounds and struck a match in the back room where paint and oils had been stored. It is thought that the room was filled with the turpentine fumes, and in an instant the entire building was in flames.

Wisconsin National Elects Officers

The annual meeting of the stockholders of the Wisconsin National Bank of Milwaukee was held during the past week, and the following officers and directors elected for the ensuing year: President, L. J. Petit; vice-president, Frederick Kasten; second vice-president, Hermann F. Wolf; cashier, L. G. Bournique; assistant cashier, W. L. Cheney; assistant cashier, Walter Kasten. The board of directors constitutes the following: Geo. D. Van Dyke, Gustave Pabst, Charles Schriber, Herman W. Falk, Oliver C. Fuller, R. W. Houghton, Patrick Cudahy, Isaac D. Adler, Henry M. Thompson, Clement C. Smith, Dr. C. E. Albright, L. J. Petit, Frederick Kasten, and Herman F. Wolf.

Mr. Wolf has been connected with the bank for a number of years, and becomes a member of the board in recognition of his valuable services. Messrs. Smith and Albright are active business men in Milwaukee. The net earning for the bank for the year amounted to $250,901.59, or approximately 12½ per cent. Since its organization the bank has paid a total of $2,095,000 in cash dividends and also earned $750,000 of its surplus, which has been added to the undivided profits of $273,078.16, making a grand total of $3,118,078.16.

Congratulates LaCrosse Bank

During the past week the Batavian National Bank of La Crosse celebrated its fiftieth anniversary, and among the many congratulatory letters and telegrams which poured in throughout the day was the following telegram sent by J. H. Puelicher, cashier, Marshall & Ilsley Bank, Milwaukee, on behalf of the officers and directors of that institution: "The officers and directors of Marshall & Ilsley Bank congratulate you most heartily on the splendid record of the past fifty years. With the solid foundation you have laid your continued success is assured." It was particularly apropos that the Marshall & Ilsley Bank should send a message of congratulation as the first draft drawn by the Batavian National Bank was for $100 upon the Milwaukee institution.

Madison Bank Increases $150,000

The state banking department during the past week has approved an amendment filed by the Capital City Bank of Madison, increasing its capital stock from $50,000 to $200,000. J. W. Hobbins, president and cashier of the bank, reports that the directors increased the capital stock out of the undivided profits of the bank.

BUTTE WANTS SILVER DOLLARS

Butte, Mont., January 16.—In an effort to induce the entire Northwest to appeal to the government to stand the expense of shipping silver dollars to western banks, the Butte business men's Association, will send a delegation of its representative citizens to the Northwest mining convention to be held in Spokane, February 12th, 16th and 17th.

The decline in the coinage of silver, and the appearance of immense amounts of paper dollars has caused alarm among Montana business men, and the Butte business men propose to secure concerted action to offer some inducement in the way of encouraging greater use of silver dollars, believing that it will result in the opening up of many silver properties in the Northwest. The government's refusal to pay expressage of $6 on 1,000 silver dollars has led to the shipment of paper money.

As mints derive profits from the coinage of silver dollars, there being slightly more than fifty cents worth of silver in the coin, the Butte business men urge that the treasury government should pay the expressage.

BOY BANKER'S CREDITORS MEET

Peoria, Ill., January 16.—Fifty creditors of Earl W. Butler, boy banker, now in Joliet Penitentiary, gathered here to-day for the first dividend meeting. They were depositors in the banks at Ellisville and St. David, Fulton county, and Glasford, Peoria county. C. W. Warner of Laharpe, trustee of the estate, stated the assets had shrunk and the affairs were in such shape a first dividend of 5 per cent only could be declared.

Ralph C. Wilson

Ralph C. Wilson, vice-president and cashier, of the Old Colony Trust Company, Chicago, resigned at the first of the year, and Hugo Meyer has been elected cashier, with a vacancy as to vice-president. President Home was re-elected.

TERRE HAUTE BANK CASE

Terre Haute, Ind.—Receiver J. C. Kolsem, of the American State Bank, found several deeds and mortgages, which had never been recorded though made two and three years ago. The receiver says he cannot estimate the assets or liabilities until the tangled condition of the accounts is straightened out.

H. C. Arnold, a state bank examiner, says property just deeded by George W. Taber, father of the president, to the wives of two other sons, will not hold good because when he recently signed a joint note given to the bank to make good in part the shortage of his son he made affidavit to the possession of this property.

TWO TRUST COMPANIES MERGE

Philadelphia.—Arrangements have been concluded, except as to minor details, for the merger of the Equitable Trust Company and the Continental Title and Trust Company into a new concern to be called the Continental-Equitable Trust Company. It will have a capital of $1,000,000, a paid-in surplus of $1,000,000, and a substantial amount in undivided profits.

Business of the new company will be conducted, at least temporarily, from the present quarters of the Continental Title and Trust Company, in the Stephen Girard Building, Twelfth Street below Market. The plan, it is understood, is to erect a new banking and office building on the site of the store at the southwest corner of Twelfth and Market streets, which was until recently occupied by William H. Wanamaker. That corner was bought by the Continental Trust Company some time ago. It is assessed at $740,000.

T. M. Daly is to be president of the new company. The two vice-presidents of the Continental will become two of the four vice-presidents of the Continental-Equitable Trust Company, the Equitable interest selecting the others. John F. Skelly will be secretary and treasurer and John R. Umsted, title and trust officer. All those directors of the two companies will be members of the board of the new concern.

FORGETS HE HAS $1,000 IN BANK

Cincinnati, January 16.—Officials of the Western German Bank, which has an unclaimed deposit account of $1,000 in the name of Otto Graeff, which has been reported to the probate court, as required by law, yesterday were put in possession of information that will lead to paying the money to its rightful owner or his heirs. The deposit has been unclaimed, in the belief of the bank's officials, through the sheer forgetfulness of its owner, who is a lithographer by profession and an artist by temperament. Graeff is now supposed to be in New York City, but his brother and two sisters reside in Seattle, Wash., and an inquiry was sent them yesterday by mail as to the whereabouts of their brother.

The depositor of the Western German, who brought Graeff to the bank to make the deposit, when he read in one of the newspapers of the fact that the deposit is registered as unclaimed, called yesterday. He says Graeff, whom he knew well, while a man of only moderate income, was so wrapped up in art that he had absolutely no desire for money other than its facility to supply his immediate wants. He was carrying $1,000 around in his pocket, which accumulated from unspent earnings, and one day mentioned to this depositor that he had more money than he wanted, and asked what he should do with it. He was told to put it in the bank, and was taken to the Western German, where Graeff opened a deposit account. The account has never been checked against or changed in any way since it was deposited.

—Special correspondence concerning also
the tributary territory, by J. Vion Papin

St. Louis, Mo., January 17.—Bankers report a rather good demand for funds just at present, and though rates continue easy, the feeling among the lenders is somewhat better than has been the case for some time. The opinion seems general and firmly fixed that the year is going to develop activities in all lines, and there is a disposition to husband resources, so that the lamps will be well filled with oil, when the bridegroom comes. There has been competition for commercial paper, especially those with good names, but preference is being shown for the shorter duration bills. No one seems willing to put out funds for very long time on the present basis of rates. This is taken as an indication that a better demand and higher level of interest are in store for the no great distant future. Bankers differ as to just when things will begin to pick up, but most of them think that there will be a gradual betterment until after the conventions, and the real wave will burst when the election is out of the way. This will not leave much of 1912, but 1913 is expected to be just about as busy a year as the country has ever seen. Deposits have been holding their own in good shape, and several of the larger banks report increases. With conditions in the South nearer to normal, deposits here would be way over the average for this season of the year. Collections show improvement in spots, but elsewhere much is left to be desired in this respect. A canvass of the wholesale district elicited a variety of reports, some hopeful, but others indicate that sales thus far this year have not been quite up to what was anticipated. Merchants in certain sections are holding back, without any apparent reason for so doing. On the whole, however, the situation is healthy, and the outlook promising. The heavy blanket of snow has made winter wheat prospects especially promising.

Missouri Bankers Convention

W. J. Keyser, secretary of the Missouri Bankers Association, has issued a circular letter to members, announcing that the twenty-second annual convention of the association will be held at Joplin, Mo., on Tuesday and Wednesday, May 21st and 22d.

Rolla Wells Heads Committee

Ex-Mayor Rolla Wells of St. Louis, president of the Business Men's League, has been appointed chairman of the executive committee for Missouri of the National Citizens League for the promotion of a sound banking system. The appointment was announced by George H. Mahan of Hannibal, state president. Other members of the committee are: Harry G. Moore, president of the Kansas City Commercial Club; R. T. Forbes, president of the St. Joseph Commerce Club, and George D. Markham, Elias Michael and S. H. Fullerton of St. Louis. Chris Bernet, president of the Merchants Exchange, heads the advisory committee. In the committees will be included many of the leading business and professional men of Missouri. Mr. Mahan says both committees will be enlarged, and the Missouri federation of commercial clubs and leading mercantile associations of Kansas City, Springfield, Carthage, Columbia, Cape Girardeau, Hannibal, Independence, Joplin, Moberly, Sedalia, and St. Charles will have representation in them.

Future Plans Outlined

"The league is organized," said Mr. Mahan, "in more than fifty Missouri cities and towns, and the work is progressing rapidly. We could make greater speed, but believe it is wiser to gear the movement to the importance of the subject. Our association is not pledged to any definite plan. Its work is educational, and it proposes to foster a sentiment favorable to the best monetary system which may be devised. Business men and farmers are just as much concerned as bankers in the prevention of panics. In fact it is a practical truth that the interests of the bankers and business men and farmers are mutual. We intend to conduct an educational campaign. Business men and economists of national reputation will be sent by the league to address commercial associations and farmers unions in all parts of Missouri, and instructive literature will be circulated. Already we have strong organizations. The league has penetrated every section of this state. In a few months we will have representation in every city, town and county. No problem is more vital to the welfare of commerce and finance than a flexible and stable monetary system. This country cannot afford to be in constant hazard of panic and upset. The least the business men and farmers can do is to signify their firm conviction that a suitable system is necessary."

Few Changes in Officers

Annual elections of local banks resulted in but few changes, either of officers or directors. The directory of the Third National was re-elected in full, and the board re-elected Charles H. Huttig, president. Other officers are: Thomas Wright, George W. Galbraith and R. S. Hawes, vice-presidents, and J. R. Cooke, cashier. B. F. Edwards was re-elected president of the National Bank of Commerce; Tom Randolph, John Nickerson, W. B. Cowen and W. L. McDonald, vice-presidents, and J. A. Lewis, cashier. Walker Hill was again named president of the Mechanics-American National. Jackson Johnson, Frank O. Hicks, and Ephron Catlin, vice-presidents, and J. S. Calfee, cashier. At the Merchants-Laclede National the officers were re-elected as follows: William H. Lee, president; David R. Francis and A. L. Shapleigh, vice-presidents, and George E. Hoffman, cashier.

Capital Increases Voted

The directors of the Granite City Trust and Savings Bank and the First National of Granite City, in addition to electing officers, both voted to increase their capital stock. The former raised its capital from $50,000 to $100,000, and the latter from $50,000 to $60,000. The officers elected were: First National, Marcus Henson, president; Emil Rammer, vice-president; W. J. Biel, cashier, and Ferdinand Vorwald, assistant cashier and acting director. Granite City Trust Company and Savings Bank: Ferdinand Kohl, president; A. W. Morris, vice-president; Ferdinand Vorwald, second vice-president; T. A. Nieman, third vice-president; Charles F. Steizel, cashier, and R. C. Barney and Fred Gillham, assistant cashiers.

Missouri-Lincoln Reorganization

Hanford Crawford has been chosen chairman of the special reorganization committee for the Missouri-Lincoln Trust Company. The appointment was made by President W. F. Carter on a resolution recently adopted by the stockholders. Other members of the committee are: Thomas Wright, vice-president of the Third National; former Circuit Judge Moses N. Sale, W. F. Carter, M. E. Hogan, H. A. Heussler and Aaron Waldheim. The preliminary meeting of the committee was held this week, and the various plans sub-

Sale of Capitol Bonds

The sale of the bonds for building the new Missouri capitol is not in the category of brisk and lively financial transactions, still it is progressing. This week the state fund commissioners announced the sale of $124,000 more at par. The issue bears 3½ per cent. Propositions from banks and bankers in St. Louis, Kansas City and Chicago to handle the issue on a commission basis were received, and it is likely that one of these must be accepted if the bonds are to be sold. First, however, the commissioners are to bring a friendly action in the supreme court to determine if they possess power to pay a commission. The Mississippi Valley Trust Company made three propositions; one to sell the bonds at par and interest accrued for a commission of 3.987 per cent, and in case it failed to do so in fifteen days to take the entire issue itself at par and interest, the commission to be paid in either event. The second proposition was to sell the bonds for a commission of 4.35 per cent at par, agreeing to take the bonds at par if it failed. The third offer was a straight commission basis of 4.74.

Other Proposals Made

The New York Life Insurance Company, through Francis Brother & Co., offered to take the issue on a 4 per cent basis. This would be the same as a commission of 5.03 per cent.

Wernse & Dieckman of St. Louis bid for $250,000 with a commission of 4.04 per cent, which was practically the lowest commission bid. Francis Brother & Co. made the next lowest commission bid, 4.21 per cent. The Commerce Trust Company of Kansas City agreed to dispose of the unsold bonds for a lump commission of $83,557, provided the commissioners would deposit the proceeds of the sale in that institution. This bid was thrown out, owing to the irregularity of the latter portion of it.

Cone Celebrates Birthday

St. Louis is a city where bankers reach great old age, and the Boatmen's Bank and State National seem especially conducive to the accumulation of years. Charles S. Cone, for twenty-four years assistant cashier of the latter institution, this week celebrated his ninety-first birthday. He was the guest of honor at a dinner given to celebrate the event. Mr. Cone is hale and hearty, and feels confident he will turn the century mark.

Springfield, Mo., Clearings

The annual report of the Springfield Clearing House Association for 1911, which was posted at the annual meeting this week, showed total clearances of $34,000,000, a gain of $3,000,000 over 1910. Officers for 1912 were elected as follows: H. M. Smith, president; Holland Keet, vice-president, and S. E. Trimble, secretary-treasurer.

St. Louis Financier Promoted

William Foley, formerly bond officer of the Mercantile Trust Company, and until 1911, vice-president of the William R. Compton Bond and Mortgage Company, has been ap-

SMALL OHIO BANK CLOSED

Columbus, Ohio.—The Farmers Savings Bank, at Haskins, was closed by order of F. E. Baxter, state bank superintendent, on Monday morning. State Examiner W. B. Hopkins was placed in charge. Failure to improve loan securities is responsible. The state superintendent said that the bank had been in an unsteady condition for some time, and the state banking department had been unable to put it on a healthy basis.

The paid-up capital stock was given as $12,500. Superintendent Baxter said that the bank had not had a normal growth since its start, but the stockholders and depositors would not lose much by the closing and there was every promise that a full 100 cents might be paid.

The last statement made by the bank, December 12, 1911, showed deposits of public funds $7,176.20, deposits subject to check $8,210, time deposits $8,990.59, savings deposits $3,332.45; total resources $40,209.24, including loans of $30,404.70.

DENIED NEW TRIAL

New Orleans.—A motion for a new trial for Wm. Adler, former president of the defunct State National Bank, was denied in the United States court of appeals last week. Adler will now have to serve six years in the federal prison, to which he was sentenced some time ago for embezzlement.

Editorial Comment

A CHALLENGE TO GOMPERS

Ever since Colonel Roosevelt and President Schurman of Cornell gave it out as their opinion that the capture and conviction of the McNamaras by William J. Burns was the greatest personal accomplishment of the year 1911, in the whole world, reform clubs in every city have been inviting Detective Burns to dine with and talk to them. One evening last week he was at dinner at the University Club in Philadelphia, and in the evening addressed the members of the Contemporary Club at the Bellevue-Stratford, the room being completely filled, and the meeting being one of the most interesting and effective ever held by that able organization. This club is given credit for defeating the Philadelphia ring of grafters and for installing Mayor Blankenberg at the head of the civic organization. In the course of his talk Mr. Burns issued a broad challenge to Samuel Gompers, head of the American Federation of Labor to make public an accounting of the fund raised by organized labor for the defense of the McNamaras. This decidedly was the "hit" of the evening, and the Contemporary Club is to press the demand of Detective Burns that Gompers tell how the $300,000 McNamara fund was spent.

To this enlightened and interested audience Mr. Burns declared that in his opinion the present situation in which organized labor finds itself cannot last. Those who heard the detective gave it as their opinion that if Gompers will give a strict account of the fund raised for the McNamaras, it will end his career as a labor leader. They also believe that if he refuses to give an account of this fund it will so far rob him of public confidence that he will be obliged to give up his position. Mr. Burns believes that until changes are made in the official list of the American Federation of Labor the destruction of property and of life also will continue. He told the Philadelphia Club that at the time he made the arrests in Detroit of McNamara, and of McManigal, they were living on money furnished to them by labor, and planning at the same time to blow up five places in that city. All of this was to have been accomplished before the following Monday night, so that a report might be made to the national board, which was to meet at Indianapolis, and at which meeting Mr. Gompers was present. Mr. Burns called attention also to the promptness with which Gompers charged him with planting the bombs which he "discovered" later, and had him accused in court with kidnaping the McNamaras contrary to law. Of this charge Mr. Burns has been acquitted by the United States courts, and the public long ago has approved of his entire action in the matter. In his talk at Philadelphia the detective went fully into the raising of funds and spending them for purposes of bribery and corruption, and told how public officials have been for a long time abused and threatened with the political power of federated labor. He told the story of the breaking up of the Abe Ruef gang in San Francisco, with which the public is familiar. At the same time he explained to his hearers that much of the graft which Ruef collected and distributed came from men of their own station in business and commercial life and not all from criminals. We should like to see the press of the country take up Mr. Burns's challenge to Mr. Gompers to give a full and accurate account of the fund raised for the McNamara defense. Mr. Burns promised that if Mr. Gompers will not do that, he himself will undertake it with every expectation of doing a clean and illuminating job of it.

Mr. Burns paid his compliments to the average private detective agency and confirmed public opinion in this respect also. This great detective is quite different from most of his predecessors. Most of them spent their spare time in saloons, hobnobbing with crooks, gamblers and outlaws upon the most familiar terms. It never was certain when an agency had been employed to do a certain piece of work that they were not at the same time representing the opposing elements in the case. All of this has been changed under the new régime, and since Mr. Burns has been at the head of the protective department of the American Bankers Association, there has been no compromise with bank crooks, no "assisted" escapes and no convicted safe blowers pardoned or paroled at his request. This alone puts Mr. Burns in a class by himself.

HOW TO SUCCEED IN LIFE

A Chicago millionaire the other night gave it as his idea of how to get rich, "to buy your overcoats in the summer and your linen dusters in the winter." This was a paraphrase, in a way, of Russell Sage's tart theory of how to beat the stock market: "Buy when the rest want to sell; sell when they want to buy." From Frederick Weyerhaeuser of St. Paul, by many thought to be a richer man than either Carnegie or Rockefeller, comes the following plan of how to be rich:

Make up your mind to work at something really worthy of work, and work hard.

The surest way to make money is to save money and to use what you save.

Don't be afraid of long hours or constant attention to your work.

Work can be made a joy, an economy, a pleasure, if you combine an object worth while with the determined ambition to win.

Work, where the interest of the man who works is centered, becomes a source of real gratification, of honest pleasure and accomplishment.

Any young man can get rich, can succeed in business, if he saves; if he has a definite and honest purpose, and is so filled with the purpose that work ceases to be a hardship and becomes a privilege.

Look at things with optimism in your heart. Go into some small business and work to make it into a big one.

A world-favorite—Thomas A. Edison—spoke (by proxy) at a Chicago banquet the other night. When his proxy rose to respond for the wizard of Menlo Park, that distinguished eccentric put into his hand a small piece of paper, on which he had written:

To the young men here to-night I would say: When you get a job, pitch into your work and pay no attention to the clock or to time. Think of nothing, talk of nothing but shop, and when the boss comes around pay no attention to him, but to your work, and, my word for it, when you want to leave for some other job the old man won't let you go, but will likely take you in as a partner.

Not a word about how he discovered the telephone, the electric bulb, the phonograph, the multiplex wire system of telegraphy, motion pictures with or without spoken parts, but his advice to young men. Surely, in all this there ought to be some soundness beyond the common.

"THE BANKERS' DISPOSITION TOWARD THE BANK MAN"

"Is it profitable to pay men what they are worth—profitable when unnecessary?" asks George R. Martin, publicity manager, Seattle National Bank. "Men will take less or leave. If they leave, a host stands ready for the vacant places. But how about the places? Will work suffer by frequent changes? Somewhere in the heap of statistics, it is written, that regardless of the frequent changes, the work in general, will average up—fairly done—all sufficient to keep the wheels moving and pay the dividends.

"There are still in the banking world men who think in this way and believe their thoughts are truisms. Some have the same ideas or similar ones in more or less modified form. A regrettably large number, either prejudiced by circumstances or experiences in their own road to success, or by innate narrowness of mind, execute such ideas in their banks in spirit and with precision. The interest of such bankers in the men they employ is conscious only to the point of keeping the place in the machine filled. Dividends, and dividends alone, label their sole purpose in life. Burdened themselves by conditions of their own making, they refuse to lighten the burdens of those around them or assist in making work more of a joy, less a breeder of dissatisfaction with that spirit of don't care, dead in its quality of warping and stultifying the ambitions of developing men. But the day of such bankers is vanishing, and vanishing as fast as banking is growing with larger powers of usefulness to the people by combination and counter combination. The question is not one of sentiment, but how to get real efficiency; not a question of mere sympathy but economic principle. And whatever is the purpose of the banker of to-day and no matter how closely he watches the ebb and flow of golden dollars, greater organization—system evolving highly specialized departments (little banks in themselves), points out to him, definitely and surely, the need upon every hand for men of ability, teeming with aggressiveness, enthusiasm, and cheerfulness; men broad minded, independent in thought—leaders, out of ruts and beaten paths—not followers into them. The full-sized man is in real demand to-day. He will find abundant opportunity to display his talents and make recognizable his merits. Few bankers in this country will give up a man who has been tried and not found wanting or refuse him a promotion which he deserves, when the opportunity permits. Money speaks with as great an emphasis as ever, but the day has gone by when a banker's son without capacity for management can succeed to his father's position over the heads of worthier men. The time has at last been reached, when blocks of stock do not measure a man's ability to guide the affairs of a great modern bank. It is the recognition by the modern banker and business man that the precept "business is business" includes justice to the men who help create that business; and when justice becomes a part of a man's business, the resultant is harmony and good will among all concerned, more interest taken in the business, and thus more business.

"The change in the bankers' disposition toward the bankman from indifference to one of personal interest has been wrought within the last ten or twelve years. This is plainly discernible in the refreshing generous spirit of co-operation, which is now felt in most of the banks of the country. It is noticeable in the way bankers everywhere, view with satisfaction their efforts in establishing the American Institute of Banking, providing the bank men of every city in every state with a means of increasing their knowledge of finance and which has done wonderful work in developing men for official positions. In many banks careful attention has been given to the environment of their clerks—plenty of light and room. Private lockers have been installed. Financial books and magazines are put at their disposal. Long hours have been eliminated by supplying adequate help and injecting more system in routine. In quite a few banks profit-sharing has become a custom—dividing a certain per cent of the earnings each year with those connected with the bank, while in nearly all others, sums from a full month's salary down are presented to the clerks each year at Christmas time.

"The American Institute of Banking is proving of inestimable value to the bank men of the country. If it has done nothing else but through the various chapter meetings widened the horizon of young men in banks, who are without the advantage of a fair education, its organization has been worth while. Nothing strikes a harsher—a more discordant note in now-a-days business life than narrowness and short-sightedness in an individual; nothing is so refreshing as meeting with a man who is broad minded, tolerant, cheerful, optimistic. The elbowing contact with men of every type and temperament and the interchange of ideas at the chapter meetings has that broadening effect. The older bankers themselves are beginning to recognize an active chapter man at sight. He has personality—magnetism—in some subtle way or other carries people with him, and yet, about him always a quiet poise and dignity.

"Education is the governing principle in the Institute work. It includes study courses covering not only practical banking, political economy, commercial and banking law and negotiable instruments, but every phase of modern finance. The whole field of banking is brought to the bank man, practically without cost, for him to take or thrust aside as his ambitions and inclinations dictate. The system consists of correspondence and class room instruction and personal research. The chapters which have permanent club rooms like Seattle Chapter, aside from the regular meetings of the educational classes, have general meetings once or twice a month, at which some prominent banker, educator or professional men addresses the chapter. Debates and discussions are important features of the meetings, including parliamentary drills and practice in public speaking. Especially has public speaking been fostered in many of the chapters. Never before in the history of banking, have so many demands been made upon the time of bankers everywhere as are being made to-day, for speeches before clubs and organizations of every conceivable nature. The banker's viewpoint is sought upon almost every vital question, whether it relates to banking, business, law, or some movement for betterment in civic and political affairs. His intimate knowledge of men and their affairs; his close contact with enterprise and city and country up-building seem to naturally fit him for his task—to verily make of him a compelling force in financial, business and political life. What a power for good or ill is this banker of to-day! Years have not diminished but increased his powers of usefulness. Not dollars alone, but himself must he contribute to assist in solving the entangling economic and social problems, which will ever confront a people. No wonder he is thrusting Mr. Junior banker forward. A good start he will undoubtedly need."

POSTAL SAVINGS IN MEXICO

In the near future Mexico will install a postal savings system identically the same as that being operated in the United States. Postmaster-General Hitchcock's certificate of deposit idea, on which our system is based, is considered by the Mexican officials as superior to the pass-book methods used by the European countries.

The same system has been adopted for the Canal Zone, where it will be put into operation in the very near future for the benefit of workmen engaged in building the Panama Canal. A copy of the certificate, which is very similar to ours, for use on the Canal Zone, has been received by Mr. Hitchcock, and it is understood that everything will be made ready for the opening within the next month or so.

The Bank of Ettrick (Wisc.) has been incorporated with a capital of $15,000. J. Pederson is president, E. J. Brovald, vice-president, and H. W. Clausen, cashier.

Commercial Bank Credits

Address before San Francisco Chapter, by E. W. Wilson

Bank credits began with the beginning of the banking business. In the earlier days of banking the reputation of the individual or concern was the controlling factor that led to the granting or withholding of credit. As the business grew in volume, and extended over wider territory, financial statements, mercantile agency reports and technical business history were necessary, and credit investigation was a logical development.

It has been but a few years since it was regarded as an affront to ask an applicant for a loan to furnish a detailed statement of his assets and liabilities. To-day, however, he expects to furnish this statement and give references if he happens to be unknown to the bank to which he makes application. Even the public has taken an interest in bank credits. In the last decade this interest has developed to the point of enacting stringent laws for the public supervision of bank credits. These laws cover in detail what is permitted and what is prohibited in the making of loans. This is a direct result of an aroused public sentiment against banks and bankers because some of them have failed to recognize the difference between Mine and Thine. The custom on the part of certain bankers to loan depositors' money to themselves and their associates, sometimes openly and above board and in the belief that it was right and proper, and sometimes secretly and designedly, using dummies and other means of deception and deceit, was the direct cause of the greater number of our bank failures.

The former class, as the result of education and experience, have changed their policy, and most of the latter class, through the aid of bank supervision and the criminal laws, have changed their business, and some of them their postoffice addresses. The history of the failed banks for the past ten years has made it certain that you cannot safely loan depositors' funds to yourself or to those with whom you are financially interested. Personal interest seems to prevent the careful judgment necessary to safely loan money.

A commercial bank deals more exclusively in credits than any other business institution. As the margin of profits in banking is smaller than in other lines of business, greater care and exactness are necessary. The purposes for which money is desired may be considered under three heads. First, capital for speculation; second, capital for investments; and third, capital for trade and commerce. Speculative capital is employed where there is some question about the final outcome. As a rule, money used for this purpose does not create wealth. More often it tends to take the profit from other enterprises.

Capital for investment is used in the creation of business ventures of the permanent kind, such as the erection of mills and factories, the building of railroads, the development of irrigation enterprises and other similar business projects. In this class, the withdrawal of the money advanced would prevent continuing the business, and therefore is called permanent investment. Capital for trade and commerce is intended for temporary use. It pays the farmers for their crops, and the railroads for moving them. It aids the manufacturers to deliver the products of their plants and accommodates the merchants during periods when their stocks are above normal, or to anticipate returns from sales made, or to aid in making deliveries. It is for furnishing money for trade and commerce that a commercial bank is particularly organized, and it is about the loaning and safeguarding of a commercial bank's funds that I am expected to speak. In caring for credit needs, the banker occupies a middle position, standing between the borrower and the depositor. The control of credit is not a selfish one, but a commercial trust to be administered in a way that will insure the loyalty of customers, and at the same time with a conservatism that will guard against loss to the bank as well as to the borrower. It is necessary to know the borrower as well as to be familiar with the channels through which the money asked for is to be used.

The bringing into existence or promotion of unsuccessful enterprises by aid of a commercial bank credit is a positive injury to the business community. Losses from failures are never confined to those directly interested, but extend to sound enterprises and worthy institutions. In order that these losses may be minimized, the borrower's ability to pay must be studied and often the purpose for which the money is to be used looked into and approved. In making loans there are many elements that go to make for safety. There are also many indications that are danger signals. Among the principal elements to be considered are capital, character and ability. Capital is of one value when it has been acquired by accumulation, the result of economy, industry and careful management, but of a lesser value when the applicant for the loan has acquired property by speculation, accident or inheritance. The value of capital for credit purposes depends also upon whether it is so invested as to be available on short notice, or whether it is tied up in real estate, furniture and fixtures, tools and machinery or other slow and doubtful assets.

Character as used and considered in this connection means habits—associates—past record. Business character means present reputation earned by years of square dealing and prompt paying.

Ability, with its many variations, is willingness coupled with apparent capacity to meet promises to pay in accordance with their terms. Each application does not possess all these favorable elements, neither is it necessary that it should. There is where the credit man's judgment is put to the test. To illustrate. Would it be advisable to give aid to a man who had failed in business and made a partial settlement with his creditors? Is it safe to extend credit to a man who is dishonest, but who has capital? Or to an honest and industrious man without ability? Or to a capable and economical man if he has an idle disposition? Or to an honest and capable man if he is a drinker or a gambler? A loan application rarely has behind it a combination of all the good elements. Therefore it is necessary to figure on some of the above shortcomings in almost every case presented for consideration. There are two ways of making mistakes in passing upon loans. One is to make a loan and the other is to refuse to make it. The loss of money from an error in judgment in saying "Yes" when you should say "No" when an applicant is entitled to a favorable reply has been known to give bankers a reputation for conservatism when their institutions were dying of dry-rot. Volume of business is just as necessary in banking as in a grocery store, otherwise rent, clerk hire and general expenses not only consume the profits but make inroads on the capital. There are some well-known rules concerning credits that are generally agreed upon in the abstract. It is when these rules are being applied that differences of opinion arise.

The credit man can obtain the experience of others in given lines of business and gather all the information obtainable in a particular case, when he will discover that there is still some unknown factor—a certain amount of uncertainty. This unknown factor is frequently termed a business risk. The law of average is expected to and will take care of a certain business hazard or risk.

The fire insurance underwriter is constantly studying his hazard. He collects, tabulates and keeps for future use and guidance his experience with losses. If the percentage of his loss ratio to his premium income is too high and continues too long his company must retire from business, and be classed as one of the unsuccessfuls. There is a similarity between the respective hazards of the fire insurance company and the banker. It is, however, necessary to admit that the underwriter is more scientific and accurate in his work. His record of experiences is complete and of great aid. He knows of to-morrow by the happenings of to-day. The banker, as a rule, conceals from his fellow bankers his losses, what they are and how they occur. However, great progress is being made in studying and analyzing bank risks. Public accountants in experting books, proving accounts, checking inventories, and engineers in making appraisements are advance steps in reducing risks and minimizing losses.

The credit man must have affirmative information concerning the applicant for a loan, and the first thing he looks for is convertible assets, their proportion to liabilities, where the money with which to repay is to come from. Furniture and fixtures or machinery and buildings will not serve the purpose. The value of convertibles depends upon the kind, the season, location, condition of the market and numerous other things. Three things are safe to assume. First, assets will not increase; second, liabilities will not decrease, and third, the sheriff or receiver will realize but from 25 to 60 per cent of the inventoried price.

A comparison of an Everett Audit Report with any similar document, will give you a good understanding of its great value. No matter what you buy, you must make some kind of a comparison to determine values. An audit report is no exception.

Great aid in passing upon these problems can be obtained from the history of a business. The institution that cleans up its liabilities each season is usually safe. The institution that keeps statistics of its affairs, such as volume of business, percentages of loss, of expense and of profit to gross income, and finally the net results, is in a position to sight danger, and usually sees it in time to prevent any loss to borrowed capital. Effective and profitable missionary work can always be done in advising and urging customers to thoroughly systematize their business. When this advice is followed, the customer is able, by the aid of the business compass, to discover the direction in which he is headed. The man who has the ability to understand and control his affairs relieves you of much responsibility. If, after investigation, you are in doubt about a manager's capacity to successfully handle his business, retire early.

NEWS OF CHICAGO CHAPTER A. I. B.

By OTTO J. KRAMPIKOWSKY.

The eleventh annual banquet of Chicago Chapter A. I. B. will be held Saturday evening, January 27, 1912, in the Red Room of the Hotel La Salle, at 6 p. m. John W. Rubcamp, chairman, as well as J. H. Ashley, secretary of the banquet committee, are both working hard to see that all arrangements are properly taken care of, and to make this the banner banquet given by the chapter so far. The speakers will be some of the most prominent men of to-day, as shown below:

George M. Reynolds, president of the Continental and Commercial National, who is a member and strong supporter of Chicago Chapter, will speak on the "Value of Institute Work." Mr. Reynolds is well known by all members of Chicago Chapter, and the subject on which he will speak will no doubt be very interesting as well as instructive to chapter members.

David Kinley, Ph.D., LL.D., dean University of Illinois, will lecture on "Some Responsibilities of a Banker."

Hon. Marcus Kavanagh, judge appellate court, who will speak on the subject, "The Citizen's Part in the Administration of Justice."

Rev. Wm. White Wilson, rector St. Marks Episcopal church, will speak on "Hope on, Hope Ever."

From the outlook it is quite evident that this banquet will surpass all those heretofore given by the chapter in both interest and attendance.

Wichita Chapter

The Wichita (Kan.) Chapter of the American Institute of Banking held its first annual meeting in the Wichita Chamber of Commerce the night of January 11th. This chapter includes members from adjacent counties and there were present at the annual meeting junior bankers from Newton, Wellington, Hutchinson, Eldorado, Winfield and several other nearby cities. The officers of the Wichita Chapter are E. C. Clairborne, president; Clyde A. Shup, vice-president; Frank Mosbacher, treasurer, and Leland Scrogin, secretary. The board of governors: O. L. Jacques, D. E. Wire, Frank Mosbacher, E. C. Clairborne, Leland Scrogin, Andrew J. Boyd, Clyde A. Shup, G. E. Outland and C. T. Abell. Frank T. Ransom, president of the Stock Yards National Bank, read a paper on "Ethical Points in Banking," after which there was a contest in mental arithmetic for which prizes were awarded. Prize in the first contest was won by H. A. Beck, Kansas National Bank; second contest, Walter Feldner, National Bank of Commerce. Former Senator Chester I. Long talked informally of banking methods and cited the cases of many successful men who had started their careers as bank clerks. The paper read by Mr. Ransom on "Ethical Points in Banking" was of especial interest to young bankers. In part Mr. Ransom said:

This is indeed a pleasure, a great pleasure, to appear before this splendid body of young men on what might well be called your first meeting as it is in reality the beginning of your chapter work. While I firmly believe that the banker is born, and not bred, yet a development of his latent talents is essential and there never has been devised a method nor a system that equals the plan of the American Institute of Banking. However, it is very necessary for you always to bear this in mind, that whatever of good to you individually and collectively there is to be derived from this association depends primarily upon each individual member—that is to say, upon his willingness to put his shoulder to the wheel and keep things going. No matter what assistance you may receive from the banks in Wichita, from the national association or any other source, remember this, that these things do not represent the force, the power, the vitality of your chapter.

Dynamic Force Is Within

The dynamic force that will carry you on to achievements must be within your organization. That organization is essential to development is true, but vastly more important is the fact that the members of the organization must be fairly riveted together and unified, as it were, and then this tremendous force and power centered upon the accomplishment of a specific and worthy purpose. It might be well to say to you that while you have your written constitution and by-laws for your guidance, there yet exists a more powerful factor, a more binding power and a more ennobling cause which, though not expressed in words, yet surrounds and permeates your organization.

Drop Narrow Ideas

This cosmic force is the ethical obligation you owe to your fraternity. Upon entering this fraternity you must leave behind you the idea that you work for number one or number two or any special bank. You must drop that narrow partisan idea, that false pride in perhaps the only bank that you have ever served. When you enter this work you are no longer the employee of a bank, but you are a member of the banking fraternity which reaches every nook and corner of this land of ours and you must hold yourself in communion with your fellows. I do not mean that your interest in and loyalty to your institution should be or would be lessened because a clerk that does not respect and honor the officers of his own bank and believe that it is the best bank in town is doing both himself and his bank an injustice by staying there, as there is certainly an ethical proposition involved. When you meet here, "forget it" and get together on the broad ground of "the advancement of our fraternity for the common good of all."

What Banking Means

It is stated that in London a given amount of legal reserve money deposited in a bank develops a credit power of 20 times that amount. In New York City the per cent is not so great, while taking the United States as a whole it

CENTRAL WEST LETTER

By EDGAR P. ALLEN

Omaha

For more than a week practically every foot of the Central West has been covered with a blanket of snow. Although this is hailed as insuring a wheat crop, it is proving a serious matter to stock raisers and feeders, many of whom have suffered serious losses of stock because the animals were unable to get grass. Speaking of these conditions, President E. F. Swinney, of the First National Bank of Kansas City, said: "It appears that most of the big feeders are prepared for this very emergency. One man who wrote me had on hand 1,500 tons of Kaffir corn and another was fortified by having three cars of 'cake' of stock food. Others, I have been informed, had laid by hay, corn, fodder and the like and will weather the storm in good shape. Do you know that stock will eat twice as much in cold weather? I know from experience. Over on my farm near Excelsior Springs I have fifty head of shorthorn cattle, and about the same number of Percheron mares and colts. The man in charge of the place telephoned me that they are eating about three loads of hay a day." Mr. Swinney said he had received many letters indicating that stock cattle, meaning cows and calves, are suffering from the severe weather, but that steers that are being fed for market are in good condition.

Plan Violates Anti-Trust Laws

The state-wide plan to abolish overdrafts, which has been progressing satisfactorily among the bankers of Texas, has been declared in violation of the anti-trust laws, by the Texas attorney-general. Bank Commissioner Gill has sent a letter outlining the opinion to each bank examiner with instructions that all the state banks be notified that the agreement suggested will be in violation of law. The Gill letter says: "Recently, in co-operation with the federal comptroller of the currency, I have undertaken to reduce and eliminate from the banks of Texas the custom of permitting overdrafts, and have recommended agreements between the banks of the various towns and cities in order to have a uniform and effective method. To this end, a number of banks have already adopted the plan, and many others have expressed their intention of doing so. I have asked the attorney-general in this connection if such an agreement would be in violation of the anti-trust laws of Texas, and have to-day his opinion that it would be, so that it becomes necessary for me to advise that no further agreement of this character should be entered into, and where such agreements have been made that they be canceled and not acted upon. This does not alter my opinion in the least that the custom is an unsafe practice and should be, as far as practicable, discontinued in the interests of sound banking, voluntarily upon the part of the banks."

Attempt to Blackmail Failed

Last May a particularly crude effort was made to blackmail W. S. Webb, vice-president and cashier of the Missouri Savings Bank of Kansas City. A man named David Lewis of uncertain occupation entered the bank and left a letter on Mr. Webb's desk demanding $1,500 and threatening Mr. Webb because of his alleged attentions to Mrs. Lewis, who was a hairdresser and had visited the Webb home to dress Mrs. Webb's hair. In her testimony given in the trial of the case the other day, Mrs. Lewis glibly told a story of how she had met Mr. Webb at various places down town and had gone with him to a certain hotel. The whole case was so ridiculous that the jury made short work of it and brought in a verdict of one year in the penitentiary and $50 fine against Lewis. Mr. Webb has lived in Kansas City all his life and his willingness to undergo the publicity the affair caused in order to punish a blackmailer was widely applauded.

Banking Changes in Kansas City

Three vacancies on the board of directors of the National Reserve Bank of Kansas were filled last week by the election of J. M. Coburn, F. H. Burrough and J. B. Jenkins, vice-president of the Mercantile Bank of Moberly, Mo., who is also treasurer of the Missouri State Bankers Association. Three vacancies on the board of directors of the National Bank of Commerce were filled by the election of J. T. Bradley, Eugene Rust and F. D. Whiting. Homer B. Mann, for many years a prominent politician in Kansas City, was elected director of the Mercantile National Bank, of Kansas City. B. T. Whipple is a new director of the New England National Bank of Kansas City.

State Guaranty Sufficient

Judge Pemberton of the Beatrice, Neb., district court has ruled that the Nebraska state guaranty is sufficient for the protection of the deposits of municipalities and city funds. This will, if it is sustained, settle a matter that has been in dispute in Nebraska for a long time.

Bank Robbers Routed

During the recent severe cold weather two men wearing black masks entered the Dale State Bank of Dale, Okla., and covered the cashier, Dillard Saylor, with a revolver. They demanded that he hand over all the cash that was in the drawer. Saylor made a motion as though to comply with the demand, when Vice-President Patton, who was in the rear of the room and unseen, opened fire upon the robbers. They fled and a posse chased them far out into the country but lost the track on account of the cold and darkness. There was nearly $17,000 in the cash drawer of the bank at the time of the attempted robbery.

A. G. Boyce Killed

J. B. Snead, president of the Bank of Amarillo, Texas, shot and killed A. G. Boyce Sr., also of Amarillo, when both were guests at a Fort Worth hotel the night of January 13th. Boyce was the father of the young man who eloped with Mrs. Snead a few weeks ago and took her to Canada. Snead followed the pair and brought his wife back to Texas, where he placed her in a sanitarium. Young Boyce is still in Canada. Just why Snead killed the elder Boyce is not known but it is presumed that there was a family feud. Both families are very wealthy, being among the biggest cattle ranchmen of the Southwest.

Banks' Affairs Not Yet Straightened Out

The complicated affairs of the American Union Trust Company and the All Night and Day Bank of Kansas City, Mo., and Kansas City, Kan., have not been straightened out. Bank Commissioner Swanger of Missouri says that the chances of liquidation of the institution and its allies seems good but he admits being disappointed in realizing on the assets of the company. Mr. Swanger has collected nearly enough on the bank's liabilities to pay the depositors but there are other obligations that have equal claim to consideration.

Central West Notes

J. W. Hoopes, secretary of the Texas Bankers Association, has announced that district meetings have been arranged for next month as follows: At Dallas, February 13th; Houston, February 14th; San Antonio, February 16th; Austin, February 17th; Waco, February 19th; Brownwood, February 20th, and Fort Worth, February 22d.

Fire destroyed the home of Peter Shiras, vice-president of the Peoples National Bank of Ottawa, Kan., on January 13th, causing a total loss of $20,000.

An exceptionally large number of Nebraska corporations have neglected to pay the 1911 corporation tax entitling them to continue business in that state. Among the delinquents are several important banks and trust companies.

State Treasurer George of Nebraska has compiled a statement of the amount of bonds of other states held by the Nebraska permanent school fund which have been sold and the proceeds invested in Nebraska securities. The report shows that bonds of the face value of $1,017,000 have been disposed of at a premium of $8,418.

Fire originating in the basement of the Mound Valley Bank of Mound Valley, Kan., destroyed the building, causing a total loss of bank fixtures. No valuable papers were lost, as they were in the bank's vault, which is fire-proof.

The filing of a suit in the federal court and the granting of an injunction to prevent the present officers of the Aetna Building and Loan Association of Topeka, Kan., from obtaining proxies for the annual election, has resulted in serious trouble for the second largest financial institution in Kansas. The postal savings bank in Kansas City, Kan., has $50,000 in deposits.

Several bankers are among the applicants for parole from the federal prison at Leavenworth. They are: H. G. Gall, Milwaukee; H. H. Tiers, Pittsburgh; Fred Lubbo, F. Cochran, M. P. Emerich and Paul C. Gall of Indianapolis.

Mrs. Minnie Y. Trickey, four years president of the Commercial State Bank of Rosedale, Kan., a suburb of Kansas City, has been re-elected for another year. Mrs. Trickey is also city treasurer of Rosedale.

Emporia, Kan., will issue $100,000 in bonds for a new high school building.

Sam Sanger has been elected president of the Brazos Valley Trust Company of Waco, Texas, recently organized with a capital of $500,000. The following are the vice-presidents: S. J. Jennings, Waco; I. A. Goldstein, Waco; G. W. Cole, Belton, and F. M. Gardner, Waco.

The building occupied by the DeSoto (Kan.) Bank, of which Governor Hadley of Missouri is the principal owner, was destroyed by fire the night of January 5th. All the bank's furniture and fixtures were destroyed, the loss being about $6,000.

The Kansas public utilities commission has authorized the Winnipeg, Salina & Gulf Railroad Company to issue $29,997,000 in bonds for construction work. The road is projected from Winnipeg, Canada, to the Gulf of Mexico, with various branches in Kansas and Oklahoma.

Another skirmish in the fight of Hugh A. Burrell, the Indiana banker, for his liberty will take place soon. Burrell is in Oklahoma City, Okla., where he is opposing extradition to be taken back to Jackson county, Ind., where he is charged with embezzling $79,000 from the Peoples State Bank of Brownston, Ind. After the failure of the bank he came to Oklahoma City.

The Texas legal department has approved a $1,250,000 bond issue for the Harris County Houston Ship Canal district. The money will be used to dredge the channel between Houston and the deep water of the Gulf.

George H. Bird has been elected secretary-treasurer of the newly organized Republic Surety, Fidelity and Trust Company of Dallas, Texas. Mr. Bird had been connected with the Commonwealth National Bank of Dallas for nine years.

L. D. Gass, cashier of the First National of Danville, who has been seriously ill for the past weeks, is reported better. He had been unconscious for three weeks. Mr. Gass is past grand chancellor of the Illinois Knights of Pythias.

Banking news from Minneapolis—St. Paul financial center, and surrounding States, compiled by J. Edwards Smith

After a long campaign to make the farm agreeable to the people the Minnesota Bankers Association has decided to bring the banker to the farm in a practical way. The scheme is to hold the next state convention at the state farm school of the University of Minnesota. The date is June 14th and 15th. The executive council, G. A. DuToit, chairman, at a meeting in St. Paul asked to have arrangements made and Dean A. F. Woods of the college acquiesced. Announcement was made at the state agricultural society meeting also, to cheer up the farmers with the thought that the bankers, after telling other people how to do it, are going to get right down to business and learn some intimate details of practical farming by absorption.

The regular course at the farm school closes the day before the convention, and the teaching staff will remain on the job to give the bankers a few pointers. Each banker is expected to carry a supply of oats straw to chew through the sessions.

"Representatives of 920 banks of Minnesota will have the opportunity to see for themselves what the state agricultural college is doing," said Joseph Chapman. "It will be a bankers meeting, unique in the history of the country, will be a good thing for the bankers and for the college, and incidentally will mark another new departure on the part of Minnesota in the work of bringing the bankers into close touch with the farm."

It is expected that James Wilson, secretary of agriculture, will attend the meeting, and that many prominent educators and agricultural experts will be present.

Changes at Northwestern National

The accounting force of the Northwestern National has been reorganized following the resignation of Assistant Cashier E. L. Mattson. R. S. Hume of the discount department will have charge of the exchange; H. S. Libby, head of the discount department, will be auditor; S. H. Plummer, auditor, has been made chief clerk of the office force; R. S. Swanson of the exchange department goes to the discount. H. E. Cass, transit department, goes into the railroad contracting business and L. V. Rose, assistant chief, takes his place.

W. F. McLane

W. F. McLane, cashier of the Hennepin County Savings, has been elected treasurer of the Hennepin County Juvenile Protective League. Mr. McLane immediately afterward made an address before the Minnesota Retail Implement Dealers' Association on "Exchange on Local Checks."

Chapman Addresses Minnesota State Agricultural Society

Before the Minnesota State Agricultural Society Joseph Chapman, Jr., said the trend of education has been away from the farm, and it is proposed to bring about changes that will make the child more fully understand the relationship of education to practical life.

"We are going to keep the country children closer in touch with farm life and not try to make city people of them." Mr. Chapman said, "and we are going to make the city children understand the importance of the country, and how little the city would amount to if it were not for the country."

To Have New Building

In sixty days the Galesville, Wis., Farmers and Merchants State Bank will move into its new building. Officers elected are: President A. O. Nelson, LaCrosse; vice-president, G. H. Lawrence; cashier, J. A. Berg; assistant, G. O. Sage; new directors, A. J. Nelson, A. T. Twesme, J. A. Berg, G. H. Lawrence, J. M. Benrud, John Dick, F. J. Stellpflug and S. D. Grover. A 7 per cent dividend was ordered and $500 was carried to surplus.

To Prove His Innocence

To show he was a goat, W. E. Poe, former city auditor at Williston, N. D., and pardoned, has asked the banking department to discover to the officials errors alleged that city and county officers report they cannot find. That he was the butt of others' crooked work is the plea of Poe and he wants to prove it through the state bank examiners.

Banking Notes

The Farmers and Mechanics Savings Bank has adopted a pension system for officers and employees based on salaries. The beneficiaries and the bank will both contribute to the fund. In case of old age, incapacity and death the benefits will inure. In the latter instance the money goes to the family of the dead one.

Plans are being drawn for a new bank building for the First State of Plummer, Minn. It is to be a 2-story brick, 24 by 40 feet.

On January 1st Minnesota was drawing interest from $18,585,365 in securities ranging from district school bonds to eastern state bonds. From 3½ to 4½ per cent is received.

The American State Bank of Sturgis, S. D., has been formed.

F. V. Langfeldt, late of Durant, Iowa, has bought a half interest in the Bank of Bowdle, S. D. New officers are: President, F. C. Langfeldt; vice-president, William Mathieu; cashier, W. G. Mathieu; assistant, H. H. Cook.

C. W. Farwell, assistant cashier of the Northwestern National, has gone to Biloxi, Miss., to get well.

From Grafton, N. D., it is reported that the bank deposits of Walsh county institutions divided the men, women, and children would give each $154. The banks have combined resources of $3,692,257, and deposits of $2,883,639. The farmers still have a lot of grain on hand.

E. B. Page, president of the Devil's Lake State, N. D., has been elected cashier of the Union National, Grand Forks. A. I. Hunter, former cashier, becomes acting vice-president. Stephen Collins is president. Mr. Page has

W. E. Lee, cashier of the Bank of Long Prairie, former president of the Minnesota Bankers Association, has come out as republican candidate for governor.

W. I. Prince, former state president, has resigned as cashier of the City National of Duluth, Minn., a position he has held nine years. H. S. MacGregor was made cashier to succeed Mr. Prince.

E. J. Weiser has been elected president of the Fargo First National to succeed Congressman J. B. Hanna. Absence from the city caused Mr. Hanna to ask to be relieved of the active position. The First has a capital and surplus of $250,000. In 1906 it was merged with the Red River Valley National. Mr. Weiser, since that time, has been in active management. The bank inaugurated the $1,000 corn contest in North Dakota.

BANK EXAMINATIONS TO BE MORE PROMPT

Comptroller of the Currency Murray has issued two important orders relating to the examination of the national banks. On investigation he has found that a large list of banks, which are overdue for examination, has been maintained in his office for years past. He has now resolved that every bank must be examined at the time the examination is due.

Mr. Murray has also found within recent months that in cases where a bank examiner reported adversely to certain conditions in a national bank there would frequently be a rush of bank officers to Washington for the purpose of complaining of the findings made and occasionally of criticizing or attacking the examiner. The thinks it is due to national bank examiners that they should be present whenever their work should be placed under fire. This ruling, it is believed, will prevent unnecessary complaints being filed and at the same time permit of a more speedy consideration of complaints, as the whole matter can be discussed fully at one hearing.

INDICTED BANKER DROPS DEAD

Cincinnati, January 16.—Thomas F. McClure, who was president of the Metropolitan Bank and Trust Company of this city, when it was closed by state bank examiners two months ago, dropped dead in the federal building to-day. Following the failure of the bank McClure was indicted by the Hamilton county grand jury on the charge of receiving deposits when he knew the bank to be insolvent.

McClure was about fifty years old, and had not been in good health since the revelations concerning the Metropolitan Bank. His case had not been set for trial.

Indiana

A report made by the comptroller of the currency on the condition of the national banks of Indiana is highly significant as indicating the general prosperity that prevails throughout the state. As far as banking is an index—and it is considered a very reliable one—the indications are that the year 1912, just beginning, will be one of progress and prosperity in Indiana. The figures given in the report are based on the last call for bank statements which were sent out on December 5th in comparison with the call of November 10, 1910. This is the nearest approximation that could be secured of the one-year period.

The report makes the following comparison: Total resources—1910, $225,253,329.74; 1911, $233,884,364.74. This is a gain of $8,631,035.

Individual deposits—1910, $132,031,660.96; 1911, $136,350,161.24, a gain of $4,318,500.28.

Loans and discounts—1910, $125,553,497.02; 1911, $128,041,618.95, an increase of $2,488,121.93.

The figures given above are for the entire state of Indiana, and include the national banks of Indianapolis.

The report for Indianapolis alone shows the following interesting comparisons:

Individual deposits—1910, $22,686,364.05; 1911, $22,810,062.36.

Total resources—1910, $168,831,332.02; 1911, $175,409,343.97.

Loans and discounts—1910, $29,133,730.76; 1911, $28,837,205.68.

The gain in individual deposits is relatively much greater in the banks located in the state outside Indianapolis than in Indianapolis. The individual deposits in banks outside of Indianapolis aggregated $109,345,296.91 in 1910 and $113,540,098.88 in 1911.

Indiana postal savings bank depositaries are making a rush for the government postal savings bonds, which are offered in exchange for postal bank deposits. Only one other state—Ohio—exceeds Indiana in the demand for these new government securities. From Indiana 170 applications have been received for postal bonds, of which sixty-six are from women. The total amount applied for is $30,700. Ohio leads with 347 applicants and the total amount applied for is $71,640.

SAVINGS BANK ASSOCIATION MEETS

State Savings Bank Association (New York) met at Albany Friday, to record itself against Senator Grady's savings bank bill, and to pass upon bill prepared by its executive committee to build up surpluses by compelling banks with small surpluses to pay lesser interest rates until surpluses reach certain figures. Discussion over the committee bill continued all day. It was generally opposed by smaller banks.

The state insurance superintendent declared that the proposed bill would put out of business several state savings institutions, and moreover he failed to see how new banks could be organized under the proposed law. He doubted whether half the savings banks of the state could pay 4 per cent, and declared that no state savings bank should be allowed to pay such a rate. Big insurance corporations, he said, are getting ready for a 3 per cent rate, and the best insurance companies were those whose reserves are on a 3 per cent basis. He believes the state has power to limit the interest rate of savings banks.

The Broadway Savings Bank, through its president, opposed the proposed bill. President Aitken of the Bronx Savings Bank, believed the proposed bill unconstitutional and class legislation. He urged that it be amended not to take effect until October 1, 1915, and further amended so that any savings banks having less than 15 per cent market surplus should not pay more than 3 per cent until above date.

Another amendment offered by the superintendent of insurance provided that the executive committee's bill should not be operative in case of any bank until ten years old. He said such provision would prevent monopolization of the field by larger banks, and would permit organization of more savings institutions. The amendment was defeated, 22 to 38. All other amendments were also lost, and report of committee embodying association bill was adopted. It will be introduced at an early day in the legislature, where much opposition is anticipated from representatives of savings banks throughout the state.

COLUMBUS BANK TO PAY 50 PER CENT

Depositors in the defunct Union National of Columbus will receive 50 per cent of their money the first week in February, according to an announcement by William B. Goodhart, receiver. Since taking charge of the affairs of the bank, Receiver Goodhart has succeeded in collecting $900,000 on outstanding paper. Of this amount $350,000 has been applied on bills payable and the remainder will go to the depositors.

The monthly financial letter of the Anglo and London Paris National Bank says: The year 1911 was uneventful in Pacific Coast finance. The far West has shared with the South the honor of a normal increase of business, as shown by the volume of clearings, while other sections with large industrial populations seemed to have made little or no progress. The steady liquidation of unsound or insufficiently capitalized enterprises which has been going on since 1907 has greatly strengthened the financial situation. The feature of the year has been the high prices received for our crops, most of which were at least moderately good while some were the largest on record. We see no reason to change our opinion expressed last August that receipts from the products of the soil of California in 1911 will be the largest in our history. It is believed that in spite of the low prices for petroleum our mineral output will also make a record. The market for forest products has not been good but returns from the fisheries have been satisfactory.

Our industrial interests are large and varied, but expansion on a large scale awaits a final settlement of relative freight rates and a better adjustment of the labor situation. So far as it depends on development of hydro-electric power it will be affected, favorably or otherwise, by the attitude of the public authorities acting under recent state legislation. Especially will this be the case in respect to the various public services in which large investment is much needed. The commerce of the port is pressing hard upon the port facilities which the port funds are able to provide. Population steadily increases, mainly upon the basis of new land brought under irrigation. The year was one of steady progress on a solid financial basis which is reflected in an equally steady increase of urban and rural land values. Building in all cities keeps pace with requirements and in this city the scars left by the great fire are being rapidly covered. There is special confidence in properly planned buildings in this city, arising from the conviction that even structures built in anticipation of special demand during Exposition year will continue to find profitable use owing to the increase of population, commerce and industry which must follow the opening of the canal.

Early in 1911 the spread of the plague in China caused uneasiness, which was reflected in a lower silver market. During March and April upon better news from China prices were well maintained, although quietness prevailed until late in April, when some improvement appeared, owing to the possible Chinese requirements in connection with the proposed new coinage. The Mexican rebellion for a time interfered with mining, resulting in a curtailment of supplies which promised speculative holders of the metal an opportunity to force up prices. However, light demand from the silver using countries and the anxiety concerning crop prospects in India prevented speculators from placing prices higher than other market conditions warranted. Early in November a temporarily successful corner in spot silver was established, and maintained for about a month. The year closes with China a keen buyer of the metal at current prices which, despite fluctuations, practically end December at the same level as existed at the commencement of January.

LOS ANGELES BANK WILL MOVE TO NEW LOCATION

The directors of the Los Angeles Hibernian Savings Bank have taken a lease on the second floor of the Union Trust building, at Fourth and Spring streets, and they have announced that on St. Patrick's day, March 17, 1912, the bank would be moved to that location. The directors also have announced that they intended to give their savings depositors the benefit of the saving in rental charges, and that beginning January 1st the rate of interest paid on six months' term deposits will be increased from four to five per cent a year, the limit on the amount which will be accepted from any one depositor under the new rate being fixed at $5,000. The Los Angeles Hibernian Savings Bank has a paid-up capital of $250,000. Its officers and directors are: George Chaffey, president; G. Allan Hancock, J. A. Cashion, and J. D. Radford, vice-presidents; A. M. Chaffey, O. M. Souden, George A. J. Howard, cashier; T. E. Ivey, Jr., assistant cashier; A. M. Gibbs, secretary.

The New York Clearing House Association reports the total exchanges for the year 1911 at $92,372,812,735, and the balances for the same period, $4,516,496,995.

Seattle

Prosecuting Attorney F. W. Tempes, of Clarke county, Washington, has recommended to Governor M. E. Hay that more rigid legislation is needed in connection with the operation of state banks. His suggestions include these paragraphs:

I would suggest the repeal of the present law relative to drawing of checks without funds and the enactment of a law making it a felony to place in circulation a check without having funds in the bank upon which the same is drawn to pay the same upon presentation for payment.

I would suggest that the loaning powers of state banks be so restricted as not to exceed 20 per cent of the capital stock of any such bank to any one person, firm or corporation, and that a violation thereof be made a felony; that it be made a felony for the officers of a state bank to receive deposits after the available funds on hand fall below 15 per cent of its demand liabilities; that no person be allowed to borrow from a state bank in which he may be an officer under any consideration, this to include any firm or corporation in which any officer of any such bank may be interested, and that a violation thereof be made a felony; that it be mandatory upon the state bank examiner to close the doors of any state bank when he shall find that any of the above provisions are violated.

Gold to the value of $6,055,953, nearly 14 tons, was handled by the Seattle assay office during the year 1911, according to totals struck by Chief Assayer Calvin E. Vilas. Receipts of silver during the course of the same period brought the total of precious minerals received by the office up to an aggregate valuation of $6,111,395,69. Alaska was the chief contributor, with shipments to the assay office the value of which totaled $4,816,892,06. British Columbia comes next with a total of $1,074,290,78. Yukon Territory, which includes the rich Klondike and Atlin districts that at one time sent a large flow of treasure through the local assay office, has a very poor representation in the totals for last year, the figures being $17,831,78. Significant activity of mining men in the Northwestern states is reflected in the record of mines of Washington, Oregon and other states—Washington chiefly—having sent in metals to the valuation of $202,290,17.

ELECT OFFICERS

At the annual meeting of the Mankato (Minn.) Savings Bank directors the same officers were re-elected for the ensuing year. George E. Brett, president; Charles A. Chapman, vice-president; William W. Davis, treasurer. It was voted that the rate of interest to be paid depositors for six months ending December 31, 1911, be fixed at four per cent. The bank has had a most prosperous year and is in fine condition and looks forward to another year of prosperity in business.

The Bank of Ontario, Wisc., has been organized, with a capital of $10,000. President A. T. Sanders; vice-president, Dr. L. L. Abbott; cashier, M. Donahue; secretary, C. M. Sandon.

100th ANNIVERSARY OF OLDEST TRUST CO. HELD

The Pennsylvania Company for Insurances on Lines and Granting Annuities celebrated its centennial on Monday. This is the oldest trust company in the country. It was founded in 1809, but was not chartered until 100 years ago. It holds trust funds to a larger total than any other trust company in the world. These funds amount to $175,600,000. The first trust estate to be intrusted to the company was on June 15, 1838. From one estate intrusted to the company in 1853 payments are still being made to the beneficiaries. Every month remittances are made to persons living all over the country, and in different parts of the world, who are heirs or beneficiaries of 2,250 estates managed by the concern.

Dividends have been paid since 1815, and, in all, $15,819,751 of profits have been distributed to the stockholders.

About 700 persons attended the luncheon and reception given yesterday by the company to celebrate its 100th birthday.

FOREIGN COMMERCE FOR 1911

The foreign commerce record of the calendar year 1911, so far as relates to total imports and exports, has been completed by the Bureau of Statistics, Department of Commerce and Labor. It shows imports $1,532,931,861, a larger total than in any year except 1910, which showed $1,562,904,151 as the value of imports. The exports of the calendar year 1911 were valued at $2,092,373,141, a larger total than in any preceding year and considerably larger than the total of $1,923,426,205 shown by 1907, the former high record year in exports. The excess of exports over imports in the calendar year just ended was $559,441,280, a larger excess of exports than in any year since 1908, when the total was $636,000,000 dollars, while that of 1900 was $649,000,000. The dutiable imports were $738,481,025 in value; those free of duty, $794,450,836, the share entering free of duty being 51.82 per cent. The total commerce, imports and exports combined, was $3,625,305,002, against $3,429,163,055, in 1910, the former high record year in total trade.

BANK ROBBERS IN CALIFORNIA

Three masked bandits early Saturday morning dynamited the vaults in the State Bank of Newport, Newport Beach, Cal., but were frightened away before they could get their loot, amounting to nearly $10,000, which was found scattered about on the floor of the bank.

William Hall, living near by, was awakened by the explosion. Rushing into the street with a rifle, he began shooting into the bank, which caused the robbers to abandon their work, rush out and escape in a rig. Trails of blood from the bank to the vehicle led the officers to believe that Hall shot one of the robbers. A posse is in pursuit of the bandits.

SECURITY BANK AND TRUST COMPANY, HELENA, ARK.

Down in the eastern part of Arkansas, in Helena, located in a handsome building of its own, is the Security Bank and Trust Company. This institution, since its organization on September 1, 1910, has had a steady growth, and on December 30th had deposits of $344,915.06. Louis Solomon is the cashier, and has helped very materially in its success. The Security Bank and Trust Company is capitalized at $100,000, has profits of $15,649.12, and total resources of $472,638.96. The officers are S. C. Moore, president; J. L. Solomon, vice-president; Louis Solomon, cashier, and Percy Butterick, assistant cashier. Directors: Lee Pendergrass, J. Ware, Phillip Solomon, S. Straub, C. R. Coolidge, D. A. Keesham, J. A. Toppan, and J. W. Clopton.

HUNGARIAN BANKERS HERE

Baron Paul Kornfeld, managing director of the Hungarian General Credit Bank, and Otto Conrad, a representative of the Hungarian Commercial Bank of Budapest, arrived in New York recently on the Lusitania to push the plan to establish a bank in this country with Hungarian capital. Accompanying them was Julius Pirnitzer, who will be managing director of the institution. The prime movers of the formation of the new bank are the Hungarian General Credit Bank, the Hungarian Commercial Bank of Pest and the Hungarian Discount and Exchange Bank. Associated with them are a number of important financial concerns of Budapest and the Hungarian province.

It is the intention to start the new institution as a trust company, with a capital of $1,000,000 and to foster commercial and financial relations between the United States and Hungary. Eventually a number of prominent American bankers will be asked to go on its board of directors. Mr. Pirnitzer, who is familiar with conditions here, has spent a number of years in diplomatic and commercial service.

ACCOUNTS SHORT

Stockton, Cal.—J. C. Sterling, former cashier of the Union Safe Deposit Bank of this city, is a defaulter to the extent of $15,000. When confronted by the bank officials with the evidence of the defalcation, Sterling broke down and confessed, explaining that he had lost the money in land speculation. Friends have deposited securities amounting to half the shortage and expect to cover the remainder by Monday. Sterling severed his connection with the bank last June. Cashier McGown discovered the defalcation of $15,000 which had been on the books since last June. The defalcation was handled so skillfully that even the bank examiners last June failed to discover it.

ORGANIZATION OF NATIONAL BANKS

During December, 1911, eleven applications to organize national banks were received. Of the applications pending, twenty were approved and none rejected. In the same month eleven banks with total capital of $830,000 were authorized to begin business.

During the calendar year ended December 31, 1911, there were received 314 applications to organize national banks. Of the applications pending, 236 were approved and 70 rejected; 206 banks with total capital of $11,505,000 were authorized to begin business.

On December 31, 1911, the total number of national banks organized was 10,119, of which 2,779 had discontinued business, leaving in existence 7,340 banks with authorized capital of $1,033,302,135, and circulation outstanding secured by bonds of $714,363,068.

The total amount of the national bank circulation outstanding was $740,603,187, of which $26,240,119 was covered by lawful money of a like amount deposited with the treasurer of the United States on account of associations which had reduced their circulation liquidating and insolvent national banks and tion.

Reserve Agents for National Banks

Des Moines, January 17.—The bank meetings in Des Moines have passed with very few changes in the personnel of the officials. A. E. Hollingsworth was chosen a director in the Des Moines National, succeeding the late Carroll Wright. G. W. Pitcairn has removed to California but will continue on the directory board indefinitely. The Iowa National postponed its meeting because of the absence of Homer A. Miller, president and Harry Blackburn, cashier. No changes are anticipated, however. The banks uniformly reported events as entirely satisfactory and the usual dividends were declared. In many cases, a neat little sum was added to the surplus.

It has not been possible to keep track of the numerous changes in various banks throughout Iowa. A few of the most important, so far as they have been reported to Des Moines bankers, are as follows:

M. B. Hutchinson retires as one vice-president of the First National at Ottumwa and H. L. Waterman remains as the other vice-president. P. C. Ackley is advanced to cashier.

Hans Stoltenberg, a veteran director of the Farmers and Mechanics Savings at Davenport, retires. Fred Kunkel and William A. Hickey have been elected to succeed him and the late Julius Sander.

E. E. Hartung retires as vice-president of the Iowa Savings at Estherville to remove from the state, and Mack J. Groves succeeds him.

George N. Garretson, cashier of the Iowa State at Waterloo, becomes vice-president as well, and J. K. Joder is advanced from vice-president to president. Louis Frank is a new member of the board of directors.

F. J. Eighmey becomes president of the First National at Waterloo, succeeding F. J. Fowler, who retires.

Cedar Rapids Bank Building Commended

The Peoples Savings at Cedar Rapids is given unusual distinction in a recent number of the Architectural Record, in that its handsome new building is commended most favorably. The bank occupied the new building four months ago. The Architectural Record notes that the bank is individual in style and construction. It consists essentially of a central space or main banking room surrounded by subordinate rooms of a single story, which expand the total dimensions of the ground plan to 50 by 90 feet. There is a cerestory which is necessary for the lighting and gives the interior an architectural prominence. The blank space accruing under the windows of the cerestory, which in church architecture would be the triforium, offers a most tempting expanse for mural decorations, where they can best be seen on one hand and lighted on the other. The exterior is described as having a resemblance to a mediaeval castle. The article is accompanied by photographs. It is also explained that an average of twenty-five strangers a day have been going to the new bank to have a look at it. The officers of the Peoples Savings, which is one of the strong institutions of central Iowa, are H. E. Witwer, president; F. H. Shaver, vice-president; Wm. King, second vice-president; John Burianek, Jr., cashier; John M. Ely, assistant cashier.

Interesting Banking Decision

A decision has been handed down by the attorney-general to the effect that banks in listing their property for taxation cannot deduct from their assets amounts of money invested in non-taxable drainage and municipal bonds. Special Counsel Robbins has opined on the question, and he rules as he does on two grounds. First, that under the new law the assessment is not made to the bank itself; therefore the bank cannot make the deduction. This question of non-taxable bonds since the passage of the bill making such bonds taxable by the legislature a year ago has proved a source of fruitful gossip among bankers, who say that not a little money has been withdrawn from accounts to be invested in securities of this character.

Des Moines Bankers Proud of Record

Des Moines bankers have been "pointing with pride," to Dun's Review showing the bank clearings of the Middle West for the year 1911. This Review shows that Des Moines bank clearings gained 2.4 per cent. Cedar Rapids was the only other Iowa city, according to the Review, to show a gain. The clearings here are $66,295,274 as against $65,746,706 in the preceding year. Sioux City and Davenport show declines. Des Moines and Cedar Rapids are shown as two of the six cities in the western division which show increases.

D. L. Heinsheimer

D. L. Heinsheimer, president of the Mills County National at Glenwood, and a member of the time-lock committee of the Iowa Bankers Association, has disposed of his mercantile business in Glenwood, and will devote his entire time hereafter to the interests of the bank. Mr. Heinsheimer began business in Glenwood in 1860, and has continued without a break. It is probable that he holds the "long distance" mercantile record for Iowa. A Lincoln, Nebraska, firm is the purchaser of the business, with which Mr. Heinsheimer has been so long connected.

L. H. Sears Retires from Bank

L. H. Sears, president of the Scott County Savings at Davenport, and the oldest banker in that city, announced his retirement at the annual meeting. Mr. Sears was chosen chairman of the board of directors, and J. H. Hass becomes president. Mr. Sears, who is now past 90 years of age, has gone to Mississippi to spend the winter. Mr. Hass has been with the bank since it opened in 1863, and took in the first money deposited therein. He had been cashier from the year 1864, to the present. Gustav Steuben, who entered the employ of the institution in 1896 as messenger boy, was advanced from assistant cashier to cashier.

"Back to the Farm" Movement in Iowa

The interest of Iowa bankers in the question of taking an active stand for the betterment of Iowa farm conditions and in an active effort to increase the producing wealth of the state has been quickened by the annual short course at Ames, which this year has proved the best on record despite the extremely cold weather. Agricultural development is becoming recognized as necessary to continued growth in Iowa, just as it is coming to the front in other western states where the bankers are beginning to get busy. The Des Moines Capital has announced a series of prizes totaling $515, which will be given to the boys of Iowa, who raise the most corn on single acres of Iowa soil. Many bankers are starting similar contests on smaller scales in their various territories.

Alber Transferred to Insurance Department

Auditor of State John L. Bleakly has made a shift in his office whereby Fred J. Alber, well known clerk in the state banking department, becomes a clerk in the insurance department. The place which Mr. Alber has so well filled has not as yet been cared for.

Plea for Better Currency System

A recent editorial in the Des Moines Register and Leader has been attracting some little attention among bankers. The editorial is entitled, "Applying the Local Lesson." The editorial is a plea for a better currency system. The importance of banks standing together is commented upon, and reference is made to the financial distress of a few years ago. It says among other things: "What the local banks did was to mass their resources to protect the community credit. Standing alone, each bank caring for itself, this could not have been done. Des Moines would certainly have experienced a commercial smash if the banks had not stood as one institution. What that would have meant, no one can adequately forecast. It is enough to know that it would have entailed tremendous loss on every legitimate business interest, and left a wreckage, years would not have sufficed to wholly clear away. The problem of our finances is to apply the wisdom gained in this local experience to the national situation. It is just as practicable to mass the banking resources of the country behind national business as the banking resources of a single community behind local business."

Banking Notes

Secretary Hall of the Iowa Bankers Association has been at his old home in Sheldon on bank business. Mr. Hall has been sending out letters to the members of the association commending the association for securing the W. J. Burns Agency to protect it, and incidentally congratulating himself and the bankers of Iowa.

Joseph Sartori of Cedar Falls has gone to Los Angeles on his yearly visit to the home of his son, president of the Security of Los Angeles, a former Iowa boy, who has more than made good in the West.

John Elliott, cashier of the Commercial Savings, Des Moines, was coasting with his son down the slope at the rear of his home when he fell, and was so badly bruised that he was compelled to stay at home for several days.

Charles H. Smith, postmaster at Marshalltown, and director for several years in the First National at Marshalltown, died suddenly at his home in that city recently.

The Farmers Savings at Bagley has filed articles with the secretary of state. The capital stock is $15,000. The president is J. W. Thompson; vice-president, John Quayle; cashier, C. E. Nichols.

The Cleres Savings is a new institution at Cleres. The officers are president O. A. Ontzes; vice-president, Heye Boywaza; cashier, J. J. Ludemann.

The State Savings at Fontanelle has been made depository for the postoffice bank at Fontanelle, and for that at Massena. Neither bank at Massena has qualified to act as depository.

Roy Evans, son of Cashier David E. Evans, of the Citizens Savings at Williamsburg, was married recently to Miss Cora Hakes, a popular girl of Williamsburg.

Leroy Utterbach, held for the theft of $1,500, from the Black Hawk National at Waterloo, some months ago, has been released on bonds. The money was given by the young man to his sweetheart, who had expressed a wish to own an automobile. It was practically all recovered.

Louis Visha, formerly assistant cashier of the Cedar Rapids National, has resigned to become cashier of a bank at Dallas, S. D.

Fordyce Bisbee, cashier of the Turin Bank at Turin, Iowa, was painfully injured, when an automobile in which he was taking Banker Kieffer of Soldier joy-riding turned over, and went down an embankment.

The handsome $4,000 automobile belonging to W. G. C. Bagley, cashier of the First National at Mason City, caught fire and was destroyed. The residence was threatened, but not damaged. Most of the damage to the car was by the water in contact with the heated machinery.

The officers of the German Bank at Battle Creek recently went on a tour of inspection to Ida Grove, in quest of ideas for the new institution to be constructed at Battle Creek.

George Jepson of Waterloo has gone to Newell to engage in the banking business.

D. M. Kelleher has purchased the Lowery interests in the Pomeroy State.

The Iowa supreme court has affirmed the conviction of Mrs. C. M. Swearington, who was fined $500 for trying to shoot Banker S. S. Williams, on the streets at Sidney some months ago.

Sioux City

By JOHN J. BIDDISON.

A complete change all round was the result of the annual meeting of the Sioux City Clearing House Association Monday afternoon, seven banks being represented. George S. Parker, president of the Live Stock National, after two years' service, retired from the presidency, and was succeeded by George Sinclair, cashier of the Woodbury County Savings Bank. L. H. Henry, cashier of the Iowa Savings Bank and former secretary, was made vice-president; Jno. A. Magoun, Jr., president of the Northwestern National, was made secretary, and George R. Whitmer, president of the Farmers Trust and Savings Bank, which has been admitted to the clearing house within the last month, was made treasurer. Clifford Atkinson, of the Live Stock National, was then appointed manager.

Falling off in Bank Clearings

The extreme cold weather, which has enveloped the whole Northwest for more than two weeks past, has had the to be expected paralyzing effect on the banking business, since a large part of the activities of the city are of course dependent upon the doing of business in the country. Clearings have fallen off quite perceptibly, in consequence.

George S. Parker

George S. Parker, president of the Live-stock National, retired Tuesday night as president of the Commercial Club, following the annual meeting. This meeting, which was accompanied by a banquet, numbered among the addresses one by Miller Weir, president of a bank at Jacksonville, Ill., and former national bank examiner at large.

Clearing House Association Luncheon

At a luncheon of the clearing house association Monday, several out of town bankers were guests. They were W. A. Heath, of Chicago, president of the Live Stock Exchange National, Miller Weir of Jacksonville, Ill., and E. W. Munson, national bank examiner for South Dakota. The latter was the guest of Jno. J. Large, vice-president of the First National. Mr. Weir was the guest of John McHugh.

Banking News Notes

A change in the personnel of the Bennett Loan and Trust Company followed the annual election last week. F. W. Kemp, of Manning, Ia., formerly of Sioux City, will return to the company as secretary, to which office he was elected. Mr. Kemp, when here before, was cashier of the Peoples Savings Bank.

A. W. Dula, cashier of the LeMars Savings Bank, has resigned his position, and will engage in the insurance business.

Leroy A. Utterbach, a former employee of the Black Hawk National Bank, has been indicted on five counts alleging the larceny of $1,500 from the bank last September. It was reported at the time that he took the money to buy a motor car for a "lady friend," and Miss Kathryne Pfalzgraf was indicted on the charge of receiving stolen goods.

F. C. Langfeldt, formerly of Durant, Ia., has purchased a half interest in the Bank of Bowdie, and will become its president and active manager. The other officers will be Wm Mathieu, vice-president; W. G. Mathieu, cashier, and Hugo H. Cook, assistant cashier.

Among the Visiting Bankers

G. J. Moen, cashier of the Fairview State Bank, Fairview, S. D., was in town Tuesday on business.

O. G. Kemp, cashier of P. G. Riedesel & Co., bankers, Oto, Iowa, was in the city Friday.

W. A. Morgan, cashier of the First National Bank, Springfield, S. D., was in the city Monday, on his way home, from the old home in Missouri.

BRUNER MADE PRESIDENT OF BANK

Ben L. Bruner, who has just retired as secretary of the state of Kentucky, has been elected president of the Commercial Bank and Trust Company of Louisville. Dr. Bruner was recommended by and succeeds Caldwell Norton, who became president in October, following the retirement of Sam P. Jones. Mr. Norton said that he had accepted the office only with the understanding that it was temporary, and that he would be permitted to retire as soon as an able man could be secured to take his place. Dr. Bruner is well qualified for the position, following his service of four years as head of the banking department of the state, and in addition he is a man of unusual personality and aggressiveness. He is expected to make the Commercial Bank and Trust Company an ideal head.

Italian Castles and Country Seats

The place of honor in the January list of new and attractive books and editions issued by Longmans, Green & Co., Fourth Avenue and Thirtieth Street, New York, is held by "Italian Castles and Country Seats," written by Tryphosa Bates Batcheller. Mrs. Batcheller had world-wide success with her former Italian attempt, "Glimpses of Italian Court Life," which is to be found in every library of prominence in most of the civilized countries. Truly, Mrs. Batcheller has produced a valuable and a wonderful book. It is splendidly printed and bound, and so great an authority as the "Chicago Dial" has pronounced it "a truly sumptuous volume." The illustrations are numerous, consisting of four photogravures, four plates in color and eighty half tone plates on cameo plate paper, all printed in sepia. The book is a large 8vo., and contains 525 pages, bound in cloth with ornamental gilt top and corners. Longmans, Green & Co. furnish this book at $5.00 net, express and postage being extra.

In the making of books about Italy there has been the greatest activity, not only within recent, but for many years. Most of these have had to do with her public affairs, her cities, churches, cathedrals, battleships and works of art. In reality, Mrs. Batcheller's field is entirely new to the subject. She presents the first real insight into this new Italy and into the lives and homes of many of the people. Those with whom she came most in contact are the active spirits contributing to the shaping of the destiny of this newly-made, old nation. Under the splendid patronage of President Taft and Queen Margherita, Mrs. Batcheller was admitted to the palaces and country seats, not only of all the reigning houses and titled aristocracy, but to those of the well educated and prosperous middle classes. She has been enabled on this account to not only become familiar with the family history in the present times, but has gleaned directly from members of the families something of what those families experienced during the past generations of this nation. In almost every case the pictures are truly illustrative of the text. Mrs. Batcheller has written her work in the form of letters to the folks at home, and all of her descriptive writing was done on the spot while the impressions received were vivid, and not a few of the illustrations were taken with her own kodak. Many travelers in foreign lands, and especially in southern Europe, if they write at all, write about the life of the lower classes. They are certainly the more picturesque of the two, but Mrs. Batcheller has given her time and attention only to the highest and the best which Italy affords. The bits of biography, sketches and stories about the famous men and women of Italy are new. They are her very own. If all other parts of the book could be obliterated, there would remain much that was very interesting and attractive in this feature of her work. The daily intimate life of the Italian nobility is presented just as she saw it, and has been preserved in a most beautiful product of the book-making art. Mrs. Batcheller had permission from Queen Margherita, after a careful examination of the text, to dedicate the work in full to her. From the very first Her Majesty, the Queen, inspired and encouraged the author, and has received her tender and grateful thanks for what she has done to place the home life of Italy properly before the reading people of the world. On the other hand, Mrs. Batcheller has done all that she could to express her appreciation of the bountiful kindnesses and happinesses which were hers in beautiful Italy.

The work is divided into twenty-seven chapters, many of them devoted in full to touring trips taken by Mrs. Batcheller in her high power Fiat. Among other places visited by her was the factory at Turin, where her car had been made. She was greatly astonished to learn that some two hundred pieces of automatic machinery used in the Fiat factory had been made at Springfield, Ohio, U. S. A. This machinery cost something over two millions of dollars, and the purchasers continue to be afraid that someone in America will solve the problem of making the entire car automatically. Signor Marchesi, the manager, has heard about Americans cutting the grain from fields of one thousand acres and eating biscuit made from the flour while doing the work. He also has heard of machines, which turn out one thousand pairs of shoes per day in our great shoe factories, and of the height of some of our buildings, but remarked that he had never heard of an American workman remaining overtime, that his particular piece of work might be the better finished. The signor's idea is that America is so wonderful that the unexpected may be looked for. He is expecting some gigantic piece of machinery to be designed, which will do all of the automobile manufacturing and assembly work, just like the sewing machine took the place of the hand workers.

Mrs. Batcheller tells us that the average upper class family in Italy is very proud of its history and never tires of telling of soldiers, diplomats, archbishops, cardinals and other great and distinguished members. Most of them can trace their ancestors back for a thousand years, and some of them for a great deal further. Many of the old castles and country seats were in existence in the year 1000. The most attractive part of these features of the book is that the author had them direct from some living member of the family, who knew the facts well and had a great interest in relating them. She met many distinguished Italians, who had traveled west through our Yellowstone Park, saw San Francisco, and California's and Colorado's wonders, Montreal, Quebec, and spoke familiarly about Washington or Boston.

Mrs. Batcheller devoted all four seasons of the year to her preparation for writing "Italian Castles and Country Seats." She did this to be the better equipped for telling in interesting detail how the leading families of that splendid country employ their time and enjoy their leisure in winter as well as in summer; in springtime as well as in fall. In times past Italian families of prominence lived largely in castles, which were in some sense strongholds or foretresses, much as they were in the northern countries of Europe. Changes were a long time in coming about, so that the ancient castles remained the country seats of the leading families long after their real usefulness had passed. It was the custom then for the reigning head of the family to occupy the first floor, his eldest married son the second floor, and the second married son the third floor. The married daughters usually lived with the families into which they married. In recent years, however, these married daughters, and in many cases the married sons, have preferred to build and equip for themselves a place of residence known in Italy as a villa, but which would appear to most people, on account of the size and grandeur, a veritable palace. Most of these sons and daughters lead quite active lives, taking a deep interest in the development of the cities which are located upon their estates and of the manufacturing enterprises which they assist in founding. Many of these villas are famous the world over; the garden attached to one of them inspired the late Pere Loti to write one of his most famous stories.

The gifted authoress spent a portion of her time in Sicily, the home of the world-famous Mafia. At home this organization is known as the "Society of Friends," and had its origin, so the best educated people in Sicily told Mrs. Batcheller, in the times when Sicily was being plundered systematically by whatever power seemed to be dominant in that part of the hemisphere at the time. The organization came into existence through the natural instinct of men to protect their families, their women, and their property, and to bind themselves together the better to cope with the strong. What was a justifiable organization, and served a very useful purpose centuries ago, has, no doubt, developed into a very different organization in the present day. Ninety per cent of the crimes committed in America by Sicilians and Italians are attributed to the Mafia, or a branch of it, known as the Black-Hand. There can be little doubt, that in recent times the Mafia in Sicily has given up almost its entire time to resisting organized authority, and in enriching its members through robbery and other crimes.

Mrs. Batcheller found that for centuries it has been the custom in Sicily to teach the schoolboy, who is hit over the head by a larger boy to "be a man, and not a tattler." In college the youth is told, "be a man and don't peach on the seniors." Even the urchin in the street is punished by his father if he cries, when he is knocked on the head by a playmate. This has been instilled into the Sicilians and most of the Italians for so many centuries that it has become a part of their character never to betray a compatriot, be the friend or enemy. It is said that many Sicilians and Italians have stood trial in court and taken punishment for crimes which they did not commit, when they knew full well who the guilty persons were. Of course, there is a sort of mutual protection in this for among such persons, if the accused had told on someone not accused, that person in turn might have revealed other crimes committed by the man on trial. They have a proverb there, which teaches that "truth is to be told only to the confessor," and those who have had business dealings with the natives, no doubt, are convinced of the fact that the teachings of this proverb are largely carried out. It is related even by Mrs. Batcheller in her most friendly of volumes to the Italians, that at the time of the Messina earthquake the natives who were not killed immediately began to plunder the bodies of those who were, rather than to help release those imprisoned in the wreckage or requiring food and assistance. So general was this conduct on the part of the natives that the troops were ordered to shoot on sight any native who was found rummaging about the ruins. Certainly this is a reflection upon moral and social conditions, be they attributable to improper teaching or faulty religious training or whatever the cause may be. Italy has been going forward by leaps and bounds, however, since its recent formation into one cohesive nation, and the world expects better people to come from her provinces and dependencies in the future, and expects also that they will live more as the people of other countries.

To all of those who have traveled in Italy or expect to travel there, to the reader of books on travel, "Italian Castles and Country Seats" can be recommended as a most entertaining and instructive work, without a peer in contemporary literature in its chosen field. Italy has her problems to be figured out, and has her own methods of solving them. All of these things are kindly treated and presented by Mrs. Batcheller, who allows no opportunity to escape for putting the home life of Italy properly before the world.

GROWTH IN PENNSYLVANIA STATE BANKS

Decided gains in the amount of business transacted by the savings institutions, state banks and trust companies of Pennsylvania and a healthy growth along all lines of their work is shown by the advance sheets of the seventeenth annual report of the state banking commissioner.

In his report, which is for the fiscal year ended November 6, 1911, State Banking Commissioner William H. Smith gives the total resources of the savings institutions in 1911 as $209,298,958.66, against $198,425,071.44 in the preceding year. The time deposits increased from $175,133,799.72 to $184,619,230.43. Of the 11 corporations in Pennsylvania classified as savings institutions seven are in Philadelphia, with total assets on November 6, 1911, of $174,326,202.21. These seven Philadelphia savings institutions on that date had $2,061,754.79 in deposits subject to check and $151,846,972.86 in time deposits, placed there by 407,822 depositors.

In the report of the condition of state banks, the total resources in 1911 are $196,531,006.98, as against $185,011,702.90 in 1910. The present year shows an increase in capital stock paid in cash from $14,897,381.76 to $15,699,927.25, while at the same time there is a growth in the surplus, contingent or sinking fund from $18,473,866.57 in 1910 to $19,509,592.13 in 1911. The aggregate assets of the eight state banks in Philadelphia amounted on November 6, 1911, to $4,715,847.38.

Trust companies in Pennsylvania show aggregate assets of $714,864,720.28, as against $685,149,582.01 in 1910. These companies paid dividends during the year amounting to $9,727,501.10. The total amount of trust funds held by these companies in 1911 was $935,875,873.43, as against $851,864,028.11 in 1910. Of the trust funds thus held those invested amounted to $919,382,631.63 and the uninvested cash balance to $16,493,241.80.

The individual deposits subject to check, exclusive of trust funds and savings, amounted to $260,288,033.98; special time deposits, $26,266,868; time certificates of deposit, $33,600,110.14, and savings fund deposits, $91,723,072.74. The aggregate assets and liabilities of the 61 trust companies in Philadelphia on November 6, 1911, reached $330,144,566.82. The total amount of trust funds held by these Philadelphia companies was $737,783,322.62; the total amount of corporate trusts, $2,451,856,873.26.

NEW TEXAS BANKS

Certificates of authority to do business in Texas have been issued to the Citizens State Bank of La Rue, Henderson county, capital stock $10,000; First State Bank of Springtown, Parker county, capital stock $15,000. Both of these new banks have assumed the guaranty fund plan of protecting depositors.

is only about five times. That is to say, when a dollar is deposited in a bank, the purchasing power is increased fivefold in the commerce of our country by reason of the credits that are established on it. This will give you some idea as to what banking means in the commerce of our country.

Our Needs Have Changed

The national bank note as it was first designed and still continues was one of the most brilliant ideas of the century for the needs of the time for which it was produced. Our needs have changed, due to the changing conditions of our commercial life, but up to the present time it has not been possible to adapt our currency system to our great credit needs. This subject, however, is one that is worthy not only an entire evening, but several evenings, in the discussion of its various phases; not only this, but it is the question most vital before the American people to-day and the solution of the problem depends upon our keeping it out of the hands of the politician and making it stand as a commercial proposition to be modeled after the needs of our commerce. Therefore it is something that you must study, it is something upon which you must concentrate yourself and the sooner you begin the study of it the better it will be. I do not mean to advocate any particular bill or suggestion or plan that is now before the public, but there is one thing that I wish to impress upon you, and that is, study this proposition from the viewpoint of the principles involved, rather than from the standpoint of the man's name that may be attached to them.

A Question of Principles

This is not a question of individuals, it is a question of principles, and do not allow yourself to be misled by the name, but seek them out and cling to the principles involved. It seems to me that if we could all get together on that point then the question of the adaptation and the detail of the plan can be easily worked out. Therefore, my message to you to-night is that you are no longer members of rival commercial institutions, but that you have joined a fraternity and there devolves upon you many ethical obligations.

NEW BANKING CONCERNS IN SOUTH

Atlanta, Ga.—In the ten southern states three hundred and eleven new banks with $10,869,470 capital began business in 1911, according to figures compiled by the Southern Banker. These figures were officially reported by the banking bureaus of the various states and by the comptroller of the currency at Washington.

During the same period six banks with a capital of $1,050,000 were consolidated with other banks and their capital maintained. One bank decreased its capital from $300,000 to $150,000. Forty existing banks increased their capital $2,825,500, making a grand total of $13,400,000 added banking capital in the ten southern states for the year of 1911. This compares with $9,964,500 of capital added in 1910 by 393 new banks and 55 enlarged banks.

The number of new and enlarged banks was 97 less in 1911 than in 1910, but the aggregate capital was $3,435,500 greater, showing a decided improvement in the character of banks organized. The South starts the year of 1912 with $257,635,000 banking capital as compared with $244,235,000 at the beginning of 1911.

"I have been using the Nobby Tread ever since it was put on the market and have had the most excellent service therefrom. As an example, the record I have had being, that since December 9, 1910, to September 3, 1911, I used one tire with a record of 8,794 miles, and another used until September 17, 1910, with a record of 10,113 miles.

The undersigned are both willing to make an affidavit to this effect, and hereafter should you ever want any recommendation as to the Nobby Tread Tires, either one of the undersigned will be very glad to state their experience."

Books on Banking, Finance and Economics

Credit. By J. LAWRENCE LAUGHLIN, of the Department of Political Economy, University of Chicago. Postpaid, $3c.
The nature of credit and its effect on prices have long been a subject of disagreement among economists. Its basis is commonly assumed to be money or bank reserves.

Essentials of Business Law. By FRANCIS M. BURDICK, LL. D., Professor of Law in Columbia University. 12mo. Postpaid, $1.50.
This book shows how the rules of law governing the commonest business transactions have been developed, and it tells what they are to-day. Technical law terms have been discarded as far as possible, and when they are used they are so explained and illustrated as to be easily understood. The principles of law are simplified and expressed in clear, lucid everyday speech.

Foreign Exchange. Tables converting foreign money into United States money, and United States money into foreign money at all commercial rates of exchange used in financial transactions between the United States and foreign countries. All about foreign exchange, including various forms of foreign commercial paper and terms, abbreviations, etc. For banks, bankers, steamship agents, importers, exporters and manufacturers. Cloth, $5.00.

Government Regulation of Railway Rates. By HUGO R. MEYER. A Professor of Political Economy in the University of Chicago. Postpaid, $1.60 net.

Investment Bonds. By F. LOWNHAUPT. Postpaid, $1.90.
Prospective investors who wish to make advantageous use of their money will do well to take notice of this volume. The author does not theorize, but tells only plain facts of the relation of the bond to its issuing corporation, and of the general investment aspect of the instrument.

Money and Credit. By WILBUR ALDRICH. Postpaid, $1.37.
This volume contains much valuable information and much sound discussion on money and credit.

The Banking and Currency Problems in the United States. By VICTOR MORAWETZ. The author takes up the problem of the national monetary commission, appointed by congress, and discusses the means of providing a permanent safe-guard against money stringencies and panics. Postpaid, $1.10.

The Principles of Money and Banking. By CHARLES A. CONANT. It is a new and complete exposition of its subject. Two volumes. Postpaid, $4.25.

The Pitfalls of Speculation. By THOMAS GIBSON. Postpaid, $1.20.
A book dealing exclusively with marginal speculation, and analyzing in a clear and simple manner the causes of failure in speculation, with a suggestion as to the remedies.

The Use of Loan Credit in Modern Business. By THORSTEIN B. VEBLÉN. Postpaid, 28c.

The Investors' Catechism. By M. M. REYNOLDS. Cloth, by mail, $1.10.

"Investors' Catechism". Contains all that it is essential for the beginner to know, and opens the way for a thorough study of the whole subject. The author has for the sake of clearness and simplicity adopted a catechetical style which is somewhat novel in this sort of literature.

The above books are the best of their kind, and will be promptly forwarded upon receipt of price.

THE CHICAGO BANKER,

407 Monadnock Block, Chicago.

EGYPT'S FINANCIAL CONDITION

A cable from Cairo, Egypt, says that the annual report of Sir Paul Harvey is optimistic, contrary to the predictions recently made in official circles in England. The Egyptian government has been able to dispense with all loans and can face the large expenditure required for the drainage of the Delta of the Nile with equanimity. Sir Paul states that of the £13,100,000 gold imported into Egypt to move the cotton crop £5,000,000 will remain in the country.

Montreal.—The Royal Bank of Canada will increase its capital by $2,000,000, issuing 20,000 shares at $210 a share. The issue will be made at the rate of one share of new stock for about four of old. This will bring the capital of the bank up to $8,200,000.

papers by that bank. They are commercial bank advertisements purely, and he gives authority to use any of them that may suit. A copy may be had by addressing Mr. Mortimer.

JAMES K. ILSLEY of the Marshall & Ilsley Bank, Milwaukee, has sent out a neat little folder containing his recent address entitled, "A Central Reserve Association More Necessary to the Public Welfare than to Banks." The talk does not go into the details of the bill, but deals with the ethics of the situation in a half-dozen small pages of type.

BANKERS TRUST (New York) in its annual statement shows deposits of one hundred and thirty-six millions, which seems some justification for the exceedingly tall building to be occupied by that high grade institution. A building of any kind, to be called an exceedingly high building among New York's skyscrapers, needs to be pretty tall, and the new Bankers Trust fills the bill.

MINNESOTA not only has a better banking law than has Illinois, but she has a text-book law which ought to be looked into by the Illinois authorities. It provides for a system of bonds and affidavits to be furnished by the book publishers, whereby a heavy penalty may be inflicted if similar books are sold in other states cheaper than they are sold in Minnesota, or if books of a lower quality are sold in Minnesota than are furnished to other states.

MARIAN R. GLENN, librarian for the American Bankers Association at 11 Pine Street, New York, says that inquiries, which are being received indicate that the reference and research department will be increasingly useful to the members of the association. This department undertakes to search the New York libraries where its own library is found insufficient. Bankers all over the country could not do a better thing than to forward books, pamphlets and documents to this department for general use. It ought to be one of the best things yet attempted by the association.

WILLIAM V. S. THORNE, well known in New York, and in national financial circles, has taken the place of James Stillman on the board of Hanover National. Mr. Stillman withdrew on his own motion owing to his continued absence in Europe and retirement from all active business.

COPIES of a very neat circular and booklet may be had from the American Institute of Banking, 11 Pine Street, New York, by any of the younger bankers in the various cities and towns of the country, who contemplate the organization of a chapter of the Institute. These documents explain very tersely all about the Institute's systematic education in the banking and in the law divisions.

TO the young bankers who are not in cities or towns large enough to organize a chapter, the educational course may be taken by correspondence, and this feature of the work also is fully explained in the circular matter which will be forwarded upon request.

ABOUT a month ago President B. F. Harris sent out to members of the Illinois Bankers Association a circular letter making suggestions for the increase of membership, and suggesting topics for discussion at the group and county meetings. This has met with a fine response from the majority of the counties in the state, and will give considerable force to the group meetings to be held this season. Mr. Harris intimated that those who had been appointed on the various committees, and who remained inactive, will quickly find their places filled by someone else. This is the spirit of industry, which the association has needed for many years.

BURLE NATIONAL, way out at Chamberlain, S. D., has a hundred deposit accounts with the Indians on their reservation. Mary All Around tops the list of the lady depositors, as Mr. Bull Ghost heads the masculine line. Next is Alice Comes Flying, along with Esther Wise Boy, followed closely by Frank and Julia Fire Tail. Mrs. Four Eagles, and all the little Four Eagles have accounts. Among the other distinguished depositors are Walking Crane, Holy Prairie, Mrs. Looking Dog, and Mrs. Medicine Shell.

AMONG the other depositors with less distinguished titles are Skunk and Scalper. There are James Two Dogs and Anna and Hannah White Dog. Mrs. Smoke Chaser is not an anti-cigarette fiend, and Mrs. Good Voice is not a suffraget.

FIRST NATIONAL of Joliet has adopted a profit sharing plan for its employees. This is a special hobby of President George Woodruff of that institution, who announced his scheme at the annual banquet given to the employees.

IT is said that the announcement was received with great enthusiasm, and came as a perfect surprise to those present. As outlined, the plan will include about forty persons and ought to add considerably to their annual incomes. Mr. Woodruff made quite a talk upon profit sharing as a business policy, and attributed very much of the success of his bank in obtaining four millions in deposits to the hard work and loyal service of those employed in the bank.

AN employees' savings and profit sharing fund will be created, in which those on the pay-roll will be permitted to deposit 10 per cent of their monthly salaries; a smaller deposit will be accepted. The first trustees of the fund will be President George Woodruff, A. J. Stoos and J. M. Plant, who will jointly manage the affairs and invest the money received each month in bonds. Each year the bank will add to the fund a sum equal to 2½ per cent of the dividends declared during the year. A further provision is made that at the end of the year all the bonds purchased will be sold, and the depositors will receive back their deposits with their portion of the interest that has been earned. It looks like a splendid opportunity to teach the public thrift in a city where so many are employed. If the plan succeeds well in the First National, it ought to succeed in any other bank in that city or in any of the industrial concerns.

THERE is nothing compulsory about the plan; employees are only advised to avail themselves of this opportunity to save a portion of their salaries and to make a little extra dividend on them. At the end of the year those who do not wish to use the money paid out to them may redeposit it until they acquire enough to make some permanent outside investment. It will certainly pay a much larger dividend than any bank can afford to pay on savings deposits. Bankers all over the country will be interested to learn more about this plan after it gets into fuller operation.

TOOTLE-LEMON NATIONAL of St. Joseph, in its circular of January 15th, advises that it believes there are no immediate prospects for any marked changes in money market conditions. The bank believes, however, that certain lines—notably ordinary mercantile loans—are likely to harden before long.

CLARENCE HODSON, vice-president of the New Jersey Fire Insurance Company, has sent out word that thirty thousand shares of the capital stock of that company have been sold. With one million dollars of paid up capital, it is expected that the company will do a largely increased business. This company began to write insurance only last April, but has earned enough in eight months to pay the running expenses for twelve. A financial statement will be sent out later.

SECRETARY W. F. KEYSER of Missouri has announced his annual convention to be held at Joplin on Tuesday and Wednesday, May 21st and 22nd. It is quite refreshing to hear from Missouri, Kansas and other up-to-date states, which set the time for their conventions so far in advance. We could name states without trying which have not yet acquired the habit.

WITH both Frank Collins and C. B. Hazlewood acting as assistant secretaries, it would seem to us that Secretary R. F. Chapin of the Union Trust ought to have considerable spare time on his hands. These two young men are among the most active in the business, and are helping to build up deposits with the hope of turning the twenty million dollar mark before long.

PRESIDENT F. H. RAWSON has announced the doubling of the space in the savings department of the Union and other improvements to be made for the public. Frank Collins is the only addition to the official staff made during the year; it will be his particular business to solicit new accounts. In this he is a past master and enjoys a very wide and influential acquaintance in banking circles.

HANNIBAL, Mo., has three remarkably evenly balanced banks. The Hannibal National has just over a million in deposits, while the Hannibal Trust and the Farmers and Merchants Banks each have just a shade under the million dollar mark. In earnings and dividends paid the ratio remains about the same. In the matter of gains in deposits the Hannibal National seems to have considerably the best of it.

WARE & LELAND, one of Chicago's leading board of trade firms, sends out a weekly financial review, which any banker can have by asking for it. It really is one of the best things of the kind issued from this center. It gives the current markets, the firm's opinion on conditions and a synopsis of the week's investment news, all quite valuable and reliable.

BEIERLEIN & REYNOLDS, located in the First National Bank building, is one of the younger firms of this city. The firm sends out a very attractive circular giving investment offerings, and is in a position to serve customers faithfully and well. Both of the young men have had large experience with the older houses of this city, and are not lacking in that respect.

SMALL NEW YORK BANK CLOSED

George C. Van Tuyl, Jr., superintendent of banks, has taken possession of the State Bank of Pike, Wyoming county. The bank has a capital of $25,000 and deposits of about $70,000. It was organized in 1892. The banking department gives as the reason for the closing an impairment of the capital of several thousand dollars, due to over-extension of credit to concerns in the western part of the state, in which the president of the bank, G. S. Van Gorder, and some of the directors were interested.

The Council

The mid-year meeting of the executive council of the Illinois Bankers Association took on an unusually important aspect, owing to its decision by a narrow majority to put the association in opposition to bank supervision, and inspection in the state. The ceremonies began at noon with a luncheon at the Blackstone Hotel, attended by those active in county federation work. Chairman Wright of Crystal Lake presided, and reported upon the present status of the work. All of the chairmen and secretaries of the ten groups were present, and many of the dates and places for holding group meetings were decided upon in a tentative way. The only actual announcement made was that by Group 8, which will meet at Sullivan, Ill., on February 22d. Both President B. F. Harris and Chairman Montgomery were present at this luncheon. Chairman Montgomery invited all present to attend the meeting of the council. He also removed the ban upon newspaper men, and for at least a portion of the time, reporters from the Chicago daily papers were admitted. This had not happened before in twenty years, and is much to Judge Montgomery's credit. The council proper met at 2:30. The minutes of two previous meetings held at Springfield were read and approved. Chairman Montgomery announced important matters for consideration from the work entrusted to the administrative committee composed of the chief officers of the association. The first subject touched upon was that of burglary insurance covering the subject of a contract recently made with the Ocean company; the contract was ratified by the council. Another subject brought up was that of incorporation of the state association. After considerable talk to very little purpose, action was postponed. Chairman C. E. Bradt of De Kalb reported for the good roads committee. He stated that 750 circulars had been addressed to township organizations in the state and that 250 responses had been received. Mr. Bradt is highway commissioner for his own township, and is a very active and energetic enthusiast in the work. The council was well pleased with what had been done, and continued his committee. President B. F. Harris, as chairman of the committee on agriculture and vocational work, made a report of the work done by that committee, which was approved. Chairman Wright of the county organization plan submitted a set of by-laws for use in the various counties in the state, which were adopted.

Take Up Depository Bond Issue

Next on the list came Vice-President Van Buskirk of the Standard Trust of this city, and M. A. Traylor of the National Stockyards National at East St. Louis. They both made strong talks on the subject of the over-cost of depository bonds in Illinois as compared with what is being paid in other states. Mr. Van Buskirk told a very happy story, and at the outset put the members of the council in a huge good humor, so that when W. G. Edens came to his rescue with a motion to appoint a committee of five to take up the subject of the over-cost of depository bonds, the motion

A NEW CHICAGO BANK

Stock of a new bank to be known as the Central Manufacturing District State Bank, has been oversubscribed, and the institution will begin business in about two months in the Club Building, now being erected in West Thirty-sixth Street, near Morgan Street. The capital will be $200,000. Stockholders are manufacturers and merchants whose business is located in the neighborhood. Among them are P. L. Knoedler, Abraham Harris of the Chicago Wrecking Company, and representatives of the Spiegel-May-Stern Company.

LEWIS E. GARY
CHICAGO

Lewis E. Gary was elected assistant cashier of the Corn Exchange National, at their reorganization this year. Mr. Gary has been with this bank since 1886, starting as messenger and working up through all the departments. The last twelve years he has been chief clerk. He is a very valued employee and greatly deserves this promotion.

PROMINENT BANKERS IN CITY

A "Country Life" conference promoted by the Spokane chamber of commerce was held at the Sherman on Monday. Among others who attended were Joseph Chapman of Minneapolis, J. W. Wheeler of St. Paul, B. F. Harris of Champaign, and W. G. Edens of Chicago. No action was taken of a public nature.

MID-CITY TRUST

The Mid-City Trust and Savings Bank (Chicago) has elected E. V. Bacharach a vice-president. He will assume his new duties on February 1st. Mr. Bacharach is auditor of the Corn Exchange National Bank, having been connected with that institution for twenty-five years.

J. F. Hartwell

As a result of the recent consolidation of the Gary Trust and Savings and the Security State at Gary, J. F. Hartwell is now president, and the capital is said to be $50,000. J. B. Greene, formerly cashier of the Security State, is vice-president and acting cashier. Bruce Bogorte, son of the former president of the Security State of Valparaiso, Indiana, also is a vice-president. Mr. Greene enjoys a wide acquaintance among northern Indiana bankers and business men, and was a banker for a number of years in the new state of Oklahoma. He has an abiding faith in the future business growth of Gary.

TRANSIT WORK RECOGNIZED

An interesting feature of the promotions in the First National, Chicago, is the making of the transit and general books department manager an official of the bank. This is the first instance of a big city bank recognizing the importance of the transit work, though it is perhaps due as much to the personality of the man, Charles R. McKay, as to a continuation of the First National plan of official organization by division. McKay was one of the prime movers for the adoption of the A. B. A. numerical system and at New Orleans made an earnest and forceful plea for the handling of country checks through clearing houses in national reserve cities. R. Frank Newhall and George H. Dunscomb, who were elected assistant cashiers at the annual meeting, will continue active in Division F, which is devoted exclusively to the accounts of banks and bankers. Dunscomb is now in California and will, as heretofore, spend most of his time outside the city.

BLACK-HANDERS AND MR. REYNOLDS

For some time President George M. Reynolds of the Continental and Commercial National has been receiving "Black-Hand" letters demanding $1,000 in cash, and threatening to burn his residence on Drexel Boulevard if the money was not paid. During most of the time that these letters have been arriving, Mr. Reynolds has been in the East, and they naturally fell into the hands of the young men who constitute the "new business" department. Sleuthing for new accounts has developed a natural Sherlock Holmes instinct in each one. Consequently they laid a rapid-fire trap for the writer of the letters. On Monday when he called for the package demanded, at the place named, he was promptly arrested. Having sent the letters through the United States mail, he was bound over to the United States grand jury by Commissioner Foote, in the sum of $5,000.

It developed that he had never seen Mr. Reynolds, but had simply picked his name out from a list of Chicago bank presidents. On the other hand, Mr. Reynolds had never heard from his threatening correspondent other than through the three letters received. It was given out by the government inspectors that the man arrested had made a practical confession of his guilt, and said the only reason he had for threatening Mr. Reynolds was that he "needed the money."

QUITE an aid to the farm movement all over the country will be the "Garden and Farm Almanac for 1912," which is published by Doubleday, Page & Co., at twenty-five cents. Farmers have a great weakness for almanacs, and this particular publication ought to be circulated in quantity at the very low rate. It contains planting tables, which have been worked out in theory, and then tested in practice.

THE farmer will find in this publication the proper time for planting all vegetables and seeds in all latitudes. It not only tells when, but how, and how much to plant, and how to fertilize and cultivate the soil. Each monthly calendar has a reminder table of things that ought to be done during that month, all of which has been approved by the department of agriculture at Washington.

A PART of the almanac is devoted to live stock symptoms, and the treatment of various animal diseases and injuries. It tells how to get the best of the pests and insects of all kinds, and the best varieties of fruits for each location. A part of the almanac is devoted to pointers on the use of concrete, how to mix it and how to fix it, and on the mixing and use of fertilizer. In fact, it is a farmer's handbook of the very highest type at the very lowest price.

REAR-ADMIRAL F. E. CHADWICK has written a two-volume history of the Spanish-American war, published by Charles Scribner's Sons. The book has been personally read and commended by Col. Roosevelt, and is said to be written on very novel lines, and in a very attractive style.

ARCH B. DAVIS, secretary of the Kentucky Bankers Association, gets out a little bulletin every sixty days, which includes short notices of group meetings and announcements, as well as a brief section edited by the bank law department of the association. It is ably edited.

R. L. RINANAN, of the American Trust Company of St. Louis, has not been taken to the hospital or "operated" on for so long that we have been sort of overlooking him. He apparently has regained his health, and ought to feel good over the growth of deposits in the American, at least. When he crossed over from Illinois, the deposits of the American Trust were about one and one-third millions; now they are three and a quarter millions with "rising barometer." Mr. Rinanan is well liked and well remembered by Illinois bankers, for whom he acted as secretary for two years.

EDWARD W. DECKER, new president of the Northwestern National, at Minneapolis, was once its messenger boy. He preceded Joseph Chapman, Jr., in that capacity. It is said that not less than eight or nine of the present officials of the Northwestern staff began their services to that institution in that capacity. Those beside Decker and Chapman who started at the foot of the ladder are Frank E. Holton, Chas. Farwell, R. S. MacGregor, H. P. Newcomb and William Koon. Those who also started on the lower rung but who have graduated into other institutions are C. T. Jaffray, of the First National; W. F. McLane of the Hennepin County Savings; Edward Mattson of the Scandinavian-American; Thomas Beale, Jr. of the Second National, Boston, and William G. Thorne of the National Park, New York.

BOTH of the Forbans, nationally known, worked their way up in the Northwestern National, although they did not start there as errand boys. In all of the states together there are no less than forty bankers who had their "beginnings" with the Northwestern. It must be quite an inspiration to the younger members of the staff to look over to the president's office, to the vice-president's desk and to the cashier's desk, and to be able to say that they have come up from the very bottom, and that it is the policy of the Northwestern to promote its own young men. Mr. Decker says "pick the right boy in the first place, and you will never have to look outside of the bank for your official staff."

K. N. & K. of New York state in one of their circulars that they find a better tone in general business than toward the close of last year. From information at their command, they estimate that manufacturing in the commercial centers is not quite up in volume to what it was at the same time last year, but that business is on a better basis. They note the absence of the pessimism so pronounced a year ago.

BANKERS, who are members of the Illinois Association, are not quite so ready to reply to circular letter inquiries sent from headquarters as they are in other states. Many bankers are prone to regard such matters as purely routine, and some think that it only over-activity on the part of the secretary, whereas, as a matter of fact, nearly everything that is being done in this state is having the personal supervision and endorsement of President Harris. For this reason bankers should be more loyal and more prompt about sending in what they have to say on matters about which inquiry has been made.

STATE bankers, for instance, have been asked to give their attitude on a number of matters, especially with reference to the resolution which was adopted at the Springfield convention calling for the preparation of a bill creating a separate and distinct banking department for Illinois. This is very important, and state bankers should furnish President Harris with their opinion in the matter.

LETTERS about burglary insurance and inquiries as to the growth of savings in all divisions of the state should have prompt attention. It is a species of neglect which is very annoying to those who are trying to accomplish some good for the general profession. Circulars have been sent out by the road committee and also by the committee on agriculture, many of which seem to have fallen in waste places. This is a big mistake on the part of the membership; to have a strong bankers state association all the members should promptly participate in every question that is called to their attention.

PRESIDENT HARRIS is one of the kind who likes to do things. He has a strong list of splendid committees, and it now is up to the membership to complete many of the promises and projects on hand.

H. A. PEARSON, of the Pearson-Taft Land Credit Company of Chicago, Dr. W. E. Taylor, land and fertility expert of the Deere Company of Moline, and several professors of the University of Illinois, are willing to talk at Illinois group meetings, it remaining only for the group secretary to make the arrangements. The two men named are among the foremost authorities in this state, and when it comes to delivering a talk that makes a hit, they both can deliver the goods.

SOME of the other banking commissioners have complained that J. N. Dolley of Kansas is "getting too much publicity out of his office." Those who have followed the career of this intensely active official will say that he is entitled to all the credit he is receiving and to very much more. His plan of entirely eradicating from Kansas those agents and promoters who sell worthless stock to bankers and farmers will entitle him to a monument.

NOW comes Mr. Dolley with a new proposal. He wishes to restrict the issue of charters to state banks in his state to cases only where the president is to live in the bank's immediate territory. Heretofore he has had a way of making his propositions stick, and probably he will in this instance.

HE insists that each bank president shall spend at least one entire day each month in the bank, going over its assets and business, and stipulates that the bank records must show the day and date on which the president made this inspection.

COMMISSIONER DOLLEY holds that the stockholders of a bank have a right to expect this much from the man whom they have first elected a director and later made president. Mr. Dolley insists that he give the service which the stockholders have a right to expect of him.

IT is to be required further that the cashier shall give his entire time to the service of the bank. He must be cashier in fact and keep in daily touch with the bank's affairs. Hereafter in Kansas it will not be permitted for him to do his work by proxy or through the well known pretext of an assistant cashier. The majority of all bank boards must reside in the town or territory of the bank as well. Official notice to this effect has been sent out, and the big Dolley battle-ax is ready. No "chain of banks" can get inside the enclosure. (Continued on page 31)

INVESTIGATION OF THE MONEY TRUST BEGINNING TO ATTRACT ATTENTION

WASHINGTON LETTER

DEMOCRATIC MAJORITY NOT DETERMINED AS TO POSI-TION ON PUBLIC QUESTIONS

Washington, January 26.—Leaders in the democratic house have watched closely for the effect, particularly in New York, of the resolution calling for the appointment of the Lindbergh investigating committee, commissioned to discover and to dissect the "Money Trust." It is said here that inner Wall Street is greatly disturbed over the prospect of the investigation. The big banking people while protesting that there is no money trust, and that consequently there is nothing to be investigated, manifest, says rumor, a degree of apprehensiveness not in harmony with their expressions to the effect that there is nothing to look into. It appears that Speaker Clark of the house and Governor Underwood of Georgia are not pushing the investigation because of their presidential nomination aspirations. They think that a session in Wall Street by a democratic committee at this time would further disturb the financial center and by so much operate against democratic hopes in the campaign. William Jennings Bryan, however, wants the investigation prosecuted, and with vigor. So it appears that the matter of exposing the relations between important banking interests in Wall Street depends in a way upon whether the so-called "conservatives" or "radicals" dominate the policies of the leaders.

Tolls on the Panama Canal

Notwithstanding the fact that the question of tolls on the Panama Canal is now coming so urgently before congress, very few members have as yet even taken the trouble to read the terms, much less the history, of the agreement by which we undertook to treat all nations, including ourselves, upon an exactly identical basis in connection with Panama Canal tolls. All sorts of discussion about the canal is now in progress; but, throughout the whole, the question of tolls seems to hold a dominating place. Behind it all is the assumption that in some way or other we shall be entirely justified, in fact, rather clever than otherwise, in evading the terms of the agreement we made with Great Britain.

The Terms with England

By treaty the government agreed with Great Britain that:

"The canal shall be free and open to the vessels of commerce and of war observing these rules, on terms of entire equality, so that there shall be no discrimination against any such nation, or its citizens or subjects in respect of the conditions or charges of traffic or otherwise. Such conditions and charges of traffic shall be just and equitable."

Most foreign governments pay (by subsidy) the Suez tolls of every vessel flying their respective flags. If they do this it will allow foreign vessels the free (to them) use of the Panama Canal for which American vessels will have to pay out of private funds. Quite a problem in subsidy matters which are unpopular in presidential years.

What, if Anything, Can be Done?

It is admitted by many of the administration men that congress could not legitimately pass a bill exempting American vessels from the tolls. Probably very few men on either side of the chamber would seriously suggest such a thing. What they do suggest is that by a separate enactment provision shall be made for refunding an amount equal to these tolls. They think that this will evade the evident intent of the treaty. That may be a position that can be sustained from a technical quibbling standpoint. The trouble is that democrats will probably not be willing to adopt any separate bill bestowing a subsidy, both because they are against it in principle and because they recognize that it would be simply an entering wedge for more subsidy later on. Consequently those who want to get these tolls rebated are thrown back on the proposition of providing some equivocal clause in the original canal toll legislation which will allow vessels to get a direct rebate from the government.

Making Holes in Steel Schedule

Reductions of from 30 to 50 per cent on all items in the iron and steel tariff, and the placing on the free list of iron ore, sewing machines, printing machinery, cash registers, nails and many other articles against which a tariff is now levied, are proposed in the democratic steel revision tariff bill, made public this week.

The bill was completed by the democratic members of the ways and means committee last Saturday. After being submitted to the full committee the bill was laid before the democratic caucus. It was approved by the caucus and introduced in the house Wednesday.

Democratic Leader Underwood estimated that the bill would reduce the average tariff on steel imports from 34.51 per cent to 22.42 ad valorem; would reduce the government tariff revenue from steel products by $823,597 from 1911, and by $4,000,000 from 1910. Imports of steel products, he said, would be increased by nearly twenty million dollars.

Wilson Stock Upward Bound

The revelation that the break between Woodrow Wilson and Colonel Harvey of Harper's Weekly was caused by Wilson's refusal to ask Wall Street aid is the political sensation of the day here. It is agreed by all that the latest development has helped the New Jersey governor immensely. There is much speculation as to why Mr. Wilson did not make this public at once as a reply to Henry Watterson's attack on him. It was only recently that it became known that the break between Harvey and Wilson came when Harvey is said to have suggested that the governor go to Thomas F. Ryan, and ask him to finance the Wilson campaign for president.

Senator Cullom's Book Out

All the letters, which Senator Shelby M. Cullom of Illinois has received since he wrote a book filled with reminiscences and comment upon men he has known in fifty years of public life, have not been complimentary of the author's work. Senator Cullom hesitated for a long time before consenting to write down his recollections for publication in a historical volume, because he could not rid his mind of the saying attributed to a statesman some centuries older than himself, "O, that mine enemy would write a book."

One of Senator Cullom's critics is a well-known and well-to-do resident of Ashland, Ill., named Baxter. Mr. Baxter wrote Senator Cullom that he was about as old as the senator, and perhaps a little older, and knew a few things. He did not like Senator Cullom's views on the income tax, and the inheritance tax, and did not hesitate to tell the senator-author so. However, he ended his letter with a request that Senator Cullom appoint "Charlie" Douglas postmaster of Ashland, and the senator has indorsed Douglas. Previous to giving his indorsement, however, the senator wrote back that perhaps Baxter was older than he was, but that if his critic lived a great many years longer, he probably would know a great deal more than he does now. The two Illinoisans apparently derived much pleasure from the good-natured bantering.

Congressman Mann Boring In

Some democratic members of the house have a causeless grudge against Minority Leader Mann because he insists on knowing all about their "small" bills as well as every piece of "big" legislation that comes before that body. Not long ago Representative Candler of Mississippi had a little bill reported by the postoffice committee reimbursing a "little girl," who was postmaster at a small town in his district, to the extent of $57, which had been lost in the mails without fault on her part.

"I told Mann the girl got only $18 a month, and that she was not in any way responsible for the loss, but had been compelled to make it good, thus losing more than three months' pay," said the Mississippian. "He told me I would have to defend the bill on the floor, as he would formally object to its passage. I was scared and did so, and it passed without the slightest opposition. I then went to Mann and asked how it was he did not vote against the bill. 'I knew you wanted to make a nice speech for that girl, Candler,' he said. 'I really had no objection to the bill.'

was carried. Mr. Edens suggested that Mr. Van Buskirk and Mr. Traylor be upon that committee, and that the other three be made up of members of the council. Of course, there was some little opposition, as there always is to any progressive movement in the Illinois association. Next on the list President B. F. Harris called attention to the much discussed report of the committee on resolutions at the Springfield convention. That committee reported from the floor a resolution asking for a state banking department, which would take the supervision and inspection of banks out of the state auditor's office. Mr. Harris read communications from State Auditor McCullough and members of the association from all over the state, which showed that the vast majority of the state bankers desired a separate banking department such as has been demonstrated successfully in about 98 per cent of the states. Mr. Harris went a little bit further and recommended the appointment of a committee of nine, to be composed of three private bankers, three state bankers and three national bankers, to draft and report at the next convention an entirely new bill, putting all forms of banking in the state under state supervision and inspection. His motion to appoint such a committee was seconded by W. G. Edens and supported by several of those present. It was opposed by ex-presidents of the association Crabtree, Durham, Foreman and George. One of these ex-presidents said that a good reason, in his opinion, why private banks should not be molested, was the fact that if forced to incorporate, they would have to pay taxes on their capital, and that being able to run a private bank without capital enabled him to buy a new automobile each year.

What the Tribune Saw There

The Chicago Tribune tells what happened graphically as follows, when Mr. Harris had turned on the x-ray:

"His proposition met with instant and lively opposition. In the course of the argument Mr. Harris turned to the railways for an illustration.

"They didn't want supervision, either,' he said. 'They fought it at every turn. The private bankers never fought it any harder. You saw the result—it finally arrived, and it arrived with a bang.'

"Mr. Harris then moved for an Australian ballot on the question, hinting delicately that otherwise some of the state and national bankers, who do a big business with the private institutions would be afraid to express their true sentiments. The motion was defeated. Before the final question went to vote several representatives of big state and national institutions proved the president's charge by edging out of the quorum. The final vote was 13 to 11, defeating Mr. Harris' motion. The two votes, which lost it were those of Oscar G. Foreman of the Foreman Brothers' Banking Company, a state bank, and August Blum, representing the First National. The other eleven were those of private bankers.

Vote Ends Another "Round"

"The result marked the end of one more effort to get Illinois out of the list of four states only in the union which allow private banks to run without supervision. Under present laws, any one can hang out a shingle in Illinois and start a private bank, running it just as long as the depositors continue to come in. If it breaks the supervisors have a chance to examine the books, but not before. State and national men admit that if proper supervision were applied to many private banks they would go into the hands of a receiver, but claim that the entire situation would be greatly relieved by such an event. Another attempt at supervision probably will be made this fall."

A Bill Will Be Prepared

Rumor had it that President Harris will not allow the eleven private bankers and two Chicago ex-president (under constructive obligation) to defeat the expressed (unanimous) will of the largest state convention ever held in Illinois, but will appoint an active committee under the Springfield resolution.

What the Record-Herald Saw

This is the way the Chicago Record-Herald reported the defeat (apparent) of the progressive steps authorized at the Springfield convention for better banking conditions:

Trust Company Service in New York City

This company, with ample capital, large resources, and an efficient, and well-systematized organization, which dates back to 1864, has the ability and disposition to give good trust-company service.

Our various departments, including banking, foreign exchange, bond, trust, transfer, reorganization and collection, are well equipped with modern facilities for transacting business promptly and economically.

For these reasons we feel justified in cordially inviting the New York accounts of banks and trust companies.

Guaranty Trust Company of New York

Capital and Surplus	$23,000,000
Deposits	$156,000,000

"The struggle was precipitated when Frank Harris, First National Bank, Champaign, president of the state association, appeared before the committee with a motion that a committee of nine be appointed to draft a bill providing that all banks be placed under supervision of a state banking department, and that the committee, in its bill, define what is meant by "trust company," "savings bank," "private bank" and other terms. Three of the committee were to be of national banks, three of state and three of private banks.

"W. G. Edens of the Central Trust Company declared that bankers must sooner or later face the issue, and that if they do not some one else will force a change in private banking methods. 'Let us vote as we think, not from a business standpoint,' he said, 'and not go home with the consciousness of having dodged a public duty.'"

Look Who's Here!

Among the distinguished guests present were Charles L. Farrell, president of a big bank in Newark, N. J., and formerly vice-president of the Fort Dearborn National of this city, and John J. Large, vice-president of a big bank in Sioux City, Iowa, a former vice-president of the Iowa association. J. Laurence Laughlin spoke at the banquet in the evening.

The ex-presidents were out in force. There were Catlin, McCoy, Foreman, Blum, Durham, George and Russel. It can be stated authoritatively that ex-President Homer McCoy has never exercised his privilege as an ex-president to vote on any matter of policy in the state association. About two-thirds of the other ex-presidents occupy exactly the same position in this respect, but the other third never fail to attend meetings, and to take an active part. President Harris, Vice-President Phillips, Chairman Montgomery and Treasurer Wyckoff were present at all of the sessions. John Little of Rushville was there, and in close proximity to the assistant secretary's desk. J. D. Washburn and W. T. Bruckner acted for the Continental and Commercial National. Chairman Hearst of Group 4, and Secretary Stevens of the same group, attended the meeting of group officers, and also the banquet in the evening. From South Chicago were McCabe and Coburn; Sammons and Wakefield circulated for the Corn Exchange; Ryther and Emory represented the big stockyards district, while Kischner and Traylor looked after the interests of East St. Louis. Thompson was in from Rockford, and from Freeport came Auburn and Aspinwall. The Wright brothers (not the aviators) from Belvidere and Crystal Lake were present. Galesburg sent Williamson and Craig, and Herdieu was up from Galva. Harrisburg, Carmi and Benton were represented by Lee, Crebs and Ward respectively. From Anna, Lexington and Cairo there were Jackson, Hiser and Aisthorpe; Decatur was strongly represented in Merriweather, Corbett and Walker. H. S. Henschen was there for the State Bank, and Lampert, Farrell and Newcomer represented

Our experience is of value to you because it is gained in the successful building of 67 dams to date (Nov. 1, 1911), of all heights up to 150 feet and having an aggregate length of over 4½ miles. We have inaugurated a system of bimonthly bulletins on pungent engineering topics as viewed from the Bankers' standpoint. Send us your name for our mailing list.

the Fort Dearborn National. The Central Trust was ably represented by Edens, Gates and Corneau; Fox represented the Chicago Savings and Cooper spoke for Aurora. Greene of Moline was absent on account of illness, but his city was represented by Anderson. George Woodruff was up from Joliet, but was called home by a long distance call of importance. White of Peoria was prevented from being present by the very unexpected death of President Frank Trefzger of the Illinois National of that city.

Others in attendance were: C. J. Savage, Tallula; Geo. Woodland and F. B. Woodland, Chicago; Asher V. Cox, Xenia; E. A. Wagner, National Produce Bank, Chicago; Albert Eads, McComb; L. M. Emerson, Mt. Vernon; J. R. Beggs, Arcola; Philips Saunders, Streator; John Fletcher, Chicago; F. G. Hudson, Charleston; John L. Hamilton, Hoopston; John J. Doherty, Dwight; F. G. Nelson, Chicago; John Broeksmit, Harris Trust, Chicago; Ben M. Smith, Salem, and Geo. W. Telling, Danville.

There was no actual decision as to the time and place of holding the next state convention, but everything points toward Peoria, with its splendid new hotel, as being the most likely place to get it. After the banquet in the evening there was a vaudeville show, including a sleight-of-hand performance, which almost chiefly owed its success to the assistance rendered by Charlie Stevens of Evanston.

FORMER BANKER ARRESTED

Payette, Idaho, January 20.—A. Beckstead, formerly vice-president of the Securities Bank of Havre, and one of the big stockmen of northern Montana, was taken into custody here upon advices from the authorities of Great Falls, where he is charged by the First National Bank of that city with having obtained a loan of $6,000 by a misrepresentation of credits. The alleged disclosure came about four months ago, when Beckstead filed a petition in bankruptcy.

NEXT CHAIRMAN OF COUNCIL

Among the ninety or one hundred Illinois bankers who attended the conference and banquet at the Blackstone on Wednesday afternoon and evening, general attention seemed to be focused on Col. J. S. Aisthorpe of Cairo as heir-apparent to the chairmanship of the council, now held by Judge Montgomery of Quincy. Col. Aisthorpe was a candidate at the Springfield convention, but entered the field after it had been gone over very carefully and with much patience by the present occupant of the office. Even at that, there were but few votes difference between them, and it has been conceded that Col. Aisthorpe has the position coming to him. He is one of the oldest members of the association, and has been a constant worker in the ranks. He formerly took a great interest and active part in the affairs of the American Bankers Association. Other candidates were spoken of in a most friendly way. Those most frequently mentioned were George Woodruff, the Joliet author and finisher of the new constitution; Robert Ward of "down-state," and Ascher V. Cox, helmsman for the private bankers of the state. Friends of Col. Aisthorpe and Mr. Woodruff can see no possible conflict between these two gentlemen as to who shall have the honor of withdrawing in favor of the other. They have both earned the honor, and all of the bankers in the state want to see each of them in the office at the appropriate time.

ENFORCING NATIONAL BANK LAWS

Comptroller of the Currency Murray is making an investigation of certain banks in various parts of the country which have for years not lived up to the law relating to reserves, and which have defied both the national bank examiners and the comptroller's office. The law relating to reserves is one of the most drastic parts of the national bank act, and provides that after thirty days' notice from the comptroller to the bank that its reserve is below the legal requirements, he may appoint a receiver for the bank, though the bank may be perfectly solvent.

By another provision of the national bank act the forfeiture of the charter of the bank may be obtained for failure to carry the legal reserve by an action brought by the secretary of the treasury.

The comptroller is making an investigation of all national banks for a period of five years, and when his investigations are completed he proposes to take the steps necessary to have those banks which have not maintained the legal reserve, as required by law in the past, to observe it in the future. He feels that as the law contains such a drastic provision relating to reserves congress intended the law to be observed by the banks and enforced by the comptroller of the currency.

Wanamingo, Minn.—The town is to have another bank, with a capital of $25,000. A committee of C. A. Stromms, R. C. Lund and L. E. Johnson are interested in the project. The capitalization of the Farmer's State Bank will be raised to $30,000.

NEW BANKING ORDER BY DOLLEY

Bank Commissioner J. N. Dolley of Kansas has sent out the following to his examiners:

In the future the policy of this department will be that all presidents of state banks must reside in the town wherein the bank is located, or in the territory tributary thereto, and the town in which the bank is located must be the principal place of business or headquarters of the president.

The president must spend at least one day each month in the bank, going carefully over all of its assets and business in detail, and the records of the bank must show what day and date the president inspected such bank, and the number of hours occupied for such inspection.

The stockholders of the bank have elected him through their directors, not as an additional honor, but as an additional responsibility. The stockholders and the depositing public expect, and are entitled to receive as much of his services as it is possible for him to give, and he cannot serve them to advantage unless he visits the bank regularly and keeps in close personal touch with the affairs of the bank, and the department insists that this be done.

The cashier of all state banks must occupy his full time in the service of the bank. He must be cashier in fact, and in close daily touch with all of the bank's affairs. It will not be permitted in the future for the cashier to have an assistant cashier or clerk, who performs the cashier's duty while the cashier is away from the bank a goodly portion of his time.

A majority of all boards of directors of state banks must reside in the town or in the territory tributary thereto, and the town wherein the bank is located must be the principal place of business or the business headquarters of said majority of directors.

The so-called management of state banks by officers that do not in fact thoroughly manage as their titles of office imply will not be further permitted. This policy must be enforced, and you are hereby instructed to assist, so that it may be enforced effectively.

Order No. 2

The president of all building and loan associations in Kansas must reside in the town wherein the building and loan association is located, or in the country tributary thereto, and the town in which the association is located, or in the country tributary thereto, and the town in which the association is located must be his headquarters. He must keep in close touch with the affairs of the association, know its work thoroughly, and once each month, at least, inspect its affairs.

The presidency of a building and loan association is a sacred trust, one of the most sacred in the financial world. The stockholders elect him because they have confidence in his business judgment and responsibility, when the trust is accepted it should be discharged faithfully, and that cannot be done unless he visits the institution regularly and keeps in close personal touch with its details, and the department insists that this be done.

All members of the board of directors of building and loan associations must attend all special and regular meetings, and at each meeting go over all of the business transacted during the time intervening and the minutes of such meeting must show the members in attendance, and those absent, and the cause for their absence.

A majority of all boards of directors of building and loan association must reside in the town or in the territory tributary thereto, and the town wherein the association is located must be the principal place of business or the business headquarters of said majority of directors.

Every building and loan association must hold a meeting of its board of directors monthly, and the minutes of such meetings must show in full and detail all business transacted during the meeting.

At the finish of the examination by the representative of the state banking department, the board of directors of the building and loan association will be convened, and said board of directors will go over all the assets and affairs of the association with the examiner, and the board of directors will be expected to sign a report to the department as to the true condition of the affairs of the association.

The so-called management of building and loan associations by officers that do not in fact thoroughly manage as their titles of office imply will not be further permitted. This policy must be enforced and you are hereby instructed to assist so that it may be enforced effectively.

BANK CHANGES IN MILWAUKEE

Milwaukee, January 22.—It came as a surprise, on Saturday when announcement was made of changes in the personnel of the staff of Wisconsin's biggest savings bank—The Second Ward. Willis L. Cheney, of the big Wisconsin National force, was elected cashier and director. Another change in the new slate of officers of interest is the election of Albert Elser, son-in-law of Alfred Uihlein, as vice-president. In the future both he and Mr. Cheney will devote their undivided attention to the bank. The new slate would indicate that it proposes in the future to do a general banking business. It has for many years been the largest savings depository in the state and the banking fraternity of Wisconsin often wondered why the bank did not seek other profitable business, which apparently was at its front door.

The bank will also soon announce the appointment of a bond manager, who will have charge of the investment end of the institution, which, according to the owners of the bank, will have safety deposit vaults with over 4,000 boxes and a total vault equipment weighing over 400 tons in Bessemer and Chrome steel. The new policy makes this an epoch-making period for the institution, and will also tend to make Milwaukee a much larger financial center.

The new officers of the bank are: President, Joseph E. Uihlein; vice-presidents Henry G. Bielfeld, Albert Elser and Charles Schmidt; cashier, Willis L. Cheney; assistant cashier, Frank Brand; directors for the year: John Kremer, Albert Elser, Fred Schroeder, Henry Schroeder, Joseph E. Uihlein, Willis L. Cheney, William B. Uihlein, Henry G. Bielfeld, Charles Schmidt and Robert Uihlein.

Mr. Cheney was born in Watertown, Wis., November 8, 1872. In 1889 he entered the employ of the Wisconsin National Bank there as messenger, serving in various capacities. He came to Milwaukee in June, 1893, as assistant bookkeeper with the Wisconsin National Bank here. Shortly after, he was put in charge of the collection and mail departments. In 1903 he was made credit clerk, after which he was for more than a year auditor, when, January 11, 1906, he was made assistant cashier. He has many friends in Milwaukee and a wide acquaintance with bankers throughout the Northwest.

Charles G. Dawes, who is back from the East, reports conditions as practically unchanged, except that the money market is easier.

Arthur Reynolds

Chairman Arthur Reynolds of the executive council of the American Bankers Association has gone with his family to Los Angeles, Cal., for the balance of the winter, as is his custom. He takes his pet Six Cylinder, also, which he drives himself like an expert.

HOUSTON GETS LARGEST BANK IN TEXAS

Through a consolidation of the Commercial National Bank and the South Texas National Bank, which becomes effective March 2d, Houston is to have the largest bank in Texas. The new institution will be known as the South Texas Commercial National Bank and will be organized with a paid up capital of $1,000,000, a surplus of $500,000 and undivided profits of approximately $500,000, opening business with a working capital of approximately $2,000,000 and (using the last published statements of December 5, 1911, as a basis) with resources of approximately $15,000,000. The new board of directors will be comprised of the boards of the two banks.

The consolidation gives the new bank combined deposits of more than $11,000,000. The total resources of the two banks will aggregate more than $15,000,000. W. B. Chew, president of the Commercial National Bank, will be president of the combined institution. Chas. Dillingham, president of the South Texas National Bank, will become chairman of the board of directors. D. B. Harris will be active vice-president and cashier.

NEW TRUST COMPANY FOR NEW ORLEANS

Those who have in charge the organization of the Banking Trust Company at New Orleans, La., send out word that they are making rapid headway. They believe that the opening of the Panama Canal and the improvement of the submerged lands in and around New Orleans will require the services of an additional trust company. The field is centrally located, and business appears to be moving in that direction at this time. Stock is being subscribed at $125 a share, which will create a capital of a million and a surplus of two hundred and fifty thousand. It is not the expectation or intention of the company to solicit deposits; it will confine its activities strictly to the business of a trust company, and engage in the upbuilding of new and paying enterprises. This will not interfere with the business of the existing banks. The stock of the company will be listed on the New Orleans Exchange, and it is expected that in time there will be quite an active market for it. One trust company in New Orleans is now paying well over 30 per cent dividends, and all the others are making good returns on the capital, so that the prospects are quite pleasing. According to the prospectus, the ten men who have consented to act as directors, and who are subscribers for the shares, are all well known business men and attorneys, which ought to command local support.

GUARANTY (N. Y.) CLUB ANNUAL DINNER

The Guaranty Club, composed of officers and employees of the Guaranty Trust Company of New York, held its first annual dinner at the Taverne Louis, Saturday evening. Over 200 were in attendance. Addresses were made by Vice-President L. B. Franklin and by S. S. Shaw, president of the Chase Bank Club, and J. Wohnsiedler, president of the City Bank Club. Officers of the club and chairmen of the various committees gave brief talks concerning the past, present and future of the organization. F. W. Ellsworth, president, was toastmaster. Announcement was made that on March 1st there will be published the first issue of the "Guaranty News," a monthly paper, with Hy. R. Wohlers as editor, to be devoted to the interests of the club and to the Guaranty Trust Company.

Hayfield, Minn.—Hy Ramberg has resigned as cashier of the Citizens State Bank here, and will be succeeded by Mr. Finseth of Kenyon.

ILLINOIS BANKING NEWS

By C. C. Burford

After weeks of illness Levin D. Gass, for many years cashier of the First National of Danville, passed away at his home a few days ago. His career was another example of sterling worth and of a lifetime of service to one institution. He entered the bank as a clerk in 1875 and was later advanced to the office of cashier.

Though only fifty-three years of age, Mr. Gass had concentrated much activity in his career. He was a prominent fraternal man, being past grand chancellor of the Illinois Knights of Pythias, and a thirty-third degree Mason. While ill he was elected as one of the representatives of the grand lodge of Illinois to the supreme lodge of the Knights of Pythias. He served the Danville city board of education as president for a number of years and was re-elected to that office ten times. In 1875 he joined the Illinois national guard and was mustered out in 1883 as adjutant of his regiment with the rank of captain. He again entered the service in 1906 as a major and quartermaster of the Fourth brigade and finally served as a colonel on the staff of General Young, who commanded the Illinois national guard. Mr. Gass was president of the Danville Buggy Company and was treasurer of the Vermillion County Telephone Company.

Many Study Agriculture at U. of I.

Farmer-bankers will be glad to learn that the short agricultural course offered by the University of Illinois to the farmer boys and girls of the state is well attended, there being an enrollment of about one thousand from all over the state. For the young men there are daily lectures on agricultural topics and class work in corn judging, farm mechanics, study of soils, crop reproduction, veterinary science and dairying. For the young women there are lectures and demonstrations on the home, food, health and clothing.

Illinois Notes.

It is reported that a new trust company will soon be established in Charleston.

The bankers of Kankakee county are interested in forming a county organization along the lines suggested by the state association. The meeting will be held at the LaFayette Hotel in Kankakee and will be followed by a luncheon.

J. T. Robertson has retired from the staff of the Farmers National of Virginia after many years of service. The Robertson family have always been influential officers and directors of this institution.

A first dividend of 5 per cent has been declared by the trustee of the bankrupt estate of Earle W. Butler in the United States court at Peoria. It is believed that possibly 15 per cent can be realized out of the very tangled assets of the wild young banker. The notes of the banks in which Butler was interested have shrunk to practically nothing. There are claims of about $130,000, of which amount about $19,000 will probably be paid.

There are indications that the comment of the comptroller of the currency on the subject of overdrafts in national banks is receiving careful attention in this state. Some bankers in Illinois are also following the "back-to-the-soil" propaganda and are offering prizes to the best corn-raisers in their vicinity. Both straws show the wind to be blowing from the right direction.

The banks of Henderson county, located west of Galesburg along the Mississippi river, are reported to be in excellent condition according to the report of the three national and the two state banks in that county. There are no large towns in the county but the banks are doing a conservative business helping the farmers and merchants. Dividends of 15 per cent have been declared besides carrying funds to the surplus account.

Benjamin F. Caldwell, president of the Chatham State in Sangamon county and formerly president of the Farmers National of Springfield, is a democratic candidate for the nomination of governor of Illinois. He served the Springfield district in congress for several terms.

The City National Bank building of Dixon was damaged by fire Sunday to the amount of $12,000. Other establishments around the bank were also heavily damaged.

Russell Lowry, formerly of Pontiac but now residing in California, has been elected cashier of the American National of San Francisco.

The Peoples Bank of Lexington is having plans drawn for a new building which will be erected this season.

GULFPORT FIRST NATIONAL ELECTION

J. A. Bandi, the active vice-president and managing officer of the First National at Gulfport, Miss., believes that the January election in his bank gave to it the strongest board of directors in the state of Mississippi. He claims that there is not a man of them but who is well known throughout the entire state, not only for his financial strength, but for business acumen and sterling character. The First National has opened a savings department, and already has more than one hundred thousand in deposits.

NEW CHICAGO BANK FORMING

Application for permission to organize a new bank, the Franklin Trust and Savings Bank, at the northeast corner of Michigan Avenue and East Thirty-Fifth Street, was made yesterday in the state auditor's office at Springfield.

The incorporators are Simon W. Straus, president of S. W. Straus & Co.; Charles G. Dawes, president of the Central Trust Company of Illinois, and Maurice L. Rothschild, clothier—all of Chicago.

The capital stock, all of which has been subscribed, is $200,000, and the surplus $50,000. The stock was sold at 130.

The new bank will open for business the last Monday in April. The quarters it will occupy are in a new building—the Franklin Trust and Savings Bank building just completed. A large clientage for the new bank, chiefly on the South Side, is already assured.

FIRST NATIONAL OF DENVER

The deposits of the First National of Denver have reached approximately nineteen millions. A. V. Hunter is president; Thomas Keely, F. G. Moffat and Gerald Hughes are vice-presidents, and C. S. Haughwout cashier. The bank is now occupying its new home, a beautiful twelve-story building at the corner of Stout and Seventeenth streets. The building is 125 feet square. The bank occupies the entire first and mezzanine floors, as well as a part of the basement. It is claimed by many who have made careful observation, that the First National has one of the handsomest banking rooms, in shape, design and lighting, as well as in quality of its fixtures, to be found in the United States. The bank was founded in 1865 by Jerome B. Chaffee, who selected David H. Moffat for his cashier. In 1880 Mr. Moffat succeeded to the presidency, which office he held until his death last year. During nearly all of this long period the First National was known as the Moffat bank.

STATE BANKS OF NEW YORK

Albany.—State banking department reports the total resources of the 195 state banks, on December 21, 1911, as $611,632,378, which compares with $611,833,854 at the date of the previous call, September 29, 1911. Total deposits decreased in that period over $5,500,000, and were, on the date of the last call, $517,757,494.

DEATH OF PROMINENT PEORIA BANKER

The death of Frank Trefzger, president of the Illinois National Bank, Peoria, Ill., on Sunday morning, after the brief period of one week's illness of erysipelas, came as a great shock to his many friends and business associates. For more than thirty-five years Mr. Trefzger had been identified with the banking interests of Peoria and was one of the most widely known bankers in Central Illinois. Aside from affiliation with the bank organizations, he was a prominent member of the Creve Coeur Club, the Association of Commerce, and several secret organizations.

FRANK TREFZGER

Thirty-five years ago Mr. Trefzger started as a messenger boy in the old German Bank. By close application to his work he gradually was promoted to a position of trust in that institution. When the Home Savings and State Bank was established twenty years ago by Valentine Ulrich the services of Mr. Trefzger were secured as cashier. He remained with that institution until nine years ago, when Martin Kingman, recognized as one of the best bankers in Peoria at that time, persuaded Mr. Trefzger to accept a similar position in the Illinois National Bank. In the position of cashier his worth was demonstrated to the banking firm, and three years ago he was elected president. Just a month ago he was re-elected for the fourth term to the presidency of the bank. The unusual success of the financial organization is credited largely to his work.

A FOURTEEN DAY TRIP

S. A. Hughes, general immigration agent of the Frisco Lines at St. Louis, has arranged a two weeks' trip especially for business men and bankers, to take them through the great state of Texas, particularly in that section known as the gulf-coast country. There has been marvelous development in this fertile section of the Lone Star state, and some of her cities have been going forward at a surprisingly rapid rate. Much of that country, which a few years ago was devoted to cattle ranch purposes, now contains thriving cities and towns. Texas has a state appropriation for the teaching of agriculture, horticulture and intensive farming. The tour will be under the personal direction of H. R. Gregory of the Frisco Lines, an accomplished gentleman and expert. The cost is but $99.50. The schedule includes the beauties of Boston range, of the Ozark mountains in northwestern Arkansas, and the mountains along the Gasconade and Meramec rivers. The small sum of $99.50 includes round-trip transportation, meals in dining cars and at hotels, side-trips and automobile rides, as well as sleeping car accommodations. Practically all of the important cities of Texas will be visited for a short stop. The train is expected to leave St. Louis at 11:20 p.m., February 20th. A deposit of but $10 is required to hold accommodations. A beautifully illustrated booklet will be sent upon application to either Mr. Hughes or Mr. Gregory.

WILSON W. LAMPERT MARRIED

On Saturday last Wilson W. Lampert, assistant cashier of the Continental and Commercial National Bank of this city, was married to Lillian Eckstein at St. James M. E. Church, Forty-sixth Street and Ellis Avenue. A wedding supper was served in the banquet room of the Blackstone Hotel, attended by all of the officers of the Continental and Commercial and their families. The supper was followed by a reception and dance, after which the bride and groom left for New Orleans and the South.

MILWAUKEE

NEWS LETTER By Mortimer I. Stevens

WISCONSIN

Some improvement in local business has been noted during the past week, as indicated by the daily clearings, which are running somewhat in excess of the total showing for the same period one year ago.

Merchants and manufacturers alike appear to be feeling some slight revival in trade, particularly among the manufacturers it is reported that the outlook for the spring and summer trade is unusually good.

Among the iron and steel manufacturers a number of heavy orders have been booked the last week, which, together with orders already in hand, insure fairly active operations for some time to come.

At the various banks, not only in Milwaukee, but throughout the country in general, deposits are well up to the mark established last year, with collections reported fairly good in nearly every instance. Bond salesmen returning from points out in the state report a trade fully up to what might be expected for this period of the year, and appear very sanguine regarding future trade.

Individual trade, or "over the counter trade," as it is termed in Milwaukee, has been good with the majority of sales registered among the different railroad bonds. There has also been a fairly active call for the industrials, as well as public utilities.

Wisconsin National Promotes Employee

At a meeting of the directors of the Wisconsin National Bank, held early this week,

James M. Hayes, chief paying teller of the bank since its organization, was elected assistant cashier. To fill the position vacated by the promotion of Mr. Hayes, Arthur Van Dyke Clarkson, paying teller, was made chief paying teller.

These promotions came as a regular feature of the bank's policy of advancing its worthy employees to positions of trust.

Aldrich Bill is Favored

President W. P. Bishop of the Milwaukee Chamber of Commerce, and James K. Ilsley, president of the Marshall & Ilsley Bank, returned early in the week from Washington, D. C., where they had been in attendance for the last five days at the annual meeting of the board of trade. Mr. Bishop was elected as vice-president of the organization.

One of the leading features of the convention was a report by Mr. Ilsley regarding the Aldrich currency bill. Mr. Aldrich spoke in favor of the bill, and a resolution was passed to this effect.

New Bank Has Its Troubles

The International Bank of Sheboygan, the proposed new state bank, has not yet been opened for business, and no date for the opening is set. The bank officials are waiting for a certificate giving the permission to do business, and until this is issued by the state authorities, the bank cannot be opened.

Cashier Zeidler states that the charter for the bank has been issued and that everything is in readiness to start as soon as the necessary certificate comes to hand.

Racine Man Comes to Milwaukee

Frederick A. Lochner, receiving teller of the Manufacturers National Bank of Racine, will leave on February 1st for Milwaukee, where he has accepted a position as cashier of the Wisconsin Savings Bank.

Mr. Lochner has for many years been connected with the Racine institution, having entered its employ as a messenger boy, and comes to Milwaukee highly recommended.

Elect Clearing House Officers

J. W. P. Lombard was re-elected president of the Milwaukee Clearing House Association at the first annual meeting held January 6th.

Other officers re-elected are: Vice-President, James K. Ilsley; manager of the clearing house, George W. Strohmeier; clearing house committee, Frederick Kasten, chairman; William Bigelow, Washington Becker, Charles C. Schmidt and A. G. Schultze.

The clearances for the year were $696,732-779.15, an increase of $38,738,206.73 over 1910. The total bank balances for January, 1911, were $87,813,123.54.

Ipswich, S. D.—Q. W. Hutchinson was elected cashier of the First State Bank, taking the position formerly held by W. H. Morris, resigned.

¶ This Bank, being at the logical center of Wisconsin banking activity, and having an exceptional list of State and Foreign correspondents, offers its services to conservative Banks with the assurance that such a connection will be of mutual advantage.

DEATH OF COL. FARNSWORTH'S FATHER

Detroit, January 23.—Leander L. Farnsworth, father of Colonel Fred. E. Farnsworth, general secretary of the American Bankers Association, one of the oldest and most venerable of Detroit's pioneer citizens, died of paralysis in the Nobel sanatorium, Detroit, Saturday, January 20th, at the age of 91 years, seventy-six of which he has been a resident of Detroit. Coming here in July, 1836, Mr. Farnsworth engaged in various commercial enterprises, until in 1848, he entered the shoe business as a member of the firm of Lyon & Farnsworth, of which he was the sole proprietor for many years, the business being continued up to 1891. He was prominent in the social, church and business life of this city for half a century. For several years he made his home at Mt. Dora, Fla., in the winters. Funeral was on Monday.

EUTAW SAVINGS BANK OF BALTI- MORE

One of the best known savings banks in America is the Eutaw of Baltimore, which was incorporated in 1847. On January 1st, it made its sixty-fourth annual report. Funds on hand December 30, 1911, were $26,039.61. The total resources are about seven millions more than this. More than twenty-one millions are carried as investments. The bank prints a full list of government, state and municipal bonds and railroad securities carried on its books. The amount in each case is set forth so that any patron of the Eutaw can tell at a glance in just what his savings account at the Eutaw is invested. The bank gives the rate per cent which each one of the securities pays, and gives the dates of the maturities of those held by it. The Eutaw has no capital stock, being operated solely in the interest of depositors. Interest at the rate of 3½ per cent is allowed on all sums above $5.00, for every calendar month they may be continued with the bank. No advantage whatever is taken of depositors who are obliged to withdraw money at times in advance of the interest day. The bank is examined by the state banking commissioner. One of the general rules is that deposits by or payments to an individual can not be made more frequently than once a week. The banking room of the Eutaw is one of the handsomest in the country. William

1912 HANDBOOK IS OUT

The "Handbook of Securities for 1912," published by the Commercial and Financial Chronicle, has been issued. It offers useful statistical information in convenient form for ready reference relating to leading railroad and industrial stocks and bonds. Railroad income and dividend records for years back are shown, together with yearly and monthly range of prices of securities traded in on the New York, Chicago and other stock exchanges, and other data.

NEW YORK BANKS STILL GAIN

New York, January 22.—The known movements of money for the week ended with the close of business on Thursday indicate a further gain in cash by the local banks of $17,458,000. They gained net from the interior $11,338,000, and gained in addition from the subtreasury $6,120,000.

RECENT BANK ELECTIONS

The annual meeting of the Calumet Trust and Savings Bank was held January 16th. The following directors were elected: F. Nay, H. R. Baldwin, H. R. Clissold, I. M. Price, E. J. Price, W. D. Hurlbut, C. G. Blake, after which they declared the usual semiannual dividend of 4 per cent on its stock, and elected the following officers:

Frank Nay, president; H. R. Clissold, vice-president; Fred Bateman, cashier.

North Shore Trust Company

Directors and officers of the North Shore Trust Company, Highland Park, Ill., have been re-elected as follows:

Directors—J. Fred McGuire, Charles A. Wightman, Arthur W. Vercoe, Ira J. Geer, R. C. Keller. President, J. Fred McGuire; vice-president, Charles A. Wightman; cashier, Arthur W. Vercoe; assistant cashier, E. J. Grundy.

BANKING CONDITIONS IMPROVING

Salem, Ore.—"The general adoption of safer and more conservative methods by our state banks is placing the banking business of the state under a sounder basis than it has ever before occupied," says Superintendent of Banks Wright in his annual report. "Banking conditions in the state show continued improvement. Every effort is being made to compel liquidation or reorganization of any bank conducting its business in a reckless or unjudicious manner. As the present law grants authority to this department to require the removal of bank officials found to be reckless, incompetent or dishonest, much has been accomplished in the past year in securing reorganization or improvement in the condition of a number of banks of which the public is of necessity uninformed. The failures which have occurred in the past year were banks organized prior to the enactment of any state banking laws. It is, indeed, unfortunate that this state was so long without any banking laws." In conclusion in his report, the superintendent says:

"I believe the indiscriminate organization of banks is not only a menace to legitimate banking, but a danger to the public, and it will be my policy to protect banking interests of this state by refusing to grant authority for new banks to organize until by careful investigation I am satisfied that local conditions are developing to an extent that additional banking facilities are required."

Southwestern reserve city news and gossip
—Special correspondence concerning also
the tributary territory, by J. Vion Papin

St. Louis, January 24.—The week has developed absolutely no feature in the local monetary situation. Business is running along on a slow, routine scale, with the demand from all sources rather limited. There are apparently plenty of borrowers who could use funds, but they are universally holding out for a lower rate of interest than the banks are willing to concede. The result has been a sort of deadlock, with some apathy as a logical result. Among the banking fraternity the opinion prevails that the next few months must bring forth considerable improvement in the inquiry for funds, and chiefly for this reason they are not making any vigorous campaign to enlarge their loans. The weakness in the East has had a moral effect here. There is pretty brisk competition for short time commercial paper, especially the choice names, but loans of long duration are not popular. On the whole the outlook is considered reassuring. Banks at this center, and in fact the entire Southwest, are in about as strong a position as ever before in their history, at this particular period of the year. Within the past ten days business in the wholesale district has picked up in a marked degree, and in certain lines sales are running way over what had been anticipated or hoped for at the first of the month. Collections, both city and country, are reported as being for the most part satisfactory. Several railroads terminating at St. Louis are entering the market for considerable sums, for improvements and the purchase of rolling stock. It is believed that by the first of April these systems will be large borrowers, and the intention seems to be to finance the betterments as far as possible through St. Louis financial institutions. Absolutely nothing in a speculative way is being done here at present, and very little in the way of new enterprise for the moment. In the extremes discount rates range from 4 to 5¼ per cent.

Stock Exchange Operations

Total sales of stocks and bonds on the St. Louis Stock Exchange in 1911 amounted to only $5,848,277, as compared with $7,123,937 in 1910, a decrease for the year of $1,275,660. The year was one of Sunday quietness here, but relatively the decrease in sales here was no greater than at other leading centers. In many respects the year was satisfactory. Prices were generally well maintained, which is an important factor, as the local market is almost exclusively an investment one. There was little done at any time in a speculative way, which fact is largely accountable for the smaller volume of business. The most active stock in 1911 was United Railways preferred, 15,811 shares of that issue changing hands for a consideration of $635,580. In the bank and trust company list National Bank of Commerce was the leader in point of activity, 4,007 shares selling for $756,998. All told 5,104 shares of bank stock were dealt in, bringing $1,142,794, and 5,502 shares of trust company stock sold at $929,264. Following is a recapitulation of the year's operations:

	Shares	Amount
Bank stocks	5,104	$1,142,794.50
Trust Co. stocks	5,502	929,264.16
Miscellaneous stocks ...	17,401	1,040,641.27
Street Ry. stocks	20,340	684,372.38
Mining stocks	18,687	8,728.86
Totals	67,035	$3,805,801.17
Bonds	$2,235,860	2,042,476.48
Grand total		$5,848,277.63

United Railways Affairs

The annual stockholders meeting of the United Railways, held this week, developed a statement which is considered by local financiers the best the company has ever made. Net earnings were sufficient to wipe out a floating debt of $1,400,000 and leave nearly $225,000 in the treasury. It has been many a day since the company possessed a bona fide surplus. The shares and bonds of the corporation improved on the local stock exchange, and this improvement gave a decidedly more optimistic and active tone to the market than has existed for more than a year. Total receipts for 1911 were $11,914,153, almost $500,000 more than in the preceding year. The following directors were re-elected: John I. Beggs, A. D. Brown, James Campbell, Murray Carleton, David R. Francis, Jr., Richard McCulloch, Robert McCulloch and Festus J. Wade. Captain Robert McCulloch was re-elected president and general manager, and there were no changes in other offices.

Missouri Bankers' Plans

The preliminary program for the twenty-second annual convention of the Missouri

Bankers Association in Joplin, May 21st and 22d, will soon be announced by the committee, consisting of A. H. Waite, president, of Joplin; F. F. Calkins, vice-president, of St. Joseph; W. F. Keyser of Sedalia, and John B. Jennings, treasurer, of Moberly. Headquarters of the association will be at the Connor Hotel, and the entertainment of visitors will be arranged by Joplin bankers and the Commercial Club. Some unique features are being planned for the social side of the gathering. This year's convention will be the second at Joplin within the last four years. Missouri enjoys the distinction of including in its bankers association every financial institution in the state. Missouri has been drawn upon heavily in recent years by the American Bankers Association for official staff material. Secretary Keyser is retiring secretary of the secretaries committee of the national organization; Charles H. Huttig, president of the Third National, will be chosen president of the association this year, and W. C. Harris, former president of the Missouri Association, A. O. Wilson, vice-president of the State National of St. Louis, and C. B. Hutcheson of Kansas City are members of the National Executive Council.

No Change in Commonwealth

There was no change in the personnel of the directors and officers of the Commonwealth Trust Company. The following directors were re-elected: A. N. Edwards, Edward Hidden, F. W. Allen, A. D. Brown, George O. Carpenter, Thomas W. Crouch, Samuel C. Davis, S. M. Dodd, W. C. Fordyce, E. F. Goltra, James Green, J. L. Green, Sam B. Jeffries, Sam M. Kennard, Henry Koehler, A. W. Lambert, Elias Michael, L. B. Pierce, E. P. Preotorius, S. F. Pryor, Thomas Randolph, W. D. Simmons, Otto F. Stifel, M. B. Wallace and J. M. Woods.

Broadway Savings Election

The Broadway Savings Trust Company elected the following directors to serve for three years: George F. Cottrill, F. R. Jackes, W. F. Gilston, T. W. Remmers and A. L. Stocke. Charles S. Brown was re-elected president; F. R. Jackes, first vice-president; G. F. Cottrill, second vice-president; E. L. Adreon, third vice-president; Theodore Bothmann, secretary; W. F. Gilster, treasurer and C. F. Steitz, real estate officer.

Clearing-House Election

The German-American Bank received recognition in the St. Louis clearing house this time, William P. Kennett, president of that institution, having been elected president of the association to succeed Charles H. Huttig. W. H.

St. Louis Banker Ill

Julius S. Walsh, chairman of the board of the Mississippi Valley Trust Company, is ill with pneumonia at the Hotel Plaza, New York. The attack, it is said, is not a serious one, and his condition is by no means critical. Mr. Walsh was taken ill last week, and the physicians diagnosed his case as pneumonia in a mild form. His son, R. D. Walsh, who is with him, says that Mr. Walsh is improving, rapidly, but his father's age gives him some concern. Mr. Walsh is 69 years old.

GUARANTY TRUST OF NEW YORK

The annual meeting of the stockholders of the Guaranty Trust Company of New York was held January 17th, at the office of the company, 28 Nassau Street, and the following directors re-elected to serve for three years: Edmund C. Converse, T. DeWitt Cuyler, James B. Duke, Robert W. Goelet, Edwin Hawley, Alexander J. Hemphill, Augustus D. Juilliard, John R. Morron, William H. Porter, Thomas F. Ryan.

W. J. McFetridge, Jr., has been made vice-president of the Merriam Park State Bank, St. Paul, succeeding E. H. Cutter, resigned. A cashier to succeed Mr. McFetridge has not been chosen.

Guy L. V. Emerson

The well known ex-secretary of the Colorado Bankers Association, Guy L. V. Emerson, has been spending a large part of the winter in Chicago, living at 4422 Sheridan Road. He gave up his position as cashier of the Silverton National in Colorado to attend to some important interests in this city. Rumor has it that several banks here have been tempting him to go back into the business again. It would appear from all the circumstances of his former position and wide acquaintance in the western states that he would be a very effective man in the new business department of any well organized bank.

THE FALL OF TWO BANK CLERKS

"The story of the fall of two bank clerks, lately exploited in the daily press," says the Bank Man in an editorial, "is a sad one to hear. Yet, pitiful as are the circumstances surrounding this defalcation, they are no extenuation of the act itself. No man has the right to put himself into a situation from which dishonesty is likely to be the only means of extraction, if extraction, a leap from the frying pan into the fire could be called. First, it was matrimony on an inadequate income; next the loan shark for temporary relief, then embezzlement to escape the loan shark. A perfectly natural sequence. Matrimony and race-perpetuation may be a social duty, but it is not a duty that devolves on those who are strained to maintain their own existence. The cruelty and rapacity of the so-called loan sharks have been too often exposed to excuse resort to them. And it is so pitifully unnecessary. There are few employers who would not relieve a clerk from such a position. If these fellows had been 'man' enough to go to their employer for aid they would have obtained it. Time and again have we been told this very thing by bank officers at our meetings. Only two months ago, Mr. Cooper, of the Guarantee Company of America, in all sincerity actually begged any bank clerk who was in just this kind of a muddle, to go to him, personally; and promised him his help. Of course these men did not have the advantage of being institute members and hearing this advice, but the deadly nature of the salary loan must have been known to them. A note with a loan shark spells destruction."

DRAINAGE WORK MAKING PROGRESS

Word comes from New Orleans that E. L. Chappuis announced at a banquet at the St. Charles hotel on Saturday night that he had completed entirely the financing of a project to drain, develop and settle with small farmers more than 50,000 acres of land in St. Bernard parish, all within twenty-five miles of Canal Street. The Frisco Railroad is interested in this section; the lands heretofore have belonged to the Alluvial City Land Company. Most of the money came from New Orleans and Chicago, owing to investigations made by Chicago bankers at the time of the A. B. A. convention. It was utterly amazing to them that thousands of acres of the richest land in the world could remain idle within twenty-five miles of one of the world's best markets. Work is to be commenced at once; word is being sent out to induce business men and manufacturers of all descriptions to come there to locate.

Editorial Comment

UNIFORM STATE BANKING LAWS

We have had country wide agitation for uniform divorce laws; for negotiable instruments; for bills of lading and for making uniform the innumerable subjects of legislation. Now comes the question of uniform state banking laws, so that instead of having forty-eight different laws as we have now, the country might have a uniformity with higher ultimate results, by revising and unifying the banking laws of all the states. There are many advanced thinkers who believe that this will be the natural outcome of the passage of the bill recommended by the National Monetary Commission and now before congress. That law will make certain requirements before state banks can participate in the benefits of the National Reserve Association. In short, state banks will be required to come up to a certain standard of excellence and certain standards in the way of publishing reports; certain reserve funds will have to be kept and specified audits and examinations must be made, whether these things are required by the state banking laws or not. Private and unsupervised and uninspected banks never can become beneficiaries under the new act; neither can they become depositories of the postal savings bank system. When all of these standard requirements shall have been complied with by the various state banks, there will no longer remain any good reason why the various states should not adopt a uniform state banking law. It would at once place state banks on a parity with national banks, and the public would then have notice that all state banks come up to certain requirements, just as do all national banks.

Very little change would be required in the banking laws of most of the states, where a recognized state banking department is maintained. In those states where no state banking department has been established by law, and in those states where no regular bank examinations are provided for, quick changes will be wrought. It would come to pass then that a bank in Arkansas or South Carolina would mean about the same as a bank in Minnesota or Pennsylvania. Illinois and Iowa would then be compelled to dress ship and to put on a more effective appearance, although the necessary changes would be technical rather than radical. Just as the standard required for membership in the National Reserve Association is, as a rule, higher than the standard now enforced in many of the states, the gradual voluntary raising of their own standard by the banks will tend to raise that required by the laws of these very states. In short, to repeat in another form, it is expected that the legislatures of the various states, with bank opposition removed, will want to raise the standard of state banking to compare fully and completely with the standard required by the National Reserve Association.

THREE OF ITS COMPETITORS COMBINED

GOVERNOR WILSON AND THE PRESS

To those who remember how expeditiously the administration at Washington and its subjective newspapers killed off Admiral Dewey as a prospective candidate for president in the very midst of his popularity, it will not come as much of a surprise that Governor Wilson has been attacked by opposing democratic newspapers, and by a considerable number of republican newspapers. He has been accused of ingratitude in requesting the Harper publication in New York to discontinue its custom of carrying his name in bold type at the top of its editorial column. It is commonly charged that "the interests" own and control the Harper publications. It was formerly understood in newspaper circles that William C. Whitney directed the publicity interests of "the interests," and that later the burden of that work was taken up by H. H. Rogers, who acted in that capacity until his death. From all over the country there came many inquiries as to whether or not Governor Wilson was simply the chosen candidate of Editor Harvey or whether he was the candidate of Wall Street and the big corporations. Having been asked frankly by Mr. Harvey whether he thought the support of "Harper's Weekly" was injuring his presidential possibilities, Governor Wilson just as frankly said that he thought it was. Governor Wilson went directly to the point, just as he did in the little episode about the Bryan letter, and has taken the public into his confidence as few public men ever have. There was no "break" or misunderstanding between Governor Wilson and Editor Harvey, but most likely the governor's advisers thought it best to have the public understand that he is not under the chaperonage of any man or any interest. The situation is quite simple, and when the facts are fully known, will help Governor Wilson's standing with the people at large.

The opposing newspapers made a great deal out of a little letter, which Governor Wilson at one time wrote to Mr. Joline, in which he expressed the hope that some means would be discovered for "knocking Mr. Bryan into a cocked hat." Bryan was large enough to see the point, and went considerably out of his way to show his personal affection for Governor Wilson at the Jackson day banquet at Washington. That really ended all there was to the Joline letter, except this: It seems that Mr. Joline ran on an opposition-to-Wilson ticket at Princeton for alumni president, and was overwhelmingly beaten. This was the small, mean reason he had for making public what for five or six years had been considered purely personal and private correspondence. When the full truth comes out about the withdrawal of Governor Wilson's name from the top of the editorial column in "Harper's Weekly," the credit will be with Wilson. While president of Princeton University, he made a long fight to dissolve the college clubs where none but rich men's sons were admitted, and never ceased to argue that personal worth should be the sole basis of a young man's standing in a college or a university. He never did believe in young men who are willing to devote only fifteen hours a week out of one hundred and sixty-eight to actual study. He refused millions of dollars of endowments to Princeton University because they were coupled with stipulations which did not agree with his idea of student democracy. He stood up above other college presidents, just as he now stands up above other state governors, and just as he will, if elected, loom far above the horizon in administrative circles at Washington.

WHY THE TELLER STOLE

A little banking story comes from Topeka, Kan., which illustrates another of the reasons why bank tellers sometimes go wrong. Ward Speelman was a teller in the Merchants National. Less than three years ago he married a very estimable young lady living in a nearby town, and brought her to Topeka to live. It seems that he had always misrepresented his income to the young lady, so that both she and her friends believed him to be occupying a much more lucrative position than the one which he actually held. Speelman attempted to keep up the deception, and the wife lived extravagantly. She went about in taxicabs, purchased a new party dress for every evening engagement, gave away household supplies and furnishings which she did not like, and purchased others, so that she kept Speelman busy appropriating the cash of the various customers of the bank. The grandparents of the wife had given her a house as a wedding present. Speelman had mortgaged this, and rather than permit the mortgage to go unsatisfied, he promptly paid it off with a customer's check. This led to his discovery and undoing. He has been arrested and the wife will probably lose the property. It is said that not a bank cashier or a bank president in Topeka lives at anything like the expensive rate at which the Speelmans lived. They went regularly to theatres and gave dinner parties at clubs; but now Speelman is in jail and the wife knows the whole story. If the matter could be written up graphically and presented to every young man who is drawing a salary less than the one which he thinks he ought to have, it might tend somewhat toward a different manner of living. Had young Speelman not deceived his wife in the first place as to his position, and she had married expecting to live on the income which he earned, they would both be happy and contented to-day.

COMBATS BANK MERGER DOCTRINE

To the Editor: You said in a recent editorial, in THE CHICAGO BANKER, that "There is a growing tendency toward consolidation, and, generally speaking, this is in the interest of better conditions." Many who are competent to judge believe otherwise. A prominent manufacturer who is a director of a leading national bank, which over a year ago had absorbed another national bank, recently said that he believed his bank would have been better off, or at least as well off, if it had not made the purchase. Are bank mergers desirable on general principles? I believe not. The following facts would seem to indicate why they are not desirable:

1. They are unjust to officials and employees. Men who have spent years of diligent, efficient service in banks are suddenly deprived of their positions through mergers. Others are reduced in rank. Capable officers are shorn of all authority, except to retain business and make certain credits. Employees in both institutions have their opportunities for advancement decreased. Result: Scores of able men, including officials, are made uneasy and discontented; discouragement, loss of enthusiasm and a desire to look elsewhere follow. Faithfulness, ability and efficiency count for but little in bank consolidations, as they are secondary in importance to reducing the pay-roll.

2. They are unjust to depositors. I have heard many of them express displeasure at having their deposits shifted as "pawns." They prefer to choose banking connections for themselves. They object to steam roller banking and do not approve of having their accounts arbitrarily bought up by strangers, as though the deposits were articles of merchandise. It deprives many depositors of the value of their years of acquaintance with officials. Depositors resent the idea of being told by others where they are to do business. One of the best depositors in a merged bank declined to continue relations with the buying bank, even when he had no specific objection to the latter. He preferred to choose for himself, and did so.

3. They overload the absorbing bank. One bank of moderate size which has recently doubled its deposits by purchase, now has ten vice-presidents, with published rumors of more to come. This number is out of proportion to actual necessity. A bank five times its size in deposits has but six vice-presidents. And the largest bank in the country, with seven times the deposits, requires only seven vice-presidents.

4. They cause an enormous waste. To-day four splendid banking houses on La Salle Street and one on Dearborn Street are standing empty because of mergers. The choicest location of all, in the very heart of the financial district, has been idle for over a year. The absorbing banks are paying good rental for this unused space. This is an unnecessary waste.

5. They unnecessarily intensify competition. Every merger leads to a scattering of deposits and increases the keenness of competition. In a recent one an efficient officer who had spent years in the service of the purchased bank was ignored entirely. He at once accepted a proposition with a competing bank and was given the task of obtaining the largest possible portion of the selling bank's business. He is succeeding, too, having in a short time transferred a surprisingly large volume of business to his new employers. Notwithstanding his success, he expressed to the writr his belief that mergers should be prevented by law.

6. By many they are not considered legitimate means of growth. A merger is an abnormal relation, and should be the exception, not the rule.

These six considerations are facts, not fancies. Nor are they the last word.

"WASHED AIR" FOR BANKS

Not so very long ago the president of a prosperous Chicago bank moved into a new building especially erected for the purposes of banking. A part of the outfit was a Sterling air cooler and purifier, made by Thomas & Smith, 116-8 N. Carpenter Street, Chicago. He is already an enthusiast about the new device. In summer it cools the air to within four degrees of the temperature of the water used; the air is also washed and freed from dust and impurities. In winter time it raises the temperature of the outside, fresh air to within a few degrees of the temperature of the water used. This bank president is so completely satisfied that he has assured his friends that he believes the "washed air" system will add ten years to the life of any bank president who is closely confined to his office. These air washing and ventilating systems made by Thomas & Smith have been installed in the principal hotels of Chicago, including the Blackstone, Congress, La Salle and Brevoort. The new Insurance Exchange, the Gas building, the new city hall, the Continental and Commercial National, Graham's Bank and the Majestic Theatre are all making daily use of this system. In New York it is in the principal hotels and office buildings and is used in the Congressional Library at Washington and in the new Bureau of American Republics. All of the strictly modern buildings in St. Louis are so equipped. All of the ventilation under this system goes directly into the building through a spray or sheet of water, which takes out all of the street dust and germs, and necessarily changes the temperature of the air, both summer and winter, to something near like the temperature of the water used. No strictly up-to-date building should be erected without including an air purifying system.

FOR STATE TREASURER

At the conference and banquet of the Illinois Bankers executive council on Wednesday, it was generally conceded that Andrew Russel would be the bankers' candidate for the office of state treasurer, which office he has already filled. Mr. Russel is ex-president of the state association, as well as ex-treasurer of the state, and his bank located at Jacksonville is one of the largest banks in southern Illinois. There were a number of other candidates mentioned for the position, but it was taken for granted by those who knew the most about the situation that Mr. Russel had a certainty of the nomination. Twice before he has demonstrated his popularity with the voters by carrying the state primaries.

An Open Forum Dedicated to the American Institute of Banking in Which to Advance the Great Movement for Systematic Education and Universal Membership

NEWS OF CHICAGO CHAPTER, A. I. B.

By OTTO J. KRAMPIKOWSKY.

The debating society of Chicago Chapter conducted the meeting of Tuesday evening, January 23d, in the way of a "prize debate" as follows: "Resolved, That the passage of the proposed National Reserve Association act will be of more benefit to the general business of the country than will tariff revision." The affirmative side was taken by J. W. Gorby, Peoples Trust and Savings Bank; Bruce Baird, First National Bank, and Gustav Hake, Union Trust Company, while the negative side was taken by J. H. Ashley, Corn Exchange National Bank; W. G. Coggeshall, First National Bank, and O. J. Kuhn, First National Bank. The judges were Craig B. Hazelwood, Walter L. Johnson and Leigh Sargent. The question above mentioned is of great importance to the bankers to-day, and all of the participants in this debate showed that they had thoroughly studied and understood the proposition. After a lengthy debate the judges awarded the decision in favor of the affirmative side. Musical selections were then given by Walter Ebel of the First National Bank, and G. J. Whitlock, of the Continental and Commercial National Bank, which were very good and heartily applauded.

The eleventh annual banquet of the chapter will be given to-night at the red room of the Hotel La Salle, among whom will be some of the most prominent men of to-day, such as George M. Reynolds, president of the Continental and Commercial National Bank, who will be principal toast-master; Hon. Judge Marcus A. Kavanagh, and others. All arrangements have been so well taken care of that it is expected that all will spend a most enjoyable evening.

NEW PRESIDENT FOR BALTIMORE CHAPTER

Clifton K. Wells, who was in October elected president of the Baltimore Chapter of the American Institute of Banking, has resigned. At a meeting of the chapter held on January 18th, Robert Mooney, transit manager of the Citizens National Bank, was elected to succeed Mr. Wells. Mr. Wells has recently been promoted to the position of discount clerk of the First National Bank of Baltimore, and the increased demands upon his time made his resignation imperative. He is to be congratuated upon his promotion.

SAN FRANCISCO CHAPTER

A class in banking and finance, conducted by Wm. A. Day, president of the San Francisco Chapter of the American Institute of Banking, was begun last Wednesday at the chapter rooms after banking hours. The class is using as the basis of its work the lectures which are being delivered this winter before the Boston Chapter by Prof. O. W. M. Sprague of Harvard University. A course in law will be conducted by Robert W. Harrison, attorney, on Friday afternoons at 5:15.

The comptroller of the currency has approved applications to organize the Groos National Bank of San Antonio, Texas, capital $250,000; and the First National Bank of Lacona, N. Y., capital $25,000.

LECTURES BEFORE THE BRITISH IN- STITUTE OF BANKERS

London, January 15.—The first of a series of four lectures on "The Relations of Bankers with Partners and other Joint Persons," was delivered by A. Andrewes-Uthwatt, barrister-at-law, at the London Institution before the members of the Institute of Bankers. The lecturer dealt first with the general principles underlying the subject. He pointed out that the law relating to partnership was to be found in the Partnership Act, 1890, and the Limited Partnerships Act, 1907. These acts are by no means perfect, and many are the difficulties met with in partnership in its legal aspect. The Partnership Act permits the free association of persons, who desire to carry on business in partnership, whatever may be the nature of that business, and, with but few exceptions, whoever the persons may be. It is, however, important to remember that not more than ten persons may join together in partnership to carry on the business of banking, and not more than twenty in any other kind of business. If these numbers are exceeded, the partnership must be registered as a company under the Companies Acts.

There is no need to observe any formalities when creating a partnership; as between the partners themselves, they are able to make any agreement they may choose as to distribution of profits, liability of the partners one to another, etc. Any agreement, however, between the partners themselves in no way affects the outside world. This latter subject, the lecturer stated, would be dealt with by him in another lecture.

Partnership is defined as "the relation which subsists between persons carrying on a business in common with a view to profit." The partnership is known as a "firm," and the name under which it trades is called the "firm name." Commercial men are apt to look upon a firm in the same light as a lawyer looks upon a corporation. In law, however, a firm is not regarded as distinct from the members thereof. A partner may be the debtor or creditor of his co-partners, but not of the firm. By the common law of the country each partner is liable to the utmost farthing for the debts of his firm, and, if a creditor obtains judgment against the firm, execution may be issued against the property of any partner.

There have been various attempts made from time to time to limit a partner's liability, but, as already stated, no agreement between the partners themselves as to limitations of liability affects outsiders, unless it has been expressly stipulated with the creditor at the time of the transaction that there is such an agreement; e. g., an agreement that in the event of default, the creditor must look to the assets of the firm, and not to the property of the individual members. This liability of partners to the firm's creditors attaches to every member of the firm, whether such member be in fact, or is only believed to be a member. If a person, who is not actually a partner, so conducts himself as to lead people to believe that he is a partner, he is liable as if he were actually a partner. Section 14 of the Partnership Act states that "every person, who by words spoken or written or by conduct represents himself, or knowingly suffers himself to be represented, as a partner in a particular firm, is liable as a partner to anyone, who has on the faith of any such representation given credit to the firm, whether the representation has or has not been made or communicated to the person so giving credit by or with the knowledge of the apparent partner making the representation or suffering it to be made."

The liability of partners in England is a joint one, and not joint and several. Section 9 of the Partnership Act, 1890, is as follows: "Every partner in a firm is liable jointly with the other partners, and in Scotland severally also, for all debts and obligations of the firm incurred while he is a partner, and after his death his estate is also severally liable in due course of administration for such debts and obligations, so far as they remain unsatisfied, but subject in England or Ireland to the prior payment of his separate debts." The net result of this joint liability is that a creditor must bring an action against the firm before he can issue execution against the property of the individual partners. If the creditor obtains judgment against one or some, but not all the partners, he can only issue judgment against the particular partner or partners proceeded against. If the debt cannot then be satisfied, his cause of action against the remaining partners is gone, for the other partners are freed from liability.

With regard to the power of one partner to bind the firm, it is to be noted that each partner is the agent of the other partners. If all the partners decide upon a particular transaction, this question will not, of course, arise; but it is the root idea of law that, as between a partner in a firm, and the outside world, he is the unlimited agent of the firm. By section 5 of the Partnership Act "every partner is an agent of the firm, and his other partners for the purpose of the business of the partnership; and the acts of every partner who does any act for carrying on in the usual way business of the kind carried on by the firm of which he is a member, bind the firm and his partners unless the partner so acting has in fact no authority to act for the firm in the particular matter, and the person with whom he is dealing, either knows that he has no authority, or does not know or believe him to be a partner."

The transactions in which bankers are mainly concerned in their dealings with partners relate chiefly to negotiable instruments, and borrowing. In this connection, however, it is necessary to distinguish between the powers of partners in "trading" and "non-trading" firms. In a trading partnership, a partner may borrow money, draw bills or notes, etc., in the name of and on account of the firm, while in non-trading partnership the partners have no such authority. Professional partnerships, such as solicitors, physicians, mining engineers, auctioneers, etc., may be cited as examples of what are called non-trading partnerships. In these latter cases, one partner has no implied authority to bind his co-partners by bills or notes.

Assuming that the act done is within the apparent power of the partner, a person with whom he deals is under no obligation to enquire whether he is acting honestly, unless he has actual knowledge that the partner is abusing his position, in which case he would have no recourse against the firm. But a holder for value of a bill wrongfully dealt with by a partner, without notice of the fraud, could sue the firm successfully.

With regard to deeds, i. e., documents under seal, one partner cannot bind the firm by executing such a document. That partner himself will be liable, but not the firm. If the document is merely an instrument in writing, the firm would be liable. A partner may, however, be expressly authorized by his co-partners to execute a deed under seal, but he must be constituted their agent in this respect by a separate deed under seal. Moreover, he should execute the deed in the firm name only and not in his own.

With regard to negotiable instruments, no person whose name is not on a bill or note is liable upon that bill or note. Therefore, as the signature of the firm is the signature of all the partners, to render the firm liable the bill or note must bear the signature of the firm and not of a partner. In the event of dishonor of a bill or note, it is not necessary to give notice to all the partners. Under section 16 of the act, "notice to any partner, who habitually acts in the partnership business of any matter relating to partnership affairs operates as notice to the firm, except in the case of a fraud on the firm committed by or with the consent of that partner."

In connection with the delegation of authority, the lecturer mentioned that it was a rule of law that a person who is himself an agent cannot delegate his authority as such to a third party. Under this rule a partner cannot delegate his authority to a third party; e. g., he cannot empower a clerk to draw checks on the firm's account. A banker would not be in order if he paid checks so drawn. Such an authority must be given in writing by all the partners.

With regard to the determination of the authority of a partner to bind his firm, there are four cases where the power is determined. Firstly, on the retirement of a partner. In this case outsiders are not affected by the mere fact of retirement, unless they have received due notice of his retirement. What constituted due notice would be dealt with by the lecturer later. Secondly, when a partner becomes bankrupt his authority is deemed to have been determined from the date of his bankruptcy, with the result that a banker may not safely deal with a partner if he has notice or knowledge of an available act of bankruptcy. Thirdly, by the death of a partner; but in this, as in the previous cases, the authority of the continuing or surviving partners continues, although the power of the other is determined. Fourthly, by the express revocation of the firm. This is under the well-known rule that a principal can always revoke the authority of his agent. There appears to be some doubt whether one partner can revoke the authority of another, but the lecturer considered that at any rate a majority of the partners may revoke the authority of one of their number.

With regard to loans of money made through the agency of a partner on account of the firm, without the authority of the firm, if it can be shown that such a loan was not for the purposes of the partnership business, the firm would not be liable unless the banker can bring the transaction within the equitable doctrine of subrogation. For instance, if a partner borrows money from the bank without the authority of his co-partners, and applies the money in paying off the debts of the firm, the banker is in equity entitled to recover from the firm the amount of the loan, which has been so applied.

Second Lecture

The second lecture was delivered by Mr. Andrewes-Uthwatt. The lecturer dealt with the application of the general principles of partnership law to banking transactions. When opening an account for a partnership, the banker would want to know who are the partners, the name of the firm, and what signatures he is to recognize. In the event of overdrafts being allowed, it is as well for the banker, when taking the instructions of all the partners, to make them severally as well as jointly liable. When the banker has been unable to obtain the instructions of all the partners, it is well to remember that the representation of a partner "in the ordinary course of business" binds his firm. Assuming that a banker is dealing with one partner, can that partner open an account on behalf of the firm? He may do so, if the account is in the firm's name. Then, again, when a bank amalgamates with another bank, can a partner assent to the banker transferring the account to the new institution? In the opinion of the lecturer the banker would be justified in acting upon the authority of one partner in such circumstances. With regard to checks, each partner has, apart from any instructions to the contrary, implied authority to sign checks in the firm's name. Of course, if there are express instructions relative to the signing of checks, they must be adhered to. For instance, if the banker is only authorized by the firm to honor checks signed by one partner, and initialled by another, the banker would not be in order in paying checks not signed in that way. If there are no such instructions, the banker is in no way concerned with the purpose to which checks drawn by one partner are applied. As regards countermand of payment, one partner may stop payment of a check drawn by the firm, whether signed by himself or by another partner. If a partner dies, does notice of his death revoke the authority given to the banker to pay the firm's checks? On this point the lecturer stated that his view differed from that held by bankers. Any change in the constitution of a firm brings the old firm to an end, although it may bring a new firm into existence, and the authority to an agent is ipso facto determined. A banker is merely an agent of the firm. He would be protected until he had in fact received notice of the change in the firm. But having received notice of the death of the partner, which, in the opinion of the lecturer, changed the constitution of the firm, he could not properly pay the checks, no matter by which partner they might be drawn. The surviving or continuing partners may continue the account if they think fit, but the banker should safeguard himself by obtaining fresh instructions from the continuing partners. As to past-dated checks, and the authority of a partner to draw such checks, the courts put such an act on the part of a partner on the same footing as borrowing money. As explained in the first lecture, a partner in a "trading" firm has the implied authority of his firm to borrow money on account of the firm, but a partner in a "non-trading" firm has no such implied authority. As regards endorsement of checks, bill or notes, every partner has authority to endorse, but the proper endorsement is to write merely the name of the firm. There is no need to sign "per pro."

The lecturer dealt next with the collection of checks by a banker. If a member of a partnership firm pays a crossed check endorsed by the firm into his private account, and the banker collects the check, crediting that partner's account with the amount, and it is found that the partner has misappropriated the money, is the banker protected under section 82 of the Bills of Exchange Act? That section limits the protection of the banker to those cases where he has received payment for his customer "in good faith and without negligence." It is a question of fact whether the banker has acted in good faith, and without negligence, and it hence depends upon the circumstances of the case. Of course, if the banker did not know the customer was a partner, he might be said to have acted negligently; but if he knew that the customer was

By EDGAR P. ALLEN

Omaha

The brightening skies throughout the Central West during the past week caused a distinct revival of business of all kinds, and bankers report distinctly improved conditions. "It has been many years since crops were in such good shape at this time of the year, as reports indicate," said President J. R. Dominick of the Traders National Bank of Kansas City to the correspondent of THE CHICAGO BANKER. "Wheat in every state from the Canadian line to the gulf has had plenty of moisture and, unless unexpected freezes come, the crop will enter the spring season in promising shape. The various reports of cattle dying from exposure and inability to get at the forage have been greatly exaggerated. Of course there were some losses but not more than usual for this time of the year I am convinced. Deposits in banking centers continue to improve with a normal demand for loans at satisfactory rates. I believe that the banking business in this part of the country is in better shape now than at any time since 1907."

Many reports of small business failures have come in from all parts of the Central West during the past ten days, but the aggregate losses will be small. Some of these failures are auction jewelry houses and there is reasonable ground for suspecting the legitimacy of some of the bankruptcy proceedings. As a rule business is on a sound basis as reported by bankers.

State Banks Owned by Families

State banks throughout the Central West are becoming family affairs and close corporations. Since the first of the year scores of state banks in this territory have reduced the number of directors and filed amendments to state charters. "We have no means of knowing just who will be the new directors of these banks," said Charles Sessions, secretary of state of Kansas, "but from information we can obtain some of the banks are now owned by families entirely. When the banks were organized the promoters scattered the stock as much as possible and then when the banks began making big dividends a few stockholders began buying up all the stock. Members of the same family or two families buy up all the stock and own the entire institution. Most of the bank charter amendments decrease the directors from eight to five and only a very few increase the number of directors."

Prof. Laughlin Speaks at Kansas City Bankers Club Dinner

Kansas City bankers, and especially the younger set, have taken a keen interest in the controversy now going on over the origin and proprietorship of the famous song, "Quit Kickin' My Dog Around." This song has been sung at all group meetings of Missouri bankers for the past year and was presented officially to Kansas City last Tuesday night at a dinner of the Kansas City Bankers Club. The feature of the dinner was an address by Professor J. Laurence Laughlin, chairman of the executive committee of the National Citizens League and professor of political economy in Chicago University. He outlined the Aldrich currency plan with all of the proposed amendments. It was after this address that the grand chorus of bankers sang the "Dog Song," directed by C. G. Hutcheson, of the First National Bank, and assisted by T. F. Brady of the Commerce Trust Company. The chief "wailers" were: Fred A. Bracken, Kansas City, Kan.; C. L. Brokaw, Kansas City, Kan.; C. N. Prouty, Kansas City, Kan.; Lapier Williams, Kansas City, Kan.; G. S. Smith and J. D. Wright, Kansas City, Kan.; J. L. Johnston, D. M. Pinkerton, W. L. Buechle, G. G. Gray, George S. Hovey, W. F. Lacaff, C. W. Allendorf, Carter Wilder, the southwestern banker, and Stanley Young, of Arthur Young & Co., accountants.

Origin of "Dog Song"

The "Dog Song" has been claimed by many states but after much investigation the Kansas City bankers have concluded that this is its true origin: During the bankers' meetings down in the Ozark mountains of Missouri last fall the chorus, and that only, was heard on the streets of West Plains, Howell county, by T. F. Brady of the Commerce Trust Company, Kansas City. "We brought it home with us," said Mr. Brady, "and introduced it at group meetings all over the state. The St. Louis crowd took it home with them. After that, on the way to the national convention in New Orleans C. G. Hutcheson and a crowd went through the special train singing it and then everybody got the habit." At the dinner of the Kansas City Bankers Club the "Dog Song" was printed with the music and placed at every plate. A picture of a pup adorned the menu. The words of the official financial song of the Southwest are here given:

Wunst me 'n Lem Briggs 'n ole Bill Brown
Tuk a load of cawn to town;
An' ol' Jim—dawg, the onery kuss—
He jes natchelly follered us.

Chorus.

Every time I come to town,
The boys keep a-kickin' my dawg aroun';
Makes no difference if he is a houn',
They gotta quit kickin' my dawg aroun'.

As we driv' past Sam Johnson's sto',
Passel o' yapes kem out the do';
When Jim he stops to smell a box,
They shied at him a bunch o' rocks.

They tied a tin can on his tail,
An' run him a-past the county jail.
'N' that plumb natchelly makes me sore—
'N' Lem he cussed 'n' Bill he swore.

Me 'n Lem Briggs 'n' ol' Bill Brown,
We lost no time in a-jumpin' down,
An' we wiped them ducks up on th' groun'
Fer kickin' my ol' dawg aroun'.

Folks say a dawg kain't hold no grudge,
But wunst when I got too much budge,

Them town ducks tried to do me up,
But they didn't count on ol' Jim—pup.

Jim seed his duty thar an' then,
An' he lit into them gentlemen,
An' he shore mussed up th' cote house square,
With rags 'n' meat 'n' hide 'n' hair.

St. Joseph Credit Men's Association Entertain Bankers

More than one hundred bankers and business men were guests of the St. Joseph Credit Men's Association, of St. Joseph, Mo., Friday evening, January 19th. The principal event of the open meeting was an address by Thornton Cooke, vice-president and treasurer of the Fidelity Trust Company of Kansas City, on the Aldrich currency plan. Mr. Cooke has made a careful study of currency reform and has delivered many lectures on the subject throughout the Central West. He went into the plan in detail before the St. Joseph bankers and business men and after the address invited questions, which were not slow in forthcoming. The address was very instructive and many who heard it expressed their friendliness for the plan which hitherto they had opposed because of lack of a thorough understanding of its scope and purposes. Mr. Cooke also urged his hearers to join the National Citizens League of Chicago so as to receive frequent bulletins concerning the reserve plan and its progress.

Appoint Secretary to Aid in Campaign

The Omaha Clearing House Association has appointed the secretary, W. B. Hughes, and members of the executive committee, to co-operate with the publicity bureau of the Omaha Commercial Club in its campaign for the testing of seed corn for Nebraska farmers. Through the more than 900 banks in Nebraska the bureau will call attention to the critical situation as regards seed corn. It will send to these banks pamphlets stating the situation, and posters urging the testing of corn seed and bearing instructions for home testing. Unless some adequate action is taken, according to agricultural authorities, Nebraska will face a serious loss in its corn crop. The corn seed has been found faulty and tests very low in germinating qualities. Last year the corn crop of Nebraska amounted to something over $85,000,000 and a ten per cent reduction would be a serious matter.

State Department of National Citizens League Organized

Bankers and business men of prominence in Kansas have organized a state department of the National Citizens League for the promotion of a sound banking system. The officers of the Kansas association are: C. M. Harger of Abilene, president; and the following vice-presidents: Chancellor Frank Strong, of the University of Kansas; Ex-Governor W. J. Bailey, of Atchison; E. R. Moses, of Great Bend; S. F. Wooldard, of Wichita; B. J. Sheridan, of Paola; J. D. Rafferty, of Winfield; G. E.

Tucker, of Eureka; James A. Kimball, of Salina; C. W. Landis, of Osborne; W. Y. Morgan, of Hutchinson, and Charles W. Smyth, of Wichita. W. A. L. Thompson, of Topeka, is state vice-president to represent his colleagues at national meetings in Chicago.

Capitol Bonds Still Unsold

For several months the Missouri capitol commission has been trying to dispose of the $3,500,000 in 3½ per cent bonds voted by the people of the state for a new state house. The promoters of the bond issue did not dream that the least difficulty would be experienced in selling these bonds at par but it is now conceded that the securities are practically unsalable unless some inducement is offered to purchasers. In a financial suit that has been appealed to the Missouri supreme court it is sought to establish the right of the commissioners to offer commissions that would bring the return of the bonds to 4 per cent. These bonds are taxable and would net a very small return without the commission as an extra inducement to investors. An opinion from the supreme court is expected within a very short time.

No Shortage Discovered in Books

Ward Speelman, a teller of the Merchants National Bank of Topeka, has been arrested charged with having appropriated approximately $9,000 of the bank's funds. He waived preliminary examination and was remanded to jail in default of $5,000 bond. Speelman is 27 years old and has been very prominent in the younger social set of Topeka, in which he and his wife were favorites. It is said that Speelman's social ambitions caused him to live far beyond his income and that he stole systematically throughout a period of more than two years. A peculiar feature of the case is that a bank examiner made a special inspection of Speelman's books and found no shortage. Later the officers of the bank made a second examination with similar result. It is said that it was because Speelman used a customer's check for $1,500 to pay off a mortgage on his house that led to his detection.

American Union Trust Company

The prospects of reorganizing the American Union Trust Company of Kansas City, which failed several yeeks ago as a result of taking over the All Night and Day Bank, are not brightening. Various reports have been in circulation regarding the possibility of eastern financiers taking over the assets of the institution and reopening it, but thus far nothing of this kind has been done. The Missouri banking department has announced that it has not abandoned hope of paying off all depositors in full, but the depositors are not as hopeful. The criminal authorities have more than hinted that there will be three and probably more arrests in connection with the failure of the American Union Trust Company growing out of alleged irregular loans made by the company and also on charges that officers of the company received deposits when they knew the institution to be in a failing condition. The escape from detention of Henry W. Richardson, former president of the trust company and vice-president of the All Night and Day Bank, which the American Union Trust Company absorbed last July, led to a conference of the prosecuting attorney with the Kansas City chief of police. As a result it is said that the W. J. Burns Detective Agency will be asked to keep track of Richardson, who was recently arrested in Memphis, Tenn., on instructions by the Kansas City chief of police but later was released on a writ of habeas corpus.

Central West Notes

Texas state banks have been pushing the crusade against overdrafts, and the state banking commissioner urged this action until the attorney-general ruled that an organized attempt to get all of the banks to comply with this suggestion would be a violation of the anti-trust laws of Texas. Now it is proposed to have the attorney-general bring suit to test the case and if the opinion is upheld overdrafts will continue in Texas.

J. B. Sneed, the banker and ranchman of Amarillo, Texas, has been indicted for first degree murder and his trial is set for January 29th. Sneed shot and killed A. G. Boyce in a Fort Worth hotel. Boyce was the father of the young man who eloped with Sneed's wife a month ago. Young Boyce is still somewhere in Canada.

William W. Stover, for many years a banker of Republic, Kan., died last week in Ramona, California.

R. H. Haselett, president of the El Dorado National Bank of El Dorado, Kan., was recently elected president of the American Royal Live Stock Association. Mr. Haselett is widely known as a breeder of Hereford cattle and is a live stock enthusiast.

A. Newman, a banker of Logan, Kan., has been appointed a national bank examiner for the district of western Kansas. He has disposed of his banking interests in Logan.

The State Bank of Duenweg, Mo., has been organized and will be opened February 1st. This is a mining town four miles east of Joplin.

Banking news from Minneapolis—St. Paul financial center, and surrounding States, compiled by J. Edwards Smith

Slight illness interfered with the speaking campaign in Minnesota, of R. W. Bonyne, former member of the monetary commission. He was able to get about, but disliked to leave the Hotel Saint Paul. He reports pleasure at the way Minnesota business men are taking hold of the currency plan idea. He cannot see special alarm at Congressman Lindbergh's position.

"Up to date," he said, "we have been able to keep politics out of the consideration of this question. It is a purely economic subject, and one that should be kept decidedly apart from any political consideration. Practically all the short-comings of our present currency system which Mr. Lindbergh points out we admit, and suggest a feasible remedy."

F. E. Holton Resigns as Cashier Northwestern National

F. E. Holton has resigned as cashier of the Northwestern National Bank, after being in the employ of the institution since 1882. He will be secretary and treasurer of the Danaher-Holton Company, capital $500,000 ($200,000 paid in), which opens offices February 10th. A successor to Mr. Holton will be chosen from the bank. The new company will do a business in general land and farm mortgages, bonds and securities. F. E. Kenaston, president of the South Side State Bank, President E. J. Weiser of the Fargo First National, and President C. J. Weiser of the Winneshiek County Bank, Decorah, Iowa, are the bankers on the board. T. F. Danaher, extensive operator in lands, will be president. D. C. Warden, for years with a large mercantile house, is to be vice-president in charge of mortgage loans.

Mr. Holton is treasurer of the Commercial Club, and was a director; president of the Association of Credit Men two years, three years member of the executive council of the Minnesota Bankers Association, and several years secretary of the protective committee. In 1900 Mr. Holton left the Northwestern to become cashier of the Metropolitan and returned when it was absorbed in March, 1901, as assistant cashier. In 1908 he was made cashier.

Savings Deposits in St. Paul

Savings bank deposits are looking up in St. Paul, the report is. The first eighteen days in January $67,191 more money was deposited in savings banks than the same period last year. The Twin City State displayed a gain of $25,501, and the Ramsey County State an increase of $15,698. Other gains range from $1,000 to $10,000. Majority of patrons are found to be women, especially downtown.

Market State Bank

At the close of its first year of business, the Market State Bank, has declared a 10 per cent dividend. The directors have passed $5,000 to the surplus fund. H. E. Patterson has been elected assistant cashier. Other officers and fifteen directors have been re-elected. The remaining officers are: President, Adam Hannah; vice-president, Henry Bachman and N. H. Reeves; cashier, P. F. Ochu. The bank's capital is $25,000. As a result of the very successful year in 1911 the Union State doubled its surplus fund. The bank's profits since July were $10,587, of which the even $10,000 was put to surplus, and no dividend was declared.

St. Paul Stock Exchange Dinner

Co-operation between St. Paul banks and the stock exchange is expected from a recent dinner at the best St. Paul café, at which President A. M. Peabody of the exchange presided. The talks were informal. Attention was called to the fact that the exchange is a year old and doing an increasing business.

Cook's Dog Gets Blue Ribbon

Having stretched his pet dog thirty-eight inches in length and thereby lessening its height to eight inches, Cashier S. S. Cook, of the Minnesota Loan and Trust Company, managed to get a silver loving-cup and a blue ribbon at the recent Minneapolis kennel show. The dog is named Doxie, and he is a gent. He is also brown in color, and as he now stands is called a dachshund. Except in the form of linked sausage Mr. Cook believes the dog has reached his limit.

North Dakota Banks

In state and national banks of North Dakota in the last quarter of 1911 deposits increased $10,384,929. In 568 state banks the increase was $6,156,637, and in 147 national banks $4,389,315. Total resources at the end of the year in all banks were $100,176,965.

The increase in the deposits subject to check in the state banks was $6,285,613.58, while the increase in national banks was $4,273,338.52. Demand certificate deposits in national banks increased $151,339.99, while demand certificates in state banks increased $170,995.58. Savings deposits in state banks increased $105,650.47. Time certificate deposits were decreased in both state and national banks, the state banks losing $289,672.33, while national banks lost $55,691.10.

The total deposits in state banks was $38,720,937.83, while the total deposits in national banks was $28,492,819.21, bringing up the total deposits to $67,213,757.04.

Increased Capital

Increase in working capital of the Equitable Loan Association, Minneapolis, from $38,636 to $50,000 has been authorized after twenty-one months' trial of the anti-loan shark institution backed by leading business men. Vice-President N. F. Hawley, who is treasurer of the Farmers and Mechanics Savings, says that in 1911 the Equitable made 1,023 loans amounting to $80,000 with $67.38 loss. Few applications were refused. The company plans a pawn shop. Drop of the interest rate from 10 per cent is possible.

allowed by the Meade County Bank of Sturgis, S. D. The bank began business January 15, 1897 with $20,000 capital. Out of earnings the capital was raised to $50,000, beside $61,000 in dividends and something like $30,000 profit and surplus and uncollected interest. Inability to collect from borrowers on account of poor crops for two years, coupled with absence of troops from Fort Meade, made the trouble. It is said the officers are not blamed for the condition.

Banking Notes

W. B. Geery, vice-president of the Capital National, has been re-elected treasurer of the St. Paul Commercial Club. President Louis Betz, who is treasurer of the State Savings Bank, has gone to Cincinnati to talk about St. Paul.

George F. Orde, vice-president of the First National, has been made governor for the Minneapolis Club.

The Farmers and Merchants State of Strandquist, Minn., has been chartered with $10,000 capital. R. G. Tweetson is president and O. H. Lygaard is cashier.

George E. Dutton of Sycamore, Ill., one of the founders and largest stockholders, attended the annual meeting of the Citizens State of Tracy, Minn. A successful year was reported.

A complimentary dinner was given to Cashier E. L. Mattson of the Scandinavian-American at his resignation as assistant cashier of the Northwestern National. He was given a gold ring set with a sapphire.

Alderman Josiah H. Chase has resigned as cashier of the St. Anthony Falls Bank to take up law practice.

President F. E. Kenaston and Vice-President F. M. Prince, both Minneapolis bankers, have disposed of their interests in the Northwest Thresher Company, it is reported from Stillwater, Minn. C. W. Folds of Chicago was the representative of the eastern money. He is a director and new president. The output has been increased.

The Security State of Melrose is a new Minnesota bank with $100,000 capital. Incorporators are John Borgerding, John Kolb, John H. Welle and Mike Kleber. This bank was a national.

The case of the state versus H. J. Schwartz, cashier of the defunct state bank of Royalton, Minn., is on at Little Falls. He is charged with taking deposits when the bank was insolvent.

Forty-five bankers were at a banquet last week, given by A. D. Stephens of Crookston, himself a well-known banker. Politics was tabooed, although Mr. Stephens was toastmaster, and has had aspirations. Unity in republican ranks was sought, nevertheless, it is said by the event. Norman Rosholt of Chicago was there.

G. R. Whitney, president of the First National of Wadena, Minn., has been made a director in the State Institution for Savings, Minneapolis. I. A. Yarnell was re-elected secretary.

Jacob A. Kunze, assistant cashier of the German-American Bank, rose to his new position in ten years from messenger boy. "Do what you are called upon to do, and then do a little more," was Mr. Kunze's watchword.

Indiana

Kokomo, Ind., January 22.—At a meeting of the directors and officers of the Kokomo National Bank, final steps were taken for merging the bank and the Duke Brothers & Co., real estate and loan concern, one of the oldest in Indiana, to be hereafter known as the Farmers Trust and Savings Bank. The new institution begins business technically January 29th. E. A. Simmons was chosen president; G. W. Duke, first vice-president; W. H. Arnold, second vice-president; W. W. Drinkwater, treasurer; Ernest Seward, cashier, and Charles Shewman, secretary.

The rather surprising news from Akron is that there is to be a new bank opened there within the next ten days. The capital stock is $25,000 and has all been taken, while a state charter has also been secured. A Mr. Brown, of Monticello, is to be president of the new concern; Linc. Lukens, of Disko, vice-president, and John McCullough, cashier. The exact location for the home of the new bank has not been selected or at least made public, but it is said several buildings have been under consideration. With this new institution, most of whose stockholders are new in the banking circles of Akron and vicinity, the town will once more be well supplied as before the consolidation into the Akron Exchange Bank.

OREGON BANKERS TO AIR FARMING

Oregon bankers have started a movement that has for its purpose the introduction of a course of agricultural instruction in the public schools. The financiers believe this will bring about a real back-to-the-soil movement, for it will give the town boy, with a liking for agriculture, an opportunity to learn how to farm, while at the same time it will have a tendency to keep the farm boy on the land. The sole object of the bankers is to make farm life more attractive by showing the producer how to improve and increase his profit. It is believed this cannot help but increase the ranks of the producers by thinning those of the overcrowded army of consumers in the cities.

GUENTHER'S HUSTLER

Rudolph Guenther, specialist in financial advertising, 115 Broadway, New York, has begun to publish "Guenther's Hustler," a little booklet for financial advertisers. It comes free, and Vol. I, No. 1, is a dandy. You can get on the list with a postal.

CHICAGO CHAPTER BANQUET

On January 27th the chapter will give its classic entertainment, its one real social event of the year—The Annual Banquet. Whatever have been the vicissitudes of its existence in past years the chapter has never allowed them to interfere in the slightest detail with making the banquet the gala event of the season. This year's banquet will be no exception to the rule. Men of the highest standing in the financial, the educational and the political life of the country have promised their attendance, and their voice. The Red Room of the Hotel LaSalle has been engaged as the place, and all details have been arranged with thoroughness and care. This is an affair that no member of the chapter can miss without loss to himself, and while the attendance promises to exceed that of former years, it is hoped that no chapter member will deny himself the pleasure of attending.

Pacific Northwest Banking News

Spokane, January 23.—Edwin T. Coman, president of the Exchange National Bank, said in his address at the annual meeting of the Spokane chamber of commerce in Masonic Temple the evening of January 16th that 1912 gives every promise of being a prosperous one for Spokane and the Inland Empire. Labor is abundantly employed, he added, and a revival in the lumber industry is now indicated; the mines are contributing more wealth than ever and with a favorable crop outlook this year should be one of advancement in all lines of endeavor. Mr. Coman spoke of improvements and betterments, involving more than $10,000,000 to be made by the railroads, private investors and the municipality this year. Mayor William J. Hindley announced that the Northern Pacific Railway Company will build a $500,000 station in conjunction with its grade separation, to cost more than $3,000,000, saying also that plans for several important structures are now before the authorities. The work of the chamber of commerce cost $73,346 in 1911, when the receipts from all sources were $74,722.

Promotions at the Union Trust

James C. Cunningham, for years secretary-treasurer of the Union Trust Company of Spokane, has become vice-president and manager of the institution. J. E. Ferris, manager of the bond department and assistant secretary, was elected to the directorate to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Thomas Greenough last year. The other directors are: D. W. Twohy, F. A. Blackwell, D. C. Corbin, James Monaghan, John A. Finch, Fred B. Grinnell; D. K. McDonald, J. P. McGoldrick, W. J. C. Wakefield, W. J. Kommers, J. D. Porter, D. M. Drumheller, T. J. Humbird, George S. Brooke, R. B. Paterson, Jay P. Graves, E. J. Roberts, A. L. Flewelling and James C. Cunningham. The executive committee is composed of D. W. Twohy, president; W. J. C. Wakefield, vice-president; F. B. Grinnell, James C. Cunningham, and W. J. Kommers, cashier. F. C. Paine became secretary and J. E. Ferris was elected treasurer. W. G. Hall was elected assistant secretary. The institution, which has devoted its attention particularly to savings deposits and acting as executor and trustee in all fiduciary matters, has, during the four years of its activity, built up its assets to more than $6,000,000.

Made Vice-President of Lumber Company

C. H. Works, cashier of the State Bank of Kamiah, Idaho, has become vice-president of the Rawson-Works Lumber Company, recently organized there with a capitalization of $1,000,000. The output of the plant will be 100,000 feet a day. Illinois and Iowa capitalists and lumbermen of Minnesota and Wisconsin are interested in the enterprise.

Spokane and Eastern Trust Company

R. Lewis Rutter, vice-president and manager of the Spokane and Eastern Trust Company, says in his annual statement that the actual "turnover" in 1911 amounted to $296,202,000, an increase of $11,000,000 over 1910. Ninety-six million dollars of this was checked in and out of the bank while the business with the country banks amounted to $43,000,000. In remittances the business back and forth was $34,000,000 against $30,000,000 in 1910.

Purchase Bonds

Spokane and Eastern Trust Company has purchased the $50,000 Franklin county (Wash.) issue of 10 and 20-year bonds, drawing 5 per cent, at 101 and accrued interest. The 10-year 6 per cent issue of $7,000 of school district No. 84 of Kootenai county, Idaho, was purchased at par and accrued interest. The $5,392 issue of 6 per cent 10 and 20-year city bonds of Harrison, Idaho, were purchased at a small premium. The Franklin county issue has been approved by C. B. Masslich of New York and the Harrison issue has been approved by C. B. Wood of Chicago.

Large Gain in Loans

Spokane Savings and Loan Society, capitalized at $2,000,000, of which $900,000 is paid in, shows in its annual report that 256 loans amounting to $301,544 are in operation, an increase of 14 per cent over 1910. The average loan is $1,175 and the average individual deposit is $318.57. It has been decided that future loans will not be limited exclusively to members. Those officers were elected: President, Dr. E. D. Olmsted; vice-presidents, J. C. Barline and W. A. Huneke; secretary-treasurer, Frank A. Chase; assistant secretary, J. L. Cooper. The society has assisted in building 500 homes in Spokane.

Foresee Influx of Homeseekers

Representatives of transcontinental railroads operating in the Northwest say in letters to the Spokane chamber of commerce that the influx of homeseekers into Washington, Oregon, Idaho and Montana the coming spring will be much larger than in 1911. The various companies have received thousands of inquiries regarding agricultural lands in the four states and it is predicted that many hundreds from the crowded cities of the East will take up farming in this part of the Northwest.

Declare Dividend of 3½ Per Cent

Fidelity Building and Loan Association of Spokane declared a semiannual dividend of 3½ per cent at its yearly meeting on January 16th. The officers are: President, Otto Sperling; vice-president, O. C. Jansen; secretary, F. S. McWilliams; treasurer, F. W. Beal. J. Grier Long, president of the Washington Trust Company, was elected to the directorate. The society has 1,980 members.

McLean and Rouse Address Meeting

Charles A. McLean, cashier of the Traders National Bank of Spokane, and J. J. Rouse, cashier of the National Bank of Pullman, were speakers at the annual meetings of the Pacific Northwest Hardware and Implement Association and the Inland Empire Retail Dealers Association in Spokane on January 17th.

Banking Notes

Niel Nielsen, M. P., of New South Wales, formerly minister for lands, was entertained by the Spokane chamber of commerce and local bankers, January 13th to 15th. The purpose of his visit to the United States and Canada is to improve trade relations between America and Australia and to study irrigation, as practiced in the Northwest.

Indictments on three counts were returned against Edgar S. Wyman, formerly cashier of the defunct State Bank of Commerce at Wallace, Idaho, by the grand jury of Shoshone county on January 16th. The jury has been discharged.

R. W. Butler, auditor of Spokane county, says in his annual report that the receipts in 1911 amounted to $4,499,213, the disbursements being $3,495,946, of which $1,715,141 was expended for school purposes.

Fidelity National Bank of Spokane, headed by Thomas H. Brewer, has been appointed clearing house representative for the Farmers and Mechanics Bank of Spokane, as a result of the recent change in which the Exchange

At the annual meeting of the stockholders of the First National Bank of Lind, Wash., the following officers were elected: President, W. R. Cunningham, Jr.; vice-president, O. H. Green; cashier, H. S. Snead; assistant cashier, William Coddington.

The First National Bank of Coeur d'Alene, Idaho, has elected the following officers: President, J. T. Carroll; vice-president, F. W. Tinkle; cashier, J. R. Nevers.

The Methow Valley Bank of Pateros, Wash., has been organized with the following officers: President, Charles T. Borg; vice-president, J. M. Swenson; cashier, O. A. Johnson. Application has been made for a charter from the state.

Harry L. Day, Stanley A. Easton, Eugene R. Day and John H. Nordquist, formerly directors of the defunct State Bank of Commerce at Wallace, Idaho, were discharged in the district court there, January 18th, the second grand jury failing to return indictments.

Joseph R. Baldwin, an expert accountant, was convicted on the charge of forgery by a jury in the Spokane county superior court on January 18th. He was engaged to audit the books of the Langert Wine Company and by raising checks and altering accounts he secured $910.

Seattle

President E. W. Andrews recently completed his twentieth year as chief executive of the Seattle National Bank. He is now the bank president of longest continuous service as such in Seattle, with the promise of many more years of activity and usefulness to the community, and the bank over which he presides. Mr. Andrews began his banking career in Cincinnati, Ohio. He came to Puget Sound in the early '90s, and was connected with a bank in Olympia a short time before he was called to the position he has occupied ever since.

Seattle Association of Credit Men last week elected officers. Ralph S. Stacy, vice-president of the National Bank of Commerce, was re-elected treasurer. Vice-President J. W. Spangler was returned to the board of directors.

KAISER HONORS JAMES SPEYER

James Speyer, the New York banker, has received from the German emperor the decoration of the Red Eagle of the second class. The honor was conferred through the German ambassador in Washington. It is understood to have been given in recognition of the part his family has played in national and international financial affairs, and also in appreciation of his efforts to promote more cordial relations between Germany and the United States. Mr. Speyer was the founder of the Theodore Roosevelt professorship in the University of Berlin, which resulted in the exchange of professors between the leading universities of the two countries.

Little Rock, Ark.—The Peoples Savings Bank has increased its capital stock from $50,000 to $100,000.

OREGON BANKER PAROLED

Portland, Ore.—F. N. Myers, former president of the wrecked Mt. Scott Bank, who was serving two years in the penitentiary, convicted of having received deposits after he knew the bank to be insolvent, has been paroled by Presiding Judge Gates. Myers was sentenced about two months ago. The mitigating circumstances which led to the parole were the efforts which the convicted bank wrecker and his friends had made in raising about $3,500, which, with other assets of the bank, will pay the depositors dollar for dollar. In addition to the Mt. Scott Bank, Myers also operated the Italian-American Bank, which failed here, and previously promoted several banks in California towns, which failed.

Reserve Agents for National Banks

Des Moines, January 24.—Secretary Hall of the Iowa Bankers Association is well pleased over the results achieved last week in the capture and conviction of bank robbers. James King was found guilty at Harlan of complicity in the attempt to rob the Panama Savings at Panama. This was the case in which President Sullivan of the institution, receiving a tip of the robbery, concealed himself in the bank and fired a shotgun through the door when he heard the robbers coming. King was shot in the arm and was arrested at Omaha later. In addition to his conviction, George Hodges, alias Frank Hicks, and E. J. Blair were arrested suspected of being involved in the Derby Bank robbery of some months ago. Detective Patek of the W. J. Burns agency arrested Hodges in Des Moines, where, it seems, Hodges had endeavored to buy off a Des Moines man whom he suspected of being familiar with the robbery at Derby. Blair was arrested by Des Moines detectives at Valley Junction. He had been arrested by the Des Moines police and later released. Detectives then recognized him in a "mugg" paper and followed him to Valley Junction. Secretary Hall does not know what evidence is at hand in the Blair case but he regards the evidence in the Hodges case very good. There are now five arrests in the Derby bank case. Three of them are in jail at Chariton and others will be sent there. Secretary Hall is convinced that some of the mob involved in the Derby case were mixed up in the Panama robbery and probably in the attempt at the City State at Mitchellville, but not all of them were involved in all of the robberies.

Iowa Group Meetings

Thus far only three Iowa group meetings have been scheduled so far as actual selection of dates is concerned. Group 4 will meet April 25th, but the location has not been selected. Group 7 meets February 22nd at Tama-Toledo and Group 10 meets February 12th at Ottumwa. Emerson Dupuy, editor of the Northwestern Banker of Des Moines, will be one of the speakers at the Group 7 meetings.

Meeting of Tax Commission

An important meeting of the temporary tax commission has been held in Des Moines making further investigations into needed amendments to the tax laws of Iowa. C. N. Voss of Davenport, a well known banker, is a member of the commission. It is not possible as yet to know just what the commission will recommend to the next legislature but it is reasonably certain that some of the recommendations will be as follows:

The appointment rather than election of assessors.

A permanent state tax commission.

A central authority in each county, either a county assessor or supervisor in full control.

Separate listing of real estate and the assessments thereon.

Assessments at actual and full value on all property.

Separate assessments of terminal values of railroads.

A larger proportion of the support of the state to come from indirect taxation and very little from a state tax levy.

Last week, the commission heard arguments all week. Leading residents of the state who have taken an active interest in tax affairs and members of the last legislature who were similarly interested appeared and spoke in favor of their various hobbies on the various questions. The hearings were of much value to the members of the commission.

Death of H. D. Fish

Henry Dwight Fish, aged 83, died at Davenport last week. Mr. Fish was the first inventor of the time-lock, eight years before the Civil War broke out. At that time Mr. Fish was residing in Massachusetts. He had his invention patented but when he sought to have the article manufactured, he was told that there was no demand for it. As soon as the patent expired, every safe and lock manufacturer in the country seized the invention, made minor improvements and began the manufacture. Fish tried to have his patent renewed but congress refused to recognize his claims and he never received a cent for the trouble and care bestowed. Fish was always a failure in business and at the time of his death was bridge tender at Davenport.

Borrowed Money Without Security

Rather an amusing story of frenzied finance was related by one E. A. Boggs in the courts at Waterloo. Boggs claimed that he borrowed $129,000 from twenty-three institutions and the largest single loan was for $62,000, from the Bank of Morrison. He declared that he had no security whatever and that the banks simply advanced him this money upon his request. Bankers in Des Moines take the story with considerable salt. In the first place the Morrison bank is only capitalized for $10,000 and limited by law to loaning not to exceed $2,000 to any one individual. In sending out the dispatches from Waterloo the Bank of Montrose was inadvertently substituted for that at Morrison. Immediately thereafter President Younk and Cashier Lamb of the Montrose Savings arose in their wrath and denounced the story as a fake. They were mollified somewhat when they discovered that it was Morrison rather than Montrose.

Seeking Aid in Campaign

Professor P. G. Holden, candidate for governor of Iowa on a Greater Iowa platform, has been trying to capitalize some of the ideas for increased agricultural education which the banks of Iowa are beginning to take up, so opponents of the Ames professor assert. It is charged that the campaign committee in charge of the affairs have been writing to various banks in Iowa asking them to contribute to the expenses of the Holden campaign on the ground that he stands for the same agricultural extension and expansion that the banks have endorsed. This is a violation of the Iowa primary law and probably will not be continued.

A charter has been issued to the Bristow National of Bristow, Okla., capital $25,000, which succeeds the Farmers State Bank of Bristow.

Elected Manager Davenport Clearing House Association

Julius Hasler, cashier of the Farmers and Mechanics at Davenport, has been elected manager of the Davenport Clearing House Association. H. P. Oetsmann, assistant cashier, will be in charge of the daily exchange and Albert Wolters will assist him. The daily clearing exchange and monthly meetings this year will be held at the Farmers and Mechanics.

To Push Work of Citizens League

Robert Fleming, manager of the campaign of Senator A. B. Cummins, when the latter was a candidate for senator, has been placed in charge of Iowa to push the work of the National Citizens League for the promotion of a sound banking system. He has named Col. G. Watson French of Davenport as eastern Iowa subdirector.

Banquet for Stockholders

The Farmers Savings at Ruthven pulled off a banquet for its stockholders at the recent annual meeting. About sixty were present. P. W. Hall, secretary of the I. B. A., was present and gave an address on the Aldrich plan, which he explained in detail to the interested audience. The directors of the Scott County Savings at Davenport also gave an annual banquet at the Outing Club. A social time was much enjoyed and business questions were discussed. It was a pleasant occasion.

Caught at Denver

Peter Georges drew a check for $65 on the Greek-American of Chicago, presented it at the window of the First National at Mason City, secured the money and skipped. The W. J. Burns Agency got busy and Georges was arrested in Denver just as he was passing one for $25 on the United State National. Georges has been living at Mason City for some time. He will be brought back for trial.

Ingwersen for Mayor

J. H. Ingwersen, president of the Peoples Trust and Savings at Clinton and one of the best known bankers in Iowa, is being sought for office. People of Clinton want him to be a candidate for mayor on the democratic platform next spring.

Has Retired from Presidency

Charles McKeen Duren has retired from the presidency of the Hardin County National and Hardin County Savings at Eldora. He has been connected with banking interests at Eldora for forty-five years and for over twenty years was cashier of the institution from which he is now retiring. He was chosen president in 1893 when Ellis D. Robb, now national bank examiner, was elected cashier to succeed him. He is also president of the Providence State at New Providence.

To Have New Bank Building

The Iowa State Savings at Burlington is in line with the march of progress. The institution will shortly tear down the three-story structure in which it has been housed and erect instead a handsome eight-story office block. The structure will have a frontage of 121 feet on Third Street and 40 feet on Jefferson Street.

Girl in the Case Indicted

Another development in the case of Leroy Utterbach, the Waterloo bank clerk arrested for stealing $1,250 from the Black Hawk National, which he gave to his best girl so that she might purchase an automobile, is that now Miss Katherine Pfalzgraf, who received the money, has been indicted and arrested on charge of receiving stolen property. The young woman denies emphatically that she knew where young Utterbach secured the money which he presented to her.

Banking Notes

Stephen R. Cross, president of the State National at Iowa Falls, died recently after a brief illness. He had been president of the bank four years and was 67 years old.

The First National at Nevada points with pride to a gain in deposits of $60,000 during the past year.

L. E. Stevens, president of the Century Savings, Des Moines, has been named one of the committee from the Commercial Club which will seek to secure better toll line telephone service between Des Moines and northern Iowa points.

The Blue Grass Savings of Davenport has filed amendments changing the number of board of directors to nine.

E. J. Curtin, president of the I. B. A., has been in North Dakota, where he is interested in several banks. One of the largest of these institutions is at Beach.

Allen R. LeRoy has been made cashier of the First National at Manchester, succeeding F. E. Dutton, who resigned. The latter becomes cashier of the proposed Merchants and Farmers.

The Peoples Savings at Spencer is a new institution at Spencer. The capital stock is $25,000. Incorporators include H. N. Smith, A. C. Perine, W. H. Lamar.

The State Bank of Dows has renewed the life of its corporation. The capital stock is $25,000.

The City Bank at Boone will observe its fortieth anniversary in April. It is probable that there will be something doing out of the ordinary in honor of the day.

W. J. McChesney, recently made president of the First National at Iowa City, has resigned from the board of directors of the hospital at the state university.

The Exchange at Ackley has changed its name to the Rath State Exchange Bank of Ackley.

The Rose Hill Savings has increased its capital stock to $25,000.

Evan Mattison, president of the First National at Gibson City, Ill., recently purchased the famous Oliver ranch near Onawa. This farm consists of 2,200 acres and the sum paid totaled over $200,000.

C. B. Murtagh, president of the State at Ringsted, has accepted the position of cashier of the Algona Savings at Algona and will remove to that place.

The foundation for the new bank building of Allyn Brothers at Mt. Ayr will soon be started. It will be 22 by 70 and the plans indicate that it will be one of the handsomest in southern Iowa.

The Farmers Bank building at Swan was badly damaged by fire.

Bank clearings in Des Moines gained over $300,000 for the week ending January 20th.

Henry T. Blackburn, cashier of the Iowa National at Des Moines, has recovered sufficiently from his broken leg to be at the bank much of the time.

Among out of the city bankers seen in Des Moines recently are: President W. C. Bergman, First National, Newton; Ed Given, Farmers and Merchants, Mountain View, Okla.; Cashier M. C. Powers, Black Hawk National, Waterloo; Vice-President E. V. Bailey, Sac City State, Sac City; Cashier O. M. Grove, Farmers Savings, Roland; Cashier S. J. Oldfield, Citizens State, Mitchellville.

By JOHN J. BIDDISON.

Instead of returning to the realm of banking, Ed. T. Kearney, of Jackson, Neb., has turned from the sublime to the ridiculous. He will become an advertising specialist. Mr. Kearney last summer sold his Bank of Dakota County and announced his retirement. A few weeks ago he authorized the announcement that he would start a new concern, to be known as the Tri-State Savings Bank, in Sioux City. He had plans for this bank well under way and had fixtures ordered and capital stock aggregating nearly a half million dollars offered when the Davidson Brothers Company offered him a surprisingly large sum to take over the publicity department of the store. He accepted and announced the postponement of the banking scheme, although he admits that probably he will not remain permanently in the advertising business. He decided, however, that he could decide to take a "rest."

Mr. Kearney is not without experience in the new line, having written a line of bank "ads" that took well and were extensively reprinted in trade journals, and he handled the publicity for a small Sioux City concern and made it "go."

State Banks of South Dakota Make Good Showing

A remarkable increase in the undivided profits of the 528 state banks of South Dakota is shown by the report of Public Examiner J. L. Wingfield, following the December call. From a September decrease of $44,833 they have mounted to a December increase of $1,157,116.72. The figures show also a much healthier tone in deposits, the decrease at the time of the September call, which amounted to over a million dollars, having been reduced to $196,370.22, which, at this season, is considered good. The total amount of personal deposits was $19,492,720.91 and of savings deposits, $1,935,005.58.

Banking News Notes

It is announced that the Meade County Bank, which was recently closed on order of the state public examiner, will be reopened as soon as its depleted reserve can be brought up to the required 15 per cent. The restoration is now going on as fast as local conditions will permit, it is stated.

An infection of the eyes, supposed to have resulted from the handling of "tainted" money, has laid up Chas. E. Bale, cashier of the Calhoun County State Bank, of Manson, Ia., for a week.

Stephen R. Cross, of Iowa Falls, president of the State National Bank, is dead, after a brief illness.

Among the Visiting Bankers

E. R. Kenefick, cashier of the Home National Bank, Dell Rapids, S. D., was transacting business in Sioux City Wednesday.

F. E. Watkins, former president of the First National Bank of Hawarden, Iowa, and still a very large stockholder, has been spending several days in Sioux City. He is a large owner of Oklahoma real estate, and spends his winters in that state.

John R. Welch, president of the First State Bank, Mapleton, Iowa, was in Sioux City Wednesday.

O. A. Anderson, cashier of the Citizens State Bank, Irene, S. D., was in Sioux City Wednesday.

W. S. Short, president of the Northwestern State Bank, Orange City, Iowa, was in Sioux City Thursday.

J. M. Newell, cashier of the First National Bank, Mt. Vernon, S. D., spent a couple of days this week with F. A. McCormack of the First National Bank.

S. S. Davenport, cashier of the Citizens Savings Bank, Lester, Iowa, was in Sioux City on business Saturday.

John J. Large, vice-president of the First National Bank, spent several days in Chicago the first of the week.

NEVADA BANKS IN GOOD CONDITION

A summary of the condition of the 19 state banks in Nevada has been made public by the Nevada State Banking Board. A comparison made as of January 7, 1911, before the passage of the new banking act which became a law March 22, 1911, with the last call for the report of conditions of December 5, 1911, gives the following summarized figures:

	Jan. 7, 1911.	Dec. 5, 1911.
Loans and discounts	$5,598,012.76	$5,875,873.64
Overdrafts	485,218.15	168,074.46
Cash on hand	815,638.32	774,310.91
Due from banks	2,261,413.36	2,682,044.79
Due to banks	153,248.75	108,798.02
Deposits	7,939,630.37	8,933,892.79
Total resources and liabilities	$10,338,817.17	$11,138,032.52
Reserve in cash	10 3-10%	8 7-10%
Reserve in banks	26 4-10	28 8-10
Total reserve	36 7-10	37 5-10

In commenting upon the statement, Governor T. L. Oddie, who is chairman of the state banking board, says, in part: "It will be seen that the new banking law has had its effect in many instances. By way of illustration, overdrafts amounting to $485,218.15 which were carried by the banks in January, have now been reduced to $168,074.46, or a decrease of $317,143.69. It is apparent that the present banking act is a good and strong one, and is gradually making itself felt throughout the state; and had we a banking law of this kind prior to 1907 there would have been no bank failures in Nevada. Another thing not to be overlooked is the fact that the state is getting on a more prosperous basis, and her great resources are being taken hold of in a stronger way. Confidence is being restored, money is easier, and more of it in the banks. Loans have increased $277,860.88; cash on hand in banks amounts to $3,456,355.70, showing an increase of $379,304.02; deposits have increased $994,262."

The Easton (Minn.) State Bank chose L. R. Johnson as cashier for the coming year.

LECTURE BEFORE THE BRITISH INSTITUTE OF BANKERS

a partner, it could hardly be suggested that the firm had their checks collected through the private account of a partner. On the face of it, it would appear as if a partner had taken for his own purposes a check, which belonged to the firm. If the check was crossed "a/c payee," a crossing, which does not affect the negotiability of a check, it would be held as stronger evidence against the banker. The only way a bank can protect itself is by making inquiries of the firm, taking care, of course, to inquire of some partner other than the partner for whom the check is being collected. There is another point to consider in this connection. Is it open for a firm to sue a banker, when their cause of action arises from the fact that one of their partners had been the cause of the fraud?

The point has really still to be decided.

Every member of a trading firm has an implied power to borrow money on account of his firm, but not when it is a non-trading firm. There may be an agreement between the partners restricting this power, but that would not affect outsiders without notice. A banker is entitled to assume that there is no restriction as to the amount the partner is allowed to borrow. He may rely on the general power. Of course, if the banker asks questions, he may find that there are restrictions. A partner may exercise his power in the same way that an individual can, and in every case all the members of the firm are bound.

Every partner has an implied power to give security for the money borrowed, and for that purpose he can mortgage or pledge all or any part of the assets of the firm and agree to any form of security. There is only one thing he cannot do, and that is, he cannot bind his co-partners by deed, i.e., by legal mortgage.

When security is taken from one partner it should be made to appear upon the face of the security itself that it has been done on account of the firm. Some banks do not rely on this implied authority of individual partners to give security, and require the authority of all partners. That is just as well, but it is not necessary.

With regard to a "non-trading" firm, as already stated, a partner in such a firm has no power to borrow on behalf of the firm. If it is done, however, it may be open for the bank to show some ratification of the act of one partner by the other partners. For instance, if the pass-book shows the account to be overdrawn, and it has been seen by the firm, and returned to the bank without any comment, that would be held to be ratification of the partner's act, unless the other partners could prove that they had no knowledge of the contents of pass-book.

As to bills of exchange and promissory notes, here, again, a distinction must be made between "trading" and "non-trading" partnerships. A member of a trading firm has power to bind his firm by drawing, accepting and endorsing bills, or by making or endorsing promissory notes, on behalf of the firm, and in the firm name.

The authority does not apply, however, to bills drawn in blank, except when they come into the hands of a holder for value without notice of the way in which the bill was drawn. Neither can the partner bind his firm on accommodation bills, except in a like manner, in the hands of a holder for value. It must be remembered that as between the person dealing with the partner and the firm, he would be affected by any knowledge that that partner was abusing his authority, but any holder in due course would not be affected by any defect in his title.

Now, with regard to the dealings of partners in non-trading firms with bills and notes, no member of such a partnership can bind his firm by any negotiable instrument. There must be expressed authority. If a partner draws or accepts a bill in the partnership name, he would be liable, but the firm would not. Only in one case can an individual partner in such a firm bind all the partners in a firm by dealing with a bill; if a bill is payable to the order of a non-trading partnership firm, any partner can by endorsing upon it the firm name transfer the instrument, and a holder in due course would be able to sue the firm upon it.

Persons may, and often do, carry on business in partnership in the name of one of their number. Suppose that the partner whose name constitutes the firm name puts his name to a bill, is the bill to be treated as his bill or that of the firm's? There is a presumption in such a case of the bill being the bill of the firm, but if it can be shown that the bill was given as that of the individual partner, and not as that of the firm, the firm would not be liable, but the partner would.

Again, in transactions connected with negotiable instruments, a partner has no implied authority to use a name which is not the firm name. Should he do so, unless it can be shown that the operation was authorized by the other partners, the firm would not be liable under the bill. Where a bill drawn on the wrong name, and is accepted in the firm's correct name, the firm would be held liable. But if a bill were drawn on A, a partner in X & Co., and A accepts the bill as X & Co., the firm would not be liable but A would.

The lecturer now dealt with a firm's liability for acts done by a partner. A banker cannot rely upon the authority of one partner to bind the firm when that authority is known to be misused. If a partner pledges the security of the firm to the banker for a loan and the money is paid to the man's private account, it is obvious that the partner is abusing his authority.

Again, if the firm's account and an individual partner's account are kept at the same branch, and the latter is overdrawn, can the bank place money at credit of the firm's to the partner's account to reduce the overdraft? Although the partner gives a good reason for it, the banker obviously cannot do so without further inquiry.

If a partner was being pressed by his banker to reduce his overdraft, and gave the bank a bill of exchange accepted by the firm in the firm name, all written by himself, as security, the bank could not sue the firm on that bill. The determining factor as to whether the banker acted in good faith is "did the bank get anything out of it?"

COLUMBUS DEPOSITORS TO GET 60 PER CENT DIVIDEND

Comptroller of the Currency Murray on January 20th declared a dividend of 60 per cent to the depositors of the defunct Union National Bank of Columbus, Ohio. Ultimately it is expected the depositors will be paid in full.

ANOTHER BANKER TO PRISON

San Francisco, January 22.—A. F. Martell, president of the defunct Market Street Bank, was sentenced to-day to five years in San Quentin prison. Martell was convicted of having issued a false statement regarding the financial condition of the bank in August, 1906.

Seward Prosser, vice-president of the Astor Trust Company, has been elected a director of the Bankers Trust Company, New York City. Officers of the Bankers Trust Company were re-elected.

FAVORS FOUR BANKING BILLS

Boston, January 22.—In executive session the committee on banks and banking to-day voted to report the following bills:

That trust companies may give security for deposits, as required by the United States law and regulations of the trustees of the postal savings system, for postal saving deposits.

That trust companies may invest 25 per cent of their surplus, as well as 25 per cent of their capital, in bank buildings, but that no such building shall exceed in cost $250,000.

That section 45 of the savings bank act shall apply to trust companies; it provides that no director or officer of a savings bank or trust company shall directly or indirectly receive any money or valuable thing from a borrower as a reward or inducement for making a loan.

That at stockholders' or directors' meetings of trust companies the meeting may decide how much of the annual report as to the condition of the company shall be read.

CANADIAN BANKS

Montreal.—Statement of the chartered banks of Canada for the month ended December 31st, shows the increases that have been made over the calendar year in the principal accounts. The year was undoubtedly the most prosperous ever enjoyed by Canadian banking institutions, as a result of the ready demand there was for money and the tremendous increases in deposits and in circulation.

SNOWDON CAPTURED

Walter A. Snowdon, until his disappearance last July with $8,500 of the funds of the Trust Company of North America, Philadelphia, the trusted assistant teller of the institution, has been captured in Savannah, Ga., by an operative of the local office of the William J. Burns Detective Agency, the services of which were engaged in the case two months ago. He will probably waive extradition proceedings, and will be brought to Philadelphia for trial in a few days.

BANKS GET NEW PRIVILEGE

The way has been opened for state banks and trust companies to become known as "United States depositories." According to the view of the treasury department, any financial institution in America, national, state, bank or trust company, holding postal savings deposits or other government funds, may assume that title without legal impediment. The privilege of becoming known as a depository of the nation's funds is much sought by every bank in the country. Of the 7,300 national banks only about 1,400 are officially designated as "United States depositories."

W. H. TABER INDICTED

Terre Haute, Ind.—The grand jury last Saturday returned three indictments against W. H. Taber, president of the American State Bank, closed by the state bank examiner. His bond was fixed at $6,000, which is $4,000 less than the bond he was under on the charge filed against him by two directors of the bank. The indictments are for larceny, embezzlement and unlawful loan of the bank's money in the sum of $5,000.

One indictment is based on a transaction in which the Commercial Life Insurance Company is alleged to have figured. Another indictment is the result of alleged improper use of an accommodation note for $883, and the third indictment is for the overdrawing of a few hundred dollars. It is understood that more indictments against Taber will be returned. He gave the $6,000 bond and was released.

SEES A MENACE IN POSTAL EXTENSION

Characterizing not only the proposed postal insurance, postal telegraph and parcels post, but also the established postals savings banks nothing more nor less than state socialism, Henry A. Castle, from 1892 to 1896 postmaster in St. Paul, and from 1897 to 1904 auditor of the postoffice department, recently asserted that all these departures are dangerous in their tendencies, because they carry the government into the realm of private business where it was never intended to go.

"The only question is, where are they going to end?" he asked, discussing the most recent proposal of James J. Britt, third assistant postmaster-general, that the government insure the contents of packages sent through the mails. "If the government is to have anything to do with these things, regulation is much better than government ownership, in my opinion, for the business can better be transacted by private individuals or corporations under strict governmental supervision than by the government itself.

"I don't favor such postal insurance on general principles. The postal service was established for a specific purpose, the transmission of the mails, and any venture outside of that competes with private business, and consequently is a doubtful expediency. The government should engage in nothing that involves pecuniary liability, for it cannot do it as well as private business.

"Any departure, even the issuance of money orders, is an outside feature not intended, when the postoffice department was organized. The registry business proper is a legitimate function, but when the government proceeds to insure the contents of a package sent through the mails, it assumes a business function it never was intended it should.

"The government has embarked in different enterprises I do not think were right. The officials and employees of the department are anxious to increase their functions and to extend their divisions, and so they propose these different things. They are all dangerous in their tendencies.

"The government now insures them by registry to a limited amount. It should not go any further."

Commissioner Preus Indorses Scheme

An opposite opinion was expressed by J. A. O. Preus, state insurance commissioner, who, discussing the proposal in an off-hand way, said he saw no reason why the government should not take off the present limit of $100 and insure packages to their full value, charging premiums accordingly.

"That would not necessarily exclude the insurance companies from continuing their business," he said. "In fact, I don't think it would hurt their business, principally for the reason the government would not go out to get the business.

"The idea that state insurance or postal insurance, or other governmental ventures of the kind, injure private business, is wrong, for that reason. In this particular case, I think private concerns probably would be able to furnish more satisfactory rates than the government anyway, and so get the bulk of business. A private business can always be managed more economically than the government could operate the same business under its civil service rules—that is common experience."

Two well-known St. Paul insurance men took the same view as Mr. Preus regarding the inroads that might be made in the business now done by insurance companies should the government enter the field.

Greenville, Ma.—At a meeting of the First National Bank, the capital was increased to $125,000.

BANK $10,000 SHORT

Grand Rapids, Mich., January 25.—Following the discovery and subsequent confession that he is from $10,000 to $12,000 short in his accounts, Kryn Van't Hof, manager of the West Side branch of the Kent State Bank, has been deposed from his position. What legal action will be taken is not known at present.

The discovery was made by Assistant Cashier Baarman. Baarman brought Van't Hof to the main bank, where he confessed, it is said, to President Henry Idema. He now is aiding in tracing the shortage. His method was to draw checks on dormant deposits of various large depositors.

Van't Hof is a cripple, having lost an arm in a Comstock sawmill several years ago. He was one of the founders of the Grand Rapids Pearl Button Company. The bank was protected by a surety bond and Van't Hof has turned over his property to help make good the shortage.

OUTLOOK IN THE NORTHWEST

St. Paul.—Although there is a dullness in local financial and investment circles incident to the first of the year there is no discouragement with a majority of the bankers and jobbers. Some of the jobbers who have received reports of the amount of moisture which has fallen in the Northwest during the last few months are very optimistic over the prospect for a big crop the coming year.

They argue that on account of the large rainfall after the harvest and the early cold weather the ground was frozen with most of the moisture in it. This will make the best possible condition for a full crop the coming season. It will need only occasional rains to moisten the surface to bring good crops. Some of the jobbers go so far as to say that the chances for a light crop are very remote.

The Northwest is in a cheerful mood because of this fact and because the business men believe that the short crops of the last two years will not be repeated. The soil conditions are against a recurrence of light production. Average yields are expected in Minnesota, North and South Dakotas. If this is fulfilled there can be no political discussion which will work much harm to this part of the country. The size of the crop determines the prosperity of this section.

ALBION BANK STOCKHOLDERS TO RAISE $50,000

Albion, Mich., January 25.—The stockholders of the Albion National Bank will be held for $100, par value, per share, for each share of stock in the defunct Albion National Bank, according to orders received by Receiver F. L. Irwin, from Comptroller Murray Thursday morning. The order from the comptroller demands that the sum of $50,000 be brought together by the stockholders February 23, 1912, that being one month from the date of the comptroller's notice.

WITH MODERN WEAPONS

The February Lippincott is out with a fine tale by Clinton Dangerfield, as the long story. It is titled "With Modern Weapons." It will be talked about and liked by the reader. It is quite unusual. "Charles Dickens and Women," by H. Snowden Ward, of England, who died on his lecture tour in New York, will be read by the ladies with interest. The ten short stories are by leading authors.

Books on Banking, Finance and Economics

Credit. By J. LAWRENCE LAUGHLIN, of the Department of Political Economy, University of Chicago. Postpaid, 53c.

The nature of credit and its effect on prices have long been a subject of disagreement among economists. Its basis is commonly assumed to be money or bank reserves.

Essentials of Business Law. By FRANCIS M. BURDICK, LL. D., Professor of Law in Columbia University. 12mo. Postpaid, $1.50.

This book shows how the rules of law governing the commonest business transactions have been developed, and it tells what they are to-day. Technical law terms have been discarded as far as possible, and when they are used they are so explained and illustrated as to be easily understood. The principles of law are simplified and expressed in clear, lucid everyday speech.

Foreign Exchange. Tables converting foreign money into United States money, and United States money into foreign money at all commercial rates of exchange used in financial transactions between the United States and foreign countries. All about foreign exchange, including various forms of foreign commercial paper and terms, abbreviations, etc. For banks, bankers, steamship agents, importers, exporters and manufacturers. Cloth, $5.00.

Government Regulation of Railway Rates. By HUGO R. MEYER. A Professor of Political Economy in the University of Chicago. Postpaid, $1.60 net.

Investment Bonds. By F. LOWNHAUPT. Postpaid, $1.00. Prospective investors who wish to make advantageous use of their money will do well to take notice of this volume. The author does not theorize, but tells only plain facts of the relation of the bond to its issuing corporation, and of the general investment aspect of the instrument.

Money and Credit. By WILBUR ALDRICH. Postpaid, $1.37. This volume contains much valuable information and much sound discussion on money and credit.

The Banking and Currency Problems in the United States. By VICTOR H. THAUER. This book throws up the problem of the national monetary commission, appointed by congress, and discusses the means of providing a permanent safe-guard against money stringencies and panics. Postpaid, $1.10.

The Principles of Money and Banking. By CHARLES A. CONANT. It is a new and complete exposition of its subject. Two volumes. Postpaid, $4.25.

The Pitfalls of Speculation. By THOMAS GIBSON. Postpaid, $1.20.

A book dealing exclusively with marginal speculation, and analyzing in a clear and simple manner the causes of failure in speculation, with a suggestion as to the remedies.

The Use of Loan Credit in Modern Business. By THORSTEIN B. VEBLEN. Postpaid, 28c.

The Investors' Catechism. By M. M. REYNOLDS. Cloth, by mail, $1.10.

"Investors' Catechism." Contains all that it is essential for the beginner to know, and opens the way for a thorough study of the whole subject of investment. The author has for the sake of clearness and simplicity adopted a catechetical style which is somewhat novel in this sort of literature.

The above books are the best of their kind, and will be promptly forwarded upon receipt of price.

THE CHICAGO BANKER,

407 Monadnock Block, Chicago.

BANKERS ACQUITTED

Columbus, Ohio, January 22.—The jury in the United States District Court reported a verdict yesterday by which Abraham and Jacob Kapner, the Dresden, Ohio, bankers, were declared not guilty on thirteen counts of the indictment against them, which charged violation of the national banking laws. The jury disagreed as to a fourteenth count, which charged conspiracy against the bank.

The Kapners were found guilty at a former trial, and were sentenced to terms in the penitentiary. They obtained a new trial, and the verdict of acquittal to-day on the thirteen counts, it is generally understood, will end the prosecution of the case.

TOWNLEY CULBERTSON, manager of the real estate loan department of the Commerce Trust, Kansas City, called on Chicago banking acquaintances Friday and Saturday. Hon. C. A. Samuelson, president of the Farmers Bank, Sherrard, Illinois, visited Chicago Saturday also.

HON. M. O. WILLIAMSON, former state treasurer, and now president of the Peoples Trust, Galesburg, and Frank Adams, county clerk of Knox county, were Chicago visitors Saturday.

J. A. LEWIS, cashier of the National Bank of Commerce, St. Louis, called on Chicago banking acquaintances Friday. Mr. Lewis expresses the belief that business conditions will continue this year about as they were last, and looks for a substantial improvement in business after January 1, 1913.

NELSON H. GREENE, vice-president Peoples Savings Bank and Trust Company, Moline, ran into Chicago for a brief visit Wednesday. Mr. Greene reports business as satisfactory at Moline.

A MAN who bought shares in a "mythical" company had his complaint brought before a judge named Fake, last week, just to keep his memory fresh as to the proper name of the scheme he puts his money in.

WE had a little mix-up on calendars last week in attributing a handsome New York sky-line calendar to Ellsworth at the Guaranty Trust, whereas it came from Barrett at the Guardian. Here's what the two young men have to say about it:

TO CASHIER: I always felt that your valued paper had a very large circulation, but I never fully realized it until you, in your issue of January 13th, sold our friend Ellsworth of the Guaranty Trust Company short on "Sky Lines of Manhattan." The Guardian Trust Company has supplied Mr. Ellsworth with as many calendars as he desired up to this time, but we regret that we have no more to send to our friends on account of our supply being exhausted. With kind personal regards, and hoping that I may have a call from you when you visit New York, believe me to be,

Very truly yours,

ALFRED M. BARRETT.

TO CASHIER: During the last few days I have received several requests for a "sky-line" calendar said to have been issued by our company, and was rather in the dark as to what the inquirers were driving at until I read the paragraph in the "cashiers" department of last week's CHICAGO BANKER. I am perfectly willing to accept your apology, but am not so sure about Alfred M. Barrett of the Guardian Trust, who, I am told, is the chap who is responsible for the calendar in question. With best regards, I am,

Yours very truly,

F. W. ELLSWORTH.

GEORGE M. REYNOLDS, who spoke at the chapter banquet on Saturday night, remained over especially for that purpose. It had been his intention to go to California for a two months' vacation. So far as our knowledge goes, this will be the first extended vacation which the hardworking president of Chicago's biggest bank has taken.

INQUIRIES have been frequent at this office of late as to why the 1911 proceedings book of the Illinois Bankers convention, held at Springfield last October, has not been sent out. It is not permissible for this department to try to lay the blame on any individual, but rather to charge it up to the administrative committee of the association. If anybody is trying to put the present administration in a hole or in an awkward predicament before the membership, it ought easily be ascertained.

SO far as we know, every other state association in the Union had its proceedings out months ago. It has come to a pretty pass when the Illinois Bankers Association, with headquarters in the second largest reserve center, cannot get out a report of its conventions the same year they are held.

IT will be remembered that the conference proceedings book giving a full detailed report of the "back to the farm" meeting held at Minneapolis and St. Paul last fall, was delivered within ten days. This was the Charles R. Frost way of doing things, with the Joseph Chapman, Jr., flying wedge right behind him.

WE have heard a report, but do not believe it, that the Illinois secretary has postponed the publication of the book at the request of a certain element in the association. This could hardly be true. So far as the membership is concerned, they will look to President Harris, and to the other members of the administrative committee for its immediate publication.

IT would seem to an outsider that the sending out of circulars from the Illinois association headquarters in Chicago, requesting members to interest the local papers in the various reform movements undertaken by the state association, would suggest the advisability of placing on the mailing list the big Chicago papers, and all of the financial papers devoted to banking subjects.

IT is rather awkward for this department to be explaining to members of the association why no attention has been paid to the work of the good roads committee and other important departments, when, as a matter of fact, this paper had no knowledge of the circulars being sent out. The recent good fellowship meeting (so-called) held this week in Chicago was no exception to the general rule. Not a banking paper in Chicago, or even a daily paper, was notified of this event. That the papers resent this sort of stubborn incapacity, goes without saying. They are willing at all times to give publicity to progressive movements, especially those favored by such an important organization as the Illinois Bankers Association, and they should be given an opportunity to assist.

THIS office receives all of the published circular matter, including look-out notices, notices of frauds upon banks, and notices of work being done by important committees, from every state association headquarters in the United States except the one located in Chicago. This looks as though the Illinois Bankers Association was getting a mighty small return for the money expended upon expensive headquarters and office outfit.

WOULD SAFEGUARD SAVINGS DEPOSITS

A state law which will require all state banks in Minnesota, accepting savings deposits, shall segregate them and invest them separately and distinctly from their commercial deposits would be one of the most important steps forward in the way of banking reform in the state, in the opinion of Kelsey Chase, state superintendent of banks.

The reform he suggests is aimed particularly at the country banks and those in the smaller cities, which he would place on a par with the exclusive savings banks of the Twin City. The practice now is to invest the savings and commercial deposits of these banks in exactly the same kind of securities, though the two kinds of deposits are kept on separate ledgers. He would have the plan so changed that savings deposits could be invested only in a limited variety of securities.

While it is possible the reform will not be immediate, Mr. Chase is of the opinion it is an ultimate outcome, and that within a few years, of banking progress in Minnesota. Touching upon this reform in a speech recently, he said:

"The fact that savings departments are now being operated and advertised by most of our banks has a tendency to make the depositing public believe that banks which solicit savings deposits maintain a separate department for that purpose. This is true to the extent of keeping a separate ledger for savings deposits and carrying the deposits represented by time certificates by themselves, but it is not now nor never has been true that the savings deposits have been invested in a character of authorized securities which have been considered sufficiently good for mutual savings banks to invest their funds in.

"Banks throughout the state have their time certificates of deposits so worded that they are not obliged to pay them until the expiration of the period and those banks operating savings departments quite generally reserve the right to require notice of intention to withdraw such deposits, although the banks seldom avail themselves of this privilege.

"It is perfectly right that this reservation should be invoked, however, because the bank which is paying 3 or 4 per cent on these deposits should be permitted to invest these funds without a chance of suddenly being called on for them. However, when the funds in the savings department are mixed with those from the commercial department and all are invested in a general way, at a time of financial trouble the savings depositors might be placed at a disadvantage.

"It is possible under the existing conditions for the commercial depositor to become practically a preferred creditor, while the savings depositor awaits the expiration of his notice or until his certificate falls due. The defenseless position of the savings depositor is so apparent it seems wise to agitate the passage of a law segregating the deposits and requiring the setting aside of a sufficient amount of mortgages, bonds and other securities authorized for the investment of savings banks to equal the approximate amounts of savings deposits. Common decency demands the segregation of these deposits, the payment of which may be deferred, from those deposits which may be called on demand, so that neither class of depositors may be considered preferred creditors, and that each may stand upon its own assets.

"A difficult problem in considering a matter of this kind is the determination of the class of investments of such segregated funds. Certainly, with the added security of the capital, surplus and stockholders' double liability, the rules for investment would not need to be so stringent as those which apply to savings banks. Surely those persons who have deposited savings in our state banks of upward of $70,000,000 are entitled to as great consideration and their deposits should be safeguarded to the same extent as the $25,000,000 of savings deposits in the mutual banks."

BANKS MERGED

Wellington, Ohio, January 23.—This morning the Home Savings Bank of this place was absorbed by the First National Bank. The combined banks will have over $1,000,000 deposits.

The State Bank at Lanesboro, Minn., has opened its doors for business.

C. L. Maxwell

C. L. Maxwell, cashier Citizens State Bank, Champaign, Ill., visited Chicago Thursday. Mr. Maxwell is an enthusiastic organization man, and reports that the county meeting of bankers held at Champaign on Monday evening, January 29th, was a great success. Fifty-three bankers were present and 75 per cent of the out-lying banks of the county were represented. Two of the five non-member banks joined the association at the meeting, which was considered a great success.

J. B. FORGAN ON BANK EARNINGS

In an address at the annual dinner of the officers and other employees of the First National and the First Trust and Savings, James B. Forgan, the president, gave information concerning the earnings of the two institutions in the last ten years and the disposition of them. He said that, in that period, the amount paid to the stockholders in cash dividends was $10,960,000, and the amount accumulated for them as surplus and undivided profits was $10,079,170. These figures include the capital, surplus and undivided profits of the First Trust, all of which are accumulated earnings.

In the ten years $7,249,859 has been paid in salaries to the employees of the banks, the amount being equivalent to 66 per cent of the amount paid to the stockholders in dividends and 34.4 per cent of the total cash dividends and accumulated profits.

The average salary paid to clerks in 1902 was $819 a year. The average in 1911 was $1,033, an increase of 26 per cent. The average salary of officers has not changed.

During the ten-year period the bank's pension fund for the employees was built up. It now has invested $1,000,000 and has paid in pensions $156,879.

NEW CONTINENTAL AND COMMERCIAL SITE

Record was made on Monday of all the deeds by which the Continental and Commercial National Bank acquired the fee simple in the block bounded by La Salle, Adams, and Quincy streets and Fifth Avenue, which is to form the site of its new $7,000,000 bank and office building. The ground, buildings and leases have cost $3,500,000, which will bring the new bank building up to well above ten millions in cost.

INCREASE IN CHICAGO CLEARINGS

Bank clearings in Chicago in January reached a total of $1,252,985,283. This amount is $106,597,602, or 9.3 per cent, larger than the clearings in the corresponding month of 1911. It compares also with $1,160,916,011 in 1910 and with $1,122,588,697 in 1909.

So far as the bank clearings are representative of business conditions, the figures for the last month show a gain. It is to be remembered, too, that several small bank consolidations since a year ago have tended to diminish, rather than expand, the volume of clearings.

Bankers in the Public Eye

To the left is James T. Joyce, the new president of the Wisconsin Association. He also is vice-president of the A. B. A. for his state, and vice-president of the Union National, at Eau Claire. Has been very active in organization matters.

To the right is William C. White, the new president of the Illinois National, at Peoria, Illinois. Is destined to be a factor in the banking and commercial affairs of this state and in the state association.

NEW CHICAGO BOND FIRM

Paul W. Chapman and A. Lawrence Mills, Jr., after active association since 1899 with the bond organization of the Harris Trust and Savings Bank and N. W. Harris & Co., have organized the investment banking house of Chapman, Mills & Co. The new firm will not act as brokers, but will buy and sell bonds only for its own account, specializing in government, municipal, railroad and public service corporation issues. The firm will probably have its offices in the Harris Trust building, and will be ready for business about March 1st.

DEATH OF JOLIET BANKER

George H. Munroe died on Thursday at Daytona, Fla. He was a former state legislator, banker, and real estate man of Joliet. He took prominent part in all progressive measures in the city and Desplaines river valley; one of his greatest desires was the consummation of the lakes-to-the-gulf deep waterway movement, of which he was treasurer.

NEW YORK TO MEET AT BUFFALO

Secretary W. J. Henry has announced the New York convention for Buffalo June 14th and 15th. Headquarters will be at the Lafayette. Illinois doesn't feel like announcing her 1912 dates until the 1911 proceedings book gets out.

WHAT TO DO WITH BAD MONEY

Banks which return bad bills to customers for credit instead of destroying them are to be held responsible by the United States government. The law is plain.

Orders that bankers and business men who continue in circulation spurious money they receive should be prosecuted as accomplices in counterfeiting have been sent out from Washington. The Chicago orders were immediately followed by the arrest of Barney Silverman of 1823 South State Street, a grocer accused of passing a counterfeit silver dollar on Bertha Toback of 1829 Archer Avenue, a 10-year-old girl.

"Business men and bankers, many of them prominent, often try to get rid of counterfeits they take in," said Captain Porter. "Hereafter they will be treated as though they were actual makers of spurious money."

MID-CITY TRUST ELECTS PRESIDENT

E. V. Bacharach was elected vice-president of the Mid-City Trust and Savings Bank at a meeting of the board of directors Thursday. Mr. Bacharach has been connected with the Corn Exchange National Bank for twenty-four years as chief auditor.

D. R. Forgan, who has returned from Duluth, says that bankers there report collections better than a year ago.

Mainly About Banks and Bankers

YOUR attention is directed to an article in this issue, which describes the situation in Illinois, so far as the agitation for state supervision of all banking institutions is concerned, and to another giving the legal aspects of the matter. On the editorial page will be found a reference to the new Colorado law, which has been quite effective in driving from that state all forms of "wild-cat" institutions.

ST. PAUL PIONEER PRESS reproduces the picture of the Farmers National at Owatonna, Minn., called the "architectural shrine," and also the picture of the Peoples Savings Bank at Cedar Rapids, Ia., which it denominates the "Mecca for architectural pilgrims." After looking at the reproductions, one is convinced that Architect Sullivan, after drawing the plans for one of the buildings, simply turned them upside-down and used them for the other institution. Both of them are very expensive structures, fitted up and finished in the very latest modern style. To say that they are peculiar is not putting it too strongly. Some people have been unkind enough to call them freaks.

A RECENT issue of the Spokesman-Review, published at Spokane, devotes an editorial to "The Notable Record of a Spokane Financial Institution." It refers to the first twenty years of the life of the Old National Bank.

THE bank was started in 1892, when Spokane had 23,000 inhabitants, with deposits of $100,000; to-day its deposits are around nine millions, whereas the population of the city has increased to 104,000. The percentage of gain, of course, is very largely with the bank. Much of the growth of the Old National is to be attributed to the wonderful development of the great Northwest. It started out in the early days to be a conservative bank in a new community. At the first this may not have been attractive; in the end it has been a winner. Concluding its splendid article, the Spokesman-Review says: "Competent, honest and sane banking is the standard for the bankers of the Inland Empire to aim at."

HOW many of us remember Alfred H. Curtis, president of the National Bank of North America, New York, which was forced to go out of business at the time the government began its prosecution against Morse, who has just been pardoned by President Taft? His was a most unusual and attractive personality. His honesty in banking was never questioned; his ability was admitted. He conclusively proved his fidelity when, during the trial of Mr. Morse, he refused all overtures of the government to become its witness and turn against Morse, for which refusal he suffered every conceivable persecution and privation. He secured, however, the admiration of Prosecutor Stimson, now secretary of war, and Judge Hough, who tried the case, so that the former asked and the latter granted a suspension of sentence against Curtis.

ALL of his friends will be glad to know that Mr. Curtis is now back in his old home and re-established in sound financial condition. As a mark of confidence, he quite recently was appointed executor for a two-million-dollar estate. Write him a letter and tell him that what you have just read pleases you.

IT will be a year or more before the Irving National Exchange of New York will get into its new home in the fifty-five story Woolworth building. The banking room will include ample space. The new building occupies an entire block on Broadway opposite the postoffice, extending from Barclay Street to Park Place. The building is but five blocks from where the bank now is.

PRESIDENT LEWIS E. PIERSON, in his notice to stockholders, states that the new quarters will enable the bank "to further develop that close personal relationship which we always have desired with our customers, whether their business be large or small."

FOR the year 1911 the Irving had net profits of $369,540.48, which, after paying dividends, left for the undivided profit account $209,540.48. This statement and a summary of the condition of the bank are made public over the signature of a large firm of chartered accountants. President Pierson believes in publicity as well as in advanced banking ideas.

B. W. MOSER, chairman of the press and publicity committee of the American Institute of Banking, is undertaking a most valuable work for that sterling organization. It is his intention to have chapter men furnish for publication in the financial newspapers articles on subjects of interest to men in the banking business. He cites the fact, which is well known to the publishers of financial papers, that the Institute numbers among its members many who are qualified to write on such subjects as accounting, auditing, shortcuts, expert systems and analysis of accounts.

MR. MOSER points out that these articles can be both practical and theoretical, and there is little doubt that his efforts in the matter will be greatly appreciated by the financial papers to whom he has addressed his proposal.

RUMOR had it that the California Bankers Association was about to start the publication of an association journal. This has been very indignantly denied by those in authority. M. C. Doyle of the "Coast Banker," says "nothing to it." Each year the executive council of the California association sets aside a fund for the publication of its bulletins concerning protective work, calling attention to bank crooks, and to other activities of the association. It does not believe in alienating the friendship and support of the regular standard publications.

KANKAKEE county is entitled to a banner, so far as forming a county organization under the patronage of the Illinois Bankers Association is concerned. At a meeting held in Kankakee on Saturday night, every one of the twenty-three banks in the county was represented. There were eighty-three actual bankers present.

MAYOR C. E. BRADT of DeKalb, who is at the head of the committee on county organization, was present and addressed the meeting, inciting great enthusiasm for the work.

F. M. LOCKWOOD, ex-treasurer of the association, was chairman of the committee to organize the county, and was assisted by A. M. Shoven. That they did their work in a forceful and effective manner is shown by the result.

THE following officers were elected: C. R. Miller, of Kankakee, president; Fred LaRocque, of Manteno, first vice-president; Fred Mann, of Kankakee, second vice-president; O. T. Olsen, of Herscher, secretary and treasurer. Executive committee, Charles Rayhorn, of Grant Park, E. C. Curtis, of Grant Park, H. J. Legris, of Kankakee, J. J. Kirby of Mokenza, and A. B. Trudeau, of Manteno.

OUR old friend, George Harvey, has a spirited article in Harper's Weekly this week entitled "Roosevelt and Mr. Taft." Had he devoted this space to "Watterson and Mr. Wilson," he could have been much more interesting.

THE opening of the new ten-story steel construction Hotel Jefferson, at Peoria, will occur Tuesday evening, February 6th. A party made up of Chicago bankers, railroad officials, hotel and newspaper men will go down by way of the Rock Island lines in a special car arranged for by W. J. Leahy, general passenger agent, who will accompany the party.

THE owners of the Jefferson, Hull, and Lehmann have secured the services of Horace Wiggins as manager. Mr. Wiggins was for many years the manager of the Leland at Springfield, and has recently resigned as manager of the Lexington Hotel, this city, to go to the Jefferson.

AMERICAN ingenuity has seized upon the motor truck for further expression of its remarkable versatility. It is constantly producing new and interesting forms of special purpose power vehicles for the most diversified uses, adapting them to the particular conditions that affect every line of business that has need for much hauling or delivery work.

A PUBLISHER gets every angle of view so cleverly as does President F. S. Lusk, First National, Missoula, Mont. His state elected him to represent it in the American Bankers Association, and we wrote him for his picture to go in our "Rogues Gallery," as Burns would call it. Here is the Lusk effusion:

"YOU are a good jollier, all right, but I don't think you need my picture. The banks are supporting entirely too many publications, as I see it.

State Supervision an Issue in Illinois

The negative vote of the executive council of the Illinois Bankers Association on Wednesday of last week, at the Blackstone, has raised a state-wide issue. There were enough private bankers present, together with their business and political allies, to poll two more votes than were polled by the advocates of state supervision. Many representatives of organized banks failed to get their votes recorded, but the defeat has raised the issue, according to the Chicago Tribune, as to where the state association as a body really stands upon bank supervision. The following editorials from Chicago's leading papers tell their own story. The first one is from the Record-Herald:

"Private Bank" Regulation Needed

It is to be regretted that the executive council of the Illinois Bankers Association defeated a resolution offered by B. F. Harris, president of the association, for the creation of a committee to consider the advisability of putting private banks under reasonable state supervision.

Illinois is one of the four states that permit anyone to hang out the sign "Bank," and receive thereby deposits from the public. There are individuals and firms in the state that do a perfectly sound business under this privilege; there are others that do an unsound business, especially among immigrants, and injure society by losing the money of very poor and alien depositors. Why should not the reputable and conscientious private bankers accept fair state regulation for the purpose of driving the irresponsible "banks" out of business?

The common good demands such regulation, and the welfare of sound private banks would be enhanced by the guarantee of their stability furnished by state inspection, as well as by the suppression of the unsound private banks. It is a reproach to the public morality of Illinois that crookedness should be allowed to flourish behind the "bank" sign.

The Tribune raises a question, which President B. F. Harris has answered. That influential paper wants to know why private bankers object to supervision and "where does the Illinois Bankers Association stand on this question?" The Tribune Editorial reads:

Responsible Banking

The executive committee of the Illinois Bankers Association by a vote of 13 to 11 defeated a proposal to introduce a bill bringing all banks under supervision. As all but private banks are now under supervision, the meaning of this proposal is clear.

But it is not clear how any reputable association or its representatives dare defeat such a proposition.

Why should private banks be immune from supervision any more than state or national banks?

Why do they object to supervision?

As a matter of fact, the private banks need supervision or they would not fight it. It was intimated that a number would go to the wall if supervision was forced upon them. All the more reason for forcing it, and the quicker the better.

It is said the private banks have much influence with legislators. But surely the Illinois Bankers Association should be able to counteract that unless they stand for irresponsible banking.

Where does this association stand on this question?

What the Examiner Says

"The proposal to appoint a committee to draft a bill bringing private banks under inspection was finally defeated by a vote of 13 to 11. President Harris declared after the meeting that the bankers favoring the measure would carry the fight on as individuals before the legislature. Had not two Chicago state and national bankers voted with the private bankers the result would have been reversed.

"Under our present laws," said Mr. Harris, "any one can open an office, call it a bank and begin taking deposits, absolutely without any requirements on the part of the state as to character, experience or capital. There have been hideous examples of small fraudulent private banks preying on ignorant foreigners and others right here in Chicago, and it is high time that the state should step in and put some restrictions on who shall be permitted to start a bank, and on how the business shall be conducted. Bankers should take a united front in favor of state inspection of all banks, whether they are incorporated or not. These conditions must be corrected and it is better for the bankers to draft their own bill and present it to the legislature with their united support than to leave this most important matter to the work of unskilled hands."

Lay Papers in the Fight

Even the Drovers and Feeders Journal, a big stockyards daily, has come out in the interests of the depositors, whom it thinks ought to be considered chiefly. One good point it makes is that "bank supervision is not a radical move, as its opponents claim, but rather is a conservative one." The D. and F. Journal believes supervision would "benefit and strengthen the entire banking situation."

This paper cautions the bankers that "voting against state control over private banking institutions is an action, which hardly tends to strengthen public confidence," which really is the most valuable asset in the banking field.

Harris Replies to Tribune Query

B. F. Harris, president of the Illinois Bankers Association, wrote a letter to the Tribune from his home in Champaign, setting forth the status of the demand for state supervision of private banks, and answering the Tribune's inquiry as to where the Illinois bankers stood. Mr. Harris says:

"I note your editorial in the Tribune headed 'Responsible Banking,' and, while I do not believe in families or associations thrashing out their differences in the public press, yet, now that the attitude of the executive council of the Illinois Bankers Association has gotten widely into print, and because the public has a right to be informed on vital quasi-public business, such as is banking, and in justice to the association, I feel constrained to make a statement on the subject.

"I would especially answer your pertinent question, 'Where does this association stand on this question?' meaning the question of supervision of banks in Illinois.

Favored by Large Majority

"You may be sure that, as president of the Illinois Bankers Association, I would not have forced the issue before the executive council of the association of bringing all banks in this state under supervision, nor attempt, without specific authority, to state the sentiment of a large majority of our 1,572 member banks (136 additional banks are not members) if I were not certain I was expressing their desires.

"As a matter of fact, more than two-thirds of the member banks of this association are supervised state and national banks and it is therefore patent to any one that they would urge supervision of all banks if only for selfish reasons, though bankers who voluntarily submit to organization and supervision can hardly be said to be selfish in that respect.

"Then, too, some months ago in answer to written requests on the subject, with a copy of my Cairo convention bank supervision address inclosed, more than half the banks responded—80 per cent of them being favorable to the supervision of all banks and 30 per cent of the private banks responding also were favorable.

Deprecates Action of Council

"These facts together with numberless others, and my close association with our members, warrant me in saying that the action of the executive council did not represent the wishes of the Illinois Bankers Association and that a wholesome majority of this association is in favor of a first-class bank regulating and supervising law such as has every state in the Union excepting only four.

"In justice to some of our worthy private bankers it should be said we are entirely safe in presuming they may be sound and solvent, but some of them fight supervision on the personal rights theory, feeling that they or any one has a right to go into the banking business, just as they have a similar right to go into the grocery business; yet hardly that, for the pure food laws would limit them there as, in fact, laws now properly limit and supervise all public necessities.

Public Has Right to Know

"Many of them therefore may be credited as being conscientious and financially sound, but not abreast of the times in knowledge of the fact that the banking business differs from ordinary business in that it is not simply the business of the individual but is the business of the public, and therefore the public has a right to know who operates, and under what conditions the bank is operated.

"Many of us in all public and private capacities are laboring or inactive in mistaken standpat policies, and if later day tendencies have demonstrated anything they have demonstrated these two facts, viz.:

"First, that standing pat as a policy or principle (excepting on a few cardinal virtues) is not a policy at all and cannot be justified, for, as has been said, 'there is no permanency, but change,' and the man who stands pat because his father did does not stand where his father stood.

States a Strong Point

"The other demonstrated fact, and a sequenc to the former, is that representative, progressive leadership, abreast of the times, is properly expected, and will soon be demanded of every executive. He must obey public opinion, and in some cases he may properly help in its making or shaping.

"Bankers are naturally and properly conservative in some of their work, but this very conservatism should speak for supervision and all that makes for better banking, for what is best for the public is best for the banker.

"I am certain, therefore, that I am not wrong in any of my views or premises or in my efforts to serve both the Illinois Bankers Association and the citizens of Illinois at one and the same time. I know that the Illinois Bankers Association is for bank supervision if for no other reason than that it is right."

What Chicago Daily News Says

The Chicago Daily News has given the firmest of support to bank supervision during its entire history. It has come forcibly to the support of President B. F. Harris in his effort to have banking in Illinois put upon a sounder basis. The Daily News believes that "state supervision of all forms of banking business in Illinois must come." Following is its editorial position on the subject:

Supervision of Private Banks

Illinois is one of the few states in the Union that permits private banks to transact their business without supervision or inspection of any kind. This state has a good law under which banking institutions may incorporate. The concerns organized under that law stand deservedly high. Some of the private banks, too, are excellent. But there is no guaranty that all the private banks follow sound principles in the conduct of their business. Indeed, it is well known that some do not. Chicago has had examples in plenty of rotten banking by concerns that called themselves private banks.

B. F. Harris of Champaign, the progressive president of the Illinois Bankers Association, says: "Under our present laws any one can open an office, call it a bank and begin taking deposits, absolutely without any requirements on the part of the state as to character, experience or capital. There have been hideous examples of small fraudulent private banks preying on ignorant foreigners and others right here in Chicago." He says further: "Bankers should take a united stand in favor of state inspection of all banks, whether they are in incorporated or not. These conditions must be corrected, and it is better for the bankers to draft their own bill and present it to the legislature with their united support than to leave this most important matter to the work of unskilled hands."

It seems almost incredible that a body of men as intelligent as bankers are supposed to be has taken issue with this sound position. Yet by a vote of 13 to 11 the executive council of the Illinois Bankers Association has rejected a motion to authorize the appointment of a committee to draft a bill embodying the idea of state supervision of private banks for presentation to the next meeting of the association.

State supervision of all concerns purporting to do a banking business in Illinois must come. If the bankers' state organization will not follow the wise recommendation of its president and take the initiative in proposing legislation of this sort, then representatives of broader public interests must secure the necessary law.

Follow-up by the Tribune

The Chicago Tribune follows up its first editorial by another equally as strong. It says:

The Bankers on Supervision

In prompt response to an editorial in The Tribune, B. F. Harris, president of the Illinois Bankers Association, writes to say that the vote of 13 to 11 by which the executive council defeated a proposal for a bill to supervise all banking institutions does not express the opinion of the majority of the association.

The Bankers Association includes all but 136 of the banks in Illinois, or 1,572 banks. More than two-thirds already are under supervision, and Mr. Harris declares that many of the private banks favor it. There should therefore be no difficulty in obtaining the official support of the association for the needed legislation. Since the executive council vote is not representative it should not be conclusive.

Sound private banks will not object to supervision on a mere theory that they are private enterprises, and the next session of the legislature should hear emphatically from the banking fraternity on behalf of extending supervision to the whole field of banking. If this is done the bill will be passed.

VISITING BANKERS IN CHICAGO

Among the out-of-town bankers in Chicago the past week were: Sol. Wexler, of New Orleans; Jas. E. Hamilton, of Cedar Rapids; Harry Roberts, of the First National of Black River Falls; Mr. Higgins, the newly elected vice-president of the Chatham-Phenix Bank of New York; O. B. Gorin, president of the Millikan National of Decatur; B. A. Cummins, vice-president of the First National at Pierre, S. D.; W. L. Cheney and Mr. Elser of the Second Ward Savings, Milwaukee; J. T. Joyce, vice-president of the Union National of Eau Claire, and president of the Wisconsin Bankers Association, and Mr. Farmer of the Bank of Sioux Rapids, Ia.; J. Y. Whiteman of the First National of Biggsville, Ill., John Olson of the First National of Forest City and J. H. Ingwersen, president of the Peoples Trust at Clinton, both of Iowa, are also numbered among the visitors in Chicago this week.

Right of State to Prohibit or Regulate Private Banking

To what extent may the law-making power of the state go in regulating the banking business? Undoubtedly the legislature may regulate banking, but may it prohibit persons from engaging in that business, or is the right to employ one's capital and efforts in the banking business an inherent privilege of which the citizen cannot be deprived? These are questions which immediately present themselves upon taking up the preliminaries in the course of study in the banking law.

The right of banking, in all its departments, at common law, belonged to the individual citizen, and could be exercised at pleasure. Bank of Augusta v. Earle, 13 Pet. (U. S.) 519, 10 L. Ed. 274; State v. Richcreek, 167 Ind. 217, 77 N. E. Rep. 1005, 5 L. R. A. N. S. 874; Marymont v. Nevada State Banking Board (Nev.), 111 Pac Rep. 295.

The question whether a state can prohibit individuals from transacting a banking business, except through the medium of a corporation, in other words, whether a state can convert the right of banking, which at common law was a natural right, into a franchise, is a matter which cannot be regarded as definitely settled by the courts.

There are not many decisions on the question, but what few there are seem to be in irreconcilable conflict.

According to some of the modern authorities, the right of banking is not a franchise in any sense of the word. They hold that it belongs to the citizens generally, and is a common right, in the same sense that the right to do a grocery or a dry goods business is available to all citizens, that no grant from the state is necessary, and that any individual or group of individuals may, under such police regulations as the state may legally make, engage in the banking business at will. Bank of California v. San Francisco, 142 Cal. 276, 75 Pac. Rep. 832, 64 L. R. A. 418.

According to other authorities private banking may be absolutely prohibited. These authorities are based upon two grounds: first, that the prohibiting of private banking is not really prohibition, but merely regulation; second, that the state may prohibit private banking under its police power.

The Right to Prohibit Private Banking Denied

In State v. Scougal, 3 S. D. 55, 51 N. W. Rep. 858 15 L. R. A. 477, the right of the state to prohibit private banking was denied. The statute in question, which specifically denied to individuals the right to exercise the banking functions of discounting and negotiating promissory notes, bills of exchange and other evidences of debt, receiving deposits, buying and selling exchange, and loaning money on personal security, and confined such rights exclusively to corporations, was in violation of the provision of the state Constitution, declaring that no law shall be passed granting to any citizen, class of citizens, or corporations, privileges or immunities which shall not equally belong to all citizens or corporations. The statute was also held to violate other provisions of the state Constitution and the Federal Constitution. The decision in this case rests upon the fundamental proposition that the state has no power to make the business of banking, other than the privilege of issuing bills to circulate as money, a franchise, 5 L. R. A. 876.

The legislature of Nevada enacted a statute in 1909 (Laws 1908-09, chap. 191) which provided that it should be unlawful for any partnership or individual to engage in the banking business except by means of a corporation duly organized for that purpose under the laws of the state. J. Marymont petitioned for a writ of mandamus to compel the State Banking Board to issue a license permitting him to engage as an individual in the banking business. The question presented was whether ordinary banking by individuals may be prohibited by statutory enactment, while corporations are allowed and authorized to conduct this business. It was held that the statute in question was invalid because in violation of the constitutional provisions asserting rights to liberty, property and happiness and guaranteeing due process of law. This was the case of Marymont v. Nevada State Banking Board (Nev.), 111 Pac. Rep. 295. The court referred to the decision of the United States Supreme Court in Lochner v. New York, 198 U. S. 45, 49 L. Ed. 937, wherein a New York statute, limiting employment in bakeries to 60 hours a week and 10 hours a day, was held an arbitrary interference with the freedom of the individual to contract, and the court observed: "If the legislature of the state of New York cannot prohibit individuals from following the baking business more than 10 hours per day, we are unable to perceive how the legislature in this state can entirely prohibit individuals from following the banking business. Although the latter avocation is more importantly connected with the arteries of trade, both are beneficial and for the public benefit, as well as for the profit of the persons who engage in these avocations, and both are subject to all necessary regulations."

The Right to Prohibit Private Banking Upheld

The first decision in which the right of a state to prohibit banking by private individuals is upheld is State v. Woodmansee, 1 N. D. 246, 46 N. W. Rep. 970, 11 L. R. A. 420. This case concedes that the right of banking is not in its nature a corporate franchise, but says that it may be made such by legislation, and that individuals may be prohibited from transacting it either altogether in all its departments or partially in any specified ones. The right thus to prohibit private banking is sustained as a proper exercise of the police power of the state. In this connection the court said: "As a matter of precedent and authority, the legislative prerogative, in the exercise of its police power in promoting the public safety, not only to regulate and restrict the business of banking, but also to grant the right to one class and to prohibit to others, or even to forbid it altogether, has never been questioned in the courts; and the legislatures of other states have frequently exercised the right of supreme control over the business."

Weed v. Bergh, 141 Wis. 569, 124 N. W. Rep. 664, 25 L. R. A. U. S. 1217, was an action by a private banking partnership against the banking commissioner and the district attorney of Waupaca county, Wisconsin, to restrain them from enforcing chap. 285, laws of 1909, requiring all private banking concerns to incorporate, on the ground that law was unconstitutional. Plaintiffs set forth they had been in business for years; they had on deposit as private bankers upwards of $250,000, and had loaned out over $200,000 on first class securities. They further stated that they had successfully passed through the panics of 1893 and 1907, and had the respect and confidence of the community. The statute, of which the plaintiffs complained, required them to incorporate within three months after its passage, or be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, punishable by fine or imprisonment, or both. They claimed that they could not obey the statute without a ruinous sacrifice of property. The constitutionality of the statute was upheld by the court on the theory that it was regulation and not prohibition. In enacting the statute the legislature said: "If you wish to engage in this quasi public business of banking, you must first secure a corporate charter." It did not say: "You must not engage in the banking business at all."

The Supreme Court of the United States has held that private banking may be prohibited. In Shallenberger v. First National Bank, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 189, 28 B. L. J. 214, reversing the same case, 172 Fed. Rep. 999, 27 B. L. J. 33, it was decided that the Nebraska statute, Laws 1909, Chap. 10, p. 66, prohibiting individuals from engaging in the banking business except through the medium of a corporation, and then only upon condition that each corporation contribute to a depositor's guaranty fund, to be used in the payment of the claims of depositors of banks thereafter becoming insolvent, was held constitutional. This statute, it will be noticed, not only prohibited private banking but also created a guaranty fund to which all banks were required to contribute. However, the case stands for the proposition that private banking may be prohibited. In the opinion in the case of Noble State Bank v. Haskell, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 186, 28 B. L. J. 211, on the authority of which the Shallenberger case was decided, Mr. Justice Holmes, on the question of prohibiting private banking, said: "The question that we have decided (the right to compel banks to contribute to a guaranty fund) is not much helped by propounding the further one, whether the right to engage in banking is or can be made a franchise. But as the latter question has some bearing on the former, and as it will have to be considered in the following cases, if not here, we will dispose of it now. It is not answered by citing authorities for the existence of the right at common law. There are many things that a man might do at common law that the states may forbid. He might embezzle until a statute cut down his liberty. We cannot say that the public interests to which we have adverted, and others, are not sufficient to warrant the state in taking the whole business of banking under its control. On the contrary, we are of the opinion that it may go on from regulation to prohibition except upon such conditions as it may prescribe. In short, when the Oklahoma legislature declares by implication that free banking is a public danger, and that incorporation, inspection, and the above described co-operation are necessary safeguards, this court certainly cannot say that it is wrong."

One argument which has been used against statutes prohibiting banking except by means of a corporation is this: If the legislature can prohibit the individual from engaging in the banking business, it is evident that it may also prohibit corporations from engaging in the business; for a corporation, which is merely a creature of the law, can have no greater fundamental rights than the individual, and, indeed, can have only such rights as are bestowed upon it by the state. Therefore, if both the individual and the corporation may be prohibited, this business, so essential to the carrying on of commerce and trade, and so necessary to the welfare of the state, may be entirely suppressed. Marymont v. National State Banking Board (Nev.), 111 Pac. Rep. 295.

The contention is frivolous. It loses sight of the fact that there is a wide difference between a statute which limits banking to corporations and one which absolutely prohibits banking. The one is a regulation, made for the general good of the community, the other a nonsensical prohibition which no court could sustain providing there could be found a legislature reckless enough to enact it.

Summing up the situation, it can only be said that in South Dakota and Nevada the law-making body may not prohibit private banking, while in North Dakota and Wisconsin the right of banking may be restricted to corporations and that the Supreme Court of the United States has similarly held. The question has not come up directly in the other states.

State Control of Private Bankers

Apart from the question of the right of the state to entirely prohibit private banking, it is quite well settled that private bankers are subject to the general control of the state. Many of the states forbid the issuance of drafts, bills, notes or other evidences of debt, payable to bearer or order, by any private banker for the purpose of circulating them as money.

In State v. Richcreek, 167 Ind. 217, 77 N. E. Rep. 1085, 5 L. R. A. U. S. 874, the question of the validity of certain private banking regulations was raised. The statute involved was Laws Ind. 1905, chap. 109, p. 182, which provided, among other matters, first, that the real estate, furniture and fixtures of a private banker should constitute no more than one-third of the entire capital of the bank, even when applied to established institutions; second, that the responsibility and net worth of the individual members of a private banking concern should be at least double the amount of the capital paid into the bank, and third, that at least one member of the concern should be a resident of the state. These provisions were held to be valid.

An ordinance of the city of Richmond, Va., requiring private bankers of a certain class to pay a license of $800, was upheld by the Supreme Court of Appeals of Virginia in Bradley v. City of Richmond (Va.), 66 S. E. Rep. 236, 27 B. L. J. 207, 236.

The New York statute regulating private bankers and requiring them to deposit $10,000 in cash, or its equivalent, with the state comptroller and to file a surety company bond in an amount between $10,000 and $50,000 to be fixed by the comptroller, and making the issuance of a license discretionary with the comptroller, was held constitutional by the Supreme Court of the United States. Engle v. O'Malley, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 190.

State Control of Incorporated Banks

Under its police power the state exercises a control over all corporations within its territorial limits. The difficulty of defining this power has been generally recognized by the courts. In fact, it has been said to be incapable of exact definition or limitation. "This police power of the state," said one court, "extends to the protection of the lives, limbs, health, comfort and quiet of all persons, and the protection of all property within the state." It is the police power which rescues statutory provisions which might otherwise be deemed technically in violation of the state or federal constitutions. It is probably true that no class of corporations is more completely under police regulations of the state than banks. The peculiar relations that banks sustain to the public, and by this is meant their depositors, is such that it is the business and duty of the state to see that corporations embarking in the banking business are entitled to the confidence of the public, and that depositors who in good faith entrust their money in these institutions shall be protected. Thompson on Corporations, Sec. 460.

In State v. Woodmansee, 1 N. D. 246, 46 N. W. Rep. 970, 11 L. R. A. 420, it is said: "It is conceded that the business of banking, by reason of its very intimate relations to the fiscal affairs of the people, and the revenues of the state, is and has ever been considered a proper subject of legislative control, and strictly within the domain of the internal police power of every state. As a matter of fact, we have been unable to find an authority, and we have searched diligently, which has ever questioned the right of the legislature in the exercise of police power to regulate, restrain and govern the business of banking."

It is hardly necessary to comment at length upon the question of state regulation and control of incorporated banks. Practically every state has voluminous statutes regulating banks.

What Corporations May Exercise Banking Functions

In general, corporations possess only such powers as are expressly granted, or such as are necessary to carry into effect the expressly granted powers. Just as a bank would have no right to engage in the business of fire insurance, so an insurance company, or any other company, not expressly or impliedly authorized, may not undertake a banking business.

An insurance company differs radically from a banking corporation, and the powers given to one cannot be exercised by the other without some authority granted by the state through its legislature. Memphis City Bank v. Tennessee, 161 U. S. 186, 40 L. Ed. 664; Blair v. Perpetual Insurance Company, 10 Mo. 559. A homestead and loan association, organized under the statutes of the state of Illinois, has no power to receive deposits, and to contract to pay interest thereon, for such corporation. CAPITAL ONE MILLION DOLLARS

By C. C. Burford

William C. White, for many years cashier of the Illinois National of Peoria, and well-known to the bankers of the state because of his interest in the Illinois Bankers Association, has been named president of the institution to succeed the late Frank Trefzger. Mr. White will also succeed his lamented colleague as treasurer of the Peoria Association of Commerce. The death of Mr. Trefzger was a distinct loss to Peoria business circles, and no one felt his death more keenly than did Mr. White. The friends of the new president are gratified to see him moved up to the positions which the sad death of Mr. Trefzger necessarily left vacant.

Mr. White, who will assume his duties at once, is a Peorian born and reared. Entering the banking business when a boy, he became bank messenger for the Commercial National Bank in 1886, and consequently he has seen more than a quarter of a century of banking experience. After four years of service with this institution Mr. White linked his fortunes with the Peoria Savings, Loan and Trust Bank as teller of that concern. The rising young banker remained with this organization until the formation and organization of the Illinois National Bank in 1900. This then new bank appointed Mr. White as its assistant cashier. Remaining in this position under Frank Trefzger, who was then cashier, until 1907, the two men were each promoted in that year, Mr. Trefzger becoming president, and Mr. White the cashier.

Leseure Sells Detroit Bank

Ernest X. Leseure, president of the Danville National Bank, and also president and principal stockholder of the Woodward Avenue State Bank of Detroit, has sold his interests in the latter named institution. Mr. Leseure and Walter C. Piper organized the bank in Detroit somewhat more than a year ago, and the former has just sold his stock at six points above par value. His reason for selling was that other business interests would not permit him to manage the Detroit bank.

Cass County Bankers Organize

The bankers of Cass county assembled at the Mann Hotel, in Virginia, and formed a Cass County Bankers Association. There are twelve banks in the movement. W. S. Rearick, of Skiles, Rearick & Co., of Ashland, is one of the active members of the association. He is well known to Illinois bankers. Henry S. Leeper of Chanderville is the president of the association, T. C. Richardson of Ashland is vice-president, and R. C. Taylor of Virginia is secretary and treasurer.

Emmerson May Be Candidate

L. L. Emmerson, cashier of the Third National of Mt. Vernon, and one of the most popular bankers of "Egypt," may be a candidate for the office of state treasurer. He will seek the republican nomination for this office. George H. Hamilton, president of the First National of Watseka, has withdrawn as a candidate for the legislature to succeed himself. He was also a candidate for the speakership.

Some New Banks

The Du Page County State Bank has begun business in the village of Glen Ellyn with capital of $25,000, and surplus of $2,500. William H. Page is president; Dan Norman, assistant cashier of the Continental and Commercial National of Chicago, is vice-president; Frank J. Bogan is cashier, and James W. Vallentyne is assistant cashier.

The new Citizens State Bank of Buda, near Princeton, will be opened about April 1st. E. E. Geeseman, formerly cashier of the First State Bank of Tiskilwa, will be the cashier. There will be about eighty stockholders, and the bank will have capital of $25,000 and surplus of $2,500. A new bank building is planned for the near future.

The Farmers Exchange Bank of Nebo, near Quincy, will succeed the Bank of Nebo February 10th. J. T. Harvey will be the president, J. R. Pollock, vice-president, and A. F. Turnbaugh, cashier.

The new Franklin Trust and Savings Bank, recently organized on the South Side of Chicago, is of especial interest to Springfield bankers inasmuch as S. W. Straus, one of the organizers of the new institution, is a stockholder and was one of the principal organizers of the New Leland Hotel Company of the capital city. Nicholas Roberts and James Giblin, two former Springfield men, are now associated with Mr. Straus in the bond and mortgage business in Chicago under the firm name of S. W. Straus & Co.

Edens is Contributing Editor

William G. Edens, assistant secretary of the Central Trust Company of Chicago and personally known to two-thirds of the bankers of the Central West through his attendance at so many conventions, was formerly a railroad man before he became a banker. As a railroad man he was as much of a live wire as he is now in the banking business, and he has by no means lost his interest in the affairs of his old associates. Not only does he keep up his membership in the labor union, but he also contributes each week an interesting section on banks, banking and investments to the "Union Labor Advocate," published in Chicago. His picture appears in this part of the

Champaign County Bankers Organize

Seventy bankers representing not only the banks of Champaign and Urbana, but of the county as well, met at the Hotel Beardsley in Champaign Monday evening, January 29th, and perfected a county organization. A social hour, toasts, and a banquet formed the entertainment for the afternoon and evening. Farming, overdrafts, and business conditions were the topics discussed. J. D. Morse of Gifford was chosen chairman; W. H. Wheat of Rantoul, vice-chairman; and P. W. McPheeters of Champaign, secretary and treasurer.

The bankers of Kankakee county met at the LaFayette Hotel in Kankakee, Friday evening, January 26th, with every bank in the county represented. A county organization was perfected for Kankakee county. Already fifty-six counties in Illinois have formed county associations and as only eight or ten have signified an indifference to the movement, it is safe to say that in a few weeks more the most of the counties of the state will have formed strong county organizations.

Bankers Aid in Boosting City

The bankers of Springfield are giving their hearty approval and co-operation toward the building of a huge convention hall in that city with the idea of making the capital city the best convention point in the state outside of Chicago. Both the Improvement Association and the Commercial Association of Springfield are working hard on this idea, and the Springfield papers report that the bankers of the city are giving their hearty approval to the project.

Marriage of Danville Banker

Robert D. McDonald, a retired banker of Danville, and Miss Harriet Yeater of Polk, Iowa, were recently married as a culmination of a romance begun a number of years ago, when the groom's daughter, Miss Jean McDonald, was a member of a personally conducted party, which toured the Mediterranean under the direction of Miss Yeater. Later McDonald was a member of a similar party. The bride has had a rich experience as a lecturer, and as an organizer of European tours.

Seward Prosser

Liberty National, New York, has a new president in Seward Prosser, who, before his election to succeed President Schenk, was a vice-president of the Astor Trust Company. Mr. Prosser will take office at the Liberty on March 1st. Henry J. Cochran will succeed Mr. Prosser as vice-president at the Astor Trust.

WESTERN CONVENTION DATES CONSECUTIVE

Secretary W. W. Bowman of Kansas has quite a feather in his Topeka convention date. It will be the silver wedding anniversary of Topeka and the association, which will be celebrated May 23d and 24th. Mr. Bowman says: "There is a recognized appropriateness in making Topeka the convention city for 1912. Twenty-five years ago the association was born in Topeka, and it seems quite in keeping with all proprieties that its twenty-fifth birthday be celebrated there. May is a popular convention month and other associations are fixing May dates also. Texas takes Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, May 7th, 8th and 9th; Oklahoma, Friday and Saturday, May 10th and 11th; Alabama, Friday and Saturday, May 17th and 18th; then follows Missouri at Joplin, Tuesday and Wednesday, May 21st and 22d, and Kansas at Topeka, Thursday and Friday, May 23d and 24th. Thus all conflicts are avoided.

"The financial press through the entire country, beginning at New York and Chicago, raised a great cry a year or two ago for continuity in convention dates and called upon state associations for some more methodical adjustment of dates that would accommodate the large number of bankers from reserve cities, representatives of financial journals, officers of the American Bankers Association and of state associations desiring to interchange visits, other public officers, convention speakers, etc., all of whom have been greatly inconvenienced by irregular dates fixed without reference to any common schedule, even neighboring states often conflicting. So great an evil needed correction, and a little neighborly co-operation has accomplished the result.

"The convention sessions will be held in Representative Hall and the building and loan section in the supreme court room. The program of the convention will contain features appropriate to its anniversary character, and will be strong in every one of its appointments."

AGITATION FROM WASHINGTON HURTS

Ware & Leland, big grain and cotton brokers of this city, give it as their opinion that agitation from Washington is the chief cause of bad business. They say: "The continual agitation from Washington is beginning to have its effect upon general business throughout the country. Reports from all the active centers indicate that business is not good. People are afraid to buy except for immediate needs, and money in consequence is piling up in large financial centers, and for which there is no outlet. The talk of tariff revision and further suits by the government are increasing this anxiety on the part of the merchants and for the minute we cannot feel very hopeful as to the future of the stock market. This general business depression is bound to have its effect; but it is a well-known fact that Wall Street usually discounts events six months in advance, and perhaps the recent decline in the stock market—or rather, the non-rise in the market—has been due to this fact, and that even though business may be at its lowest ebb, dividend reductions constantly spoken of, money a drug on the market, if our big men see that there is a change in sight, the stock market will show it long it long before actual business conditions warrant a rise. For the time being, we would confine ourselves to investment purchases; Atchison and Southern Pacific are our favorites, as far as the railroads are concerned, and those preferred industrials where there is no doubt about their ability to maintain the dividends."

COLONIAL TRUST NEW BUILDING

Another new bank and office building is assured for the financial district as the result of a deal closed on Tuesday. It will be sixteen stories high and will be erected by the Colonial Trust and Savings Bank on the Leopold Mayer estate property on Adams Street, adjoining on the west the Corn Exchange National Bank building, at the northwest corner of La Salle and Adams streets.

A charter has been issued to the Somerset National of Barker, N. Y., capital $25,000.

MILWAUKEE

NEWS LETTER By Mortimer I. Stevens

WISCONSIN

Judging by the volume of deposits in Milwaukee banks, the business transacted at present in this city is well up to the levels established for preceding years, and the merchants and manufacturers both claim that business prospects, while not unusually good, are still of such character as to warrant their looking upon the situation with not a little optimism.

There is only about a normal demand for loans, with rates unchanged. Collections are reported fair. A number of large orders have been booked during the past week in the iron and steel trade, although the majority of these concerns are working far from their full complement of men. Bond sales are reported as fair, with considerable individual trade centering mostly around the high grade industrial and public utility bonds.

Alexander Re-elected President

The annual meeting of the stockholders of the Merchants and Manufacturers Bank of Milwaukee was held January 27th, at which time the old board of directors was re-elected as follows: L. M. Alexander, H. P. Conant, F. Doepke, Nathaniel Greene, E. C. Knoernschild, W. F. Myers, W. S. Paddock and W. H. Schwab of Milwaukee; J. G. Rosebush of Appleton, F. J. Wood of Grand Rapids. The old officers were also re-elected. They are: President, L. M. Alexander; vice-president, W. F. Myers; second vice-president, W. S. Paddock; cashier, E. J. C. Knoernschild; assistant cashier, A. Froede, Jr.

The statements presented were satisfactory, the last showing deposits of $1,641,208.21.

Discuss Central Bank Question

The Merchants and Manufacturers Association of Milwaukee held a smoker on the evening of January 30th, to which prominent citizens of Milwaukee were invited. The speakers of the evening were the Honorable Robert W. Bonyng of Denver, Colorado, a member of the National Monetary Commission, who discussed the question, "Shall We Have a Central Bank?" and Professor William A. Scott of the University of Wisconsin, who also spoke upon the same question.

The object of the smoker, which was well attended, was to give the members of the association an intelligent idea of the propositions now before congress, regarding reform in the banking system.

Mr. Bonyng said in part: "The present system has been called the 'panic breeder.' In times of trouble every banker and every depositor attempts to draw his reserves from his reserve centers, thus adding to the demoralization. There are three great defects in the present system; the scattering of reserves among the many thousand bank units; failure to provide any method by which banks could co-operate and non-elasticity of the national bank currency. The monetary commission found in its investigation of the banking systems in different nations that every one of financial prominence had a central bank. The commission early determined that this would not be suitable for this country, and we decided to recommend the creation of an institution which should be absolutely American in the plan of its organization; in the scope of its power, and in the manner of their exercise."

Banks and Farms Closely Allied

Secretary George D. Bartlett of the Wisconsin Bankers Association in a recent article sets forth the close alliance existing between banks and farmers and shows how the Wisconsin Bankers Association is endeavoring to arouse business men as well as farmers to renewed interest in agricultural possibilities within the state of Wisconsin.

He says, "possibly there may be many who are not aware that the 1911 legislature authorized additional state aid to our Wisconsin high schools for courses in agricultural as well as domestic science and manual training. That there is a lack of this knowledge on the part of our people would seem evident from the fact that out of 300 high schools in our state only 17 now offer courses in agriculture, while but 48 offer courses in domestic science and but 49 courses in manual training. But 65 high schools out of a total of over 300 offer either of these branches of education, thus leaving 80 per cent of the entire Wisconsin school system without any branch of education which educates the hands.

"This new law authorizes the state to pay one-half the cost of maintaining in any high school courses in agricultural and domestic science or in manual training, not to exceed $250 for each of these courses unless the courses are extended to include the upper grades of the common school, in which case the expenditure authorized by the state may be extended to $350 for each course. One educational authority has truthfully said, 'the most alarming thing in our educational system is, while our boys and girls are obtaining an education they are not being prepared for any specific vocation. The boys are imbued with the idea that they must not do manual labor, but must have a white-collar job. It looked for a time as if our farms would have to be abandoned because the boys would not take to farming.'

Carr is Re-elected President

The Bank of Hudson, Hudson, Wisconsin, held its annual meeting January 23d, when, after declaring the usual dividends, the following officers were re-elected: F. J. Carr, president; W. J. Barter, vice-president, E. E. Gatchel, vice-president and B. C. Bunker, cashier. On account of the new banking law requiring all officers and directors to be residents of the state, George De Long, who has served as vice-president for some years, was ineligible for re-election, and E. E. Gatchel was elected in his place. Mr. De Long continued a member of the examining committee as heretofore.

Group 1 Meets at Eau Claire

Group 1 of the Wisconsin Bankers Association will hold its regular annual meeting at Eau Claire, February 7th. An interesting program has been arranged, and a number of most important topics will be discussed. The chief speaker for the occasion will be President James K. Ilsley of the Marshall & Ilsley Bank of Milwaukee, who will address the bankers upon the subject of "Currency Reform as Proposed by the National Monetary Commission."

SAVINGS BANK SECTION OF A. B. A.

E. G. McWilliams, formerly with the Irving Savings Institution, New York City, has been appointed secretary of the Savings Bank section of the American Bankers Association, to succeed William H. Kniffen, Jr., who has been elected treasurer of the Onondaga County Savings Bank of Syracuse, New York.

AMONG THE VISITING BANKERS

C. C. Burford, of Busey's Bank, Urbana, Illinois, was a Chicago visitor Friday of last week.

John J. Sherman, former president of the Wisconsin Bankers Association, cashier of the Citizens National, Appleton, was in the city on Saturday.

Wm. Heuer, vice-president Iowa Bankers Association and cashier of the Union Savings, Davenport, called on Chicago banking acquaintances Thursday.

J. G. Allen, cashier Indiana Harbor (Ind.) State Bank, visited Chicago on Friday.

FEW KANSAS BANK ROBBERIES

Topeka, Kan., January 31.—Only one bank robbery took place in Kansas in 1911, according to the report of the Kansas State Bankers Association, filed here to-day.

"Two or three years ago," said M. B. Light of Winfield, president of the association, "a bank robbery in Kansas was a common thing. Two gangs were operating in the state. The era of bank robbing in Kansas is about passed. The law passed by the legislature providing life terms for bank robbers has served to clean up the state."

MICHIGAN BANK SOLD

Highland Park, Mich.—Through purchase of the entire capital stock, F. A. Smith and others associated with him have acquired ownership of the Woodward Avenue State Bank, which was established a little more than a year ago with a capital of $25,000.

The new owners have completed formal organization, electing as directors: Clarence M. Burton, Henry E. Candler, Charles K. Latham, George H. Russel and F. A. Smith. Officers elected are: President, F. A. Smith; vice-president, Clarence M. Burton. B. E. Storms will retain the position of assistant cashier, which he held under the former ownership of the bank.

Mr. Smith, the new president of the institution, was formerly assistant to the president of the First National Bank of Detroit, but retired from that position prior to the death of M. L. Williams.

The Woodward Avenue State Bank was established by E. X. LeSeure, Walter C. Piper, John M. Meyering and Ralph Meyering. Mr.

LeSeure, former president of the bank, who is president of the Danville National Bank of Danville, Ill., is quoted as saying that neither he nor Walter C. Piper, the cashier, who is a well-known real estate operator, was able to give the bank the time and attention which the institution's growing business demanded and it was thought advisable to sell when the opportunity was offered.

VEST POCKET SAVINGS

The Minnesota Loan and Trust, Minneapolis, is trying out a "vest pocket-savings" envelope in which the holder deposits "a coin each day," and on the margin makes a check mark to show the contents, telling how many dimes, nickels and quarters he put in. Coins cannot be extracted without destroying the envelope.

TWO TRUST COMPANIES PLAN TO CONSOLIDATE

Directors of the Fidelity Trust Company and of the Columbia Trust Company of Louisville, Ky., have voted to recommend the consolidation of the two institutions to the stockholders. In all probability the merger will be ratified. The Fidelity is one of the largest institutions of its kind in the South, and both are regarded among the strongest banking organizations of Louisville. A return of $1,000,000 to shareholders and the retirement of that amount of stock is proposed. Under this arrangement the capital stock of the two institutions would be $2,000,000, with a surplus of $500,000. L. W. Botts, president of the Columbia, is mentioned as president of the consolidation and John W. Barr will probably head the board of directors.

Southwestern reserve city news and gossip
—Special correspondence concerning also
the tributary territory, by J. Vion Papin

St. Louis, January 31, 1912.—Continued softness characterized the local monetary situation throughout the past week. The demand from all sources was about what had been expected for this particular period, but not sufficient to cause even a slight stiffening in rates. It is a notable fact, however, that leading banks are not pressing hard to place their funds. Present rates are not sufficiently attractive to them, and all want to be ready for the revival, which seems forcing itself. Decided preference is being shown to short time loans, and there is considerable competition for thirty and sixty day bills. Longer maturities, however, unless bearing exceptionally choice names, and at a shading above the current ruling, are not being readily taken, especially by the nationals. A canvass of the big wholesale district, on Washington Avenue, elicited the information that sales in certain lines have picked up remarkably since the fifteenth of January, and indications are that this pace will be maintained for an indefinite period. Collections show marked improvement, though there are still some backward spots. The straggling ends of the southern outlay are being gathered in, and there is not much more, relatively, to come in from that region. Deposits are seasonably large, and showed little fluctuation in either direction last week. Clearings are not quite up to the corresponding period a year ago.

Securities More Active

The recent revival in traction issues on the St. Louis Stock Exchange had a beneficial effect on the market as a whole. Brokers attribute the long depression and dullness in a large measure to the gloom, which United Railways stock and bonds cast over the market. Activity in railways preferred, which is probably the most widely owned security in the list, stimulated trading and interest in all other lists. The demand for both investment and speculative account has been better than for months past, and it is believed likely that it will continue. Bank and trust company issues, while very strong, have been relatively quiet. This, however, is not unusual, as local banking shares are always closely held, mainly for investment, and it is rare that any considerable blocks are offered for sale. The inquiry for bonds of various kinds has also picked up. The banks and trust companies have been in the market for certain high grade bonds, this form of investment proving more profitable than the general run of loans at the present status of the money market.

Wade Urges Reforms

Festus J. Wade, president of the Mercantile Trust Company, believes there should be radical reforms in taxation methods. In an address to the St. Louis Real Estate Exchange, he said that the present system of taxing mortgages makes hypocrites of the lenders. Mr. Wade said: "Real estate loans and mortgages should be immune from taxation because the taxes are paid on real estate. One invests in railroad securities and avoids taxes, because the railroad already have paid taxes. A national bank may not loan money on real estate, yet the land is the basis of all wealth. I never knew a bank to fail because of real estate loans, provided they were made with the same intelligence exercised in making commercial loans. Banks and trust companies in this state pay a greater tax, proportionally, than any other class of merchants or tradesmen. The institution over which I preside pays $12,000 a month for the privilege of doing business." Mr. Wade said that many St. Louis millionaires are moving into the county and establishing homes to save taxes. The Mercantile Trust Company, of which Mr. Wade is president, does a large business in real estate and real estate securities.

John Nickerson, Sr., Resigns

John Nickerson, Sr., vice-president of the National Bank of Commerce, and one of the old school of St. Louis bankers, has resigned from that institution and will become associated with his son, John Nickerson, Jr., in the brokerage business at 405 Olive Street. Mr. Nickerson had been in an executive capacity with the National Bank of Commerce since 1898, when the Commerce took over the St. Louis National, of which Mr. Nickerson was president. He is 75 years old, and in certain lines of banking detail is said to have no superior in the West. Mr. Nickerson was born in New York, and came to St. Louis in 1867 as paying teller of the old State Savings Institution, now the State National, succeeding J. H. McCluney in that position. Mr. McCluney is now president of the State National. Mr. Nickerson was cashier of the St. Louis National Bank in 1878; cashier of the Merchants National, 1890, and president of the St. Louis National, 1896. His severance with the National Bank of Commerce closes a forty-five year service in St. Louis banking institutions. It is announced that Mr. Nickerson's connection with his son's firm will be in an advisory capacity, as he has planned to retire from active business.

Wants Missouri-Lincoln Cited

The question whether the Missouri-Lincoln Trust Company is in contempt by applying to the circuit court for a receiver for the Nevada-Missouri Water, Light and Traction Company has been raised in Judge Kinsey's court by counsel for Jacob Erb, a Chicago attorney. Some time back Judge Kinsey issued an injunction restraining the trust company from selling at auction a $200,000 bond issue of the Nevada company, and Erb's attorneys claim the restraining order covered any and all action involving the affairs of the light concern. The motion filed asks that the trust company and W. F. Carter, its president, and James Hayward, secretary, be adjudged in contempt. The matter was taken under advisement. The application is interesting simply as being another tangle in the complicated web enmeshing the affairs of the Missouri-Lincoln Trust Company.

Bell Telephone Imbroglio

Stockholders of the Bell Telephone Company of Missouri, that is, the local holders, have backed down and agreed to accept six shares of American Telephone and Telegraph Company for seven of their shares in the local company. The struggle was a hot one, and for a time it looked as if the fortitude of the local directors, backed by the holding here, would win out. However the power behind the trust's steamroller was too mighty, so the men managing the fight decided it was best to accept the trust's proposition, and now the American is in full control. It is admitted by the local directors that the tactics employed by the parent company to gain its point are ultra domineering, but they say also: "What more could we do?" The five insurgent directors expect to be retired at the annual election on February 20th. One of these gentlemen said that he would just as leave be a wooden cigar Indian as a member of the new board. In all likelihood there will be radical changes in management, and now that

A LINCOLN SOUVENIR

From the First National, Minneapolis, comes a fine, bronze medal of Abraham Lincoln. That bank was established in "1864 in the days of Lincoln," and has commemorated his and its own birthday appropriately. The medal shows the well known Lincoln bust and on the reverse a fine, raised model of the First's new bank building. A. A. Crane has charge of the distribution.

ASKS FOR A RECEIVER

Cincinnati, January 31.—Suit was filed here to-day by Harry Bush, a stockholder, asking for the appointment of a receiver for the Cincinnati Trust Company, of which George B. Cox was president, and which was recently absorbed by the Provident Savings Bank and Trust Company. Bush also asked that the liquidating trustees of the Cincinnati Trust Company be compelled to pay $1,000,000 for division among the stockholders of the bank.

An investigation of the affairs of the company by experts for the stockholders last week showed that the loans of the concern to one company, the Ford Johnston Chair Company, amounted to more than $1,000,000.

Syracuse, N. Y., January 29.—James Madison Ellis, former banker and contractor, who a decade ago was one of the best known business men of New York state, died suddenly at his home to-day. He was 73 years old.

CONNECTICUT SAVINGS BANKS MAKE SIGNIFICANT REPORTS

Hartford, Conn., January 30.—The annual report of the bank commissioner of Connecticut, covering the twelve months to September 1, 1911, just filed with the governor, shows the total deposits of all savings banks of the state at that date to have been $288,157,527. The increase for the year was $12,315,158. Four per cent of the total deposits is $11,526,301. It will be seen, therefore, that savings bank deposits increased only $788,857 more than the regular savings bank interest for one year on the total deposits at the end of the year. Deducting the gain from the total deposits it appears that the deposits at the beginning of the year were $275,842,369. Four per cent of this is $11,033,694, which, deducted from the year's gain in deposits, leaves only $1,271,464 actual gain over the regular interest, allowing for no withdrawals of interest. The report shows that 88,836 new accounts were opened during the year, a decrease of 2,710, while 71,761 accounts were closed, an increase of 2,881.

The amount withdrawn during the year was $59,627,707, an increase of $536,197, while the amount deposited, including interest credited, was $71,942,865, an increase of $341,547. Another significant feature is the fact that the deposits of less than $1,000 each increased $1,709,899, to a total of $103,392,609, while deposits of between $2,000 and $10,000 each increased $6,424,517 to $101,865,968.

The Connecticut commissioner asks for legislation permitting him to employ competent accountants in order that bank examinations may be more frequent and complete and that savings bank directors be required to make during the year following the annual meeting an accurate trial balance of the depositors' ledgers, said balance to be taken under the direction of a competent accountant not in the employ of the bank, the president and treasurer to certify to the commissioner that such balance has been made and agrees with the daily balance sheet on such date.

ARRANGEMENTS MADE FOR LIQUIDATION

Portland.—The affairs of the defunct American Bank and Trust Company have been placed in charge of H. E. Albert, a special deputy of Bank Examiner Wright. The new banking law, passed by the last legislature, does away with the appointment of a receiver at large expense to the depositors, and places the distribution of the funds in the hands of the deputy, who is under a regular salary.

NEW CHATTANOOGA BANK OPEN

The American Trust and Banking Company, of Chattanooga, Tenn., one of the newest and biggest financial institutions in that state, is reported to have opened for business in handsome accommodations recently with H. S. Probasco, formerly president of the American National Bank of Chattanooga, as its president.

DEATH OF EDWIN HAWLEY

New York, February 1.—Edwin Hawley, chairman of the Memphis & St. Louis Railroad, and one of the leading railroad men in this country, died at his home here to-day after an illness of several weeks. He was a director in the Fort Dearborn National, Chicago.

NEW BANK LEGISLATION

Amending the state banking law or changing the entire policy of the state toward a recognized branch of banking is not a thing to be done hastily or without due consideration. Illinois has permitted the operation of private, uninspected banks within its limits much longer than the majority of the other states. Within the last year quite a number of legislatures passed restrictive amendments, among them being California, which penalizes unauthorized banking very severely. Delaware has restricted the use of even the word "trust," so that any corporation using that word in connection with banking must come under state supervision. Idaho amended her laws, making much better provision for regulation and for stricter examination. This was also done in Indiana. In Kansas even investment companies have been placed under supervision; and this part of the law is being enforced in a way that is expected to eradicate from that state the floatation of unsound securities. Missouri, which at one time prohibited private banking, now permits it in large cities, but the banker must have at least $10,000 capital, and be under state supervision. In New York state alone, no less than twenty new laws or amendments were passed affecting banking in some manner; most of them were amendments to the general law. The most far-reaching was a law regulating private banks, particularly those dealing with immigrants. A former law intended to prevent this kind of banking was declared null and void by the courts, and a new law was passed immediately. These new laws enacted within the past twelve months leave only four states in the Union in which any kind of banking can be conducted without state supervision. The new Pennsylvania law restricting private banking, went into effect December 1, 1911, but is being opposed in the courts by the private bankers of Philadelphia in a way which has tied up its administration for the present.

Nearly one-third of all the banks in the state of Illinois are private banks. Many of them are said to have remained private banks the better to evade the paying of taxes on the necessary capital involved. No doubt, a great many of the private bankers are just as honest and qualified to conduct their business as are the incorporated bankers. Many of them believe absolutely that, under the state constitution, they have the right to engage in the banking business without restraint. In the present issue of THE CHICAGO BANKER there will be found an article touching upon the right of the state to regulate or prevent private banking, which goes into the matter in detail, and which ought to be kept on file by every banker in the state, who is interested in the outcome of the present agitation. In another part of the paper will be found extracts printed from editorials in all of the leading

Chicago newspapers, commending unqualifiedly the movement on the part of the progressive members of the Illinois Bankers Association, headed by President B. F. Harris, for a new banking law. Each particular editor gives the reasons which appeal to him most strongly for supporting the movement, but in every Chicago paper where it has been mentioned at all, the paper has been in favor of a banking law placing all forms of banking, and the use of banking terms, under regulation by the state. The better to bring this about, it has been proposed to have a separate banking department in Illinois, such as they have in nearly all the other states of the Union. It will be the intention of THE CHICAGO BANKER to present fairly and fearlessly the arguments presented pro and con on the general subject of the proposed new banking law. Its columns will be open to any private banker who wishes to state his views and tell why he believes private banking should be exempt from state supervision and inspection, while state banks and national banks are subject to rigid supervision. There will be considerable contention and no little discussion all over the state on this subject. Every banker who has not heretofore fully made up his mind will do well to read everything that comes within his reach upon that subject. That the matter will be pushed until it appears before the state legislature has been fully decided upon. President Harris has said he will appoint a volunteer committee to prepare such a bill as is necessary. Under the Springfield resolution, a committee will be appointed to prepare a bill providing a separate banking department for the state. Those who are opposed to these changes in the laws will be quite active. Heretofore they have succeeded in killing in committee everything of a threatening nature which was offered before the state legislature. It is not expected that they will be able to repeat this, and when the matter comes before a committee of the legislature, public hearings will be held, at which the men, who have been active in opposing banking legislation will be expected to testify openly the nature of their opposition to what the other side believe to be necessary reforms.

GETTING A NATIONAL CHARTER

It is becoming increasingly difficult to obtain a national banking charter under the sane and wholesome regulations in force under Comptroller Murray. Many of the restrictions which he is enforcing by virtue of the powers of his office should be enacted into laws, so that a less efficient comptroller could not undo the work already accomplished. For a long time Mr. Murray has been able to stand off the professional bank promoters, who for several years had been perniciously active. They promoted banks for just what there was in it, and exploited communities for whatever they could get. Now the comptroller wishes to go a step further and require a paid-in surplus before the bank opens for business. The critical time in a new bank, so far as keeping its capital intact is concerned, comes within the first year or six months after it has opened. With a surplus of 25 per cent paid in, which is the custom in many places, the officers of the bank have greater liberty of operation without danger of an unexpected visit from the special trouble department of the comptroller's office. It is told upon good authority that there are always a great many banks just on the verge of capital impairment. This happens chiefly on account of the different ways banks have of doing their business. A protection against a near approach to this danger line would be a law requiring a reasonable surplus to be paid in along with the paid-up capital. The bankers should uphold the comptroller in what he is trying to do, for it is certain that it would bring about a condition of greater soundness in the banking community than could be attained in any other way. There always must be a small percentage of national banks out of accord with the comptroller's office. Much of this friction is caused by the narrow margin which bank directors leave between them and the point where a diminishment of capital is the only course. In the future banks will live up to the regulations of Comptroller Murray if they see fit, unless an opportunity is taken to embody in a national law a requirement, which will give soundness and confidence to the national system in places where banks have been somewhat lax about capital requirements. This would dispose of the real difficulty which the comptroller has always been called upon to face—that of having all banks in the system working under unimpaired capital with a reasonable surplus for losses and contingencies.

PROMOTION OF WILLIAM C. WHITE

Every progressive banker in the state of Illinois, and many outside of those sacred precincts, will be glad to learn of the promotion of William C. White to the presidency of the Illinois National Bank at Peoria. Mr. White is of the younger generation of bankers who banded together a few years ago to give Illinois a taste of some of the good things enjoyed by surrounding states. He was one of the earliest workers in favor of the group system, which was opposed by the same votes which only last week went on record as against bank supervision. The Peoria group is No. 2, and was organized in spite of the executive council of the Illinois Bankers Association, but came in with the other groups as soon as the system was adopted.

Upon the death of President Trefzger last week, the citizens and business men of Peoria at once expressed the conviction that there was no other logical successor except the popular young cashier, who had been a life-long friend and companion of the deceased president. Mr. White had worked with Mr. Trefzger ever since the organization of the bank, and was responsible for many of its policies; he saw it grow to its present high rank in the state, and no man in Peoria enjoyed the unanimous friendship of the business public to a greater extent than did Mr. White. He was born and reared in Peoria; he is a graduate of her public schools. He started in as a messenger boy in the old Commercial National, and has been actively engaged in the banking business ever since.

When the Illinois National was organized, he became its assistant cashier. No man ever came to a position better qualified by experience and training than Mr. White is qualified for the position of president of the Illinois National Bank.

OPPOSED TO THE RESERVE ASSOCIATION PLAN

To the Editor: After a study of nearly four years, Senator Aldrich's committee has perfected its monetary bill, and presented it to congress for consideration, as it was in duty bound to do. But why the large bankers make the futile attempt, as the papers state, of raising a one million dollar fund [?—Ed.] for the purpose of educating and enlisting the people to support the passage of this plan is a mystery. Is it not the fact, that now, more than ever, trusts, combinations and concentrations are obnoxious to our people who denounce them as the most dangerous evil? Has not public opinion forced the administration to take legal steps to disintegrate nearly all combinations and large business interests stifling competition? So far banking is nearly the only large interest which is not yet corralled by combination. Each bank stands independent, competing with each other bank, just what the law and the people demand. And now they too are invited to combine and centralize and form what some claim would be the strongest money power on earth. But, it is said, this power will not benefit the banks alone, but all the people as well. That is just what all trust magnates claim is the effect of combination, but the people don't believe in it, don't want it, and demand the disintegration of those now existing.

Under these conditions can any one expect a legislator to vote for a measure, which is so unpopular with all the people, regardless of party? How any one can have the temerity and hope to successfully defy the people is beyond my comprehension. Of course the bill has not the remotest chance of passage, and therefore, I shall only briefly review and criticise it.

The whole plan, ostensibly proposed to strengthen our banking system, and to prevent bank panics, will only weaken the system and precipitate panics. It teems with expansion and inflation, which have always engendered suspicion, fear and panics. The bank notes issued under it will not be secured by United States bonds deposited in trust with the United States treasurer, as now, but by one-third legal money and two-thirds commercial paper but not deposited in trust with the United States treasurer. No one will believe them as safe as our present bank notes, but as a second cousin to our lamented wild-cat currency, and therefore, they will create suspicion where none exists now. The central bank will offer its banks a ready source by which they can get deeper into debt, which always arouses suspicion and destroys confidence. As Comptroller Eckels said in his report on the greatest panic we ever had, 1893, on page 24: "No system, no matter how elastic, or volume of currency however large, could have offered relief, as long as confidence is wanting. Hoarding will go on and additional issues will only add to the hoarding."

Our business is done on 5 per cent cash as against 95 per cent credit, which means confidence. Therefore the most effective method is to conserve confidence. We have never had, and never will have, bank runs due to an insufficiency of currency, but rather to an insufficiency of confidence. This is the only weak spot in our whole banking system. If that is secured nothing else is wanting to make our independent banking system the best and safest on earth.

You say, it is easy to criticise, but where is the remedy? Now then, the only, the easiest, and the surest way we can gain and maintain the confidence of depositors in banks, and entirely prevent bank panics, is to assure the depositors that when banks do fail, as some of the 25,000 banks will, it will not effect the safety of depositors any more than the safety of the failed bank notes, and the latter are not now affected under our present system. This is clearly proven by bank failures in Oklahoma and Texas, where the insurance of deposits has been tried for three years. Never has a depositor there lost a dollar, nor has there been the least disturbance or runs on banks by such failures.

The history of our nearly 50 years of national banking has shown that the average yearly loss to depositors has been only about one million dollars, and if all banks had been assessed only fifty cents on each $1,000 deposits per year, no depositor would have lost a penny, and even this assessment would not have been necessary if the government had charged the bank in which it deposited its surplus only 2 per cent interest on such deposits and used them as an insurance fund. This would be more than ample to pay all deposit losses, and in this way the insurance of the deposits would need not cost the banks anything.

In the panic of 1907 the government loaned or deposited to different banks up to two hundred and fifty million dollars, without interest. At two per cent interest this would have brought an income of $5,000,000. Why revolutionize our entire banking system by introducing a most complicated and intricate plan which would be weaker than the present and would arouse the suspicion of the people? Why not rather adopt a plan, which will strike at the root of the evil, and that is—to create an insurance fund by which all depositors shall be insured? Such plan would be most popular, easy of adoption, without disturbance, leave all banks independent, and give more equal opportunities than the plan proposed in the monetary bill.

NEW YORK CITY SAVINGS BANKS

A compilation of the returns to the state banking department of the savings banks in New York City shows that the increase in deposits during the year was little greater than the amount of interest credited to depositors. The increase was $334,368,811, or slightly over 4 per cent. This disappointing showing seems to be attributable entirely to the advanced cost of living.

The thirty-one savings banks in this city now have deposits aggregating $842,112,555. The largest in point of deposits is the Emigrants Industrial Savings Bank with total deposits of $114,734,146.

NAMES BANK COMMISSIONER

Governor Foss, of Massachusetts, has sent to the executive council the nomination of Augustus L. Thorndike of Brewster to be bank commissioner in place of Arthur B. Chapin, who resigned to accept a vice-presidency with the American Trust Company, and who has been acting commissioner since January 15th at the governor's request.

Mr. Thorndike served as president of the Winnisimmet National Bank of Chelsea before it was placed under another name and was the first president of the Boston Co-operative Bank

H. M. Campbell has announced that he has resigned his position as secretary and also director of the Peoples Savings and Trust Company, of Columbus, to take the position of cashier of the new German Guaranty Trust Company of Indianapolis. The Indianapolis company will not be ready for business for about six weeks, but Mr. Campbell will go there to assist in the preliminary work as soon as some one is found for the vacancy here.

Articles of incorporation have been filed for the Aetna Trust and Savings Company with an authorized capital stock of $1,000,000, divided into ten thousand shares of $100 each. The directors are: Winfield Miller, John Wocher, August M. Kuhn, Lynn B. Millikan, William F. Wocher, John W. Schmidt and James F. Joseph. The officers are: President, Winfield Miller; vice-president John Wocher; second vice-president, Lynn B. Millikan; treasurer, August M. Kuhn; secretary, William F. Wocher; assistant secretary, Thomas B. Fulmer. The incorporators are the directors and Thomas B. Fulmer, Harry Miesse and J. L. Shields. The board of directors, at present consisting of seven members, will be increased to fifteen before the company opens for business.

Clarence C. Cowgill, manager of the supply department of the Fletcher American National Bank, has been appointed assistant national bank examiner under George Q. Biegler, national bank examiner for central Indiana, and Harry A. Scholtzhauer, national bank examiner for southern Indiana. Mr. Cowgill has resigned his position at the bank and will take up his new duties at the Indiana national bank examiners' headquarters February 5th. Mr. Cowgill was connected with the American National Bank in various capacities for many years, and at the time of the merger of that bank with the Fletcher National Bank, was placed in charge of the supply department.

The First National Bank of Lebanon has declared another dividend of ten per cent on the Lebanon National Bank stock. This is the fifth in number, the first being for twenty-five per cent and the other four being for ten per cent each, or 65 per cent in all. The bank is well pleased with the way matters have been shaping themselves. While settlements have not been as rapid as it wished, it is gratifying that no great disturbance of business conditions has been so far brought about by settlements. Final liquidation will be consummated as quickly as possible, consistent with the policy settled on by the bank.—Lebanon Patriot.

Three more indictments have been returned against William H. Taber, former president of the American State Bank, which recently failed. One of the indictments charges Taber with the embezzlement of $2,529.79 from Terre Haute Lodge No. 1, Independent Order of Odd Fellows; another the embezzlement of $250 from the bank. The third indictment is in two counts and charges overdraft by a bank official.

Evans Woollen, of the Fletcher American National Bank, and Henry Eitel, of the Indiana National Bank, spoke before the Indianapolis Credit Men's Association Monday night at the Denison hotel, in favor of the Aldrich plan of monetary and banking reform. On behalf of this plan they advanced many of the arguments already made familiar by former Senator Aldrich, in his recent speech in Indianapolis. Their presentation of the matter was so satisfactory to the credit men that they voted to indorse the Aldrich plan, and instructed their secretary, John A. Ross, to notify the National Credit Men's Association of the action of the local branch.

CHICAGO CHAPTER BANQUET

The eleventh annual banquet of the Chicago Chapter of the American Institute of Banking, held in the red room of the La Salle Hotel, Saturday evening, January 27th, was eminently a success. There were about one hundred and twenty-five persons present. During the progress of the dinner the banqueters were very pleasantly entertained by selections rendered by the Oxford quartette. In the programs which were found on every table, the words of several of the popular songs of the day were printed. These songs were sung by the quartette at frequent intervals, the diners joining in with them.

Very interesting talks were given by George M. Reynolds, president of the Continental and Commercial National, David Kinley, Ph. D., L.L.D., dean of the University of Illinois; Hon. Marcus Kavanagh, judge of the appellate court, and Rev. Wm. White Wilson, rector of St. Mark's church.

Mr. Reynolds talked to the members of the Institute about the benefit of study to bank clerks, and told many incidents of his own banking experience. He spoke of the value of institute work; he stated that it elevated the ethics of the banking profession; that it made young men more efficient and fitted them to assume responsible positions later on in their careers; that it gave young men an opportunity for social intercourse with one another and gave them a chance to meet, discuss and give their opinions on live subjects. Mr. Reynolds said: "Every one of you men in his own capacity is just as important to the work of the bank as is the president or cashier, and the clerk who enters on his daily task with interest and enthusiasm is bound to rise, for nothing can keep him down. Hard persistent work and patient application cannot fail to count in the end." The speaker also told of how he was present at the meeting of the American Bankers Association when it was proposed to organize the American Institute of Banking. He told how an appropriation of $10,000 was made to carry on the work. He said that it was feared at that time that such an appropriation would have to be made every year, but that such was not the case, as practically every chapter in the country was self-sustaining. One of the arguments urged against the formation of such an association at that time was that it would develop into a labor organization and would be used as a weapon against the banks. That such has not been the case, goes without saying.

The next speaker on the program was Dr. David Kinley, dean of the University of Illinois, who spoke on the "Responsibilities of a Banker." Dr. Kinley insisted that high standards of efficiency should be the aim of every banker. Bankers are in a position to set standards of efficiency, honesty, ability, etc., to all the rest of the business community, because they come in contact with all kinds of business. A bank should not be run merely in the interest of the stockholders, but it should also be run with the idea of serving the public interests, the primary purpose for which it was established. A banker should be familiar not only with the financial condition in all parts of his own country, but with that in foreign countries; he should be able to tell the rates for securities all over the world, what their value is, etc., so when a client comes to him and asks advice regarding some foreign investment, the banker will be able to give him intelligent advice on the subject. Dr. Kinley pointed out that a customer's estimate of a bank is gained from the impression he gains from coming in contact with the tellers, and men who wait on the public generally; that it was therefore necessary that these men should be high grade, efficient employees.

Following Dr. Kinley was Judge Kavanagh, who gave a very forceful and interesting talk on "The Citizen's Part in the Administration of Justice." Ten thousand homicides were committed in the United States last year. Of this number but one hundred and three paid the extreme penalty for their crimes. Eliminating the number of helpless negroes, who were executed in the South, and some of whom were never guilty, but fifty persons suffered death as a penalty for their crimes. In Chicago two hundred and two persons were murdered with no executions in return. The judge attributed this deplorable state of affairs to the fact that the average American citizen has an innate aversion for jury service. "The law can rise no higher than the conscience of our average citizen," said the speaker. Many citizens are excused from serving on juries because they say they are opposed to capital punishment. They are responsible in a way for the frequent miscarriages of justice and for the fact that the law has fallen into disrepute, and the criminal classes have ceased to respect it. "In my opinion the greatest punishment that can be meted out to murderers is imprisonment for life, but I also believe that the death penalty is the greatest deterrent of crime." The speaker characterized those who oppose capital punishment as "mush-headed ladies and gentlemen."

The Rev. William White Wilson spoke in regard to the unlimited opportunities there are to-day for a young man to do great things; that all that is required is persistency; that the fellow who is everlastingly working away at a thing, regardless of disappointments and obstacles, is the man who is going to get there in the end; that there is always hope for the man who is courageous in the heat of battle, and who is never willing to admit that he is vanquished. He said concentration of thought was absolutely essential to success in any line. He cited an instance of a young man whom he knew in Pennsylvania. This young fellow was famed for his remarkable accuracy. It is said that he never added up a column of figures more than once. One time in having his bank book balanced up, the Rev. Mr. Wilson thought he discovered a mistake, whereby he had credit for $32 more in the bank than he really had. He took the book back to this young man and asked him to go over it again because he had made a mistake. The young fellow indignantly refused to do this, stating that he never went over anything but once, and that he never made a mistake. Failing to prevail upon him to make a second inspection of the work, Mr. Wilson went back to his study and leisurely went over the account; he discovered that the young man was right. When asked for the reason of this astonishing accuracy, the young man said that he had made it a rule all his life that when he did a thing, he banished all other thoughts from his mind and thought only of the thing which he was doing; that he made up his mind that he never was going over this work again, and that he was determined that he would be accurate the first time.

Delegates from the Boston, Milwaukee and Cincinnati chapters of the Institute were present and made short talks. A telegram was received from the Philadelphia Chapter, in which they sent best wishes for the success of the banquet of the Chicago boys.

George F. Bainbridge, a member of the Institute, and one of the men who promoted the theatrical performance given by the chapter last November, rendered two very pleasing selections, which were loudly applauded by his fellow members. J. L. Ponik, a character comedian, gave a very pleasing entertainment.

CUBA CHAPTER REPRESENTED IN PRESS AND PUBLICITY COMMITTEE

The American Institute of Banking has made special recognition of Cuba in its work by appointing William H. Morales, secretary of the National Bank of Cuba, as a member of the Press and Publicity Committee of the association.

The appointment comes as a result of the active campaign which has been waged by Raymond W. Cox, president of the institute, who has recently been transferred from Baltimore to New York City, where the headquarters of the organization are situated.

Cuba Chapter has shown great activity since its creation in Havana two years ago, under the presidency of Herman Olavarria, cashier of the National Bank of Cuba, who has brought his strong personal influence to bear on the work, and obtained the aid of his institution in the way of a handsome hall as the headquarters of the chapter.

SAN FRANCISCO CHAPTER

Frank B. Anderson, president of the Bank of California, N. A., delivered an address last Wednesday evening before the members of the San Francisco Chapter of the American Institute of Banking on the Aldrich currency plan, discussing the various aspects of the plan from the standpoint of the banker in an informal manner. His talk followed the same lines as his more formal presentation of the matter at the recent convention of the American Bankers Association at New Orleans. The social feature of the evening was the presentation of a silver loving-cup to the bowling team of the Anglo and London Paris National Bank, which won the trophy in the recent bowling tournament. Individual cups and cash prizes were also bestowed to the members of the team for their good work and high scores.

CENTRAL WEST LETTER

By EDGAR P. ALLEN

Omaha

Bank clearings in the Central West have presented a very encouraging aspect during the past few weeks, some of the larger cities showing substantial gains over the same period a year ago. Although Kansas City is still behind last year's record for this time of year, it is not as far in arrears as was shown by the clearing house reports of last fall, and the early winter. The last report shows a decrease of 2 per cent, which is narrowing the margin to a material extent. Kansas City holds its place as sixth in the list of American cities, even though Pittsburgh, its immediate rival, is enjoying a steady gain over its own record. Omaha shows a very favorable report with 5 per cent gain over the same time a year ago, and seems to have a safe lead over its nearest rivals. St. Joseph, Mo., is making a somewhat remarkable record, the last statement showing that it has gained more than 22 per cent over last year, and this gain is only the continuation of splendid business during the past year. In fact while other Central West cities were fluctuating wildly from week to week the banks of St. Joseph were doing a normal business on a steady basis. In Wichita and Fort Worth the clearings have not held up as well as usual, although the general record for the past few months is highly satisfactory.

Banking Conditions Improving

Banking conditions in the Central West continue to improve, and it is the prediction of Walton H. Holmes, president of the pioneer Trust Company of Kansas City, that the coming year will witness a complete restoration of business in this territory. "I believe that all factors entering into the business life of this part of the country are combining for a prosperous year," said Mr. Holmes. "We have had rather an unfortunate year on account of the drouth of a year ago, which continued until late in the past summer. But this winter has been excellent for wheat, and the ground is in fine condition for spring planting. Of course it is still too early to make definite predictions, but I can say that the outlook is most favorable. From the best information I can obtain I consider the banks of this territory in good shape with no cause for uneasiness anywhere. Of course we look with concern toward the East. The political activity is reflected in the feelings of the people. But there is no real cause for uneasiness in this part of the country. We are doing well."

Reserves Well Up

Recently the comptroller of the currency published a complaint that many of the national banks of the country were loaning beyond the reserve point. This has led to some inquiry among the banks, both national and state, of the Central West with reference to legal reserve, and a gratifying situation was developed. In reserve cities the law requires that national banks keep 25 per cent of their deposits in cash and sight exchange always on hand. This is supposed to be an insurance against unsound banking. In practically all of the national and state banks in this territory the reserve is nearer forty, and in many cases almost 50 per cent of the deposits. Some of these banks might be criticised for excess of caution, which keeps profits down to too low a point, but safety is the main idea with most of these institutions, and they are willing to sacrifice dividends to that end.

American Union Trust Still Unsettled

The complicated affairs of the American Union Trust Company of Kansas City, which took over the All Day and Night Bank of Kansas City last summer and failed as a consequence, have not been settled. For more than three weeks the Missouri banking department officials have been at work in an effort to pay off the depositors and promises have been made for settlements on various dates, but there have been no satisfactory results. On Tuesday last officers of the trust company met with John Swanger, bank commissioner of Missouri, and an announcement was given to the press that only a matter of $10,000 stood between the depositors and a settlement. During the past few days the officers of the defunct bank have been negotiating with a number of outsiders with a view to refinancing the company and paying the bank's obligations. The Commerce Trust Company of Kansas City, it is said, is willing to assist in making a settlement. When the trust company failed the bank department owed depositors $214,000. Of this amount the bank commissioner has collected $100,000 and since then the directors have been trying to raise the rest. There seems to be good reason to believe that some basis of settlement will be reached very soon, and that a receivership will not be resorted to.

Interesting Questions Discussed at Meeting

The County Treasurers Association of Nebraska met in Omaha the latter part of last week and several subjects were discussed of special interest to bankers. On the opening day President Hevelone, treasurer of Gage county, told of the test case now in the supreme court of Nebraska to determine the validity of the amendment passed in 1911 to the bank guarantee law, providing that banks operating under the guarantee law, in which county funds are deposited, need not give the county any special security for the funds. A Gage county bank, named as a county depository by the county board, made a demand on Mr. Hevelone for a deposit. Mr. Hevelone refused on the ground that a law passed in 1891 provides that the bank shall give security and the law of 1911 did not expressly repeal the law of 1891. The bank brought mandamus proceedings and the district court sustained its contention. Mr. Hevelone appealed the case to the supreme court, in the meantime making the deposit as ordered by the district court.

"All the other banks are giving the security pending the settlement of this case," said Mr. Hevelone. "We want to know just where we stand, for we could be held personally liable for losses on deposits made in compliance with the 1911 law, if that law is not good."

Frank A. Furry, of Douglas county, advocated the exemption from taxation of county, municipal and school district bonds, and told of the fruitless efforts that had been made to get such a law passed. "Exemption of these bonds," he said, "would broaden the bond market, keep money at home and encourage home investment. The school teachers of the state save their money and would rather invest it in bonds of their home county than keep it in the bank at 2 per cent interest, were it not for the fact that they are taxed 2 per cent on such bonds. Farmers and workingmen would also buy the bonds. At present many are hoarding their money. Between $50,000 and $60,000 has been brought out of socks, cans and jars to be placed in the new postal savings bank of Omaha. The state, counties and cities would not notice the difference in revenue if the tax were removed, for the majority will not return their bonds for taxation. I'll venture to say that not over $200,000 worth of bonds are taxed in all Nebraska and that fully $200,000,000 worth are owned in the state. It's the same way with money. In the banks of Omaha are between $55,000,000 and $60,000,000 and only about $200,000 of it is returned for taxation."

Delinquent Corporations

Federal authorities in Nebraska, Kansas, Missouri and Oklahoma are having a very hard time of it just now in their attempts to round up delinquent corporations that have not reported the status of their business for the year 1911. In Oklahoma there were about 2,000 such delinquent corporations. Prosecutions were so vigorous in Nebraska that at the end of the year 1911 there were only a few hundred delinquents and in Kansas the record is almost as good. This is one of the hardest of all federal statutes to enforce in the Central West territory and thus far the authorities have been very lenient with offenders.

Topeka Case Settled

The troubles of the Aetna Building and Loan Association of Topeka have been settled. This is the second largest financial institution in the state and trouble within the association has been brewing for six months on account of the alleged unbusiness-like methods used by some of the officers and employees. The association has 17,000 stockholders and an entirely new board of directors has been agreed upon by both factions. The new directors are: H. S. Emerson, Britton, Okla.; W. H. Eastman, Topeka; Matt. Weightman, Topeka; W. F. MacFerran, Topeka, and J. L. Rains, Perry, Kan. In all probability Mr. Emerson will be elected president. J. N. Dolley, bank commissioner of Kansas, has been very active in the affairs of the institution.

Central West Notes

J. B. Snead, the Amarillo, Tex., banker who shot and killed Captain A. C. Boyce in Fort Worth two weeks ago, has been released on $35,000 bond. Boyce's son eloped with Snead's wife several months ago and Snead's attorneys say they will show a conspiracy between the father and son.

J. E. Jarvis, president of the Cowley County Bank of Winfield, Kan., has purchased the Baden Mill of that place which is one of the oldest and most successful milling plants in Kansas.

C. A. Brower, vice-president of the Puget Sound Savings Bank of Tacoma, Wash., with his wife spent several days recently in Kansas City visiting Mrs. Brower's father, N. J. Hall. In 1892 Mr. Brower entered the National Bank of Commerce of Kansas City as telephone boy. He has many acquaintances among the business men and bankers of Kansas City.

Henry G. Goll, former assistant cashier of the First National Bank of Milwaukee, has been released from the federal prison at Leavenworth on parole. He spent the same time behind prison bars that Frank G. Bigelow, president of the same bank, served—nearly six years of a ten years' sentence.

Springfield, Mo., is to have a fourteenth bank. It will be known as the Drovers Bank and will have $50,000 capital.

A. J. Russell, whose death has been reported from Los Angeles, was formerly in the banking business in Wichita, Kan. He was connected with the Kansas National Bank of that city for twenty-five years, much of the time in the capacity of receiving teller.

The annual meeting of the Bankers Deposit Guarantee and Surety Company of Kansas held its annual meeting in Topeka last week. The report for 1911 showed that the company's net earnings were $30,000. The company was organized to insure the deposit of state and national banks. About forty bankers from outside of Topeka were present.

W. T. Watson, assistant bank commissioner of Kansas, has resigned to enter business. His successor has not been named.

Cracksmen blew the safe of the First National Bank of Woodville, Okla., the night of January 24th, securing loot to the value of $2,400. No arrests have been made. In attempting to install a new safe in the bank the next day, M. U. Ayres, cashier of the bank, suffered a broken leg.

Among the visitors to Kansas City's financial section last week were: John R. Mulvane, of Topeka, president of the Bank of Topeka; T. J. Sweeney, vice-president of the Peoples National Bank, Lawrence, Kan.; H. K. Givens, president of the Farmers and Merchants Bank of Fayette, Mo.; J. H. Gasson, vice-president of the Peoples State National Bank of Custer City, Okla.; W. E. Haines, vice-president of the Bank of Commerce, Alva, Okla.; C. H. Snyder, cashier of the Manufacturers National Bank of Leavenworth, Kan.; W. S. Huston, cashier of the Wood & Huston Bank, Marshall, Mo.; W. A. Sanford, vice-president of the Joplin Trust Company, Joplin, Mo.; J. W. Leponin, cashier of the Climax State Bank, Climax, Kan.; John T. Mitchell, president of the Bank of Centralia, Mo.; R. H. Hazlett, president of the El Dorado National Bank, El Dorado, Kan.; John A. Cragin, president of the First National Bank, Joplin, Mo.; G. T. Meehan, cashier of the Farmers Bank, Norborne, Mo.; W. I. Thompson, cashier of the Bank of Blue Springs, Mo., and "Coin" Harvey, who gained his title on account of the financial book he wrote during Bryan's first campaign. He now lives at Monte Ne, Ark.

UP-TO-DATE TRUST COMPANY WORK

The recent exchange of over $85,000,000 of American Tobacco Company bonds for bonds and cash of the Liggett & Myers Tobacco Company, and P. Lorillard Co. was accomplished with remarkable precision and dispatch. The Guaranty Trust Company of New York, which has had charge of the reorganization plan approved by the circuit court, paid out in cash in less than two weeks over $50,000,000, in addition to the bonds and stock which were exchanged for American Tobacco Company securities. This was all done very promptly and with absolute accuracy, so that in spite of the enormous amount involved the books balance to a cent.

The exchange of securities made necessary by this reorganization plan involved the signing of several hundred thousand separate personal signatures, all of which had to be affixed within a few days. This was accomplished by the use of the new signograph machine, which enables one man to reproduce his own signature eighteen times with one operation. Every one of the several thousand transactions produced fractions, which multiplied the intricacies several fold. These fractions were eliminated by the simple method of purchasing or selling the fractional shares.

Preparations for the enormous amount of detail involved in this reorganization were made by the trust company several weeks in advance. Mathematical tables were prepared showing the exact amount of bonds, scrip, and cash exchangeable for the various amounts held by security holders of the American Tobacco Company. Blank forms by the score, exclusively for this reorganization, were invented and printed, and every effort made to cut corners and facilitate the rapid progress of the work. Because of this ample preparation it was possible, with no greater delay than attends the ordinary transfer of stock, to make the exchange of approximately $85,-

The rapidity and accuracy with which this reorganization was consummated by the Guaranty Trust Company of New York is significant comment on the efficiency of the well organized modern trust company, and its ability to readily adapt itself to the largest and most complex propositions.

Northwest Letter

Banking news from Minneapolis—St. Paul financial center, and surrounding States, compiled by J. Edwards Smith

A. V. Ostrom, three years an assistant cashier, was, on Tuesday, elected cashier of the Northwestern National Bank, to succeed F. L. Holton, resigned to go into business. S. H. Plummer, chief clerk, and H. J. Riley, paying teller, were made assistant cashiers, succeeding E. L. Mattson, resigned to be cashier of the Scandinavian-American National, and Mr. Ostrom, promoted.

Mr. Plummer has been in banking fourteen years, starting with the Bank of Minneapolis, and for thirteen years he has been with the Northwestern National. Mr. Riley was paying teller with the National Bank of Commerce, when absorbed by the Northwestern, while Mr. Ostrom was with the Swedish American National.

Refused Entrance to Graduating Exercises

W. F. McLane, cashier of the Hennepin County Savings Bank, is one of the indignant parents who did not see their children graduate at the West High School last week. Mr. McLane and other fathers were shut out because the auditorium was full before they got there. The parents stood on the fringe of a crowd at the door and waved tickets in vain. Although identification was waived by the door tenders, city ordinances as to standing room had to be observed whether an occasional parent missed the event of their children's lives or not. Mr. McLane's indignant attitude, coupled with the indignant attitude of other fathers and mothers, may result in a complete overhauling of the system of pulling off grade and high school graduations. "I got there at five minutes of 3 o'clock, the hour," said Mr. McLane regretfully. "I could have gone out at noon if I had thought it necessary."

Ditch Bonds Safe

Minnesota's little hoard of $2,700,000 ditch bonds in the permanent trust funds is safe, following a supreme court decision about a suit in Roseau county. A taxpayer sued the county commissioners to restrain sale of the bonds on the ground that he would have to pay interest and receive no benefit because the ditch is in another part of the county. These bonds were indirectly held valid obligations of the county, the court holding them to be valid general obligations of the state. The county recoups itself by assessing benefited property.

Editor Charged with Criminal Libel

Officials of the Dakota County State Bank of Lakeville, Minn., obtained a warrant from the county attorney, charging Ham Clay, editor of the Dakota County Tribune, of Farmington, Minn., with criminal libel. According to W. A. Sanels, assistant cashier, Clay printed a statement in December that a bank in Lakeville was in financial jeopardy, not giving a name; and there is but one bank. The charge was made, further, that Clay the next week charged that a cashier of a bank of that section of the county was playing the market, giving absolution by name to all other banks. Two weeks later the statement was printed, the complainant says, that Lakeville needs a new bank and in conversation the editor advised withdrawal of deposits from the particular bank because of unsafe conditions. The bank officer says that the attacks are because the bank did not print its annual statement in the Tribune. When the paper did not get the contract, the complainant says, Clay published a statement that the bank had its report printed in Hastings, twenty-five miles away, to cover its condition.

Legal Bank Decision

Decision of the lower court in the case of F. G. Wasgett, executor, appellant, against the First National of Blue Earth, Minn., is affirmed by the supreme court of the state as follows:

A check on a bank in which the drawer has funds subject to check is an assignment of such funds of the drawer to the amount of the check, which assignment is complete as between the drawer and payee when the check is given, and complete as between the payee or holder and the bank when the check is presented for payment. Upon such presentation the bank, unless its right to pay has been taken away by some occurrence before presentation, is legally bound to pay the check.

Theory of New Credits Tax Law

Suit to determine the new credits tax law of Minnesota has been brought by a Winona institution. The theory is that the statute of 1911 is a new law covering the entire subject, and therefore none of the old provisions of the statute relating to the taxation of that kind of property is now applicable unless expressly referred to; even if the old statute has not been discarded, it is, as applied to the new system, unconstitutional under the amendment of 1906, commonly known as the "wide-open tax amendment;" and the new law in its classification follows this 1906 amendment, and consequently is constitutional.

The fact that the old law yielded the state only $13,919,806 in 1910, while the new one brought in $115,481,807 in 1911, is cited in the brief.

Former Congressman Bonyng is still speaking in Minnesota and will make a return talk at St. Paul in the near future under auspices of the Association of Commerce

Two state banks at McGregor, N. D., on the new line of the Great Northern road, have consolidated. The McGregor State bought the First State, continuing under the first name. The First was one of the Tallman line of banks. The other bank was owned by W. D. McClintock and W. C. McClintock of Rugby, N. D., and E. R. Reitsch of Rockford, Ill.

Increase in business was reported at the annual meeting of the Savings Bank of Minneapolis, when President Adam Hannah was re-elected. Bela W. Smith and Ketil Stensrud were returned as vice-presidents and Edward Matteson as treasurer. Directors were re-elected also.

EMBEZZLER ARRESTED

Boston, Mass.—His love for the clarinet, which brought him to the New England Conservatory of Music to study, led to the arrest last week of Sidney E. Balcom of Rocky Ford, Col., who, the police say, admitted that he embezzled $1,250 from the First National Bank there, of which he was teller. The police say that Balcom, who is 23 years old, disappeared with $250 in gold and one thousand silver dollars of the bank's funds last November. When he was arrested while practicing on the clarinet at a conservatory of music dormitory he said, according to the police, that he gave $800 of the money to a taxicab chauffeur, who drove him home one night. Balcom says he will not resist extradition.

ILLINOIS BANKER DEAD

Galesburg, Ill., January 31.—Albert D. Metcalf, president of the Oneida State Bank, died last night of apoplexy.

San Antonio, Tex.—J. M. Bennett, Sr., has been chosen president, R. J. Kleberg and E. B. Carruth vice-presidents, J. M. Bennett, Jr., treasurer and James Anderson secretary of the new Standard Trust Company. The institution is capitalized at $250,000.

Philadelphia

A dinner in honor of Effingham B. Morris, president of the Girard Trust Company, was given last week by Joseph Moore, Jr., president of the National Bank of Northern Liberties. The ostensible purpose of the dinner was to entertain the members of the clearing house committee, but the spirit of the occasion was to offer a testimonial of the high esteem which the bankers felt for Mr. Morris who represents the trust companies in the clearing house.

Among the guests were the following bank presidents, who constitute the clearing house committee: Levi L. Rue, Philadelphia National; Francis B. Reeves, Girard; S. S. Sharp, Penn; Howard W. Lewis, Farmers and Mechanics; J. Tatnall Lea, First; J. R. McAllister, Franklin; Effingham B. Morris, Girard Trust, and Joseph Moore, Jr., National Bank of Northern Liberties.

Samuel Y. Heebner has been elected president of the Philadelphia Trust, Safe Deposit and Insurance Company in place of Roland L. Taylor, who recently resigned from that position. John Story Jenks will remain vice-president.

With the opening on Monday of the new West Philadelphia Bank, the city's latest financial institution, the large and growing business and residential section west of the Schuylkill river has come into possession of its first open at night bank. From 7 to 10:30 o'clock on Monday, Thursday and Saturday nights the doors of the new bank will remain open in order that check and savings depositors may make deposits after the usual banking hours. The West Philadelphia Bank has a capital of $100,000, and a surplus of $25,000. The officers are: President, J. Milton Lutz, first vice-president of the First National Bank of Clifton Heights, and a former member of the state legislature from Delaware county; first vice-president, Frank H. Benham, president of the real estate brokerage firm of William J. Benham, Inc., 5146 Market Street; second vice-president, Harry J. Rittenhouse, proprietor of a chain of meat and provision stores in West Philadelphia; cashier, Jan Van Herwensen.

A special meeting of Equitable Trust Company stockholders has been called for February 8th, to vote on a proposition to merge with the Continental Trust Company. Directors of both institutions have already approved the proposition. T. M. Daly, president of the Continental, has been chosen president of the new combination; John M. Campbell, William F. Harritty, John McGlinn, Jeremiah J. Sullivan and John R. Umsted, vice-presidents; John F. Skelley, secretary-treasurer; Frank J. Johann and John V. Loughney, assistants to secretary-treasurer; John H. Connellan, title officer, with Alfred Harris, Jr., assistant; C. Percy Wilcox, trust officer. The name of the new company will be the Continental-Equitable Title and Trust Company; the capital will be $1,000,000 and surplus, $1,000,000. The undivided profits are to be determined by auditors and accountants.

Shareholders of the Northern National Bank will hold a special meeting on February 27th to vote on a proposed increase in the number of directors.

The Southwark National Bank will make extensive alterations to its banking house at 610 South Second Street. The building will be enlarged and new safe deposit vaults installed.

Directors of the Philadelphia Trust, Safe Deposit and Insurance Company have elected Samuel Y. Heebner president of the company to succeed Roland L. Taylor, who resigned recently.

The Fourth Street National has been appointed reserve agent for the Farmers National of Belleville, Pa.

EXPERT NECESSARY

Windsor Locks, Conn., January 31.—That it will be two months and possibly longer before the condition of the Windsor Locks Savings Bank is determined, is the substance of a statement made by C. F. Cleveland, its treasurer. Both Mr. Cleveland and President George Glover say that they nor any one else can tell whether or not there will be a shortage until the books of the bank have been gone over by an expert.

The bank, against which a restraining order was issued by the courts Saturday, at the request of the state banking commission, had on September 1, 1911, assets of $420,247.56, with deposits of $403,816.78.

Attention was first drawn to the bank when the bank commissioners ascertained that there had been no trial balance taken since business was begun in 1871. The death of Alfred W. Converse, for 40 years treasurer, who accidentally shot himself, was also an indirect factor to the investigation.

Many of the bank's depositors are employees of the local mills, but other than going to the bank and asking for their money and departing in an orderly manner when the situation was explained to them, there has been no excitement.

The Union Trust Company, Detroit, Mich., is to increase its capital stock from $500,000 to $1,000,000.

Pacific Northwest Banking News

Spokane, January 30.—Trustees of the Spokane Chamber of Commerce elected R. Insinger, manager of the Northwestern and Pacific Hypothekebank, president of the organization at an adjourned meeting on January 24th, to succeed Edwin T. Coman, president of the Exchange National Bank, who served a year. Mr. Insinger has been actively identified with the chamber since coming to Spokane. He served as vice-president, chairman of the finance committee and a member of the publicity committee for several years. He also served as chairman of the board of control of the National Irrigation Congress at the convention in Spokane in 1909, also as chairman of the board of governors at the Chicago convention in 1911, when he was elected first vice-president. Mr. Insinger is supported by a board of 20 members, representative of the commercial and industrial interests of Spokane. The organization has 1,100 members and its expenditures amount to $100,000 a year. A. F. McClaine, president of the Traders National Bank, was elected treasurer of the chamber, succeeding Thomas H. Brewer, president of the Fidelity National Bank.

Twentieth Anniversary of Old National

D. W. Twohy, president of the Old National of Spokane, has received many congratulations on the twentieth anniversary of the institution. Starting on January 15, 1892, with deposits of $100,000, when Spokane numbered 23,000 souls, when its charter was renewed for 20 years, its deposits aggregate $8,700,000, whereas the population of the city is about 104,000. While the city has grown more than 452 per cent, the bank has increased its deposits 8,700 per cent. This progress is declared to be unprecedented, and is looked upon as the most tangible evidence of the wonderful commercial development of Spokane and the Inland Empire. The reassuring feature in this marvelous expansion of the bank's business is that it has encouraged the development only of legitimate, safe and worthy enterprise of the Spokane country.

Loans on Local Real Estate at Lower Rates

C. H. McMillan, vice-president of the Mercantile Trust Company of St. Louis, announced in Spokane a few days ago that the corporation will consider applications for loans on local real estate at rates of interest ranging from 5½ to 6 per cent, or from 1 to 1½ per cent lower than the usual charge. Money is to be loaned on improved business property in central locations, and on property farther out, and it is stated that the rates will be lower than offered at present, especially on a class of property that heretofore has been classified above the minimum rate by loaning organizations.

Small Washington Banks in Splendid Condition

J. L. Mohundro, state bank examiner, who was in Spokane a few days ago, the guest of

R. Lewis Rutter, vice-president and manager of the Spokane and Eastern Trust Company, said that the small banks in Washington were never in as good condition as to-day. Washington state banks loaned more than $1,600,000 to small banks in 1910, while last year only $800,000 was loaned in the same sources. This shows that the small banks and the farmers, orchardists and the country dealers are on a more sound footing than ever. The reserves are over 33 per cent, or 13 per cent ahead of the requirements of the state law.

Dynamite Did Not Go Off

When W. F. Harvey, paying teller at the Traders National Bank, found a stick of dynamite with cap and fuse attached imbedded in a lump of coal at his residence, 1103 East Thirty-second Street, the morning of January 21st, he telephoned for the police, believing himself a marked man. Investigation by detectives disclosed the fact that the explosive was placed by workmen at the mine and was missed when the other charges were set off. The charge failed to explode under the rough handling, including the time of its mining, loading and unloading into cars and transportation to the Harvey bin.

Charles E. Meek to Speak in Spokane

Charles E. Meek of New York, vice-president of the Fourth National Bank of New York City, and Franklyn H. Wentworth of Boston, secretary-treasurer of the National Fire Protective Association, scheduled to speak at the meeting of the credit men of the Spokane Merchants Association on February 7th, will be entertained by city officials, the chamber of commerce and insurance men during their stay in the city.

Will Improve Land

H. C. Rutherford, owner of 300 acres of orchard land at Pleasant Prairie, near Spokane, has secured a loan of $10,000 from the Continental Life Insurance Company. The money will be used in improving the property. A. A. Lewis says numerous other loans are being arranged for in the same locality and that much improving of orchards in Pleasant Prairie will result early the coming spring and summer.

Petitions for Pardon of H. M. Boone

Governor Marion E. Hay of Washington, who has received many letters and petitions urging him to pardon H. M. Boone, president of the defunct State Bank of Palouse, convicted and sentenced to serve from one to ten years in the state penitentiary, has requested Judge Neil, of the superior court of Whitman county, not to issue a commitment, pending the examination of the evidence. The supreme court recently denied a motion for a new trial.

Welty Will Ask for Writ of Habeas Corpus

H. J. Welty, former president of the defunct bank of Bellingham, Wash., who was convicted of accepting deposits knowing the bank was insolvent, will ask for a writ of habeas corpus. He declares that one of the jurors sitting at his trial is and was insane and has been returned to the asylum. Friends at Colfax have signed a bond of $10,000 to secure his release until further legal action can be taken.

Edgar S. Wyman, former cashier of the defunct State Bank of Commerce, at Wallace, Idaho, entered a plea of "not guilty" to issuing false reports as to that institution's condition at a preliminary hearing a few days ago. At the trial he will face three indictments, each charging the same offense, but naming different alleged false reports as a basis of separate bills.

pany to hold and handle the lands owned by the first named company. The new corporation is capitalized at $250,000. J. C. Donnelly, secretary of the Union Securities Company, is secretary-treasurer.

National Bank of Cheney, Wash., declared a quarterly dividend of 2 per cent at its annual meeting on January 19th, when these officers were re-elected: President, Edward F. Betz; vice-president, Peter C. Hanson; cashier, A. N. Rolfe.

Samuel Galland, secretary of the Northwest Loan and Trust Company, probably will succeed J. Grier Long, president of the Washington Trust Company, as head of the Spokane Clearing House Association. W. D. Vincent, cashier of the Old National Bank, will remain as secretary-treasurer-manager.

Frank M. March, president of the National Bank of Commerce of Spokane, is having plans prepared for a country residence of Colonial type, which will be erected this spring on his 10-acre tract on Moran Prairie, at a cost of $20,000. The house will be of 12 rooms and cover 60 by 75 feet, in addition to which there will be an 11-foot wide veranda on two sides. A fully equipped garage will also be erected and several thousand dollars will be spent in landscape gardening.

City commissioners of Spokane, sitting as sinking fund commissioners, have authorized the sale of $52,000 in improvement bonds, a debt against abutting property, to pay for the North Wall Street day labor paving project. The proceeds are to reimburse Jay P. Graves for the amounts he has advanced to Commissioner Coates for the financing of the work under the day labor plan.

Trustee Company of Spokane paid its annual dividend of 6 per cent on January 20th. The amount of the disbursement was $10,875. This is in addition to the dividends paid to unit holders, amounting to about 7½ cents. The company has a capital stock of $200,000.

J. B. Crain, president of the Bank of Pasco, and Robert Jahnke, president of the First National Bank, are among the trustees of the chamber of commerce to be organized at Pasco, Wash.

Spokane's new city hall, to be erected at once at Front Avenue and Wall Street, will cost $323,980. It will be six stories in height, built of brick, and is to be completed before the close of the year.

Cyrus Happy, who is interested in several banking institutions in Spokane, will erect two three-story brick buildings this spring at a cost of more than $100,000.

CANADIAN BANK ROBBED

Vancouver, B. C.—Two armed men entered the Hillcrest branch of the Royal Bank of Canada Friday, drove Manager Steaves and one of his clerks into the vaults, knocked the other clerk out with a blow of the revolver butt, and escaped with $1,999. This is the fourth time in two years that a branch of the Royal Bank in Vancouver has been held up.

Seattle

C. S. Harley, cashier of the Citizens National Bank has received a telegram from the comptroller of the currency stating that the application to change the name of that institution to the Mercantile National Bank has been granted. The capital stock has been increased to $200,000. The merger of the Citizens National Bank and the Mercantile Bank has now been completed, the change in name having been the last step. The officers of the Mercantile National Bank are: W. N. Redfield, president; M. J. Henahan, D. B. Fairley, J. Jaffee and Franklin Sheuy, vice-presidents; C. S. Harley, cashier; B. F. Harley and E. W. Campbell, assistant cashiers.

National and state banks of Washington passed all records in bank deposits on December 5, 1911, when the total of deposits of all kinds and amounts due to banks aggregated $192,629,543—$5,550,000 more than any previous amount reported by the banks of Washington. The state banks show an increase in deposits of $6,000,000 during the year. Both national and state banks decreased their loans, the decrease being about evenly divided between the state and national banks. Resources have been increased $7,500,000. The savings deposits, with a total of $40,326,537, beat all previous records of the state in December.

BANKERS' APPEALS DENIED

Olympia, Wash.—The state supreme court Saturday denied the motion for the new trial of H. M. Boone, convicted of wrecking the Palouse State Bank, and sentenced him to ten years in the penitentiary. Several months ago a petition for pardon was presented to Governor Hay but no action has been taken. The Palouse State Bank failed in May, 1909. The following year Boone was convicted of larceny by embezzlement of $20,000 of the money of the depositors.

The state supreme court has also denied the petition for a rehearing of the case of Harry J. Welty, the convicted president of the defunct Home Security Bank, of Bellingham, for accepting deposits when he knew it to be insolvent. Welty was convicted in the superior court and sentenced to serve from three to ten years in the state penitentiary, and upon appeal the decision was affirmed by the supreme court. Welty made a petition for a rehearing, which has now been denied.

BANK TO INCREASE CAPITAL

The directors of the First National Bank of Boston have voted to recommend to the stockholders an increase in the capital stock from $3,000,000 to $5,000,000 by the issuance of 20,000 shares at a par value of $100 and to be sold at $300 a share. It was further voted to call a stockholders' meeting for March 1st to act formally on the capital increase.

Application has been made to organize the First National of Kent, Wash., capital $50,000.

San Francisco

Receiver Frank J. Symmes, of the California Safe Deposit and Trust Company, which closed its doors in 1907, since which time it has paid one dividend of 10 per cent to the depositors, now states in his official report that $1,000,000 is offered for the remaining assets of the bank. These include the bank building—worth about $400,000—and the cash in the receiver's hands, amounting to something over $100,000. As the proceeds from the sale of the building would have to go to satisfying the trust claims, the $600,000 that is left to be distributed among the depositors would amount to 7 cents on the dollar for their claims. According to the published statement of one of the attorneys in the case, "The California Safe Deposit and Trust Company was not a bank; it was simply a den of thieves who not only stole securities of value deposited with the institution, but actually robbed the bank itself by means of fictitious accounts and by overdrafts."

Los Angeles.—In order to reduce the surplus account of the Security Savings Bank to an even million dollars before the absorption of the Equitable Savings Bank the directors have declared an extra dividend of 20 per cent on the bank capitalization, making the amount paid during 1911 35 per cent, or $355,000.

John C. Sterling, former cashier of the Union Safe Deposit Company of Stockton, who has confessed to embezzling $15,000 from that bank, has begun serving a five-year term in San Quentin. Sterling's method of procedure in his peculations was similar to that employed by George A. Terry, the young bank clerk who not long ago robbed a San Francisco institution of $14,000. When totaling the savings deposits of the bank he included the $15,000 without printing it on the adding machine, by striking the keys after placing the paper reel so that the figures would not be printed.

TRUE BILLS IN BANK CASE

Boise, Ida.—The second grand jury called to investigate the affairs of the defunct State Bank of Commerce of Wallace, Ida., has completed its task after two weeks of deliberation and all of the true bills returned correspond with the original indictments. State officials here feel confident that the responsibility for the failure of the Wallace bank will be placed. Another attempt will be made to bring B. F. O'Neil, former president of the defunct bank, back to Idaho to face the indictments. O'Neil went to Vancouver after the bank crash. He was indicted by the first grand jury and a spirited fight made to bring him back, but he took advantage of the protective laws of Canada and won.

Des Moines, January 31.—The statute providing for the taxation of moneys and credits as passed by the last legislature continues to bother assessors. At the request of Knoxville parties, Special Counsel Robbins in the office of the attorney-general gave another opinion as to the meaning of the law and sent out an explanation as to more of its details. Mr. Robbins was asked to define the term "moneyed capital." Mr. Robbins quotes from the supreme court and defines it as follows: "capital employed in national banks and capital employed by individuals when the object of their business is the making of profit by the use of their money capital as money. But it does not include moneyed capital in the hands of corporations even if its business be such as to make its shares moneyed capital when in the hands of individuals."

In answering detailed queries relative to the working of the law, Attorney Robbins says that if a citizen's sole income is derived from notes and mortgages, and he loans his own money, the property is assessed on the basis of 20 per cent of its actual value. If a resident is engaged in the merchandise business and has money loaned at interest his money so loaned is to be assessed at the rate of 5 mills providing the loan is incidental and that the holder is not engaged in the buying or selling of securities. If a resident of the city has a checking account and also a time certificate in a bank drawing 4 per cent, both accounts shall be taxed on the 5 per cent flat rate basis. This is upon the assumption, however, that the party is not engaged in such business as would make these items moneyed capital as defined by the supreme court and explained in the beginning of the opinion.

It appears that D. L. Heinsheimer, the veteran Glenwood banker, has retired from the presidency of the Mills County National at that city. He has been succeeded by A. J. Gettler. Recently it was stated that Mr. Heinsheimer had disposed of his mercantile business but would remain as president of the bank, and this statement is not correct. Mr. Heinsheimer has gone with his family to California to spend the remainder of the winter but will return to Iowa in the spring. He expects to take life easier in the future than heretofore.

National Citizens League

The National Citizens League, which proposes to work for remedial legislation in the way of banking and currency laws, is getting actively started in Iowa. President Robert L. Fleming of the Iowa branch has secured headquarters in Des Moines and from here the campaign will be conducted most actively. The Iowa organization consists of Mr. Fleming as president; L. H. Bush, special loan agent for the Northwestern Mutual Life Insurance Company, as treasurer, and Emory

H. English, of the Lewis-Wallace Printing Company, secretary. These are all Des Moines men. The vice-presidents are headed by E. W. Stanton, president of Ames College. Others are: John . Bowman, Iowa City, president Iowa University; R. O. Green, Green Wheeler Shoe Company, Ft. Dodge; J. L. Waiter, editor Burlington Hawkeye, Burlington; George W. French, Davenport Wagon Company, Davenport; J. M. Pierce, publisher The Homestead, Des Moines; F. Junkerman, Churchill Drug Company, Cedar Rapids; Ben Bear, Decorah Clothing Company, Decorah; D. W. Norris, Jr., editor Times-Republican, Marshalltown; George E. McLean, president Key City Gas Company, Dubuque; W. E. Brice, president Peoples Gas and Electric Company, Mason City; B. P. Holst, president Holst Publishing Company, Boone; Scott Skinner, postmaster, Creston; L. A. Hammill, wholesale grocer, Keokuk; Lee Nagel, The Replogle Company, Red Oak; Harry J. Green, editor Public Opinion, Decorah.

The announcement has been made that Senator Cummins has been asked to deliver the principal address at the first meeting of the National League at Indianapolis, February 22d. This has served to add interest to the movement in Iowa.

Bank May Move.

The oldest banking room in Cedar Rapids is soon to be left vacant if the Commercial Savings of that city carries out its present plans of removing from its present quarters into the structure originally built for the Merchants National in 1881, which is being remodeled for its new tenant. This is a desirable corner, and it will be put in first-class condition before it is occupied. The American Trust and Savings of Cedar Rapids is also reported to be contemplating the building of a new banking room on property owned by the institution.

Moore Doubts Success of Seattle Municipal Bank

Ernest R. Moore, of Cedar Rapids, well known banker and candidate for republican national committeeman, has some doubts as to whether the municipal bank which the Seattle city council proposes to establish will be a success. Mr. Moore was in Des Moines recently. He is quoted in an interview as stating that the institution should be all right providing it does not get into the hands of unscrupulous politicians. He fears, however, that after the newness has worn off and the people grow less careful in its management, there will be a big smashup. Mr. Moore believes that a city commission such as governs Cedar Rapids, Des Moines, Sioux City and other cities in Iowa, would be much more likely to make a success of the plan since such commission governed cities are handled in a more businesslike fashion than cities under the old style ward aldermanic system.

New Bank for Davenport

Davenport, which is one of the liveliest financial centers in the state, is to have another bank. Residents of Northwest Davenport met one night recently and steps were taken for the inauguration of the institution. The bank will have a capital stock of $50,000. Those interested will meet again February 6th, at which time officers will be elected, directors chosen and details decided upon. The people in this section of the city are far removed from the business district and feel the need of a banking house of their own.

Group 10 Meeting in Ottumwa

The Ottumwa bankers are making ready for big doings when the meeting of Group 10 is held in that city February 12th. They have appointed a committee to take charge of the program. This committee consists of L. A. Andrew, B. P. Brown, R. W. Funk, C. F. Rauscher. It has been decided to give a luncheon at the Ballingall at noon and the afternoon session will be held in the Commercial Club rooms. The speaker has not been announced. This is the only group meeting of which Secretary Hall of the I. B. A. has thus far received definite information other than the date and location as announced in THE CHICAGO BANKER last week.

Sells Farm Land

George E. Roberts, director of the mint and well known ex-banker, has disposed of his section farm in Kossuth county for $98,400, or about $154 per acre. This is one of the biggest farm real estate deals for recent weeks in Iowa. J. L. Kamrar, a Webster City capitalist, has purchased a farm of 1,000 acres located near Fort Des Moines for $100,000. The property formerly belonged to the late Judge Barcroft.

Two Well Known Bankers Indicted

Quite a little excitement has been caused in southern Iowa by the indictment of Elbert Reed and A. E. Mitchell, two well known bankers of Shenandoah. The two men, together with a real estate man named Sheets, are accused of conspiracy in an indictment returned by the grand jury in the court at Marseilles, La Salle county, Illinois. The indictment grows out of the removal of the Swanson Manufacturing Company from Shenandoah to Marseilles. It appears that the three men indicted were looking after the interests of Shenandoah business men and succeeded in getting $80,000 from the company after its removal and before it went to the wall. This money was distributed among the stockholders in Shenandoah. Now the trio has been sued for $80,000 and $20,000 additional as exemplary damages in addition to the indictment. Mr. Reed is interested in banks at Farragut, Hamburg and Coin in addition to his interests at Shenandoah. The accused men deny any conspiracy whatever and the people of Shenandoah are backing them practically unanimously.

Banking Notes

The Savings Bank at Farrar, Polk county, will be removed to Valeria and will be known hereafter as the Bank of Valeria.

T. S. Tweed, cashier of the Farmers State at Lake Mills, was notified last week of the death of his brother, John Tweed, at Missoula, Montana.

The Leavitt & Johnson Trust Company at Waterloo has filed articles increasing its capital stock to $500,000 and renewing its articles for twenty years.

Milton S. Dewey, president of the Milford National, at Milford, died last week after an illness of three months with cancer. Mr. Dewey was one of the influential citizens of Milford. He removed to that town from Illinois ten years ago. The remains were taken back to Mazon, Ill., for interment.

New officers for the Tennant Savings at Tennant were elected as follows: President, George Cook; vice-president, Joe Buman; cashier, H. A. Cross.

The Red Oak National announces that it will remodel its building and will add a new front of pressed brick with plate glass windows and a new vault.

William Mall, who has been bookkeeper in the First National at Belle Plaine for three years, has accepted the position of cashier of the Aurora Bank at Aurora, S. D. Charles Houseman succeeds him in the Belle Plaine institution.

James E. Brannigan, arrested in New York and brought back to Davenport to answer charges of forgery, pleaded guilty and was sent up for fifteen years.

James Delaney, vice-president of the First National at Marengo and prominent in financial circles, died at the age of 80 at his home in that city last week.

Homer A. Miller, president of the Iowa National, Des Moines, accompanied by his wife, is making an extended tour to Milwaukee, Pittsfield, Mass., thence to Florida. They have a daughter in school at Pittsfield.

M. F. Kerwick has been chosen vice-president of the First National at Emmetsburg, succeeding the late James Dunigan, whose death occurred last fall.

Postal savings banks will be established February 19th at Batavia, Keosauqua, Lacona, Olin and Waucoma. On February 23d, at Anita, Central City, Kellogg and Moravia.

The charter of the First National at Estherville has been extended to January 23, 1912.

Persistent rumors continue to be bruited about Des Moines to the effect that Arthur Reynolds, president of the Des Moines National, is about to leave our fair city. Formerly, the rumor sent him to Pasadena, but more recent rumors have sent him to Chicago. Mr. Reynolds is at Pasadena at present, so the last named report has not been verified although fellow officials in Des Moines regard it as unfounded.

Among Iowa bankers recently seen in Des Moines are included: Cashier C. E. Lofland, Oskaloosa National; Cashier H. S. Fleagle, Farrar Savings; President William Anderson and Cashier E. W. Knudson, State Bank of Jewell; Vice-President M. E. Smith, Winter-set Savings; Cashier E. S. Henny, Citizens, Pleasantville; President Ernest E. Hart, First National, Council Bluffs; Cashier E. Burch, Citizens State, Rockwell City; President G. H. Thorley, Farmers and Merchants, Springview, Neb.; President Guy Buttes, Nesley Exchange; Cashier R. M. Boyer, Mahaska County State, Oskaloosa; Cashier S. C. Culbertson, Farmers and Merchants National, Jefferson; Cashier M. F. Palmer, First National, Adel; President J. H. Allen, First National, Pocahontas; President E. P. Barringer, Farmers Savings, Ruthven; President Charles Allen, State of Laurens; Cashier E. F. King, First National, Webster City; Cashier H. J. Garlock, State of Maxwell; Vice-President T. A. Erskin, Bank of Runnells; Cashier E. R. Brewer, Bank of Liberty Center.

Bank Clearings for the week ending January 27th gained $800,000 over the Des Moines clearings for the corresponding week last year.

H. L. Preston, secretary of the Des Moines Trust Company, has disposed of his interest to Guy Brunk, manager of the real estate department. Mr. Preston will take up the practice of law. Nelson Royal remains as president and John H. Blair as vice-president.

The Rath Exchange of Ackley filed articles with the secretary of state, giving the capital stock at $50,000. The president is John Rath; vice-president, W. T. S. Rath; cashier, Irvin Blecker.

The Farmers Savings of Garwin has filed articles. The capital stock is given at $20,000. The president is W. N. Townsend; vice-president, George Rohwer; cashier, C. C. Brath.

Sioux City

By JOHN J. BIDDISON.

If banking does not participate in the general prosperity of the 300-mile radius of Sioux City next summer and fall it will be the fault of conditions not to be foreseen at this time. While the unusually heavy fall of snow has had the present effect of retarding trade activities this winter, it will leave the great agricultural fields of South Dakota, North Dakota, Nebraska and Iowa saturated with moisture. Reports reaching here are that those parts of South Dakota that last summer were as parched and barren as the Sahara have enjoyed even more snowfall than has this immediate vicinity, and that the western half of the state will next spring open the season with old vitality returned, and ready for a season of abundant crops. It is of course possible yet for drouth to undo the work of winter, but it will be harder to accomplish than would be possible otherwise.

Just now, trade is rather dull. The demand for money is not strong, and rates are rather easy. Grain is moving, but slowly, owing to poor roads generally, and money consequently is going into circulation slowly. There is, however, a gradual increase, and the breaking of winter will see money flow freely in the country.

John J. Large in Chicago

John J. Large, vice-president of the First National, paid a visit to Chicago last week, made a little private excursion into the realm of politics, and came home with a perfectly good interview on the presidential situation as viewed by Chicago financial men. He authorized the statement that in his opinion Chicago's big men are deserting President Taft in favor of ex-President Roosevelt. Personally, Mr. Large does not blame them, though that was no part of the interview. He explained the change as being because the former supporters of the president fear he cannot be re-elected and preferred Roosevelt to LaFollette or, perhaps, Cummins, because of his vote getting qualities.

"Blue Sky" Law Movement in South Dakota

A movement has gained some headway among South Dakota bankers for the enactment of a "blue sky" law, similar to that now in operation in Kansas, whereby corporations undertaking to do business in the state must make a showing to the state bank examiner that they are bona fide, and that there is a chance for the investor to get his money back sooner or later. They would have agents required to procure permits to do business, upon application to the state banking department. It is probable that such a law will be presented at the next session of the legislature.

Banking Notes

A final report of the appraisers in the bankrupt case of Frank S. Barnes, of Marcus, Ia., former president of the Citizens Bank, is now daily expected. Advance information is that it will show Barnes' resources to be far below the figures he claims for them. The appraisers, T. R. Fenton, James Collins, and

Wm. M. White, all of Marcus, will make their report to Trustee Robert Pike, of Sioux City.

The Henderson State Bank, of Wessington, S. D., closed its doors Monday on orders from the public examiner. The reasons have not yet been made public.

M. F. Kerwick has been elected vice-president of the First National Bank of Emmetsburg, Iowa, to succeed James Dunnigan, who died last fall.

The bankers of Corson county, South Dakota, have formed a county organization. All the editors of the county have been made honorary members.

Neils Neilson, assistant cashier of the Citizens State Bank, of Anthon, Ia., saved a life and achieved distinction for himself by identifying a mysterious medicine that Vinnie Connole had partaken of, and seeing that a proper antidote was administered. Connole thought he was taking a headache tablet, but instead he swallowed a good-sized tablet containing corrosive sublimate. The taste convinced him he had made a mistake and he went at once to Neilson, who formerly was a pharmacist, and showed him what he had taken. Neilson rushed the poisoned man to a drug store, and there, with the aid of a large quantity of eggs and milk and a stomach pump, they removed enough poison from Vinnie to kill a hundred like him.

Among the Visiting Bankers

G. M. Slocum, cashier of the Redmond Bank of Commerce, Redmond, Ore., was in Sioux City on his way home from a trip back East. Mr. Slocum was formerly cashier of the Sanborn State Bank, Sanborn, Ia., and is well known to northern Iowa bankers. He is prospering.

Herman Fortin, cashier of the Farmers Bank of Salix, Ia., was in Sioux City Monday.

B. E. Adkins, president of the Farmers State Bank, Carthage, S. D., was in Sioux City on business Monday.

Ed. Latta, cashier of the First National Bank, Tekamah, Neb., was in Sioux City Monday.

BANK WINS SUIT

Kansas City, Mo.—A bank is protected in the possession of property, even though it be stolen property, is the latest enunciation of the law as followed by Judge Lucas in the circuit court. He followed a recent decision of the St. Louis court of appeals and put a sudden end to the case of Douglas B. Wornall against the National Bank of Commerce last week.

Wornall placed a $750 note in the hands of a broker a year or two ago to sell. The broker "skipped" after he had placed the note in the bank as security for a personal loan. Wornall brought suit against the bank to recover the note on the theory that it was stolen property.

The latest decision protected the bank in such matters. It was in direct conflict with a supreme court decision of sometime ago, but Judge Lucas said he would have to follow the most recent decision of the court of appeals. Mr. Wornall will appeal the case to the Kansas City court of appeals for another decision on the question.

Lansford, Pa.—A charter has been granted for the Dime Savings Bank.

Dan Norman, assistant cashier of the Continental and Commercial Bank, has been elected vice-president of the new Du Page County State Bank.

Ohio

That the state banks of Ohio are in better condition and stronger financially now than they have ever been before in their history, is shown by the report of State Bank Superintendent F. E. Baxter, based on reports made to him in response to his call for a statement of condition December 5th. The combined resources at that time reached the aggregate of $514,848,624, an increase of approximately $38,000,000 over the showing made at the last call the latter part of 1911. Total deposits show a decrease, due to a reduction of $5,716,087 in the deposits of public funds. On December 5th the total deposits were $425,860,934.12, and the total amount held as reserve, $81,644,593.44, or 19.2 per cent—4.2 per cent above the legal requirement.

East Liverpool, Ohio.—After a fight extending over three years this city is to receive 2 per cent interest on its deposits from all banking institutions here. Each bank will be given an equal share of the city's moneys. Heretofore the city allowed the banks the use of its funds without any interest being paid.

For several years Marion has been advertising for bids to handle its funds according to law, and for years the five local banks have been bidding 2 per cent by agreement. The result has been that, although the city's money was equally divided between them as before, the law legally has been complied with. However, it has remained for a little bank over at Caledonia, 10 miles east, to take advantage of the law and break up the ring. It sprung a surprise on the local banks and bid 2.4 per cent Saturday.

ESTABLISH BANKS IN SOUTH AMERICA

In the belief that American trade with South and Central America will be greatly facilitated by the establishment of a number of American banks, a movement is under way among exporters in this country to secure the early passage of legislation to permit the extension of our banking powers to foreign countries. It has long been urged that the national banking laws, which have restricted the operations of our domestic banking interests to our own shores, have worked to the detriment of manufacturers in this country, whose output has fast been exceeding local demand and who sought foreign markets as an outlet and a natural source of revenue for their use. Many exporters have likewise frequently protested that the lack of a systematic American foreign banking system has resulted in retarding the growth of their trade abroad.

It is also shown that negotiations are under way to establish an American bank with American capital in the Argentine Republic. Part of the needed capital has already been promised for this purpose, and the project, it is claimed, only lacks the necessary legalization by our federal authorities to bring about its satisfactory completion. The establishment of an American commercial bank in the Argentine is, it is stated, only the first of a number of movements under way for the establishment of a series or chain of American banks throughout Central and South America, similar in organization and scope to that recently organized, with a capitalization of $5,000,000, in Nicaragua.

It is pointed out that the great trade volume which Great Britain and Germany enjoy with the Pan-American republics has been built up mainly by the force and presence of both English and German capitalists who have freely invested in the transportation facilities and general industrial growth of the districts in which their countrymen have sought trade favors. The existence of such English and German banks and investors has been a natural factor in maintaining the efficiency of German and English foreign trade methods and selling systems.

The officers of the state department are known to be strongly in favor of the amendment of those international banking laws which have tended to prevent the foreign extension of American capital.

EUROPEAN BANKS MERGE

Foreign cable advices received in this city are to the effect that at a meeting to be held some time in the near future the stockholders of the Swiss Bankverein of Basle, Switzerland, and the banking house of Von Speyr & Co., also of Basle, will be asked to ratify an agreement for the acquisition of the banking house of Von Speyr & Co., by the Swiss Bankverein with all liabilities and assets as of December 31, 1911. The Swiss Bankverein stockholders will be asked to sanction the issue of 7,000,000 francs new shares, participating in 1912 dividends, which shares will be issued to the stockholders of the firm of Von Speyr & Co., the proportion of seven new shares of the Swiss Bankverein, each 500 francs fully paid ex-dividends of 1911, for each 15 shares 500 francs 50 per cent paid shares of Von Speyr & Co. By the issue of the new stock the paid capital of the Swiss Bankverein will be increased to 82,000,000 francs.

It is proposed to elect as members of the board of directors of the Swiss Bankverein Hans Schuster Gutmann, Albert De Speyr and Alfred De Speyr, who now constitute the board of the banking firm of Von Speyr & Co.

SPELLING BEE FOR YOUNG BANKERS

Havana, Cuba.—The winter course of study of the American Institute of Banking in Havana was enlivened recently by a spelling match between the English classes of Cuba Chapter, at the National Bank headquarters, before banking hours.

The contest began on monosyllables, and for a while the sixteen members of the junior class who were present pitted themselves against an equal number of seniors, with telling effect. After twenty minutes' steady fire it seemed as if the two forces had annihilated themselves, for one of those small twisted words which are characteristic of the English language had floored the last four contestants who were left standing. On coming to their feet they went in for a finish, with the result that Arturo Duplessis, of the senior class, was declared victor.

Next in order came a contest on dissyllables, and after a spirited display of talent on both sides, the honors were awarded to Rafael Mayer, of the senior class. A recitation by Sr. Duplessis of the elocution class of the poem "If You Cannot" met with applause.

Montreal.—Seventeen chartered banks which have submitted statements to shareholders during the past few weeks show total net profits for 1911 of $13,762,459, as compared with $11,634,345 in 1910. The profits run from 14 per cent on the paid-up capital to 23 per cent.

The Security Bank of Pillager, Minn., has changed management. The Schroeders have sold their interest to W. J. Lewis and Murray McNair of Staples. E. P. Bacon and Frank Swanson of Pillager, the former as vice-president and the latter as director, will remain with the bank.

A charter has been issued to the Farmers National of Belleville, Pa., capital $50,000.

GEORGIA STATE BANKS PROSPEROUS

In giving out a comparative statement regarding Georgia's state banks in order to show the improvement made and the better condition attained in practically every direction during the last year, State Treasurer W. J. Speer calls attention to a most interesting phase of the situation. He says that one of the most substantial evidences of progress shown by Georgia's 650 state banks is the large reduction shown in the amount of overdrafts. Despite the fact that ninety-one new banks have been added to the list during the year just closed, overdrafts have been reduced by approximately 50 per cent, as compared with 1910. He thinks that this is one of the most hopeful signs in connection with the banking situation in the state. It not only indicates greater care on the part of the banks in the transaction of business, but also that depositors are in better position as to cash assets. One year ago the overdrafts in Georgia's state banks amounted to $4,929,860.45, as compared with only $2,193,861.83 to-day—nearer 55 per cent less than 50 per cent.

"I think if it were known to cashiers generally that under a decision of the supreme court of the United States they are responsible on their bonds for any losses to the banks they serve as a result of overdrafts, they would be considerably more cautious in the matter of permitting customers to overdraw their accounts."

Other figures regarding the state banks given out by the treasurer show that the state banking resources have increased during the year by $6,455,128; cash has increased $2,178,620.80; paid in capital has increased $2,674,134.24; surplus and profits show an increase of $1,214,298.65; deposits have increased $3,937,507.83.

N. D. ALLING

N. D. Alling, formerly assistant cashier of the Nassau National Bank, has been elected a vice-president. Gilbert Thomas, formerly assistant of the president, was elected assistant cashier to fill the vacancy, and A. W. Gilhart, formerly loan clerk, was made an assistant cashier.

CONFESSES THEFT OF $90,000

Portland, Ore., January 29.—W. Cooper Morris, cashier of the defunct Oregon Trust and Savings Bank, pleaded guilty late to-day on the joint indictment with Louis J. Wilde, former president, charging the embezzlement of $90,000. It is understood Morris will testify against Wilde.

BANKING NOTES

The capital stock of the Bank of St. James, Missouri, is to be increased from $10,000 to $50,000.

Ogden, Utah.—Ralph E. Hoag has been elected president of the Utah National Bank to fill the vacancy caused by the death of the late John E. Dooly.

President Hamill of the Corn Exchange National Bank is in Egypt for three months.

Newton Doremus has been elected president of the First National of Red Bank, N. J., to succeed James L. Terhune.

Application has been made to convert the Union Bank and Trust Company of Monroe, La., into the Union National of Monroe, capital $200,000.

Walter Schuh has resigned as assistant cashier of the First National of Norwood, O., to accept a similar position with the Norwood National.

BANK SUPERVISION IN OHIO

Columbus, Ohio, January 31.—Three Ohio state banks to-day went to the wall because of the exercise of the new powers granted to the state banking department by the general assembly last winter. This gave to the state superintendent the right to approve the reserves of state banking institutions.

These three banks—the Albany State Bank, the Byesville State Bank and the Farmers and Merchants Bank of Gallipolis—were interdependent, J. S. Howard of this city being the principal owner in each of them. The Gallipolis Bank was a private concern, and Mr. Howard was its president. His brother, O. L. Howard, is cashier of the Byesville Bank.

Recently the state department found that the Albany and Byesville banks were keeping practically all of their reserves in the Gallipolis bank, which, being a private concern, was not subject to the inspection of the examiners. Its statement of condition, however, showed that of $65,000 in deposits over $29,000 was from other banks, principally the other Howard institutions. State Superintendent Baxter thereupon refused to approve it as a reserve bank, and demanded that the money deposited by the Byesville and Albany banks be forthwith returned to them. With this demand the Gallipolis institution was unable to comply.

According to the statement of officials of the Farmers and Merchants Bank this afternoon, the bank's liabilities will total more than $35,000. Safety depositors, according to officials, will lose about $25,000, while checking depositors will also suffer a heavy loss. The Second National Bank of Parkersburg, W. Va., stands to lose $32,000 on overdrafts.

Sank Under Pressure

Under pressure from the department the Albany bank, which has $14,000 on deposit in the Gallipolis institution, started legal action to recover its money, and the closing of the private bank followed. The Byesville bank also had about $13,000 on deposit with the Gallipolis institution. A special statement of the Gallipolis bank rendered to the department shows that it had no capital stock, no surplus, no undivided profits, and a good-sized furniture and fixture account, in addition to heavy overdrafts. It had $29,000 of bank deposits, $6,000 of time certificates, $13,000 of individual deposits and $17,800 of savings deposits.

The Byesville State Bank, which has been taken in charge by State Examiner T. C. Maher, has $25,000 capital and $25,000 of deposits, part of which are public funds. J. A. Hoopman is president, and O. L. Howard, a brother of J. S. Howard, is cashier. A telephone message to-day from the president stated that Cashier Howard cannot be located, and there are notes signed by him in the bank representing cash taken out.

State Examiner in Charge

The Albany State Bank has J. S. Howard, of Columbus, for president, and S. D. Webb as cashier. It has a capital of $25,000 and surplus and undivided profits of $1,854. It has $50,000 of deposits, of which about $2,000 are public funds. Practically all of its remaining deposits are demand certificates or individual deposits. Its banking house and fixtures are carried in the statement at about $16,000. W. B. Hopkins, state bank examiner of the Toledo district, was sent to Albany to take charge.

J. S. Howard, although officially residing in Gallipolis, has been here for some time, his business being carried on under the name of Howard & Barnes, which firm recently purchased a large apartment house. Last fall he induced some Columbus men to join with him in founding a new trust company, and, although it was incorporated, it has never begun business. Thus far Mr. Howard has not been found for an explanation.

W. S. Manning, who has been the cashier of the Gallipolis Bank, said the demand for the Albany bank money undoubtedly caused the crash. He has been unable thus far to get into communication with his chief.

Mr. Howard is also interested in the Kanauga Traction Company, which operates an electric line near Gallipolis, some of the bonds of which have been traded for Columbus real estate.

FOURTH NATIONAL BANK

Henry E. Huntington has been elected a director of the Fourth National Bank, New York City, to fill a vacancy. The bank has made arrangements for doing a foreign exchange business, which will be in charge of A. D. Bright, for many years foreign exchange manager for Kountze Bros.

Buffalo Valley.—The citizens of Buffalo Valley met and organized the Bank of Buffalo Valley. Capital stock $10,000, with the following officers: J. P. Nichol, president; W. W. Jared, vice-president, and W. G. Travis, cashier.

Logan C. Murray, president of the American National, has been elected treasurer of the Louisville Board of Trade.

Motorists who use United States Tires have mighty little trouble.

A sample:

Chicago, Ill.

"Relative to the United States Tires, I wish to say, that from my experience with them I do not see how it is possible to turn out a better or more satisfactory tire. I am using 36x5" Nobby Treads on my rear wheels.

The tire which is on the right rear wheel of the car has traveled 6640 miles; the one on the left rear wheel, 5600 miles. They are both in excellent shape at the present time with the exception of a few surface cuts.

I shall continue to use United States Tires this year."

Books on Banking, Finance and Economics

Credit. By J. LAWRENCE LAUGHLIN, of the Department of Political Economy, University of Chicago. Postpaid, 53c.

The nature of credit and its effect on prices have long been a subject of disagreement among economists. Its basis is commonly assumed to be money or bank reserves.

Essentials of Business Law. By FRANCIS M. BURDICK, LL. D., Professor of Law in Columbia University. 12mo. Postpaid, $1.50.

This book shows how the rules of law governing the commonest business transactions have been developed, and it tells what they are to-day. Technical law terms have been discarded as far as possible, and when they are used they are so explained and illustrated as to be easily understood. The principles of law are simplified and expressed in clear, lucid everyday speech.

Foreign Exchange. Tables converting foreign money into United States money, and United States money into foreign money at all commercial rates of exchange used in financial transactions between the United States and foreign countries. All about foreign exchange, including various forms of foreign commercial paper and terms, abbreviations, etc. For banks, bankers, steamship agents, importers, exporters and manufacturers. Cloth, $5.00.

Government Regulation of Railway Rates. By HUGO R. MEYER. A Professor of Political Economy in the University of Chicago. Postpaid, $1.60 net.

Investment Bonds. By F. LOWNHAUPT. Postpaid, $1.90. Prospective investors who wish to make advantageous use of their money will do well to take notice of this volume. The author does not theorize, but tells only plain facts of the relation of the bond to its issuing corporation, and of the general investment aspect of the instrument.

Money and Credit. By WILBUR ALDRICH. Postpaid, $1.37. This volume contains much valuable information and much sound discussion on money and credit.

The Banking and Currency Problems in the United States. By VICTOR MORAWETZ. The author takes up the problem of the national monetary commission, appointed by congress, and discusses the means of providing a permanent safe-guard against money stringencies and panics. Postpaid, $1.10.

The Principles of Money and Banking. By CHARLES A. CONANT. It is a new and complete exposition of its subject. Two volumes. Postpaid, $4.25.

The Pitfalls of Speculation. By THOMAS GIBSON. Postpaid, $1.20.

A book dealing exclusively with marginal speculation, and analyzing in a clear and simple manner the causes of failure in speculation, with a suggestion as to the remedies.

The Use of Loan Credit in Modern Business. By THORSTEIN B. VEBLEN. Postpaid, 25c.

The Investors' Catechism. By M. M. REYNOLDS. Cloth, by mail, $1.10.

"Investors' Catechism." Contains all that it is essential for the beginner to know, and opens the way for a thorough study of the whole subject of investment. The author has for the sake of clearness and simplicity adopted a catechetical style which is somewhat novel in this sort of literature.

The above books are the best of their kind, and will be promptly forwarded upon receipt of price.

porations are not authorized by law to do a banking business. Stefan v. Breman, 92 Ill. App. 291.

Nor may a railroad company, the powers of which are confined to the construction and operation of a railroad, lawfully engage in banking. The issue of paper designed to circulate as money, in the form and similitude of bank bills, is an act of banking outside of the powers of a railroad corporation. People v. River Basin and Lake Erie Railroad Company, 12 Mich. 389. In State of Ohio v. The Washington Social Library Company, 11 Ohio, 96, it was held that the defendant, a corporation organized for the purpose of conducting a library, had no authority to receive deposits, make loans, issue paper, etc. And in the same jurisdiction, in the case of State of Ohio v. The Granville Alexandrian Society, 11 Ohio, 1, it was held that a corporation, authorized "to hold any estate, real or personal, and the same to sell, grant or dispose of, or bind by mortgage, or in such manner as they shall deem most proper," could not claim banking privileges. The case of MacLauren v. State, 141 Wis. 577, 124 N. W. Rep. 667, presented an interesting point. It was there decided that a corporation, engaged in the business of running a department store, which received deposits up to a certain amount, issued pass books, paid interest on the amounts deposited, and paid the principal with interest upon demand, either in money or in goods at the election of the depositor, was engaged in the banking business without authority.

There are penalties attached to banking without authority. If individuals engage in unauthorized banking, through the medium of a corporation, they may be civilly liable as partners and criminally liable as individuals.

THE sums extorted (Missoula pleasantry) from banks on pretexts of alleged publicity would pay a dividend on all banks, and the banks, in the aggregate, would do as much business without the publicity.

ALL publicity does (sic) is to draw business from one bank to another," and right here THE CHICAGO BANKER is prepared to rest the case on your Uncle Lusk's testimony, that all its publicity does is to "draw business." Nothing else is intended either by the paper or its advertisers.

BROTHER LUSK must be jealous of his good-looking neighbor, E. J. Bowman, over at Anaconda.

J. S. AISTHORPE, Cairo, is a believer in bank supervision and inspection, both by the state and the nation. He believes in chartered accountants also, and his fine bank is examined regularly by the best firm he can find. They certify their report, and it also is signed by a committee of directors, who assist in the examination.

NOW for a grand rush of the near-farmer-bankers, when Minnesota holds her state convention on the experimental farm half-way from Minneapolis to St. Paul (or the reverse) on June 14th and 15th. The agricultural dope is the stuff up northwest.

IOWA soon will have a greater lock than any one on the Panama Canal. Work on the new lock by which steamboats will be lifted forty feet, to pass the great dam being built across the Mississippi River at Keokuk, is now so far under way that one can appreciate the immense size of this lock, which in some essential respects surpasses the celebrated Gatun lock.

MUST just tickle Charlie Steurer nearly to death (Hay, too) to see his old friend, Stumpf, doing chores around the big printing house, which came to the rescue. One good thing was the saving of the Bankers Encyclopaedia, which is one of the best in the country. Furthermore, we are to have MacPherson "in our midst" occasionally, which is something.

OH, yes! The bank which patiently held the bag, it is happy, too. Here's to you, Lewis!

TRUST companies in New York have an association of their own. Theodore Miller of Brooklyn Trust is president.

BANKERS and farmers of Pawnee, Illinois, are endeavoring to arrange for a free public meeting to interest the farmers and land owners along the line of soil and crop development and improvement. C. A. DeLay, cashier of the Pawnee State Bank, is in correspondence with Chairman Harris and Secretary Edens of the bankers committee on agriculture, and it is expected that a big meeting will be pulled off at Pawnee shortly.

FRED L. TREES, president Kokomo (Ind.) Trust Company; Daniel Crabb, cashier Tazewell County National, Delavan, Ill.; J. L. Esser, cashier Aurora Trust and Savings, Aurora; Wm. Ontjes, vice-president and cashier, American National, Sioux Falls, South Dakota, were Chicago visitors early this week.

S. S. COOK, cashier Minnesota Loan and S. Trust, Minneapolis, writes: "My prize dog was so much interested in Smith's remarks about him in your edition of January 27th that he (the pup) asks me to send to you for some extra copies, that he may pass them around to the other pups. I, therefore, enclose cashier's check herewith for ten copies."

EVERYBODY knows that the greatest extravagance exists in the administration of our cities, states and the federal government. It is so notorious that nobody disputes it. This alone ought to be the best answer to those who are clamoring for public ownership of general utilities.

A STARTLING illustration of the way a state handles its business affairs is disclosed in New York. Some years ago, in the apportionment of federal funds to the states, New York received over $4,000,000. Not knowing what to do with the money, it was finally suggested that loan commissioners be appointed to loan it to deserving farmers on New York farms.

THE state now finds it owns 250 farms, scattered through forty-five counties. On these farms over $300,000 was loaned at such extravagant values that the property fell into the possession of the state. The interest on the state's loan of over $300,000 is less than one-half of 1 per cent.

AN original deposit fund of $4,000,000 has dwindled down to but a fraction of what it was. There is an impressive lesson in the experience of the great state of New York which we recommend to the consideration of those who are advocating "progressive" ideas of state ownership and control.

CRIMINAL prosecutions were begun by the state banking department of Pennsylvania upon the advice of Attorney-General John C. Bell against three owners of private banks in Philadelphia on Monday. The arrests are the first in a statewide crusade to protect the savings of alien laborers.

THOSE arrested are charged with violation of the act of 1911, which provides that no banking institution, in Pennsylvania, other than a chartered corporation, shall do business without a license granted by a state board composed of the governor, secretary of the commonwealth and the commissioner of banking. The penalty for a violation of the provisions of the act is imprisonment for not more than two years, or a fine of $1,000, or both, at the discretion of the court.

AT the side of Attorney-General Bell and the state officials during the hearing in court was Baron Paul Forster, Austro-Hungarian consul at Pittsburgh, who went to Philadelphia in the interest of hundreds of his countrymen, who have been fleeced out of their savings by unscrupulous private bankers in and around Pittsburgh.

BARON FORSTER made a statement, in which he said that he had powers of attorney from 2,400 foreign-born Americans, who have lost money through private banks. He also declared that this is not one-fourth of the total number of poor working men who have fallen victims to the wily bankers.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL BELL said that the state is determined to bring all such banking institutions within the bounds of the law. He declared that the villainy of the private bank owners, where there are communities of aliens is notorious, and that nearly every wrongdoer professes to take care of customers' money and send it to relatives in foreign countries without doing so.

THE attorney-general told the court that "we intend to arrest every man who does not hurry up and get within the bounds of the act. It is a shame to think that poor families in the old country are cheated out of the money which is sent to them to live upon by loving fathers and brothers working here. I tell you, it must stop and it will stop."

THE arrests at Philadelphia were at first thought to be merely test cases, but the attorney-general said that they mark the commencement of a campaign to abolish the fraud, the enormity of which is almost unbelievable.

"It is a matter for as much concern as is the liquor law. If a man is apprehended selling liquor without a license, he is sent to jail, and the act of 1911, regarding private bank licenses is no less positive than the liquor license law," concluded the attorney-general.

G. F. EMERY of the Live Stock National is remembering his friends with copies of "Statistics of Live Stock Trade for 1911," in vest-pocket form.

GOOD-BY, G. M. "Take keer o' yourself" (in California).

DON'T get excited, but the "Monetary Record" is out (this week) with a full page account of the New Orleans convention. Next thing to give you high-speed heart disease will be the Illinois proceedings book for the Peoria convention in October, 1911.

VICTOR B. JOHNSON, associate editor and business representative of the Banker's Magazine, New York, has opened offices at 115 So. La Salle Street. The publication is one of the best, and Mr. Johnson is of the "new school," and does not carry a hammer.

PRESIDENT B. F. HARRIS tells us that some of the letters he is receiving anent the all-banks supervision propaganda make him feel real good. Kind words and loyal friends help like the dickens. One prominent banker wrote Mr. Harris the following:

"WE take a general interest in all association work; favor the county organization plan, the publicity plan of taking the people into your confidence, and trying to get into theirs enough, so that they will not think that when a banker wants legislation, a good policy is to be 'fermest' it. Some actually believe that we have horns, but it is very much our own fault no doubt. We believe in the farm movement, and claim to be one of the original promoters in that, for in 1875 we adopted the name 'farmers' in our bank title."

"BELIEVE in supervision for all of the banks, regardless of character, and said 'amen,' when you made your Cairo speech, and read and are saving your article to the Tribune last week."

"WHAT the association members needs as much as anything is 'loyalty' to the officers, and to the association and its work. Too many are prone to be lukewarm and need prodding, whereas if we meant business and had co-operation as we should, it would almost be fearful for us to think of what strength we would have if we cared to concentrate it on any one thing. We are doing only our duty, and it has been a pleasure for us to co-operate with you in your work."

CASHIER.

NATIONAL BANK CLOSED IN OHIO

Toledo.—Following the suicide of J. W. Miller, cashier of the First National Bank of Kalida, Ohio, Tuesday, the directors, fearing a run on the institution, decided to close its doors pending the report of National Bank Examiner Smith. Miller's death was coincident with the arrival in town of Bank Examiner Smith to look into the affairs of the bank.

THE MONEY MARKET

Demand loans on collateral have followed commercial paper rates in dropping below 4 per cent. Money loaned at 3½ per cent barely pays overhead charges, according to Chicago bankers, and leaves little profit to the banks. Much of the idle money which has accumulated in local national banks within the last month consists of deposits of country institutions.

Mainly About Banks and Bankers

PRESS dispatches tell us that over at Brockton, Mass., at a leap-year party, thirty promising young bachelors were auctioned off to as many eligible young ladies, as a part of the entertainment at a church social.

NOTHING of the kind happened at the Montrose Hotel entertainment in Cedar Rapids the other evening, where seven young bachelors entertained their friends at a reception and dance. Among the hosts were John Burianek, Jr., and John Montague Ely, cashier and assistant cashier of the Peoples Savings Bank of that city. We are advised that the next time anything of this kind is pulled off in Cedar Rapids, Kent Ferman and J. E. Hamilton intend to have an auctioneer present, deeming that the only way they ever can get Burianek up to the sticking point.

WORD comes from San Diego, Cal., that no sooner had George M. Reynolds gotten his sea legs at Coronado Beach than he promptly denied a foolish interview which has been going the rounds of the press while he was crossing the prairies going west.

THE interview which he has so promptly killed quoted Mr. Reynolds as saying: "The money power lies in the hands of a dozen men, and I plead guilty to being one of them."

NOTHING more unlike Mr. Reynolds could have been conceived, for he is the least boastful of all the truly big men in the country. Furthermore, he holds no such populist opinion about the money power as the quotation would seem to indicate. He is to be at Del Coronado Beach a few days longer, and will put in part time at each of the southern California resorts in an attempt to break all of his previous records by staying away from business at least two months.

ONE of the Chicago newspapers has started a crusade against the loan sharks, after having banished their advertising from its columns a few months ago. This happened at the time that two young bankers pleaded guilty to having robbed the institution for which they worked, in order that they might pay excess charges to a gang of loan sharks.

THE fight which the Chicago Tribune has started will be assisted absolutely free of charge by nearly one hundred of Chicago's leading attorneys, to all who will bring them complaints. These young attorneys deserve the support of every banker in the city in this fight.

ON the other hand, the loan sharks have doubled their advertising in the other papers, and are calling themselves everything from plain "bankers" to such titles as "National Loan and Trust Company," "Peoples Loan and Trust Company," and other titles which ought to land them in the penitentiary.

ILLINOIS needs a new banking bill to put all forms of banking under direct state supervision; also to absolutely prevent the use of banking titles by loan sharks, pawn shops and other doubtful callings. Everyone in Illinois will remember the Hurd statute which was to have put an end to the use of corporate titles by unincorporated individuals and concerns. This was intended to protect banking titles, but through some chicanery or other, there have been piled up decisions of the attorney-general, and probably also of the courts, which put the burden of proving "damage by deception" on the complainant before he can recover anything. In other words, the state of Illinois has refused absolutely to enforce that particular law. That is why almost every leading bank title in Chicago is being used by individuals for private gain and advantage.

QUITE a number of bankers who have been anxious to get into the "financier" class recently have been joining in underwritings. Rumor has it that quite a few of them have been nipped. This ought to be a lesson to the others.

IT is quite one thing to be able to tell one's friends that one is "in the underwriting of Chicago railways, for instance, along with J. P. Morgan," and another to have about one-half of the amount of the subscription dumped unceremoniously upon you with notice that the underwriting syndicate has been dissolved.

SOMETHING very much like this has happened quite recently. If you are in a position to talk about it, tell some of your friends, so that they may stay out of the easy-money class, oftentimes at a profit.

INDIVIDUALS who compose the directorate of the Century Savings at Des Moines have purchased a nice new corner lot at 5th and Locust. Rumor has it that a ten-story building will soon be erected for the bank, which has shown wonderful gain and progress under the presidency of L. E. Stevens. It is also rumored that the Mechanics Savings of the same city is to have a new building.

GROUP No. 1 of the Wisconsin Bankers Association held its meeting at Eau Claire on Wednesday of this week. The principal speaker was Jas. K. Ilsley, president of the Marshall & Ilsley Bank at Milwaukee, who talked on the proposed monetary legislation.

THE guests and visitors were called to order by J. W. McCoy, and were welcomed to the city by Mayor Fleming, formerly cashier of the Union Savings Bank. The Wisconsin groups will make a specialty this year of the work of the Wisconsin Advancement Association. Banks in Group No. 1 are very anxious to help. W. H. Mylrey is the secretary of the association, and made a talk at Eau Claire.

GENERAL talk turned on the new banking laws and how the bankers liked them. It seemed to be the consensus of opinion that they are the best the state ever has had. An evening entertainment at the Eau Claire club rooms concluded the session.

CHICAGOANS are receiving reminders from their old friend Col. John T. Dickinson at Corpus Christi. The colonel, along with others, has built the Corpus Beach Hotel, which the booklet shows to be one of the largest and finest in the country. The booklet also tells much about the climate and resources of lower Texas, and is well worth the attention of anyone who may be expecting to finish out the winter season amid more salubrious surroundings.

TEXAS INDUSTRIAL CONGRESS at Dallas is sending out particulars about its $10,000 in gold to be awarded to the farmers of Texas for model demonstration farms and best crop yields for 1912. This association is endeavoring to teach conservation, rotation and diversification of crops. The prize money is divided into classes for farmers, boys' and girls' corn clubs, cotton clubs, forage crops and kaffir corn. The conditions are easy and particulars will be sent upon request.

CONTRARY to general expectation, the commercial vehicle section of the automobile show drew a much larger attendance than was anticipated. Interest in the truck is country-wide. Those who are most enthusiastic believe that even the farmers will use them, at a great saving to themselves and on account of other advantages. The publicity end of the work was in the hands of H. W. Perry, to whom much credit is due for the great public interest shown by the large attendance.

HILLYARD (Wash.) State Bank has had a prosperous year and shows deposits of a quarter of a million. All of the officers were re-elected at the annual meeting, at which an extra dividend of 6 per cent was declared in addition to the regular dividend of 10 per cent. Besides this $2,000 were added to the surplus. The officers are: W. W. Cooper, president; W. G. Cushing, vice-president; and H. C. Howe, cashier.

RAND-McNALLY COMPANY of this city has issued a souvenir guide to Chicago, which contains not only the celebrated Rand-McNally street maps, but a full description of all the points of interest within the city and how to reach them. Practically all the prominent streets and large buildings are shown by illustration. Some big Chicago bank could make a great hit by distributing this souvenir guide amongst its correspondents who visit this city most frequently. They would go like hot cakes at the state convention also.

MISSISSIPPI VALLEY TRUST of St. Louis sends out a very neat little house organ entitled "Service." It tells in some detail what the great Mississippi Valley Trust does for its patrons, and all of the many other things which it is willing to do. One department of the booklet is intended to stimulate the inclinations of the savings depositor to further increase his balance.

What Bank Commissioners Say of State Supervision

THE CHICAGO BANKER is able to furnish this week a symposium showing the condition of the banking laws in most of the states, so far as they relate to state control of banking in all its forms. Where private banking is positively prohibited, a notation will be made. Where it is segregated or partially regulated, as it is in New York, that will be made plain. The information has been furnished to this paper by the state banking commissioner, or chief examiner, where such are maintained, and in other cases by the state auditor, where the supervision of state banking has been placed in his hands, as a department of his office, just as is the case in Illinois. In many cases the commissioners express themselves on the subject of uniform banking laws for all the states, and comment very freely on the increase of business which followed the placing of private banking under state control in the various states. Attention also is called to the fact that in states where severe opposition was shown, a number of the private bankers promptly went out of business when they saw the inspector or state examiner approaching.

Commissioner of Banking A. E. Kuolt of Wisconsin sends the following very helpful and illuminating letter:

Delaware Has No Private Banks

The promptest of all replies came from the state of Delaware, which perhaps has the cleanest record of all the states on the subject of state control of banking. The state does not permit it, however well it may be disguised, except under full state supervision and inspection. There are no private banks in the state. Delaware falls slightly behind some of the advanced states in that it does not have its banking department handle receiverships. They are conducted under the general laws, as they are in some of the other states. The state commissioner writes that he would support a movement for uniform state banking laws in all the states, believing it would have a beneficial effect in elevating the standard of banking. His position is that the states where the banking laws are behind the times would take rank along with those where they have been advanced; that there would be no retrograde movement whatever on account of the laws being made uniform. He also believes that the adoption of the National Reserve Association plan will not bring about this reform, as some contend; but that it must remain a matter for adoption in the state legislatures. The state commissioner is a strong advocate of separate banking department in each state, rather than having the banking business conducted as a department in the state auditor's office. The state commissioner of Delaware has supreme power in his department, and can suggest nothing in

Following is a summary of the opinions of many competent and influential state banking superintendents, from the leading states, on questions now before the bankers of Illinois for decision the way of power which ought to be or could be added. The record of the state of Delaware is absolutely clean, so far as state supervision and inspection go.

Wisconsin Has a Valuable Lesson

Commissioner of Banking A. E. Kuolt, of Wisconsin, sends the following very helpful and illuminating letter:

"In reply to your inquiry dated February 1st, I will say that the banking laws now in force in Wisconsin were adopted in 1903, and were amended and strengthened by each successive legislature. State banks, savings banks, and trust companies are under the supervision of the 'state banking department.' So-called private banking was abolished in 1903, and there have been no private banks operating in Wisconsin since then.

Answers to your questions follow: (1) Does your state permit private banking without state supervision or inspection? A. Private banks were placed under supervision of the state bank examiner in 1895. Experience, extending over eight years, proved that supervision added to the prestige of private banks, often beyond their deserts. It proved that supervision is misleading, inasmuch as the bank might be found solvent, when the banker, engaged in other enterprises beyond the ken of the bank examiner, might be actually insolvent, and the failure of his other enterprises would, invariably, precipitate a failure of his bank. It proved that supervision of private banks as such is a shadow—without a substance. On the strength of this experience the legislature of 1903 abolished private banking. (Sec. 2024-78m W. S.)

(2) Did the private bankers of your state oppose the new law? A. Private bankers of Wisconsin opposed the law last referred to above. Not until a motion was adopted by the committee of the legislature to abolish state supervision of private banks did opposition melt away. This merely emphasizes the value of the prestige of state supervision above referred to.

(3) What percentage of them had any trouble in qualifying under the state law? A. 6⅔ per cent.

(4) Did incorporation increase their business; if so, how much? A. Incorporation decidedly and materially increased their business.

(5) Does your department handle bank receiverships, and at what cost as compared with the former system of court receiverships? A. Yes, under a recent law. (Chap. 396, 1909.) We have had no experience as yet.

Section of the Law Quoted

(6) Quote the paragraph from your present law which relates to state bank inspection, and give a list of the penalties, if any, which it provides. A. Section 2018—1. 'It shall be the duty of the commissioner of banking, and he shall have the power by himself, his deputy, or by any examiner he may appoint for that purpose, to examine at least twice in each year the cash, bills, collaterals, securities, assets, books of account, condition and affairs of each bank, trust company bank, and mutual savings bank doing business in this state, except national banks. For that purpose he may examine on oath any of the officers, agents, directors, clerks, stockholders, customers or depositors thereof, touching the affairs and business of such institution.

'2. The commissioner of banking shall examine, or cause to be examined, any bank when requested by the board of directors of such bank. The commissioner of banking shall also ascertain whether such bank transacts its business at the place designated in the articles of incorporation, and whether its business is conducted in the manner prescribed by law. Such commissioner of banking may, in the performance of his official duties, issue subpoenas and administer oaths; provided, that, in case of any refusal to obey a subpoena issued by him or his deputy, such refusal shall be at once reported to the circuit court of the circuit in which the bank is located, and said court shall enforce obedience in the manner provided by law for enforcing obedience to the subpoenas of said court.'

Section 2024-23. 'Whenever any officer in charge of a bank shall refuse to submit the books, papers and concerns of such bank to the inspection of the commissioner of banking, his deputy, or examiner appointed hereunder, or refuse to be examined on oath touching the concerns of the bank, the commissioner of banking may inform the attorney-general, whose duty it shall be to institute an action to procure a judgment dissolving such corporation.'

(7) Do you think it fair that incorporated banks, which pay taxes on their capital stock, should be forced to compete with private banks, which do not maintain a known capital, and consequently do not pay any taxes? A. I think the unfairness is obvious.

(8) Would you support a movement for uniform state banking laws in all the states?

A. Under otherwise equal conditions, I can see no objection to a uniform state banking law.

(9) What would be the effect of such a law? A. A uniform law would tend to strengthen weak banking laws.

(10) Do you believe that the adoption of the National Reserve Association plan will have a tendency to cause uniform state banking laws? A. The National Reserve Association as proposed will cause more uniform banking, but may not have any effect on uniform banking laws.

(11) Do you believe that each state should have a separate banking department? A. In each state there should be a banking department independent of other departments. This is the case in Wisconsin now.

(12) What powers should the state banking commissioner have which are not provided in the laws of your state? A. The Wisconsin banking law is pretty comprehensive in this respect."

No Private Banking in Indiana

The banking department of Indiana is in charge of the auditor of state, and Harry L. Arnold is in charge as "Bank Clerk." Mr. Arnold writes in reply to inquiry about as follows:

(1) This state does not permit private banking without state supervision. Private bank law enacted 1905—in effect December 1, 1907.

(2) Was opposed by private bankers. To what extent I cannot inform you.

(3) One chain of 4 banks failed at once and about 6 followed soon after first examination.

(4) Business increased—double—not one could exist at this time without state supervision—if law permitted.

(5) This department does not handle receiverships—but should, in my opinion. They can be handled 50 per cent saving to the depositors.

(6) Copy of Indiana law sent under separate cover.

(7) Not fair to force supervised banks to compete with unincorporated banks.

(8) Yes! I would support a movement for uniform state banking laws. Monetary plan would have tendency toward uniformity.

(11) Each state should have a separate banking department. Gives better supervision and brings examinations nearer to the bankers.

(12) States should have a law, creating a Charter Board, composed of the governor, secretary of state and auditor of state, to whom should be referred all applications for charters for state and private banks and trust companies. This board to have supervision over the organization of new banks; thus preventing too many banks in one locality; it being better to have one strong bank than two weak ones; to see that the men interested in new banks are practical bankers, with knowledge of the banking business and experience.

Also a law requiring the approval of reserve agents by the auditor or state superintendent of banks.

A law providing penalties of the proper nature for violations.

A law giving the auditor or banking commissioner authority to remove any bank official for cause, or suspend him, pending removal before a court.

A law regulating the amount of money which a bank or trust company may lend one person, firm, corporation; same being based on capital and surplus.

Geo. C. Von Tuyl, Jr., superintendent of banking for the state of New York, writes an interesting letter. He says:

A law requiring trust companies to report to the auditor on call, the same as state and private banks.

Letter from Geo. C. Van Tuyl, Jr.

"The present banking law of this state has been in force since 1892, and the law of 1892 was a revision of previous statutes, the banking department and the office of superintendent of banks having been created in 1851. While there have been amendments of this statute from time to time, the main features of the law have remained the same for many years. This state still permits private banking in most sections of the state without supervision, having held that it is the constitutional right of a citizen to engage in this business. Certain private bankers in cities of the first class have been placed under the supervision of the state comptroller by a recent law. For details with regard to this statute and its enactment, we would refer you to the Hon. William Sohmer, comptroller, Albany, New York.

"The private bankers of the state, as a class, did not oppose the enactment of this particular statute. They have quite generally opposed the enactment of a law which would make all private bankers subject to strict supervision. We could not, of course, state the percentage, but the state comptroller will, I presume, be able to give you the percentage of applications for license which have been rejected by him. Private bankers do not incorporate in this state.

"No corporation can engage in the banking business in this state without incorporating under the banking law and become subject to the supervision of the superintendent of banks. For a few years this department has had the power to liquidate failed state institutions which have been under its supervision, in practically the same manner as the comptroller of the currency liquidates national banks. Such comparisons as we have been able to make with the old receivership system demonstrate the advantage of liquidation by this department. It would be impossible to quote, in the space of an ordinary letter, paragraphs of the banking law which relate to state bank examination and supervision.

New York Likes Her Banking Law

"While incorporated banks are taxed in this state, the tax is not onerous and probably would not exceed that which a private banker, if properly assessed, would be compelled to pay upon the funds he has invested in his banking business. If there is any inequality in this respect, I should say that the fault lay with the assessor, rather than with the law.

"Your next question, as to whether we would feel like supporting a movement for uniform state banking laws in all the states, would admit of several interpretations. Our own law is now quite satisfactory, and we would certainly not be in favor of uniform state banking laws if the safeguards now established in connection with our own financial institutions would be diminished.

"If the uniform state banking law would make the laws of all states with regard to incorporated banks as rigorous as our own, we believe that the effect of uniformity would be beneficial. It would seem that the adoption of a national reserve plan would have a tendency to cause uniformity in the banking laws of all states. In our judgment, each state should certainly have a separate banking department. As intimated, the banking law of this state as a whole confers adequate powers of supervision upon the superintendent of banks. There is considerable agitation to have these powers extended to corporations which are not now under his supervision and also to private bankers. It would seem that some supervision should be exercised over all persons engaged in the banking business and that the powers of supervision now granted the superintendent of banks might well be extended to some corporations over which he now has no control."

Proposed New Banking Law for Mississippi

Such bank supervision as they have in Mississippi is exercised by the state auditor, the present incumbent being D. L. Thompson. Mr. Thompson writes: "There is before the legislature now in session a bill creating the department of bank commissioner and examiner, which we are very much in need of; and I think the bill will become a law, as it seems to be meeting with general and favorable consideration."

The banking laws of Mississippi compel private banks, as well as state banks and trust companies, to have a fixed, paid-in capital before opening for business. The minimum is $10,000 in towns of 500 or less; above 500, $15,000 is the lowest amount of capital permitted. These amounts must be paid in in cash before the beginning of business, or everybody connected with the enterprise is subject to a fine of $100, which fine is also imposed for the making of any false statements to the auditor. Directors of banks are compelled by law to make a personal inspection of their own banks on the first Wednesday of January, April, July and October of each year, and to furnish a report of the same to the auditor of public accounts. If they fail to do this, the auditor may impose the penalties prescribed, and if the law is not complied with within thirty days, suit is to be instituted in court. Another section of the law compels every individual (private banker), bank or corporation to make public four statements per year, showing a complete balance of its books of account. Clearing houses are authorized by the state banking law. The state banking law of 1906 forbids "the creation or organization of any branch bank in this state after this chapter goes into effect." Such banks as were maintaining branches when this act went into effect in 1906, are placed under the same regulation as other forms of banking, and are compelled to maintain not less than $10,000 of free capital for the exclusive use of each branch. This pretty effectively takes care of the branch-banking evil, which afflicts a great many of the southern states.

Private Banks Must Have Known Capital and Make Reports

Section 256 of the banking act of 1906 compels private banks to have a fixed capital, and to make four annual statements per year of their business, under the following provisions:

"Every bank, and every person, corporation or association of persons receiving money on deposit, or issuing, buying or selling exchange, or otherwise doing a banking business, shall make a balanced statement, under oath of the owner, or one or more of the officers of the bank to the auditor of public accounts, at least four times each year, of the condition of the bank or banking business, showing the resources and liabilities thereof, and the amount of the indebtedness of the bank which is owing by its owners, or stockholders and officers and directors, on the bank forms prescribed by the auditor, and in duplicate. On receiving the statement, the auditor shall examine it, and if found correct, shall file one copy and return the other to the bank endorsed, 'Examined and found correct,' and the bank shall thereupon, within ten days, cause the same to be published with the indorsement of the auditor, at its own expense, in a newspaper published at the place of the domicile of the bank, or if there be none so published, in a convenient newspaper having a circulation in such place."

Iowa in Same Boat as Illinois

Iowa is in the same boat as Illinois so far as unrestricted banking and lack of a state banking department are concerned. Activity and political promise of the private banker about the same. State Auditor John L. Bleakly says he would favor a separate banking department. He would not support a movement for uniform state banking laws. Iowa has suffered from "free" banking fully as much as Illinois. Reasons for it same in both cases.

No Private Banks in Nebraska

Replying to our letter of inquiry, E. Royse, secretary of the state banking board of Nebraska, underscores "Do not permit private banking in any form in the state of Nebraska." Summarizing Mr. Royse's response, it is learned that when the new state banking law went into effect, there was but one private bank in the state. Even before that time the legislature had enough wisdom to compel private banks to do their business under strict supervision and under all of the restrictions imposed upon incorporated banks. This shows that Nebraska profited by the example of certain other states wherein private banking was permitted to get such a foothold that it was difficult to root it out. Nebraska has one shortcoming, in that the state banking board does not handle bank receiverships, a feature of modern bank supervision which has shown the very best results in all of the states where it has been adopted. Mr. Royse says that he does not think it would be fair for any state to compel incorporated banks, paying a tax upon fixed capital, to compete with banks which do not maintain a capital account. So far as Mr. Royse is at present informed upon the question, he would favor as much uniformity in state banking laws as possible; he believes, however, that absolute uniformity would not be possible at first. The Nebraska official is emphatically in favor of each state

We will welcome the opportunity of proving to you the benefits which will accrue from forming a connection with us having a separate banking department, believing that the laws can be made much more effective in that way and that the supervising officers are brought into much closer touch with the officers in the field.

Among the new powers which Mr. Royse thinks the state banking board of Nebraska should have would be the power to reject applications for charters in localities already amply provided with banking facilities. He points out that this is one of the greatest dangers of the future, providing unfair competition for banks already established and reducing the strength of all banks in the community, where there are too many for the demands of the population. This summary puts Nebraska in the "A" class, so far as state supervision is concerned, inasmuch as no other kind of banking is permitted within the state; and leaves them short only in the one prerogative that the banking board is not authorized to refuse charters in crowded locations.

Alabama Likes New Banking Law

When the Alabama bankers convention meets May 18th and 19th at Mobile, the bank bill which was passed as a result of the association's efforts, will have been in force for one year. It was a good bill and the banking situation in Alabama has been much benefited by its wise administration. Superintendent of Banks, the Hon. A. E. Walker, will review the operations of this measure and make several important recommendations in connection therewith. James R. Stevens, national bank examiner, and L. P. Hosmer, state bank examiner, will have papers upon interesting and vital topics concerning bank supervision and auditing as duties of the state.

The association is about to enter a new field of activity which gives promise of making its services still more beneficial to members and the business interests of the state. This work will have to do with the promotion of scientific agriculture and encouragement of immigration. Commissioners Kolb and Cowart will address the convention, pointing out the best ways that standing committees of bankers can co-operate with their respective departments of state government. G. Grosvenor Dawe, managing director Southern Commercial Congress, also will have something to say in furtherance of the campaign for the more rapid development of the South.

Private Banks Supervised in Oklahoma

J. D. Lankford, bank commissioner for Oklahoma, answers clearly and with emphasis all the questions asked. He says: "A bill passed by the state legislature, approved February 14, 1908, put the state and private banks in Oklahoma under the supervision of the state banking department. Replying to the questions as outlined in your letter, I beg to advise:

1. Our state does not permit private banks to operate, hence all such institutions are under the supervision of the banking department.

2. The few private banks in existence at the time our law became effective, did not oppose the new law.

3. Not more than three or four banks had any trouble whatever in qualifying under the state law.

4. All banks doing business at the time of statehood, either held a territorial charter or had been granted a federal charter by the government. This latter class of banks applies to those doing business in what is known as the old Indian Territory.

5. Whenever a state bank becomes insolvent, the same is taken over by the bank commissioner and liquidated under the provision of our law.

6. For information in regard to the inspection of banks, I beg to refer you to Section 35, Article 1, and Sections 3 and 6, Article 3.

7. Private banks cannot compete with the incorporated banks in this state inasmuch as our law does not permit such banks to exist.

8. I should heartily support a movement in favor of uniform state banking laws in all states.

9. The effect upon our financial situation as a whole, would in my judgment be very materially benefited by such a law.

10. I do not think the adoption of the National Association plan would have any tendency whatever to cause uniform state banking laws.

11. I believe in separate state banking departments, inasmuch as they must deal with local conditions.

12. The state bank commissioner, in my opinion, of our state, should have power to regulate the number of state banks allowed in any one city or town. The way our law now stands, any three or more persons can organize a state bank, regardless of whether or not financial condition of the community will justify such organization.

I am enclosing you under separate cover, a copy of our law, which will no doubt be of interest to you.

West Virginia Supervises All Kinds

West Virginia stands on very firm ground and has state supervision over all forms of banking. Samuel V. Matthews is the state banking commissioner and he ably sums up the situation as follows:

Our present banking law was passed in 1907, putting all forms of banking institutions under state supervision. Our law does not contemplate the organization or existence of private banking institutions. All banks must be incorporated.

5. This department has the power to appoint receivers of banks with the approval of the governor. After the receiver is appointed he is under the direction of the court of the county where the bank is located. We have no further power, except that we can remove the receiver for negligence or sufficient cause of any kind.

6. We enclose you a copy of our banking

Pennsylvania Trying Out New Law

William H. Smith, commissioner of banking for Pennsylvania, is having the time of his life trying to enforce the provisions of the new Pennsylvania state law putting private bankers under state supervision. This law went into effect December 1, 1911. About seventy-five of the private bankers of Philadelphia and Pittsburgh raised a large fund and threw the whole subject into the courts. Several private bankers have been arrested, and will be placed on trial to determine the constitutionality of the new act. Commissioner Smith believes that the new law is fully adequate for the occasion, and instead of replying directly to our letter of inquiry, sent a copy of the new law, together with some newspaper clippings, showing the condition of affairs so far as court action has gone.

The new banking act has a section which provides "That, except as provided in section 8, no individual, partnership or unincorporated association, shall hereafter engage directly or indirectly in the business of receiving deposits of money for safe-keeping, or for the purpose of transmission to another, or for any other purpose, without first obtaining from a board consisting of the state treasurer, the secretary of the commonwealth and the commissioner of banking, a license to engage in such business." Before a license can issue, the private banker is compelled by this new law to file a written statement, verified under oath, showing the amount of the assets and the liabilities of the applicant. He must furnish a full description of the place where he proposes to engage in business, and the full names and addresses of all the partners or members of his unincorporated association or partnership. In addition to all this, he must file with the commissioner, a bond with approved sureties, conditioned upon his faithful holding of the moneys that may be deposited with him or his bank. Failure to repay a fund so deposited works a forfeiture of the bond. The bonds specified are to be from $10,000 to $50,000 each. The act fully describes the method whereby the banker may deposit government bonds, or other approved securities, in lieu of the surety bond.

The applicant for a private banker's commission must publish his application once a week for at least three weeks, in two newspapers of general circulation in the county where he proposes to do business. After having done all this, it still lies within the discretion of the board to approve or not approve his application. A license fee of $50 is charged. The license is not transferable and must be posted conspicuously in the place of business. It is the intention of the law that, where bonds are forfeited on account of the failure of the banker to repay depositors, the money obtained shall constitute a trust fund to help pay off the depositors. In short, the Pennsylvania law is a pure guaranty of deposits, so far as newly formed private banks are concerned.

Banks Must Be Operated Under Supervision

A feature of supervision which the Pennsylvania commissioner has over private banks under this new law, is uniformity in books of account. Each licensee must keep his books as directed, and must make full and complete records of all transactions, and at all times be able to show the relation of assets to liabilities. Twice a year the bank is inspected, and a written statement under oath is made by the banker. This statement is to be published three times in a local paper. Any failure to do these things will bring about a revocation of the license, along with other penalties prescribed; the bank must close within twenty-four hours after revocation. The law is very severe on any person, partnership or unincorporated association which shall attempt to carry on the business of banking without first having obtained a license and filled a bond. They must not use in any advertisement, letterhead or publication of any description, the word "banking," or any equivalent term, in any language whatsoever. To do so is to be guilty of a misdemeanor, and puts the transgressor in the same position as if he had made a false affidavit, or had failed to make and publish reports after having obtained a license. There is a fine of $20 per day for failure to report, and a fine of $1,000 or two years imprisonment, or both, or either, in the discretion of the court for making false reports.

The Pennsylvania law at its very best, came about as a compromise. The private bankers of that state had for years been able to defeat such legislation, but finally compromised on an arrangement whereby private banks having been in business for seven years in one location, were not forced to come within the provisions of the law. This is the feature of the act which the private bankers expect to use to defeat it, in that it makes an exception of those who have been in business for a certain length of time.

All Banks Under Supervision in Florida

Comptroller A. C. Croom, of the Florida state treasury department, writes that the banking laws of his state are satisfactory, and have met all of the requirements in exercising supervision over the banks within the state. Florida added a chapter to her state banking laws in 1907, which gave the comptroller entire supervision of banks and power to "examine into the affairs of every bank, banker, banking firm, banking company, branch bank or association doing business in the state, except national banks." The law is sufficiently stringent to give full power for the most thorough examinations. The commissioner may have access to all the books, papers, records and securities, and is authorized to examine any of the officers or employees of the bank under oath. All banks, including private banks, must be examined at least once each year, provided that savings banks shall never be examined less than twice a year. All banks and bankers, except national banks, are

By C. C. Burford

The toll of death among Illinois bankers has been unusually heavy this winter. Among those who have lately passed away we place the name of Henry Green, cashier of the First National of Sterling, at the age of sixty-six years. Mr. Green, a banker of many years in Sterling, was a native of Racine, Wisconsin.

H. G. Porter, president of the First National of DeLand, Piatt county, died at the state hospital at Watertown, January 29th. Mr. Porter was sixty-five years of age and was the owner of considerable choice farming land around his home town. Feeble health overtook him and at length his family removed him to Watertown, where he died.

Hiram Wilson, cashier of the First National of Geneseo, and a pioneer of Henry county, is dead at the advanced age of ninety years. He was one of the wealthiest citizens of Henry county and his fortune was estimated at one million dollars.

The deaths of George H. Monroe, a Joliet banker and treasurer of the national waterways commission, and of Albert D. Metcalf, president of the Oneida State Bank, in a town of the same name near Galesburg, were mentioned in last week's CHICAGO BANKER. Another well-known Illinois banker to pass away is Seymour G. Bronson, a former banker and also a former mayor of Rockford. Mr. Bronson was eighty-five years of age and died at Fort Plain, New York. He was born in Wyoming county, New York.

The death of the late Judge Alfred M. Craig of Galesburg a few weeks ago is recalled when the inventory of his estate placed the amount of his bank stock at par value at about $100,000. As this stock had a book value of much more than that amount it demonstrates that Judge Craig was a prominent banker as well as an eminent jurist.

Kinley Likes Chapter Members

Professor David Kinley, dean of the graduate school, director of the courses in business administration and professor of economics in the University of Illinois, who spoke at the annual banquet of the Chicago Chapter of the American Institute of Banking on the evening of January 27th, has a good word to say about the commendable work which the junior bankers of Chicago are doing. Having had a wide experience as a teacher and investigator of economic and financial topics, the word of commendation from Professor Kinley will be appreciated by chapter members.

Professor Kinley gave the following statement to a representative of THE CHICAGO BANKER:

"It gave me much pleasure to meet the members of the Chicago Chapter of the American Institute of Banking at their eleventh annual banquet, to which they had done me the honor of inviting me, with a request that I make some remarks. I have known something of the chapter during the past ten years and believe that the educational and social features have contributed greatly to make the work and life of the young men in the banks more efficient and pleasant. The Institute has been a benefit to them and to their employers. This opinion, which I have held simply from studying the work of the chapter, was strengthened when I looked into the faces of the members on January 27th, and talked with some of the officers concerning the work. The Chicago Chapter is to be congratulated on its efficiency and high standing in the Institute."

Will County for Soil Improvement

The farmers and bankers of Will county are hard at work on the "back-to-the-soil" propaganda. As a result there will be a campaign for an experiment station for the county; a boys' corn contest with prizes amounting to $500; a monster corn show; a demand for road legislation of an advanced character; and a farmers' banquet this month "just to start the ball rolling." Doubtless the Woodruffs and all of the lively First National of Joliet people will aid these various worthy undertakings.

Springfield Studies Correctly

As an evidence that Springfield people are interested in practical economic questions we note that the principal theme of the mid-winter high school commencement was "Thrift." The virtue of thrift, and the application of thrift to the problems of government, business and the home were discussed by the high school graduates. Surely this is a valuable theme for boys and girls of eighteen to be interested in. Their elders in Springfield are also interested in vital questions, for the second noon-day luncheon of the Springfield Commercial Association, held at the St. Nicholas Hotel, discussed "Crop Improvement." We learned that "the question created an unusual interest and there was a demand for tickets for the luncheon."

Citizens League in Peoria

The Illinois section of the National Citizens League will hold a conference for the promotion of a sound banking system in the Jefferson Hotel in Peoria February 21st. U. G. Orendorff of Canton is president of the Illinois section and John M. Glenn of Chicago is the secretary.

National Bank, will be a candidate for the democratic nominations for treasurer of Illinois. He has been in the banking business in Danville since 1885 and served in the forty-second and the forty-third sessions of the Illinois legislature. Since retiring from the state assembly he has served as democratic chairman for Vermilion county.

Illinois Notes

The Title and Trust Company of Crawford County has changed its name to the Title and Trust Company of the Wabash Valley. The company, located in Robinson, increases its capital from $25,000 to $30,000, and the number of directors from four to eight.

F. F. Butzow, cashier of the banking and investment firm of A. Goodell & Sons of Loda, Iroquois county, is announced as a candidate for the republican nomination to the state legislature to fill the position left vacant by the refusal of George H. Hamilton, president of the First National of Watseka, to run again. Mr. Butzow has had a wide experience in local and in county politics.

John E. Keene, vice-president of the Dime Savings and Trust Company of Peoria, entertained a party of forty friends at the Creve Cœur Club in that city in honor of Dr. F. J. McConnell, of DePauw University, who delivered a course of lectures at the First Congregational church in Peoria. Mr. Keene is a graduate of DePauw University and Dr. McConnell is president of that institution. Clergymen, educators and business men were invited to the luncheon.

Former Mayor Busse of Chicago, representing a coal company of that city, and C. W. Stilly of Benton, were the principal parties in a deal to secure options for Chicago capitalists on 8,000 acres of virgin coal land near Benton.

The First National of Peoria has re-elected the following officers: President, Charles R. Wheeler; vice-president and cashier, W. E. Stone; assistant cashiers, George M. Bush and Arthur Bennett.

The First National of Hoopston, J. S. McFerren, president, reports deposits of $514,083 January 29th, the highest deposits in that vicinity.

Following the election of William C. White as president of the Illinois National of Peoria.

A. S. Oakford, formerly vice-president of the bank, has been named chairman of the board of directors.

Herbert Woods, with the First National of Springfield, is a candidate for the democratic nomination as recorder of deeds of Sangamon county.

Rev. W. T. McConnell, until recently minister of the Christian denomination in Arcola, has been elected cashier of the First National of DeLand. Mr. McConnell formerly was a minister in DeLand.

It is reported that the State Bank of Herscher, near Pontiac, and the Citizens Bank of that village are to be consolidated. The State Bank will take over the Citizens.

The record price for real estate in Douglas county was recently reached when seventeen acres of land lying between Garrett and Atwood, two villages, sold for $6,000, or $352 an acre. This land has no suburban qualities and is near no large town.

NEWS LETTER By Mortimer I. Stevens

WISCONSIN

Business men and bankers generally, throughout the city of Milwaukee and the state, are assuming a more optimistic tone of late, and report a substantial increase in the volume of business transacted among the leading mercantile houses of the city. The trade has been fully up to the standard set in former years, while the manufacturers of staple lines report a steady list of orders, and splendid prospects for future trade. The larger manufacturers are preparing for a good business during the summer months, and in a number of instances some increase has been made in the working forces during the past few weeks. Demand for loans at the different banks is about normal for this time of the year, and the general character is such that while the banks are not inclined to believe that there will be any extensive improvement or alterations, there will be a steady trade during the summer. Money rates remain unchanged. Among bond salesmen there appears to be a feeling that within the next few weeks this trade will see a marked improvement, while at the present time it is reported as about normal.

As They Teach Banking in the Public Schools

State banks in Wisconsin received a manifestly unfair comparison with the national banks in a text-book prepared by a well-known school publishing company, which is now in use in our Wisconsin schools. Some of the statements made in this text-book are as follows:

"National banks are organized under and subject to national law and authority. State banks are purely state institutions organized under and subject to state law and authority."

"National banks issue circulating notes, while state banks do not."

"National banks are subject to a more critical examination than state banks."

"National banks are required to make fuller returns to United States officials than state banks are required to make to state officials."

"National banks are required to invest a portion of their capital in United States bonds. State banks are not."

"On the whole, the numerous requirements of the national bank act strengthen public confidence in national banks and make them more popular institutions than state banks."

When the attention of State Banking Commissioner Kuolt was called to this text-book, he lost no time in communicating with the authors of the book, who have since indicated a willingness to revise same, and have asked Mr. Kuolt to assist them in preparing a new chapter covering this branch.

Ilsey Talks on Monetary Plan

At the eighth annual meeting of Group I of the Wisconsin Bankers Association, held at Eau Claire, February 7th, James K. Ilsey, Milwaukee, spoke upon the "Central Reserve Association." Mr. Ilsey is a deep student of this most important subject, and his paper received special attention. The Hon. W. H. Mylrea, secretary Wisconsin Advancement Association, spoke during the morning session on "Development of Wisconsin." Over one hundred bankers were in attendance at this meeting, who pronounced it one of the most successful meetings ever held in this state.

Waukesha Man Elected Cashier

Carl H. Sawyer has been elected cashier of the State Bank of North Lake. Mr. Sawyer was formerly cashier of the National Exchange Bank of Waukesha. The bank at North Lake was erected last summer, and has been transacting business for only a few months. W. W. Dayton was formerly cashier.

Many New State Banks

With the issuance February 2d of the certificate of authority to the Outagamie State Bank of Appleton to commence the business of banking, the state banking department has chartered nine new state banks in less than two months. This record is considered unusual. The capital of the Appleton institution is $50,000. Frank Fries is president, and Wm. F. Kamps is cashier. Another state bank was chartered in Appleton in December.

Mr. Wall is a graduate of Harvard University, and has been a close student of banking methods, having been prominently connected with the Milwaukee Chapter of the American Institute of Banking. His papers upon banking given before that body have been widely discussed and copied by the financial press of the country.

State Bank at Greenleaf

The village of Greenleaf, Brown county, will have a state bank in the near future. A meeting of business men and farmers of that village and vicinity was held, and steps taken to organize a state bank. It will be necessary to erect a suitable building for the new institution, and it will be early summer before the bank will be open for business. Messrs. T. E. Connell, Thomas and John Flatley, and L. P. Fox, of Chilton, attended the meeting, and it is said they will take stock in the new concern.

School Savings a Success

A gain of $9,866.51 in two years is the record to which the La Crosse Penny Savings Association points with pride as made by pupils in the local schools, according to the report issued by Mrs. Robert B. Lowry, secretary of the association. That the savings of the children, accumulated pennies at a time, have been of real practical value, is also indicated by the report. It tells of several instances in which children have taken the burden of clothing themselves from their parents during the cold weather, and in several instances taxes have been paid by money loaned by the children to their parents. The actual number of depositors among the thrifty younger generation of La Crosse has increased from 1,026, at the end of 1909, four months after the start of the project, to 2,210 at the end of 1911.

BANKING NEWS NOTES OF INTEREST

A charter has been granted to the Wisconsin State Savings Bank of Milwaukee, capital $50,000. Gustave Reinke is president and Frederick A. Lochner is cashier.

E. C. Knabe was elected cashier and secretary of the Merchants and Farmers State Bank, Milwaukee, at the annual meeting of the directors. John T. Bliffert was named assistant cashier and Adolph G. Schwefel was elected director, succeeding Peter F. Leuch, resigned.

E. A. Reddeman, cashier of the Germania National Bank, Milwaukee, has been re-elected treasurer of the Merchants and Manufacturers Association.

NEW BOND MANAGER FOR GUARANTY TRUST COMPANY OF NEW YORK

Robert H. Cox, formerly assistant secretary of the Guaranty Trust of New York, has been made manager of the bond department of that institution. Since graduating from Harvard in 1905, Mr. Cox's rise in the financial world has been rapid. He was first associated with Fisk & Robinson, and in 1909 entered the employ of the bond department of the Guaranty Trust Company. In 1910 he was appointed chief clerk, which position he occupied until September, 1911, when he became assistant secretary. Mr. Cox's recent promotion again emphasizes the fact that the banking business of New York City is being placed in the hands of young men, for Mr. Cox will not be thirty until his next birthday. He is a native of New Jersey, and received his education at St. Paul's School, Concord, N. H., and at Harvard.

PAY NO ATTENTION TO MARKET TIPS

One of the nuggets of advice appearing in "The Business Almanac" for 1912, published by Doubleday, Page & Co., under the heading, "The Tip" is as follows:

"Shun the tip above all things. It is guesswork or is given to injure the small investor. An operator who lets out his plans jeopardizes his own chances of success by creating an unwieldy following. This following will overdo the operator's plans, hence when an operator's plans are discovered he frequently abandons or postpones his contemplated campaign. Thus, an operator who takes the public into his confidence and lets out tips is either foolhardy or insincere, and the average man who receives tips may be sure they are public property.

"Operators have frequently given tips to entice the lambs into well-laid traps. As an example a story is told of Jay Gould, the famous speculator, who when asked for a tip by a preacher, gave it, promising to give the preacher his money back if he lost on the transaction. The preacher lost heavily, and complained to Gould, who promptly paid the churchman's loss. 'But my parishioners,' wailed the minister, 'their losses also are heavy, as you did not impose secrecy on me.' The great speculator looked at the minister and merely said: 'They are the people I was after.'"

BANK FEES DEPOSITED

Austin, Texas.—Commissioner of Insurance and Banking Gill has deposited into the state treasury to the credit of the general revenue $4,162.50, which sum represents the examination fees of the fifteen state bank examiners for the month of January. This is in accordance with a change in the state banking law, as under the old law the examiners were paid out of the fees collected, while now the fees are deposited, and an appropriation is made to pay the examiners. The amount appropriated for this year is $58,125.

The Cumminsville (Ohio) German Bank, which has been organized to open a bank in Cumminsville, has secured permission from the secretary of state to increase its capital from $25,000 to $50,000. The bank is not yet ready to open for business. John B. Heid, the flour merchant, is the president.

Southwestern reserve city news and gossip
—Special correspondence concerning also
the tributary territory, by J. Vion Papin

St. Louis, February 7, 1912.—The continued quietness in the demand for money is beginning to give a tinge of pessimism to the attitude of certain bankers here. It had been hoped that by this time things would have begun to pick up, but it seems the contrary is the case, and indications do not point to a stronger market in the very near future. The more optimistic say, answering, that the pendulum has swung to the length of its arc in the direction of depression, and must of necessity work back in the other direction. There is the consolation for all, however, that the position is extremely strong, and banks are in better shape now to handle existing and future conditions than ever before in their history, at least the financial institutions in this region. Reserves are at a high point, and deposits are heavy. Relatively speaking, the market here is firmer than in other cities, and this is explained by the backwardness of certain sections of the South in repaying cotton funds. "The Planters," said one banker, "held back cotton when they might have sold it at 25 per cent higher than the present prices. Now they are obliged to sell, and most of the selling is in small quantities. Thus the producer is hard up, so also the merchant, and as a natural consequence the southern banker. Now while this is working no hardship here, as funds are overabundant anyhow, it might in a busy, full year result disastrously. Locally the demand for funds is not brisk. Not even the most hopeful banker living could construe the inquiry just now into an active one. Everyone is living from hand to mouth, metaphorically, and will continue to do so until after the election. And in my opinion simply electing a president will not help, but relief lies largely in who will be chosen. Railroads are not borrowing, and there is little or nothing in the way of new enterprise. The East is loaded down with a ballast of loanable funds, this despite the large sums said to have been loaned to Europe. The demand here is of a routine character, and not calculated to deplete reserves. Doubtless things will pick up, but just when or how it is impossible for me to state just now."

United Railways Decision

The decision in the United Railways mill tax in the circuit court, which was a sweeping victory for the city of St. Louis, had a most baneful effect on securities of the traction corporation, and incidentally nipped the incipient boom in local issues generally. Outside of sales of Railways shares and bonds on the down turn, the market has lapsed back into summer quietness. Much surprise was felt because of the decision, as attorneys for the United Railways had expressed themselves as confident of gaining a favorable judgment, and in presenting their arguments were assisted by an array of legal talent which has seldom been entirely wrong in its opinions. An appeal to the Missouri supreme court will be taken, which means that about three years must elapse before final adjudication, as that tribunal is fully that far behind its docket. Meantime it is likely the securities will drag along. There is a report that the company will pay up arrears and accept the situation, in which event the wasting legal procedure would be arrested, but attorneys representing the company deny this, and it is natural they should oppose any step which would curtail so fruitful a field for their activities.

Bond Market Active

In its review the Mechanics-American National says that the bond market is showing the best absorption that has been shown for a year, and there is reason to believe there will develop from now on excellent buying of bonds by many classes of investors. Much of the inquiry has come from important business concerns, which find they can employ a portion of their surplus money as a result of lessened requirements. The bank gives a note of warning against excessive purchasing of bonds. A repetition of what happened in 1904 may happen. Then bonds in great quantities were purchased, which had no rapid sale, and when the revival in general business developed, the financial institutions and business concerns were obliged to liquidate their securities at a heavy loss, in order to get funds for actual requirements of business. It is pointed out that conservativeness is the wiser policy, and the reviewer believes there is a growing conservative sentiment especially among the commercial banks.

Our correspondents are pleased with the care we take of their business at the St. Louis National Stock Yards, because it is thoughtful, not mechanical.

Shoe Supremacy Maintained

Considerable satisfaction is felt in local financial and business circles because of the fact that St. Louis maintained its position in 1911 as the country's largest shoe distributing center. A gain of $1,000,000 in shipments was made over the preceding year. Leading shoe concerns predict material gains for this year, despite its being presidential year. According to statistics compiled by a leading authority, twelve St. Louis manufacturers last year made 30,000,000 pairs of shoes, valued in round numbers at $46,800,000. The same concerns shipped shoes to the amount of $61,000,000. One house alone made upwards of $500,000 worth of shoes for the government in 1911. The report sets forth that 1911 was a dull year in shoes the country over, so that the showing made is considered splendid. The quality of shoes manufactured here in 1911 advanced approximately 5 per cent a pair, and another feature of the year's business was the stride forward made in the production of new styles.

Mercantile Gets Lease

The Mercantile Trust Company has purchased for $150,000 a ninety-nine-year leasehold on the southwest corner of Eighth and St. Charles streets. This property adjoins that of the Mercantile Trust Company, and has a frontage of 120 feet on Eighth Street. It is understood that the leasehold was purchased for a client, but this is not definitely stated, and a rumor is current that the trust company may have acquired the property for its own purposes, with the view of expanding its present quarters.

Houston Oil Dividend

It has been announced by the management of the Houston Oil Company that the policy from now on will be to pay dividends on the preferred stock regularly as they fall due. This corporation was recently reorganized and refinanced in St. Louis, mainly through the efforts of Edwards Whitaker, president of the Boatmens Bank, and Colonel S. W. Fordyce. The readjustment disposed of accumulated dividends on the preferred stock by the issuance of certificates. Oil properties, which have not been touched, will be developed, as part of the program of operations during the next two years. The company owns about 800,000 acres of timber and oil lands in Texas and Louisiana.

National Candy Meeting

There was no change as a result of the annual meeting of the National Candy Company. The following officers were re-elected: O. H. Peckham, A. J. Walter, F. D. Seward, V. L. Price, and R. M. McDermott, Jersey City. Officers will be elected February 14th. The stockholders of the Wrought Iron Range reduced the directorate from eight to three members. The remaining directors are B. B. Culver, who was elected president; William C. Moore, vice-president; and E. R. Culver, secretary.

New Steel Barge Line

The project for operating a steel barge line on the Mississippi River between St. Louis and New Orleans is meeting with enthusiastic support among all classes of St. Louis business men. Subscriptions for the stock have exceeded expectations, and the entire issue will doubtless be disposed of before the end of the present month. Bankers here are strongly backing the enterprise. A. L. Shapleigh, vice-president of the Merchants-Laclede National, who is vice-chairman of the organization committee, says that enough freight is in sight to assure financial success for the line from the day the first barge clears for the South. Numerous shippers are holding back freight in order to give it to the new barge line. The organization committee consists of the following: Murray Carleton, chairman; A. L. Shapleigh, vice-chairman; W. K. Bixby, E. A. Fause, A. H. Frederick, W. J. Holdbrook, Jackson Johnson, Elias Michaels, and Gerald B. O'Reilly.

BUSY REPAIRING SAFES

A few days ago a representative of THE CHICAGO BANKER visited the repair department of the Donnell Safe Company at 227 West Washington Street, Chicago. As is well known, this firm is the general western agent for the New York Safe and Lock Company, and as such does a large and prosperous business. A department about which the general public knows very little, however, is that of repairing and bringing up to date damaged or out-of-date safe and vault door equipments. In this department alone Mr. Donnell employs seventy men, and the things which they are able to do to old-time safe locks are something amazing. Most of them can be made as good as a new, modern pattern, and at not much over one-third of the cost. This is a department of the business which it would pay outlying banks to look into.

Among the recent contracts for new safe and vault equipment shown by the books of the Donnell Safe Company are the following: Northwestern Trust and Savings Bank, Chicago; Suburban Trust and Savings Bank, Oak Park; Du Page County Savings Bank at Glen Ellyn; Gary-Wheaton Bank at Wheaton; and the big, new vaults of the Ayres National at Jacksonville, Ill. This latter is the bank which was taken over by Dunlap, Russel & Co., to which they have diverted all their principal business. When the new building is completed it will be one of the best and most up-to-date in the state.

TENNESSEE GROUP MEETINGS

The Tennessee Bankers Association will hold its group meetings in the three grand divisions of the state in February. The east Tennessee bankers will assemble at Knoxville February 16th; the west Tennessee members at Jackson February 20th, and those from the middle portion of the state will meet at the headquarters of the association at Nashville February 22d. On the latter date at the same place the executive council of the state association will meet, and, as the governing body, will fix the next place of meeting as well as to transact other business of importance. The annual meeting of the association will this year go to east Tennessee, and Bristol and Memphis are contending for the convention.

The group meetings that are to be carried on during the month of February are to be held for the purpose of discussing the question of legislation, taxation and other subjects.

Editorial Comment

BANKERS FAVOR STATE SUPERVISION

The consensus of opinion among the Chicago daily newspapers, as editorially expressed, seems to be that the bankers at large throughout the state of Illinois will favor a new bank supervision bill and a bill creating a separate state banking department. As it is, two-thirds of all the banks in the state are under either state or national supervision. Banks which are operating under a state charter and a known paid-in capital are certainly operating under unfair competition with a bank which may be located across the street, which has no capital on which it must pay a heavy tax, and which has no restriction with regard to the nature of loans which it may make. As a matter of fairness to the organized banks, all of the banks in the state should be compelled to segregate a certain amount for capital and permitted to bear their fair share of the tax burden which rests quite heavily on state and national banks alike. No one wishes to be put in the position of finding fault with the state banking department as conducted by our able state auditor, yet there are many little things about which state bankers complain, and which would be very readily remedied if Illinois had a separate banking department, as others states have. Recently an inquiry was sent out to all of the state banks in Illinois, by a high official of the Illinois Bankers Association. Of those addressed, nearly 50 per cent replied directly that they were in favor of a separate banking department. An additional 15 per cent expressed the belief that the present office arrangement did not keep in as close touch with banking as it ought, and that much of the work as performed by state employees was merely perfunctory. Not a few of the bankers cited, for instance, that foolish regulation which compels the examiner to take the name, date, amount and maturity of every note held by a bank. This is considered an absurdity, and one of the things which prevent the examiner from making an adequate examination of the bank in the time at his disposal. More than half the bankers in the state filed strenuous objections to the mileage charge as inflicted by the auditor's office. A part of them referred to it as "graft." The objection to the mileage charge can be explained in this way: When an auditor examines a bank in Springfield, he charges it a fee of $10; when he examines a bank on the edge of the state, he charges it the regular fee of $10, plus mileage from Springfield and return, amounting in many cases to more than double the fee for examination. In this upper end of the state, where the examiner lives in Chicago and examines a bank in Highland Park, he rides out and back for a five cent fare. He charges the bank, however, constructive mileage from Springfield and return.

LARGER PAID CIRCULATION IN THE MIDDLE WEST THAN ANY THREE OF ITS COMPETITORS COMBINED

If there were ten banks in Highland Park and he examined all of the ten, they would each be asked to pay constructive mileage from Springfield to Highland Park and return. If the auditor or his examiner found himself at Moline, and after examining the banks in that city, he visited the banks in Rock Island, a mile or two away, each of the banks in Rock Island, as well as those in Moline, would be compelled to pay constructive mileage from Springfield and return. He is a pretty religious and circumspect banker who will not use strong language when this portion of the subject is called into conversation.

With a state banking department and a better banking law, we would not have certain "trust" companies in Chicago, some of which conduct a pawnbroking business, and other businesses which cannot well be described. At the bankers' conference at the Blackstone the other day, attention was called to a certain incorporation known as the "State Federal Title & Trust Company of Chicago," with a capital of $2,500, under the general incorporation laws of the state. The state auditor answered inquiries concerning this institution, saying that the corporation was not a bank and that it was not authorized to accept or execute trusts. If the state auditor were as particular about such matters as he is to assert his privilege of charging constructive mileage, there would be fewer of such companies to confuse and mislead the public. No less than three of our large trust company banks in this city are continually annoyed by other concerns flaunting the same title, and some of them incorporated. With a proper banking law and a separate banking department, none of these inflictions could continue to exist. At the present time there is no law in Illinois, which has not been explained away by either the courts or the attorney general, to prevent any individual from renting a set of fixtures and calling himself a bank, a savings bank or a trust company. Not so very long ago two ex-city detectives from a near by city, having been discharged from the force for accepting graft from unfortunates, came to this city and opened up a bank with a high-sounding title. They advertised 4 per cent on savings in the foreign district, although the bank was on Dearborn street, and quite near to the financial district. In the six weeks which they ran, they secured very close to $36,000 in deposits. When interest day came around the second time, the detectives had departed for other parts, and the company which had rented them the fixtures gathered them in. This was the end of that particular private bank. A new law for Illinois should specifically care for the use of all banking terms, either on printing or on signboards; this much is due the public.

Some time ago, Mr. Woodruff of Joliet, when the new constitution was under consideration, sent out an inquiry to all the banks in the state, as to how many of them favored state supervision. Not all of them answered, but the files of this correspondence show that supervision was favored by 251 nationals, 239 state banks and 111 private banks, making a total of 601 banks favoring supervision. Among the banks which replied and which are not favorable were 10 nationals, 8 state banks and 166 private banks, making a total of 184 against supervision. This ought to answer the question of the Chicago Tribune, the Chicago Record-Herald and the Chicago Daily News as to how the bankers of the state stand on this question.

Many of the best informed among the private bankers have felt for many years that the "jig is up," so to speak, for go-as-you-please banking in this state. A large number of them have incorporated, some of them using their present titles, but incorporating against a time when supervision may come with a rush. Others of them, less far-seeing, are in favor of presenting a banking bill, such as will be satisfactory to all the bankers of the state, and not waiting until such a time as aroused public sentiment will force through a drastic measure which will be burdensome. They recognize that private banking is not a private business, except as a talking point, and that all banking is of a quasi-public nature; that bank supervision and examination is one of the accepted public doctrines in this country which has met with approval in every state of the Union except four; that in those four the sentiment exists in favor of it, but the political power of the unincorporated banker and his political allies have prevented its being enacted into law.

BANK SUPERVISION IN OHIO

Events in both Ohio and Pennsylvania seem to have been shaping themselves to further the campaign which has been started recently in Illinois for universal bank supervision throughout the state. Pennsylvania, after years of battling with the unrestricted banking abuse, finally passed a bill which became effective December 1st of last year. It permits private banking, but compels the proprietor to put up a bond guaranteeing his depositors; he also is obliged to submit to an examination twice a year. More than fifty private bankers of the city of Philadelphia alone raised a large fund with which to contest in the courts the operation of the new law. They obtained some advantage by employing an attorney who is a member of the private firm of Attorney General Bell. The public and the newspapers, however, compelled the attorney general to take some steps, and three prominent private bankers were arrested. The penalty for conducting a private bank contrary to the laws of Pennsylvania consists of both imprisonment and fine. Two private bankers have disappeared rather than face inspection; those who have remained behind have shown that the inspection feature is their real objection to state supervision.

Ohio has waged a several years' battle against the private banking element in that state, where it is very strong. Attempted legislation has been defeated time after time. Finally, however, the state secured the establishment of an adequate state banking department, such as is being agitated in Illinois at the present time. The Ohio state banking commissioner has assumed the position that a private bank cannot be a depository for the reserve of state banks. Only last week, he notified three state banks, all under practically the same ownership, that their reserve accounts must be withdrawn from a certain prominent private bank. It was again demonstrated what the real objection to supervision is, for when the private institution had to face the demands of the commissioner, or close up, it promptly closed its doors, and along with it went the three state banks, which, in reality, belonged to, and were feeders for, the private bank. All of this was clearly told last week in the columns of this paper. Attention is called to the situation here, because it applies to and illuminates conditions which are common to Illinois, Ohio and Pennsylvania. It furnishes the best of arguments why Illinois should have a separate and distinct banking department, and why all forms of banking within the state, and all banking terms and descriptions, whether on signs or on printing, should be restricted to the use of incorporated institutions.

P. C. Kauffman, was the guest of honor at the annual banquet of the Seattle Credit Men's Association, and at the conclusion of the dinner addressed them for an hour upon the National Reserve Association. Without dwelling particularly upon the technical phases of the proposed plan he spoke at length upon the evils of the present currency system and the necessity of immediate amendment, arguing that the adoption of the plan as proposed by the commission would settle forever the vexed currency question.

CIRCLE TOUR OF CUBA AND FLORIDA

On February 16th the American Tourist Association, 1418 Marquette building, Chicago, will conduct from Chicago, a circle tour of Florida and Cuba, lasting sixteen days, five days at the principal resorts of Florida, six days in Cuba. All expenses will be included in a $200 ticket, which ought to be news to those who nearly went broke on the Panama trip from the New Orleans, A. B. A. convention. For the $200 you get berths in Pullmans, meals in dining cars, rooms at best hotels, auto and carriage drives and meals and berths on steamer. A second tour will start March 5th.

KANSAS CITY POSTAL SAVINGS

The deposits in the Postal Savings Bank of Kansas City, Kan., show a total of $56,149 for the month ending January 31st. There are in all 554 accounts in the bank. One hundred and fifty-eight new accounts, making a total deposit of $18,395, were opened during the month.

PEORIA WANTS ILLINOIS CONVENTION

The new hotel at Peoria, one of the best in the state, was "opened" with a formal, boosters' banquet, on Tuesday night. Seven hundred were there from all over the state. Quite a boom was started for holding the Illinois bankers convention there this year. The Peoria bankers are very earnest in the matter and have the backing of those in Springfield and most of those in Chicago.

NATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF MERCANTILE AGENCIES WILL MEET IN SPOKANE

One thousand delegates from all parts of the United States will attend the eighth annual convention of the National Association of Mercantile agencies in Spokane, August 20th to 22d, according to advices received by Louis Martin, secretary of the Ames Mercantile agency, who is a member of the advisory board of the big organization.

"Kansas City, Des Moines, St. Paul and several middle western cities report they will send their representatives to Spokane in special trains, and there will be large delegations from many other points," Mr. Martin said, "while from Texas will come a large party, and there will be visitors from southern and western states."

Mr. Martin has a letter from R. E. Kerr, secretary of the Merchants Credit Association of Fort Worth, Texas, who says among other things:

"The Commercial Secretaries and Business Men's Association has agreed to organize a Spokane club and already ten have joined. At our next state convention in May, the slogan will be, 'On to Spokane.'"

"The Northern Pacific has been selected as the official route between St. Paul and Spokane and special trains will leave the first-named city on August 9th, arriving two days later at Billings, Mont., where we will be entertained by the chamber of commerce, going thence to Yellowstone Park for a week. We will return to Gardner on August 18th, and visit Butte and Missoula, Mont., the following day, arriving in Spokane on August 20th."

"During the three-day convention our guests will be entertained at a banquet by the Spokane chamber of commerce, in addition to which there will be excursions through the Spokane Valley and on the St. Joe River, also to other nearby resorts. William H. Burr of Rochester, N. Y., will preside as head of the association. He and William P. Thompson of New York, secretary, will be accompanied by a large delegation from points on the Atlantic coast."

"The delegates will leave Spokane for Lewiston, Idaho, at one o'clock the morning of August 23d to pass the entire day in the Lewiston-Clarkston district, going thence to North Yakima for a stay of four hours, also visiting Tacoma, Seattle, Olympia and Portland, arriving there on August 26th and continuing the journey to San Francisco and Los Angeles, where the party will disband."

"This convention means much to the Pacific slope and inter-mountain country, as it will afford an opportunity to familiarize eastern representatives, who come into personal contact with thousands of investors and business men generally in the course of the year, with the undeveloped natural resources and financial, commercial and industrial possibilities of our district and country and through this encourage investments of all kinds."

A. F. Dawson

Legislation on the currency question is of greater importance than tariff or trust legislation, was the declaration made in a speech recently to the Scott County Farmers Institute at Eldridge by ex-Congressman A. F. Dawson, now president of the First National Bank of Davenport. He said the greatest essential to the country's prosperity and development is a monetary system that will meet the demands of modern business. Continuing, he said:

"The present system is out of date and wholly inadequate to meet the needs of to-day. With the tremendous advance in business since its creation fifty years ago, we have outgrown it. We are trying to handle the vast business of the twentieth century with machinery created about the middle of the nineteenth century. We plume ourselves on being a progressive people, and yet we tolerate a system of banking and currency that fails completely when any unusual demand is made upon it."

"To appreciate the importance of an adequate banking and currency system to the general prosperity of the country, it should be remembered that 90 per cent of the 450,000 million dollars of business which is done annually in our country is performed by checks and other forms of bank credits. When anything goes wrong with this vast banking machine, the effect is immediately felt in every line of industry—business is halted, commerce retarded and production curtailed, with the consequent reduction in employment and wages, and falling prices for farm products."

There is a shortage of cash to move the crops, and banks are compelled to curtail their loans for ordinary business transactions.

"As a result the people have been subjected to enormous losses, because our defective monetary system fails to perform its natural functions in times of financial stress. And these losses fall far more heavily upon the producers, the wage-earners, and the small business men than upon the large commercial and financial interests."

"We need a system that will provide that elasticity of currency and credit which will meet the varying needs of business at different seasons of the year. Particularly when the season comes to move the vast agricultural crops of the country, we should be able to expand our supply of credit, while at other seasons it needs to be contracted. To handle business properly this increase and decrease should operate automatically. This is impossible under our present system of currency based on government bonds."

"The present law regarding bank reserves, both for state and national banks, operates in time of financial stringency to intensify conditions rather than to relieve them. As you know, each bank is required to keep a reserve equal to a certain per cent of its deposits, and in times of panic every bank scrambles to build up its individual reserve, and to do this it reduces its loans and sometimes, as in 1907, suspends cash payments. A law to unify the bank reserves of the country and mobilize them so they will be available and when and where most needed, will cure one of the most vital defects of our present system."

"All of the banks, both state and national, should be organized into an association which, while preserving their individual independence, will secure unity and co-operation especially in times of stress. A law embracing these three features, together with certain lesser additions, which I need not enumerate here, will give the country immunity from the disastrous money panics of the past and assure the transaction of the rapidly increasing business of the nation with safety and security."

"How are we to attain this result? The first thing necessary is to awaken public opinion to the importance of the subject. It is not a partisan question, and it is of paramount importance that it be kept free from politics."

"The monetary commission has made a non-partisan report to congress and it is a unanimous report. That report should be acted upon during the present session, and the word should go up to Washington in a swelling chorus that the country expects our law-makers to do their plain duty. We will get legislation from congress just as soon as that body understands that the people demand relief from the present intolerable situation."

The First National Bank, Melrose, Minn., has incorporated as the Security Bank of Melrose, with the same officers and capital stock.

PHILADELPHIA CHAPTER NEWS

The promoting of fake stock companies in the country can be prevented if the people would attend the annual meeting of stockholders, declared Sereno S. Pratt, secretary of the chamber of commerce, of New York, in speaking before the Philadelphia Chapter of the American Institute of Banking at a meeting held last Friday.

Mr. Pratt said that one of the reasons fake stock companies are successfully launched here is because the majority of stockholders are satisfied to vote their stock by proxy. In England, the majority of holders of stock attend the annual meeting. By doing this they satisfy themselves that the affairs of the company are being properly managed.

F. W. Ellsworth, publicity manager of the Guaranty Trust Company of New York, spoke on "Bank Publicity." "The employees of a bank, from the lowest salaried clerk to the highest official, can assist in bringing business to the bank by giving prompt and accurate service to their customers," he said. "The bank should advertise its wares the same as a department store. The ads should tell the people what the bank has and what it can do. The ads in every case should be specific."

The Philadelphia Chapter debated last (Friday) night with the Lyceum League of Camden on the subject: "Resolved, That the Commission Form of Government Should be Adopted by the Municipalities of the United States."

"INTER-CHAPTER" DEBATE

The Cincinnati Chapter of the American Institute of Banking has negotiations under way to arrange a date for a debate with the chapter at Pittsburgh. John Brewster, president of the Cincinnati Chapter, announces that the event will come off in Pittsburgh, and that the date most probably selected will fall in the early part of March.

It was at the instance of George E. Allen, of New York, who is known as the educational director of the Institute, that the debate was arranged. Mr. Allen was left to select the subject, and he chose: "Resolved, Transit items Should Be Collected Through the Clearing Houses Rather Than Individual Arrangements Between Banks." A flip of the coin decided which side was to take the negative. That lot fell to Cincinnati.

In about two weeks a preliminary debate is to be held. All the members are invited to take part, and those putting up the strongest argument will be selected by a committee. Three of the members will make the trip, and the expenses will be borne by the Cincinnati and Pittsburgh chapters in equal amounts. Much interest is being taken by the bank clerks, and already parties are being formed to accompany the debaters.

DINNER OF GROUP 5, NEW YORK

The annual meeting and banquet of Group 5 of the New York State Bankers Association will be held Saturday evening, February 17th, at the Ten Eyck, New York City. James H. Perkins, president of the National Commercial Bank of Albany, is chairman of the group.

Superintendent George C. Van Tuyl, of the state banking department, has accepted an invitation to be present at the dinner.

CUBA CHAPTER NEWS

By WILLIAM H. MORALES, VICE-PRESIDENT CUBA CHAPTER.

On January 10th Dr. Leopoldo Cancio, of the National University, who was secretary of the treasury here during the first American intervention, and is the leading authority on economics in this country, delivered his second lecture of the season on political economy before the Cuba Chapter of the American Institute of Banking, in Havana. The theme of the lecture was "Production," in analyzing which the doctor laid special stress on man, whose mental and physical activities constitute labor, in present economics. The factors of production, said Dr. Cancio, have been variously classified. The general order, namely, that of land, labor and capital, I consider as most convenient.

Land means in economics the entire resources of nature, that is, the earth in its astronomic, as distinguished from its geographic sense. Labor signifies the mental and physical activities of man in the field of nature; while capital is that part of a country's wealth which is engaged in the production of new wealth.

The progress of a country is measured by the ability and enterprise of its inhabitants, and these are in turn affected by climate situation and natural conditions. The reason for the advance of Europe over Asia and Africa in the arts of civilization is found by ethnologists in the physical geography of Europe. With as long and diversified coast lines, numerous inland seas, navigable rivers, various land elevations, classes of soil, differences of climate, adjacent islands and accessibility to other countries, it is singularly favored by nature, as compared with the immense land masses of the other two continents, whose arid wastes are oftentimes unbroken, save by impassable mountains, or rivers whose long courses are often obstructed by falls or other natural impediments.

In North America we find the same natural advantages over the South American Continent, and hence the progress of the former may be attributed in a great measure to the same cause, namely, the bountifulness of nature. The rivers of South America, for example, run generally east and west, through tracts of country lying in the same latitudes and yielding practically the same products, while those of North America flow mostly north and south, like the Mississippi, which, rising in Lake Itasca in the north, flows thousands of miles southward, draining a fertile country characterized by different climates, commodities and industries of the people.

These differences of environment have been offset to a great extent by scientific achievements such as railroads, steamships, telegraph and telephone communications; and by the continued application of human skill to the forces of nature, the agencies of steam, electricity and even the radium are destined to record wonderful achievements, accordingly as knowledge widens and new wants are felt.

In considering the history of economics, Dr. Cancio said that the second or Money epoch came as a revolution from the first or Natural period; and that money is to economics what the alphabet is to the world of literature. The present or Credit period is simply an evolution from the Money era.

Despite the fact that the quarters of Cuba Chapter of the American Institute of Banking have been doubled in size, by the Christmas donation of a large hall by the National Bank of Cuba, standing room was at a premium, and Dr. Cancio was much applauded at the close of his talk.

GROUP 2, PENNSYLVANIA

The 17th annual meeting of Group 2 of the Pennsylvania Bankers Association will be held in Philadelphia at the Bellevue-Stratford Hotel, Monday, February 12, 1912. After the business of the meeting has been disposed of the group will be addressed by C. Stuart Patterson, president Western Savings Fund Society, on "Some of the Features of the Proposed National Reserve Association," followed by H. H. Gilkyson, Esq., of the Chester County Bar Association, on the "Banker and the Bar."

NORTH AND SOUTH AMERICAN BANKING COMPANY

The North and South American Banking and Commercial Company, Ltd., has been incorporated as a joint stock concern in Buenos Ayres, with capital of $20,000,000 gold. A proportion of the preferred shares has already been subscribed for and guaranteed on call, dependent on a further subscription in the United States.

The company, which has an approved charter empowering it to carry on banking and exchange transactions of all kinds, was formed by twenty-five leading Argentine capitalists who are resident in that country, and its purpose is to conduct a general banking and foreign trade business between the United States and South America, with special reference to Argentina. Provision has been made for United States shareholders, in accordance with Article 358 of the Argentine Commercial Code, whereby they shall meet and elect a foreign committee of three or more members, one to be the president and another the secretary.

Announcement of the incorporation has been made through the American Manufacturers Export Association, who state that they have received a confidential report on the project from the state department at Washington, D. C.

SMALL-LOAN BANKS

It has been demonstrated in Boston that it is possible to lend money to deserving people, in small amounts, and make a profit out of it. And now the experience of an Atlanta institution gives a still clearer proof of the fact. A private bank was opened four months ago, with a capital of $50,000, with the express purpose of lending money in small amounts to deserving people. The volume of business has increased so rapidly that it has already been found necessary to issue an additional $50,000 of capital stock, which is offered to the public at an advance of 10 per cent and is finding a ready market. The bank has put out in four months $57,633 in loans at legal rates of interest and the 472 borrowers have been saved more than $10,000 interest. At the same time the bank—which is in no sense a charitable affair—is making a handsome profit.

CENTRAL WEST LETTER

By EDGAR P. ALLEN

Omaha

"Trade conditions have been disappointing in this territory since the first of the year," said Thornton Cooke, vice-president of the Fidelity Trust Company of Kansas City, to THE CHICAGO BANKER correspondent this week. "Superficially things are very quiet, but I want to say that there is a better undertone than I have seen for several years. I believe that liquidation has about reached its completion and that conditions are on their way to an upturn. Wheat conditions that generally cause a good deal of anxiety this time of year are splendid. In fact, they could not be better in Kansas and Oklahoma, where a blanket of snow has provided abundant moisture and protection for the past four or five weeks. On the strength of these conditions it would not surprise me if there was the biggest crop of wheat harvested in this territory in history. At any rate we are justified in being jubilant on the strength of the outlook as it is now presented."

Dolley Takes Sides with Bank Clerks

Bank Commissioner Dolley, of Kansas, has come to the aid of bank clerks. Following closely upon the defalcation of a young man in Topeka, Mr. Dolley has issued a statement to the Kansas banks in which he charges that many of the defalcations of bank employees should, in a large measure, be chargeable to the officers higher up. In many cases he says the officers of banks do not keep in close touch with the employees as to their daily habits, and oftentimes do not pay them sufficient salaries, largely due to the bank's eagerness to pay big dividends. "Every employee of a bank should receive a fair salary," says Mr. Dolley. "And when he is receiving a fair salary and full compensation for his services and cannot live within the amount, his services should at once be discontinued. If it is impossible to do this from the earnings of the bank, the bank should liquidate and go out of business."

Public Utilities Commission Given Power to Refuse Charters to Banks

The Kansas public utilities commission has extended the scope of its authority in the same manner as that of the bank commission of that state. The last legislature passed a law giving the various commissions power to refuse charters to banks and public utilities in Kansas towns where there is already too much competition or not enough business to warrant any competition at all. The bank commissioner has refused to grant charters to a number of bank incorporators who sought to establish state banks where there are already enough banks to take care of all the business in sight. This position of the commissioner and his associates has been challenged in several cases where appeals have been made to the courts, and these cases are still pending. Now the public utilities commission says it will not issue a permit to a new public utility in a town or city where a similar utility is already doing business and furnishing satisfactory service. The ruling was made in connection with a case that came from Parsons, Kan. Parsons had one electric light company. Plans had been made for the formation of a new company and application was made for authority to issue stocks and bonds to finance it. After hearing both sides the state commission refused the permit. This is considered a very important case among Kansas financiers, as it is the most paternalistic ground yet taken in the relation of the state to business.

Condition of Kansas State Banks Satisfactory

State Bank Commissioner Dolley of Kansas in his report on the condition of the Kansas state banks says: "The result of the official call December 27, 1911, is quite satisfactory. It shows the banks to be in a strong position with an increase of deposits since August 28th, of $3,931,489. Banking and business conditions in Kansas for January, 1912, exceeded expectations. Bank deposits have increased. Money has been in strong demand at reasonable rates for legitimate business purposes. The retail and general trade has been normal with the usual quiet pulse of the first month of the year. The conditions of the 1912 wheat crop are most flattering and one of the most promising in the history of the state. Whatever may be the finish, we have in sight today a wheat crop of from 100,000,000 to 125,000,000 bushels. The crop prospects for the current year are very pleasing. The farmers are beginning to talk and get ready for spring work." There are 897 state banks in Kansas.

Kansas Executive Council Meeting

The Kansas State Bankers Association now has a membership of 405 and there is $2,000,000 in the treasury. The executive council, which held a meeting in Topeka a few days ago in the offices of the state bank commissioner, was well pleased with the annual report. The annual meeting of the Kansas State Bankers Association will be held in Topeka, May 23d and 24th. This meeting will devote more time to business and less to the social side of banking than is customary.

Only One Bank Robbery

As astonishing as was the era of bank robberies in Kansas a year or more ago is the fact that during the past twelve months only one bank in the state was robbed and in that instance of the four men implicated, one is dead and the other three have been sentenced to the penitentiary. "Two or three years ago," said M. B. Light, of Winfield, Kan., president of the Kansas State Bankers Association, "a bank robbery in Kansas was a common thing. Scarcely a week passed that some bank in Kansas was not robbed. Two gangs were operating in the state, one along the northern border and the other along the southern border. We bankers feared daily that our banks would be the next. But it looks to be now as though the era of bank robbery in Kansas is about passed. The law enacted by the last Kansas legislature providing life terms for bank robbers has served to clean up the state. The robbers have gone to other states where the penalties are not so severe."

St. Joseph Has Record Clearings

St. Joseph, Mo., continues to make new clearing house records for itself. The bank clearings for January were $36,091,204, the largest clearings for the first month of the year in the history of the city, and showing an increase over the corresponding month a year ago of $3,803,204, or 11.77 per cent. Clearings for each day during the month were over $1,000,000. The increase in live stock and grain receipts and the generally healthy business conditions in the territory tributary to St. Joseph are responsible for the splendid financial showing made by the St. Joseph banks.

Depositors Receive 75 Per Cent

After more than a month of uncertainty, the affairs of the defunct American Union Trust Company of Kansas City and the All Night and Day Bank, which it absorbed last summer, are to be settled, at least so far as the depositors of the bank are concerned. The Commerce Trust Company of Kansas City has undertaken the liquidation of the concern and for several days depositors have been invited to leave their pass-books with the Commerce Trust Company to be certified. Those deposits that have been certified were paid 75 per cent of the total and the balance will be paid to each within a short time. Joseph D. Havens, a local capitalist and banker, who headed the syndicate which bought the assets of the American Union Trust Company and turned them over to the Commerce Trust Company for liquidation, is given credit for saving the failed institution from a receivership, in which case the depositors would not have been paid in full. It is believed now that after all debts are paid there will be something left for the stockholders.

A. I. B. Chapter for Topeka

Thus far there is only one chapter of the American Institute of Banking in the state of Kansas and that is located at Wichita. However, the outlook is promising for the formation of a sister chapter at Topeka. On February 3d about fifty young men employed in the Topeka banks met in the Commercial Club rooms in Topeka and considered the advisability of completing a chapter organization. The movement has received the hearty endorsement of the older bankers of the Kansas capital as well as the state banking department.

Group 7, Texas, to Meet

Group 7 of the Texas Bankers Association will hold its meeting in Fort Worth February 22d. Among the features of interest will be the annual address by John H. P. Jones, vice-president of the City National Bank of Childress, chairman of the group; an address on "Co-operation Between the Bankers and Farmers of Texas Along the Lines of Agricultural and Vocational Education," by Joe Hirsch, vice-president of the Corpus Christi National Bank, Corpus Christi; an address on "The Recent Action of the Department of Insurance and Banking Relative to Overdrafts," by B. L. Gill, state banking and insurance commissioner, and the bankers' question-box. A large attendance is expected at this meeting, which represents one of the most prosperous banking districts in Texas.

Group 6 of the Texas Bankers Association will convene in Brownwood February 20th. The sessions will be held in the Carnegie library and W. D. Crothers, of Brady will be master of ceremonies. M. A. Taylor of the National Stock Yards Bank, East St. Louis, will talk on "Elimination of Overdrafts" and Oscar Wells of the Union National Bank of Houston will discuss "Diversification vs. Overproduction of Cotton." At night a banquet will be held at the Southern hotel.

Oklahoma Group Meetings

W. D. Harrison, secretary of the Oklahoma Bankers Association, has announced the dates and places for the annual meetings of the various groups of the state association as follows: Group 4—Okmulgee, February 19th, for the counties of Adair, Craig, Cherokee, Delaware, Muskogee, Mayes, McIntosh, Nowata, Okmulgee, Ottawa, Rogers, Sequoyah, Tulsa, Washington and Wagoner. Group 5—Ada, February 19th, for the counties of Atoka, Bryan, Coal, Carter, Choctaw, Garvin, Haskell, Johnson, Love, LeFlore, Latimer, Murray, McCurtain, McClain, Marshall, Pittsburgh, Pushmataha and Pontotoc. Group 3—Shawnee, February 21st, for the counties of Cleveland, Creek, Hughes, Kay, Logan, Lincoln, Noble, Osage, Oklahoma, Okfuskee, Pawnee, Payne, Pottawatomie and Seminole. Group 1—Clinton, February 22nd, for the counties of Beckham, Caddo, Custer, Comanche, Greer, Grady, Harmon, Jackson, Jefferson, Kiowa, Roger Mills, Stephens, Tillman, Washita and Swanson. Group 2—Enid, February 23d, for the counties of Alfalfa, Blaine, Beaver, Canadian, Cimmaron, Dewey, Ellis, Garfield, Grant, Harper, Kingfisher, Major, Texas Woods and Woodward.

Central West Notes

The Fort Worth (Texas) Clearing House Association has adopted a rule prohibiting overdrafts in the future. Heretofore it has been the custom for the banks to accommodate customers in this respect.

Eli Mullinax, who has lived in Mercer county, Mo., since 1855 and organized the first bank in that part of the state, died last week.

A. H. Stout and A. J. Titus of Cherokee, Okla., who were indicted recently on the charge of misapplication of the funds of the First National Bank of Cherokee, which closed its doors more than a year ago were arraigned a few days ago in the federal court and gave bond. Stout was president of the bank and Titus was an employee.

E. L. Meyer, president of the First National Bank of Hutchinson, Kan., has returned after several weeks spent in New York and Boston.

S. W. Burnham, brother of S. H. Burnham of the First National Bank of Lincoln, Neb., and himself prominently identified with the financial life of Lincoln for many years, died the other day.

Frank H. Letson, cashier of the Bank of Enid, Okla., spent several days in Kansas City recently as the guest of his old friend William T. Kemper, president of the Commerce Trust Company.

State Treasurer Sam Sparks, of Texas, is preparing to retire from office April 1st. He is now organizing the Texas Trust Company of Austin, of which he will be president.

P. S. Hoffman, president of the Union National Bank of Chandler, Okla., and a resident of that city since the opening of the townsite, died last week. He was reputed to be one of the wealthiest men in Oklahoma.

New Duplex Check Journal

The Germania National Bank of Milwaukee is using a new thing in Check Journals.

It enables them to separate checks into individual accounts for convenience in posting.

The Germania Bank has given us permission to send out a copy of this Check Journal form to other banks, showing 258 separate checks, representing 90 individual accounts.

Each of these 90 accounts is totaled, so the amount only of each account need be posted. The Duplex (multiple total) Burroughs Adding Machine enables the operator to get individual totals for each account and a grand total of all checks in all accounts for the day at one operation.

Ask for Systems Form No. 459 and we will send you a full-size page from the Germania Bank's Check Journal, without cost or obligation to you.

Duplex Wonders

With the Duplex (multiple total) Burroughs you can:

List yesterday's and today's balances in separate columns with separate totals at one operation.

Prove Daily Mail, getting a total of all the items of each letter and a grand total for all letters, at one operation.

List Balances and Overdrafts, with separate totals, at one operation.

Total one and two name paper, separately, at one operation.

List face of paper and interest accrued, with separate totals, at one operation.

And many other things you could not do on any other machine.

The machine is a regular Burroughs and the other things besides. It can be used for any figure work that any other machine can be used for, in addition to the new wonders it makes possible.

Banking news from Minneapolis—St. Paul financial center, and surrounding States, compiled by J. Edwards Smith

Frank E. Holton, retiring cashier of the Northwestern National, is now carrying a gold watch presented by President E. W. Decker on behalf of his associates, at a dinner in the Commercial Club. S. H. Plummer, new assistant cashier, was toastmaster, and for the first time the whole force was present at a gathering, some two hundred persons. The affair may be made annual without the watch. A full line of officers and directors was present and the mental menu was as follows: E. W. Decker, "Two Things a Young Banker Ought to Remember"; D. E. Loomis, "A Busy Man"; Miss Claudine Chase, "Women"; L. V. Rose, "Transit Department"; Lester T. Banks, "Reading"; R. R. Clark, "Collections"; R. T. Swanson, "Discounts"; Alex Bore, "Collateral"; H. J. Riley, "Cash Reserve"; H. C. Libby, "Auditing"; J. C. Thomson, "The Analysis Department"; A. V. Gardner, "The Fool's Chance"; Joseph Chapman, Jr., "A Few Remarks."

Accepted Deposits When Bank Was Insolvent

H. J. Schwarz of Royalton, Minn., has been found guilty of accepting deposits when cashier of the state bank when he knew the institution was insolvent. Under a new law the crime is a felony punishable by indeterminate sentence. The bank was closed August 3d. The specific charge was accepting on August 2d a deposit of $50. Testimony went to show that two relatives of Mr. Schwarz had a total of $1,760 on deposit August 2d, evidently believing the bank safe.

Appoint Committee on Financial Legislation

North Dakota bankers have appointed a committee on financial legislation which will report at the state convention in June at Jamestown. The executive committee in session at Grand Forks appointed M. F. Murphy of Grand Forks, Messrs. Dodge, Cathro and Weiser. The bankers object to the Aldrich currency plan division, which would place North Dakota apart from Minnesota and put Omaha in as financial center. The capitalization provision, they say, would bar many North Dakota banks from participation in benefits that might accrue from operations of the act.

Will Loan Farmers at Low Rate

The State Bank of Akeley, Minn., has promised to loan farmers tributary to the city $4,000 at a low rate provided they will bring in good milk cows to the territory. The Commercial Club has arranged for a farmers' institute and especial attention will be paid to the cow and creamery question. A new creamery will open in the spring.

Teller Beats Bank Robber in Fight

C. Oscar Ness was a psychological hero in a hold-up affray in Minneapolis. He licked the thug. Ness is teller at the Hennepin County Savings Bank. He is so accustomed to give up money only when he gets something to show for it, that when the highwayman presented nothing but a 38-caliber revolver he refused the bills and seventy-six cents in change on his person, and instead, tried to get the gun. The two rolled around in the snow and when the hold-up man ran Ness was too exhausted to follow. When accosted Ness struck the man with one hand and his revolver wrist with the other. The clerks at the Hennepin County Savings have no special anti-burglar or protective training. Ness' clothes were torn also.

Discharged Gun Only an Accident

Wearing a revolver into a bank cage nearly resulted disastrously to clerks at the St. Paul First National and a general display of firearms by tellers and other officials. Three express company clerks were in a special cage. The man carrying the revolver that exploded was the last to squeeze in and the hammer of the weapon caught on the wire grating and slipping back set off the cartridge. Many brave thoughts flitted through the bank clerks' minds, but the incident was too trivial to call for Carnegie recognition.

Hayward, of Mandan, North Dakota, in Minneapolis

Thomas E. Hayward, Mandan, N. D., at the Northwestern National, studying big bank methods, himself associated with eight string banks west of the Missouri in North Dakota, says things in North Dakota are in good shape with abundant fall rains, moisture conserved by early freezing of the ground, followed by lots of snow.

Lauds Murray

Owen T. Reeves, new national bank examiner for the district, has arrived in Minneapolis, now under the jurisdiction of one banker instead of two. Said Mr. Reeves: "I can only say that under Lawrence O. Murray the efficiency test is the only one that gets a man a place as an examiner. Politics have been eliminated. It is essential that an applicant have had experience in a bank and moreover, after appointment, he has to undergo a severe examination in Washington before being confirmed."

Havill On Trial

O. H. Havill, president of the bank of Bow-lus, charged with accepting deposits on August 4th when the bank was insolvent, is now on trial. Mr. Havill formerly lived at St. Cloud and is now a resident of Minneapolis. Notes of Schwartz and two brothers are involved in the estimate of the assets.

St. Paul Postal Savings

Deposits of the St. Paul postal savings bank in January were $70,814, a total of $347,809 since the bank opened September 1st. Withdrawals in January were $15,738.

TRUST COMPANY ORGANIZED

Bay City, Texas, February 3.—The Citizens Trust Company has been organized here with a capitalization of $50,000. This company will do a general trust business without banking privileges, and will take care of those accounts not usually handled by banks or those which are prohibited. Application for charter has been made. The directorate is as follows: J. M. Moore, president; Fred S. Robbins, first vice-president; Judge Thompson, second vice-president; M. Thompson, secretary and treasurer; D. P. Moore, V. L. LeTulle, Albert Wadsworth.

SOUTH DAKOTA BANKER KILLED

Flandreau, S. D.—J. J. Barbour, Jr., a banker of Chester, met with a fatal accident last week. He was having a store building erected and while inspecting some of the work a temporary stairs gave way. He was a large man and his weight made the fall more dangerous. He died within two hours after the accident.

Indiana

Lafayette, Ind.—Word has been received here that the Citizens National Bank of Tipton, Ind., will conduct a corn contest during 1912 season, open to farmers of that county. They will be aided in carrying on the contest by the Purdue University agricultural extension department, which will give any information desired regarding the best methods of producing "prize-winning ears."

The Citizens National will offer three prizes for the best corn and largest number of bushels grown on one acre, the final scoring to be made by experts, and the plots submitted to the closest examination, so that the awards may be fair in every particular. The prizes will aggregate $50.

For the first three months of the current state fiscal year, beginning October 1st, the bank department in the office of the auditor of state earned in fees and allowances for expenses $1,212.60 more than the cost of department operation, according to figures compiled by Harry L. Arnold, clerk in charge. For the three months the total fees and allowances for expenses, paid by banks examined, amounted to $2,152.

The department began to be self-supporting last March, when the new bank examination law, proposed by W. H. O'Brien, auditor of state, became operative. Under the former law the maximum charge for examining a bank or trust company was $35. Under the new law the fee for an institution of $1,000,000 assets is $35, with provision for additional fee where the assets are more than a million. Under the former law the department got no more for examining a trust company with $10,000,- 000 assets than for one with only $1,000,000 assets. The increased earnings of the department are due to the large number of examinations of trust companies in the state with assets of more than a million. Mr. O'Brien expects the law will eventually earn the department $6,000 a year net. The Indiana bank examinations fees are about 25 per cent lower than the fees charged by the United States treasury department for examination of national banks.

The savings bank at the Indianapolis post-office on Tuesday passed the one-thousand mark in the number of accounts opened with it. Since the bank began doing business, in September, 2,633 deposits have been made. The amount now deposited with the bank is $49,678. Charles W. Byfield, who is in charge of the postal bank, expects to receive within a day or two the postal savings bonds which were requested by depositors of the local savings bank and allotted to them by the department. The amount of bonds coming to Indianapolis is $3,520.

Kokomo, Ind., February 6.—Walter Gardner, of Elwood, who was arrested here November 25th on a charge of cashing at the Howard National Bank a forged check for $54, has brought two suits for damages against the bank, one for $10,000 for malicious prosecution and one for $5,000 for false imprisonment. Gardner was tried in the Howard circuit court in December and acquitted. He brought into the court witnesses who testified that at the time the check was cashed Gardner was on a train en route from Kokomo to Newcastle. The bank teller who cashed the check testified that Gardner was the man to whom he paid the money. Gardner spent two weeks in jail. The affidavit charging him with forgery was filed by detectives employed by the Indiana Bankers Association.

NASHVILLE CLEARINGS

The clearings of Nashville are each week showing a gain over corresponding periods of last year of over 25 per cent. Bankers of the capital city of Tennessee report that money is getting plentiful and both the individuals and the southern banks are increasing their deposits and making good their obligations. The movement of the tobacco crop in the black tobacco belt is also turning money into the banks of Tennessee.

A charter has been issued to the Commercial National Bank of Smithfield, Utah, capital, $25,000. E. R. Miles, Jr., president; Job Pingree and James Pingree, vice-presidents; G. Y. Smith, cashier; G. E. Miles, assistant cashier.

Pacific Northwest Banking News

Spokane, Wash., February 6.—Railroads in the Northwest will have all the traffic they can handle this year, which gives every promise of being the largest grain, hay and fruit season in the history of the country, is the prediction of F. W. Robinson of Portland, general freight agent of the Oregon-Washington Railroad and Navigation Company. It is estimated conservatively, he added, that the apple crop in Washington alone will be between 13,000 and 14,000 cars and that the wheat crop will be the largest ever harvested. There has been ample moisture, the precipitation coming at times when the ground was open, and with mild and clear weather prevailing the farmers will soon begin work in the fields and orchards. There is more diversified agriculture than in former years and the outlook is that mixed farming will be more generally practiced in the districts tributary to cities and towns.

Increase in Winter Wheat Crop

Thirty per cent of the entire grain acreage in Douglas county, Wash., is in winter wheat, or 40 per cent more than a year ago, according to J. G. Kennedy, president of the Douglas county Bank at Waterville. He added: "Many new settlers are coming into our country, although a tendency of heavy owners to acquire more is perhaps retarding this feature of settlement somewhat. However, the land is still selling at from $30 to $75 an acre."

Increase in Deposits

P. M. Winans, cashier of the First National Bank of Walla Walla, Wash., says that the deposits in the banks there are $500,000 greater than a year ago. Though 25 per cent of the 1911 wheat crop is held by farmers, they seem to have an abundance of money. Orchard and intensified farming tracts are undergoing steady development and the street car lines which run out to the suburban districts are rapidly being dotted with substantial homes. There is a noticeable revival of interest in alfalfa farming, and this has directed more attention to live stock and poultry growing.

New Spokane Company Organized

Clark Fork Development Company of Spokane has been organized with a capitalization of $2,000,000 and Edward Dolan and J. Herbert Anderson of Spokane as the principal incorporators to plant and develop a commercial apple orchard of 18,000 acres at Thompson Falls, Mont. Four thousand acres will be planted this spring. The entire acreage requires 1,260,000 trees. The land is equipped with a complete irrigation plant. The plan of development includes the erection of several houses, an apple packing and storage building and cider mill for using the second grade apples. The high grade fruit will be shipped to Europe, South America and the Orient.

Pierre, S. D.—Harry Quackenbush has been promoted to the position of cashier of the Bank of Commerce.

Seattle

The annual statement of the treasurer of the state of Washington for the year 1911 shows that the total receipts for the year amounted to $7,974,096.47, and the total disbursements representing warrants and interest during the year were $7,830,896.72. The cash on hand January 1, 1911, was $896,251.50, and on January 1, 1912, the cash on hand had reached an aggregate of $1,129,478.25. Of the disbursements $1,733,725 represents warrants paid during the year 1911, which were issued in purchase of bonds by the six permanent school funds during the year 1911 and the latter part of 1910.

The Seattle port commission decided last week to submit a $3,000,000 harbor bond issue to the voters at the March election to provide money to acquire land and build six ocean piers as the initial step in the development of a $7,500,000 ocean terminal on Harbor Island. The meeting was enlivened by the resignation of Scott C. Calhoun, counsel for the commission, who declared that the commissioners had repudiated his work when they announced their intention of altering a tentative contract drawn by Calhoun with a New York syndicate that is to operate the terminal.

Seattle's municipal bank commission appointed by Mayor George W. Dilling in accordance with a resolution introduced by Councilman Oliver T. Erickson and adopted by the council has organized for work by the election of Richard Winsor as president and L. O. Schrader as secretary. The other members of the commission are: Mrs. H. P. Fish, George F. Hannan and James A. Haight. At the organization meeting it was decided to ask other municipalities for reports dealing with municipal bank business with a view to determining what these cities do with their idle money and what balances are carried in banks; the question of establishing a municipal bank, in event no state laws conflict, being left for consideration after reports have been received from other cities. Erickson proposes a municipal bank in which city funds shall be deposited. This bank shall buy and sell municipal bonds of every character and be given authority to transfer funds in order to decrease the amount of money on hand, which, in his opinion, only adds to the interest charges against the municipality. Erickson's interest in the establishment of such a department is due, it is said, to the refusal of the Seattle clearing house to endorse the council's plan for the sale of municipal street car bonds to local investors.

The first trial of a case of violation of the postal savings bank law was held in San Francisco recently and Salip Cin Amat, a Malay, was sentenced to one year's imprisonment in the penitentiary for attempting to cash a Seattle certificate of deposit belonging to a Syrian, whose pockets Amat had rifled. Arthur E. Drake, cashier of the postal savings bank of Seattle, was a witness in the case.

A charter has been issued to the Methow Valley State Bank of Pateros. The bank is capitalized at $10,000. The officers are: C. T. Borg, president; J. W. Swenson, vice-president; O. A. Johnson, cashier.

ORGANIZATION OF NATIONAL BANKS

During the month of January, 1912, twenty-four applications to organize national banks were received. Of the applications pending twelve were approved and two rejected. In the same month sixteen banks, with total capital of $1,665,000, were authorized to begin business, of which number nine, with capital of $240,000, had individual capital of less than $50,000, and seven, with capital of $1,425,000, individual capital of $50,000 or over.

The comptroller of the currency has approved that application to convert the Solano County Bank of Suisan, Cal., into "The First National Bank of Suisan," capital, $100,000.

San Francisco

The January financial letter of the American National Bank of San Francisco quotes some interesting comparisons of bank clearings and building permits for the past three years in the larger cities of California, and says in part:

"In connection with building matters, it is interesting to note that in 1911 new loans and renewals of old loans on real estate were recorded to the amount of \$48,916,430, of which the savings banks and trust companies loaned \$33,478,571, or a little more than 68 per cent of the total sum. Interest rates on mortgage loans were steady at $5\frac{1}{2}$ to 6 per cent. On December 31, 1911, the total savings deposits in the San Francisco banks were \$176,923,000, showing a net gain of about \$9,000,000 for the year. The number of persons having savings accounts in San Francisco is considerably more than one-half of the population. And despite this fact, and the undoubted strength of our savings institutions, the postal savings bank flourishes as in no other city of the country.

"The total deposits of all the banks in San Francisco, including both national and state institutions, at the beginning of this year were about $377,000,000, which is greater than the combined bank deposits in all the other large cities on the Pacific Coast.

"The past year witnessed an increase in the importance of the port of San Francisco. The vessels entered from and cleared for foreign ports had a total tonnage in 1911 of 1,601,641, as compared with 1,350,961 in 1910. The exports of merchandise to foreign countries reached a total of $43,427,000, as compared with $35,773,000 in 1910, while the imports increased about 10 per cent, to $56,075,000.

"One of the gratifying records of the year was that of gold production, in which California led all the other states, with a total output of $20,510,987. Colorado held second place, with $19,153,860, while Nevada was third with $18,968,578, and Alaska fourth with $16,002,976. The United States geological survey reports 1,100 producing mines within the state. About 40 per cent of the gold production is the result of dredging operations. Sentiment among the leading bankers and business experts of the country is that the year just begun will not be marked by any unusual revival of business activity. It is admitted that conditions, generally speaking, are sound, and the country is prepared, by reason of conservative mercantile policies adhered to during the past few years, quickly to reflect prosperity when trade becomes really active."

Geo. M. Reynolds, president of the Continental and Commercial National Bank of Chicago, will address the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce at their annual banquet February 22d.

A study of the progress figures for 1911 clearly indicates the satisfactory condition of affairs in California. Bank clearings for 1911 recorded in five of California's leading cities are as follows: San Francisco, $2,427,075,000; Los Angeles, $942,906,000; Oakland, $172,666,000; San Diego, $88,127,000; and Sacramento, $78,376,000—in all cases an increase over the clearings of 1910.

The Anglo and London Paris National Bank says: The January bank statements showed the year 1911 to have been one of general but moderate prosperity to California banks. Their conservative financial policy has doubtless prevented costly development work too much in advance of public requirements. The state is having a healthy growth not likely to be checked by any collapse of speculation. The feeling that the beginning of large expenditures in preparation for the exposition and opening of the canal is stimulating activity in all lines of enterprise in this city. There is hope of such a settlement of our disagreements with local public service corporations as will permit our growth to proceed on normal lines.

In spite of the continued ease of the New York money market the hesitancy in taking up new share capital, or even bonds at rates satisfactory to borrowers, is shown by the very large issue—over $310,000,000 in 1911—of short term corporate notes to tide over immediate corporate requirements. Most of the new share and bond capital obtained was by a very few of the strongest public service corporations and industrials. During 1911 Europe was able to use a large part of our accumulations at very profitable rates but the appearance of easier conditions there leads to the hope of a more satisfactory market for American securities which would promptly bring out large offerings of new issues.

Silver advanced sharply during January, reaching the highest price attained since November, 1907. Business in India is improving and the coming season promises well. Chinese banks are under pressure to provide for withdrawals of cash resulting from political conditions, and are importing bar silver to replenish reserves. Heavy reductions in the stock of coined rupees in the Indian currency is another factor in raising the price of silver. Operators taking advantage of the situation are holding for advances and although the market position has greatly improved it is still dominated by speculative interests as clearly indicated by the heavy premium exacted for ready delivery silver.

Pittsburgh

The attainment of its sixtieth year by the First National of Pittsburgh is a notable event in local financial history. This institution is the oldest national bank in the western portion of Pennsylvania, and one of the oldest in the United States, for it received the comptroller's authorization to begin business on August 8, 1863, its charter number being 48. Its origin dates much farther back than the Civil War, however, for it was established on January 28, 1852, as a state banking institution. For practically all of the sixty years of its existence it has occupied its present site, or a part of it, at the corner of Fifth Avenue and Wood Street. It is a fitting celebration that the skyscraper now being erected should be completed soon after the bank's sixtieth birthday. This building, which will be twenty-six stories in height, is going up in record time, and will be ready for occupancy on April 1st. The bank has a capital of $1,000,000, and surplus and profits of $1,073,403.98. The active officers are: Oscar L. Telling, president; F. H. Richard, cashier; T. C. Griggs, W. F. Benkiser, and R. C. Masten, assistant cashier; J. E. Rovensky, manager, and W. J. Frank, assistant manager of the foreign department.

Pittsburgh bank clearings for the month of January made a good showing. The total was $223,050,184, as compared with $217,044,701 in the corresponding month last year, $226,457,891 in 1910 and $180,837,380 in 1909. In only three years, 1910, 1907 and 1906, have January clearings exceeded those for the month just ended.

The annual meeting and dinner of Group 8. Pennsylvania Bankers Association, will be held at the Hotel Schenley on the evening of February 21st. The arrangements will be completed in a short time.

Stevenson E. Ward, formerly cashier of the Bank of Mansfield, O., has been appointed an assistant cashier of the National Bank of Commerce, New York.

LARGE STATE DEPOSITS

According to the comparison of the accounts of the state treasurer and those of the state comptroller made by the state board of control, California has \$8,071,840 on deposit in the various banks of the state. This money has been loaned out under the provision of the state law and is drawing from 2 per cent to $2\frac{1}{2}$ per cent interest. The state is earning \$13,500 per month upon these loans.

$50,000 SHORTAGE IN CALIFORNIA BANK

Pomona, Cal.—Announcement was made on Tuesday morning that a shortage of at least $50,000 had been discovered in the accounts of Earl Stanard, head bookkeeper of the American National Bank here. Stanard with his wife left the city some days ago.

Accounts of Iowa banks invited. Reserve agents for national banks

Des Moines, Feb. 7.—The campaign for encouragement of Iowa bankers in improvement of agricultural conditions in Iowa has started in earnest with Secretary P. W. Hall of the Iowa Bankers Association at the helm. Mr. Hall is this week sending out cards to every bank belonging to the association. The cards read "Test Your Seed Corn." Each banker is supposed to give the cards prominent location. Other cards will be sent and literature designed to make a greater Iowa is in contemplation by Secretary Hall. President E. J. Curtin of Decorah always has been a great booster for better agricultural methods and he is joining in the movement with all his influence. Iowa has always been a steady, stable state and it is difficult to make the people realize that millions could be added to the wealth of the grand old state if the farmers would cultivate improved farming methods and if there was more intensified farming and less waste.

Mechanics Savings to Have New Building

G. E. MacKinnon, president of the Mechanics Savings, announces that plans for the new home for the institution have been completed and that work will begin at the earliest date possible. The new bank will be across the street from the new structure which the Central State is building. The Mechanics bank will be for banking purposes exclusively, white terra cotta front, two stories high, thoroughly modern and well lighted. While it has been planned to erect it on leased ground it is understood that the Mechanics Building Company has taken an option on the land and will buy it. The land in question is just north of the Manhattan block in which the Mechanics has been located since it was organized by Mr. MacKinnon some years ago.

Postoffice Deposits Growing

The postoffice bank at Des Moines seems to be growing. It is now announced that the deposits total $20,000. The monthly deposits will total $10,000 with withdrawals between $3,000 and $4,000 monthly. A study of the depositors shows many small amounts and an increased interest in the institution on the part of foreigners.

Bank Robbers Serving Sentence

Two bank robbers were retired from circulation at Chariton last week when "Jimmy" Burns and "Baltimore Fat" Wilson were found guilty of burglary and arson. These are two of the five men arrested for complicity in the robbery of the Derby State at Derby in which $4,800 was secured and the bank set afire. Theola Schnorkis, the third of the men to be put on trial, was acquitted. There are two other men awaiting trial for the same offense. The Derby bank was robbed the night of November 24th. Burns, Wilson and Schnorkis were arrested at Omaha. Gust Patek, Iowa representative of the W. J. Burns detective agency, which is now in charge of the protective work for the Iowa Bankers Association, made the arrests. The bank carried burglary insurance and lost nothing by the robbery. The United States Fidelity and Guaranty recovered $800 of the amount taken and it is said that a portion of the loot is in a safety deposit vault in an Omaha bank.

Contest for School Treasurer

It looks as if Des Moines will see a pretty contest for the office of school treasurer at the coming school election in March. There are at present two candidates: John Hogan, present incumbent and cashier of the German Savings, and W. E. Barrett, cashier of the Valley National. Mr. Barrett announces that he is running on a "no salary" platform, meaning that he will take the job for nothing, whereas Mr. Hogan has received $1,200 annually. Both candidates announce a continuation of the policy of putting the school funds out at interest on the daily balances. Mr. Hogan has been putting this money out among a dozen or so banks and it is anticipated that they will unite to support him. In that case, it is quite likely to be Barrett against the field. The race will be pretty.

Gain in Clearings

January came to the front with a big gain in Des Moines bank clearings as compared with the clearings for January last year. The total, January, 1912, was $18,191,475.74, while for January, 1911, the total was $15,944,935.51. The gain is $2,246,476.14. The last week in the month showed a gain of $742,671 as compared with the closing week last year.

Greek Forger Wanted

Peter Georgis, the Greek arrested in Denver and wanted at Mason City for passing a $65 forged check on the First National, proves to be a bad actor. According to news which reached Secretary Hall of the I. B. A., Georgis made a daring effort to escape from the court room at Denver and was shot and wounded. Secretary Hall has also learned that Georgis is badly wanted at other cities, especially in the East. The sheriff from Cerro Gordo county, Iowa, has twice been to Denver to get Georgis but has returned both times without him.

Supposed Bank Robber Freed

A man named Bowman, arrested some months ago suspected of complicity in the robbery of the Bank of Carlyle in December, 1909, has been released. An ex-bank robber testified before the grand jury in the case and caused the indictment of Bowman. Later he refused to come to Iowa to testify at the trial and the authorities gave up the prosecution. Bowman was arrested in Minneapolis.

Another Tax Decision

Another Tax decision has been handed down by the state department of justice involving the soldiers tax exemption of $1,200 which the last legislature provided. It is held that this exemption applies to all classes of property and must be made pro rata. Under the new law moneys and credit, real estate and bank stock are assessed differently. For that reason, old soldiers cannot deduct the $1,200 from any of these, but the assessor may pro rate it so that each fund will bear a portion of the deduction.

Penny Savings in Cedar Rapids

Much interest has been developed in Cedar Rapids over the proposed penny savings system which has been adopted in the schools there upon the recommendation of John Burianek, Jr., of the Peoples Savings. The system is practically the same as that which Des Moines has been carrying out with success for several years. Recently the schools at Clinton made a report which shows that it is likewise giving entire satisfaction there.

Would Solve Bank Robbery

Y. W. Walker has promised to solve the Hazelton bank robbery of some years ago if the Iowa Bankers Association will give him $200 or $500 if the parties are convicted. He says in a letter to Secretary Hall that the guilty parties are in the penitentiary now and that he knows who they are and how to force them to divulge sufficient evidence to result in conviction. Mr. Hall has not yet accepted the offer.

Send Soiled Bills to Washington

The German Savings at Davenport last week sent $123,000 in soiled and mutilated currency back to Washington and asked new money in its place. The officers of the bank aver that the institution leads the Middle West in amount of such money forwarded to Washington. Since a couple of Iowa bank employees have been seriously poisoned from handling dirty money there is a general disposition to get rid of it.

Contests On Adding Machine

The clerks in the Iowa National at Des Moines have inaugurated a series of contests that might prove interesting elsewhere. The prize goes to the clerk who can make the best time in totaling checks worth $100,000 on an adding machine. Of course there must be no mistakes. Just as an idea of how they go, there are the records for a recent contest: Lyle C. Bradley, 2.51; Floyd C. Bell, 3.05; C. H. Craig, 3.08; J. F. Hart, 4.22; L. M. Myers, 4.54; Frank Kohlhaas, 5.46; Earl Wilson, 7.37. If any bank clerks can beat this the Iowa National boys would like to know it.

Manchester Bank Merger

A bank merger is announced at Manchester, where the State Savings and the recently organized Merchants and Farmers will be made into one with a capital stock of $100,000. L. Matthews, who for many years has been president of the State Savings, retires, although retaining his interest. His successor will be chosen later. F. E. Dutton, formerly cashier of the First National, and W. W. Matthews, cashier of the State Savings, will be cashier and assistant cashier.

By JOHN I. BIDDISON

A big wave in the financial circles of South Dakota was caused by the announcement this week that the American National Bank had been purchased by and consolidated with the Sioux Falls Savings Bank, one of the oldest established institutions of its kind in the state. All the business of the former institution has been transferred to the books of the purchaser. As a result of the merger, the capital of the savings bank has increased to $200,000, and the combined deposits will aggregate about $1,700,000, according to the statement of an authority. The business will be transacted in the banking house of the savings bank. The concern that goes out of existence was established in 1907 as the American State Bank, and had a phenomenal growth and prosperity. In 1909 it was nationalized, maintaining its record of increasing business. Its president was E. G. Kennedy and its cashier, Wm. Ontjes. The other directors were: James D. Elliott, Alfred E. Bowring, S. D. Wadsworth, Andrew Ontjes and Wm. G. Porter. The combination makes one of the strongest, if not the strongest single bank in South Dakota.

Holdings of Frank S. Barnes

The report of the appraisers of the assets of Frank S. Barnes, the Marcus, Iowa, banker, places a valuation on his holdings of $80,856.15, as compared with $310,000, the amount he gave in when listing his assets in the federal court, to avoid being thrown into bankruptcy. The board of appraisers was composed of the following citizens of Marcus: T. R. Fenton, Jas. Collins, and Wm. M. White. The appraisers list the Iowa properties and the Illinois properties separately. The former amount to $120,076.15, from which are to be deducted the homestead exemption, personal property, and stocks held as collateral by secured creditors. These amount to $46,920, leaving net assets in this state of $73,156.15. The Illinois property amounts to $17,700, subject to a $10,000 mortgage.

Sioux City Postal Savings

Patrons of the Sioux City postal savings bank in the month of January deposited the enormous total of $2,685, which is hailed as a healthy sign of development, since it is $600 more than the December business. Since the establishment on October 7th, certificates of deposit have been issued to the amount of $10,363.

Banking News Notes

Herman Schilling is a much much wanted in the dandy little burg of Aberdeen, for he got several of them—schillings—that belonged to Aberdeen banks, according to reports. Officers are looking for him with warrants charging several cases of forgery. The amounts are small. He is a young man of 25 years.

Bank clearings for the month of January amounted to $10,631,314.32.

It is estimated that depositors in the failed Wessington, S. D., Henderson State Bank will get the full amount of their deposits but that stockholders will lose about 40 per cent on their investments. The bank was capitalized for $25,000.

Mrs. L. S. Swezey, of Vermillion, S. D., wife of the president of the Vermillion National Bank, died last Wednesday at Ardmore, Okla., at the home of her daughter, Mrs. R. A. Fox. The burial was in Vermillion.

F. W. Kemp has arrived in Sioux City from Manning, Ia., to take up his duties as secretary of the Bennett Loan and Trust Company.

The First National Bank of White Owl, S. D., is some farmer. It has 1,700 acres of land in one patch under fence and will stock it with two-year-old steers next spring, and make a little money without clipping bonds or taking discounts.

Among the Visiting Bankers

A. M. Shaw, cashier of the Delmont (S. D.) State Bank, was in Sioux City Wednesday on his way East.

John C. Clary, president of the Commercial Bank of Hornick, Iowa, was in Sioux City on business Thursday.

E. J. Curtin, president of the Citizens Savings Bank, Decorah, Iowa, and president of the Iowa Bankers Association, was in Sioux City Thursday attending a meeting of representatives of the fair associations of Minnesota, South Dakota, Nebraska, Iowa, and the Interstate Fair of Sioux City. Mr. Curtin is a director in the Iowa State Fair and superintendent of the speed department.

A. W. Ewert, president of the National Bank of Commerce, Pierre, S. D., transacted in Sioux City Saturday.

Ellis D. Robb, national bank examiner for northern Iowa, was in Sioux City a few hours Saturday.

F. L. Sutter, cashier of the Iowa Savings Bank, Rock Rapids, Iowa, was in Sioux City this week attending the H. G. McMillan & Sons' thoroughbred horse sale.

R. W. Ley, cashier of the State Bank of Wayne, Neb., was in a Sioux City Tuesday.

J. H. Tentinger, cashier of the German Savings Bank, LeMars, Iowa, was in Sioux City on business Tuesday.

INCREASED EARNINGS

The Nashville Railway and Light Company of Nashville has shown remarkable growth under a comparison of its annual earnings for the past seven years. In 1904 the earnings amounted to $1,010,081. Last year the earnings were $1,963,783. The stocks of the company have had corresponding increases in value.

Farmers State of Clontarf, Minn., has filed its articles of incorporation. William Perrizo, Jr., Delavan, James O'Donnell, Andrew Reardon, Hannah Donovan, Henry Nelson, Hans Mikkelsen, D. F. McDermott, Bruno J. Perrizo, all of Clontarf, and John Shimuck, of Danvers, are the incorporators. The capital stock is $10,000; its highest indebtedness $200,000.

NEW CASTLE TRUST COMPANY MERGER

Philadelphia.—At a meeting of directors of the two institutions it was decided to merge the New Castle branch of the National Bank of Wilmington and Brandywine with the New Castle Trust Company. The consolidation makes one of the strongest banks in the state of Delaware. It will be known as the New Castle Trust Company.

PAYS DEBT TO OLD DEPOSITORS

Providence, R. I., February 7.—With the payment on Monday of $1,750,000, in redeeming the final 10 per cent contingent certificates, the Union Trust Company, which suspended during the panic of 1907, completely liquidated its indebtedness to its old depositors. Since the reorganization of the company and the reopening of the institution, payments to the former depositors have been made at intervals and when the holders of the certificates presented them for redemption they received every cent they had in the bank when it closed. The only obligations which now remain from the financial difficulties of 1907 are the deferred certificates held by the old stockholders, representing about $500,000, and these will be retired at par as soon as the directors believe the bank is in a position to do so.

compelled to make complete reports to the comptroller, in such form as he may prescribe.

It is not absolutely necessary to incorporate in order to do a banking business in the state of Florida; but unincorporated banks are not permitted to use the word "bank," or any other title which may imply the same thing or function, nor are they permitted to use a title which may imply that the bank is incorporated. All such names, if they were in use at the time the new banking law went into effect, must have after them in prominent letters, the words "not incorporated." These letters must be as plain and conspicuous as the others used. The fine for an infringement of this provision is $50 per day. All banks, bankers and private firms must have a license, which can be revoked and the bank promptly closed for any failure to conform to the state regulation. Thus far the new law has been effective in putting all forms of banking under state supervision. There is a provision in the law for the appointment of receivers and the liquidation of banks. There was very little contest over the adoption of this new law, which is now recognized by both friends and opponents as one of the best banking laws the state ever has had.

State Supervision in New York

Following is a letter received from William Sohmer, state comptroller of New York, in whose office there has been established a private banking bureau under the direction of Ralph Delli Paoli, commissioner. The supervision of private banks in the state was put directly in charge of the state comptroller along with private detectives rather than under the supervision of the state banking commissioner, who has supervision over state banks and trust companies. Mr. Sohmer's letter is as follows:

"I have your favor of January 31st, requesting certain information in regard to the private banking law of this state, and in response to your various inquiries contained therein take pleasure in enclosing herewith copy of chapter 348 of the laws of 1910, as amended by chapter 393 of the laws of 1911, relating to the licensing and examination of private bankers, and would direct your especial attention to section 25 (licensing provisions), section 26 (books to be kept and reports to be filed, etc.), and section 29-e (examination by comptroller, penalty for interference therewith, proceedings by attorney-general, etc.).

Also, we are enclosing copy of section 22 of the general corporation law as amended by chapter 771 of the laws of 1911, prohibiting the exercise of banking powers by certain corporations, together with copy of chapter 349 of the laws of 1910, as amended by chapter 578 of the laws of 1911 and relating to the licensing of steamship ticket agents.

Also, we are mailing you, under separate cover, copy of the last annual report of the comptroller, on page xxxiii of which you will find the last report of the private banking bureau of this department, setting forth in some detail the history and scope of the Sullivan private banking bill, showing what has been done under this act up to the present time towards regulating the business of private banking in this state, the principal difficulties confronted by the comptroller in the enforcement of the provisions of the act, etc., etc."

The references which Mr. Sohmer makes in his letter include quite enough for a separate and distinct article, which may appear next week. The points made, however, in the sections and chapters mentioned are briefly these:

Chapter 348 is a new private banking act containing amendments to chapter 393, which became effective June 21, 1911. With certain exceptions, section 25 of this chapter provides that "no individual or partnership shall hereafter engage directly or indirectly" in the business of banking before receiving a license from the state comptroller. The language of the New York statute is practically the same as that of Pennsylvania, Florida, Alabama and other states referred to above. It provides examinations and names penalties for refusing to submit thereto, and for making false statements or not exhibiting a license in the place of business.

The New York statute makes the same exceptions in favor of railroad companies, hotel keepers and others who handle money in a certain way, but do not do a banking business. It also excepts private banking houses in cities of more than a million inhabitants (which means New York City), upon their filing a satisfactory bond for $100,000; in Buffalo and Rochester the bond is $50,000. This exception was made to permit such houses as J. P. Morgan & Co., Kuhn, Loeb & Co., and others to continue their present businesses without examination by the state comptroller. Individuals expecting to open private banks hereafter will come under the complete supervisory powers of the state comptroller. Later acts were passed by the New York legislature licensing steamship ticket agencies, which practically were put out of business by the banking act. An amendment also was passed to prohibit corporations, both domestic and foreign, from conducting a banking business in the state of New York, except as permitted by such laws, and under the direct supervision of the state. This act has the effect of preventing banks from opening in New York under Delaware or Arizona charters, and prevents foreign branch banks from operating without supervision. The effect of all these various laws and amendments in New York state has been to bring private banking under direct control of the state. The law provides that four reports per year, showing the relation between assets and liabilities, and verified under oath, shall be made. It also provides for examinations, and is very similar to the laws of other states, and in fact, has been copied by many of the other states.

Risk Too Great for Any State

Chicago Tribune continues to give valiant support to the state-wide bank supervision movement in Illinois. Also it continues to hear from papers all the way from Duluth to Oklahoma City, urging it on in the good work. Following is an editorial from the Saturday last issue, one of the strongest of the series:

Responsible Banking

Apurpose of the private bank situation in Illinois, an Indiana reader of the Tribune writes to inclose an editorial comment thereon from the Oklahoma City Times. The editorial is rightly condemnatory of the Illinois situation, and the condemnation is not the less effective that it comes from a state which conservative Illinoisans think of as radical if not heretical in such matters.

Writing of the unregulated private bank, our correspondent says: "The trouble seems to come when the men of sterling character who built up the business become old and infirm. When responsible duties are delegated to new hands a possible element of doubt and weakness is introduced. For this reason alone the state should keep a firm oversight on all banking institutions."

There can be no question of this position, and it is to be hoped the next legislature will bring all our banks under supervision. Illinois has too long occupied an undesirable isolation—with two or three other states—in this respect. It is time to catch up.

The Duluth Herald, which also takes an interest in the Illinois situation, calls attention to the example of Minnesota, which has a law prohibiting private banks.

"There was protest, of course," says the Herald, "and for some years effective opposition; but the proposal was so manifestly right that it had to win. Those who engage in the banking business on legitimate lines start state or national banks. Though doubtless there are many strong and safe private banks in Illinois, as there were in Minnesota, the risk is too great for any state to permit."

CHICAGO PRIVATE BANKER IN COURT

Archie C. Tisdelle, former La Salle Street private banker, whose institution became insolvent about three years ago, was summoned for trial before Judge Denis E. Sullivan on Friday morning. He is under indictment for receiving deposits when he is said to have known his banking institution was insolvent, and on a charge of embezzlement. The true bills were voted March 19, 1908. Among the accusers are A. W. Wadsworth and Mrs. Jennie B. Mitchell. Wadsworth was an officer of the Progressive Lodge of the International Association of Machinists.

MICHIGAN BANK CLOSED

Evidences showing "frenzied finance" methods in the conduct of the Dowagiac State bank have been uncovered by the banking department, and as a result the bank is still closed while a complete audit is being made. Concerning the situation, E. H. Doyle, state banking commissioner, has issued the following statement:

"So far we have discovered about $12,000 in forged notes, and until a complete audit is made we cannot say what the outcome will be.

"There are other questionable matters that I do not care to go into detail about at this time. The bank will be closed until we are satisfied it should open in a safe and solvent condition, and it may never open again, under the same management.

"One thing is certain in my opinion, no man in active charge of a state bank should be owner of a private bank or in any way interested in one.

"This and the recent developments at the Albion National bank show the importance of greater care on the part of directors in all banks, in the examination of all assets. One man banks are always dangerous, and my experience during the past year has proven this beyond a doubt."

LENNON BANK SHORT

Lennon, Mich., Feb. 7.—According to the inventory made of the Lennon bank, which has been operated by J. Burt Jenney, the Dowagiac banker, whose institution at that place was closed Saturday, the assets of the Lennon bank total but $62,503.98. People of Lennon have $125,000 on deposit in the bank.

The reported large deficiency in the local bank is accounted for by depositors by the fact that as soon as money was received here it was ordered sent to Dowagiac. The Lennon bank possessed only a very small safe, and it would not have been advisable to retain a very large amount. The affairs of the local bank were known at Dowagiac, the headquarters of Jenney's string of banks. One clerk in the Dowagiac bank did nothing but handle the correspondence and reports of the other banks in which Jenney was interested. Daily reports were made of the condition of the other banks.

The bank is now in charge of Under Sheriff Bert Griffin, of Corunna, who was appointed by Judge S. S. Miner to take charge of the bank under the attachment secured by Robert Morrison.

M. T. HERRICK NAMED

Washington, February 7.—The nomination of former Governor M. T. Herrick, of Ohio, to be ambassador to France, was sent by President Taft to the senate to-day. He will succeed Robert Bacon, resigned to become a fellow of Harvard University. The government of France has notified Washington that Mr. Herrick will be acceptable.

Little Falls, Minn.—The following are the officers of the German-American National Bank for the ensuing year: C. A. Weyerhaeuser, president; J. W. Berg and John Wetzel, vice-presidents; E. J. Richie, cashier.

Books on Banking, Finance and Economics

Credit. By J. LAWRENCE LAUGHLIN, of the Department of Political Economy, University of Chicago. Postpaid, 53c.

The nature of credit and its effect on prices have long been a subject of disagreement among economists. Its basis is commonly assumed to be money or bank reserves.

Essentials of Business Law. By FRANCIS M. BURDICK, LL. D., Professor of Law in Columbia University. 12mo. Postpaid, $1.50.

This book shows how the rules of law governing the commonest business transactions have been developed, and it tells what they are to-day. Technical law terms have been discarded as far as possible, and when they are used they are so explained and illustrated as to be easily understood. The principles of law are simplified and expressed in clear, lucid everyday speech.

Foreign Exchange. Tables converting foreign money into United States money, and United States money into foreign money at all commercial rates of exchange used in financial transactions between the United States and foreign countries. All about foreign exchange, including various forms of foreign commercial paper and terms, abbreviations, etc. For banks, bankers, steamship agents, importers, exporters and manufacturers. Cloth, $5.00.

Government Regulation of Railway Rates. By HUGO R. MEYER. A Professor of Political Economy in the University of Chicago. Postpaid, $1.60 net.

Investment Bonds. By F. LOWNHAUPT. Postpaid, $1.90. Prospective investors who wish to make advantageous use of their money will do well to take notice of this volume. The author does not theorize, but tells only plain facts of the relation of the bond to its issuing corporation, and of the general investment aspect of the instrument.

Money and Credit. By WILBUR ALDRICH. Postpaid, $1.37. This volume contains much valuable information and much sound discussion on money and credit.

The Banking and Currency Problems in the United States. By VICTOR MORAWETZ. The author takes up the problem of the national monetary commission, appointed by congress, and discusses the means of providing a permanent safe-guard against money stringencies and panics. Postpaid, $1.10.

The Principles of Money and Banking. By CHARLES A. CONANT. It is a new and complete exposition of its subject. Two volumes. Postpaid, $4.25.

The Pitfalls of Speculation. By THOMAS GIBSON. Postpaid, $1.20.

A book dealing exclusively with marginal speculation, and analyzing in a clear and simple manner the causes of failure in speculation, with a suggestion as to the remedies.

The Use of Loan Credit in Modern Business. By THORSTEIN B. VEBLEN. Postpaid, 28c.

The Investors' Catechism. By M. M. REYNOLDS. Cloth, by mail, $1.10.

"Investors' Catechism." Contains all that it is essential for the beginner to know, and opens the way for a thorough study of the whole subject of investment. The author has for the sake of clearness and simplicity adopted a catechetical style which is somewhat novel in this sort of literature.

The above books are the best of their kind, and will be promptly forwarded upon receipt of price.

York, and of the First National at Marquette, is to become a real "country gentleman." He has bought a seven-acre estate at Short Hills, N. J., and will become a loving subject of Governor Woodrow Wilson.

BESIDES a large dwelling, constructed entirely of reinforced concrete, with a tile-covered roof, and containing every modern detail, the property consists of a concrete garage and kennel, the elevation of the estate being such as to afford excellent views of the Navesink Highlands.

E. B. CLARE-AVERY, St. Louis, writes: "Your most interesting paper—the only one which, I may say, I go to the trouble of reading each week from cover to cover." Thanks, old man!

BATAVIAN NATIONAL, up at La Crosse, made a big hit by printing as a full page advertisement in a local paper a copy of the new income tax law which went into effect in Wisconsin in July, 1911. Extra copies in pamphlet form can be had from the bank. The law affects every income above $800 per year, and is a model of its kind. Evasion will be difficult and, if caught, costly.

CASHIER.

CHAS. W. HINKLEY, a director in the Fort Dearborn National, died on Monday at his residence on Greenwood Avenue in this city. This is the second director the Fort Dearborn has lost by death within the past week. The other was Edwin Halley, the railroad magnate and manager.

A LETTER from Thomas H. Gardiner of Los Angeles commends THE CHICAGO BANKER editorial on uniform state laws. Mr. Gardiner says that for years he has advocated just such a condition, and that he favors limiting the interest rate on money so as to make it the same in all the states. He goes further and states that he believes a limit should be placed on dividend possibilities of capital stocks.

INVESTIGATION by the Interstate Commerce Commission into the express company business has shown overcharges in one month of $67,000. In one day there were overcharges on 3,000 packages, not one cent of which ever was returned.

IF the Interstate Commerce Commission could learn of the number of times where charges have been collected at both ends, it would add a wonderful argument in favor of the abolition of the present express company system.

FOR years the express companies have had senators in congress looking after their monopoly in a legislative way, so that this practically is the only country of any pretense on the face of the earth which has not a parcels post system developed. It costs more to send a package from New York to Newark than it does from Copenhagen to San Francisco.

FOR several years the American Bankers Association has conducted a fight against express companies being in the banking business, on account of their selling alleged money orders and charging for the transfer of the funds. The transfer charges were fraudulent, for it has been shown in thousands of cases that no transfer of funds ever took place. The express company depended entirely upon the local bank to meet their money order demands. It would seem that right now is a good time for bankers, shippers and the defrauded public to unite to straighten out the express company situation.

SOME people have been unkind enough to say that THE CHICAGO BANKER is "after the private bankers." Nothing of the sort. For years the fixed policy of this paper has been in support of supervision and inspection of all kinds of banking, and it would like very much to see it extended to stock issuing corporations.

WHEN the Chicago clearing house set the world an example of what the highest type of refined bank examination means, it made the greatest step in advance in banking customs made in a quarter of a century.

IT has come to pass that clearing houses in almost every city of any size, including New York, have followed the Chicago example. It seems incredible that the city of Chicago should be so far in advance of other cities and the state of Illinois so far in the rear of other states in the matter of bank inspection.

A GOOD deal of the present-day opposition to state supervision is born of a desire on the part of the more advanced private bankers to be loyal to the supposed interests of the less advanced private bankers. Those who would welcome state supervision, and who would be glad to become incorporated institutions, are afraid of being pointed out as "quitters." This is a mistake. Instead of being known as quitters, they would eventually be known as leaders, and would be looked up to those who eventually will find it necessary to become reconciled to new conditions.

RECENTLY John H. Rhoades of New York, in speaking about the new banking bill which now is before the Albany legislature, and which is intended to compel banks to report securities held by them at their market value, stated that he believed it would have a tendency to increase the security of depositors.

THIS bank bill changes the requirements in many ways, and raises the maximum surplus from 15 to 20 per cent. It limits the rate of interest to be paid by savings banks to 3 per cent, except under conditions, and authorizes the state superintendent to revise the bookkeeping methods of all savings banks so as to make them uniform.

MR. RHOADES believes that these and other items included in the new bill will eliminate many of the weak features of savings banks. The comptroller of the currency has been trying to bring about uniform banking methods in national banks, and is being supported by bankers generally.

ROCK ISLAND is to have a new bank, with $100,000 capital, which will be known as the German Trust and Savings, and which eventually will do a general banking business.

HEREAFTER Fourth National of New York will conduct a foreign exchange business, and will have as its manager for that department, a young man who for many years was foreign exchange manager for Kountze Brothers.

F. W. LaFRENTZ, for many years a wheel-horse in the American Surety Company, has been elected president to succeed Henry D. Lyman, who becomes chairman of the board.

SECRETARY P. C. KAUFFMAN of Washington has sent out his proceedings books of the convention held at Wenatchee the middle of September. It is very complete and neatly bound.

NATIONAL CITY BANK of Chicago held its family dinner at the La Salle Hotel on Monday night. President D. R. Forgan announced the details of the pension system which went into effect in the bank on February 1st. Participation is not compulsory upon present employees, but will be as to future help.

MO LINE is to have a real financial center. The Peoples Trust directors at its Monday meeting voted to move up-town four or five blocks to Fifth and Fifteenth streets and will begin at once the erection of a new five-story bank and office building.

ON the three corners will be the three principal banks, then; State Savings on one, Moline Trust on another and the Peoples Trust on the third. Nelson H. Greene feels very sanguine of the benefits to come to the Peoples from the new move.

YOU all remember what Sol Wexler said about the Grand Rapids banker, who "would not know a cotton bill-of-lading from a copy of the Saturday Evening Ghost."

WELL, the good editor of the "Michigan Banker" leads off the January issue with an article on "Financing the Cotton Crop," by an Alabama banker. This ought to help some to redeem the situation.

EMORY W. CLARK, Detroit, is the new member of the finance committee of the A. B. A.

SUNFIELD (MICH.) BANKING COMPANY is converting to a state bank from a private firm.

NEXT night at the Chicago Bankers Club will be "Ladies' Night" with vaudeville.

GEO. F. ORDE has been elected treasurer of the Minneapolis club and Arthur Rodgers, another prince of good fellows, is the new president. Perry Harrison, the new vice-president, makes the "Three of a Kind." The new club house is one of the finest in the whole country and is run in the welcome-to-our-city spirit, which helps a lot.

JOHN D. WALKER, the Georgia banker, has been appointed by President Taft upon the National Assay Commission, quite a distinguished honor. Fourth time the place has been held by a distinguished Georgian.

STATE BANK of Plainville, Illinois, in two years of corporate life has built up deposits of $81,342.63. Has also paid a 5 per cent dividend, which is going some for a two-year-old. A. M. Carter is president and Allan B. Ayers is cashier.

BRANDT CASHIER COMPANY, Chicago, has placed eight of their latest model change makers in the ticket office of the new Chicago & Northwestern depot. They save the wages (and mistakes) of three extra men.

THE Brandt Automatic Cashier, changer model, is a mechanical change maker and payer. Press one key and the machine will instantly and accurately pay the exact number of coins required in the transaction. No hesitation, no waiting, no mental effort whatever, but instant accurate payment. Used in thousands of tellers' cages with best results.

GOVERNOR WOODROW WILSON will hold a public reception at the Hotel La Salle on Monday from 11 A. M. to 12 noon, under the auspices of the Iroquois Club. A luncheon will follow.

OUR good friend Chas. Shade, president of the First National of Rock Rapids and of four or five other banks up in that part of the state, will be a candidate for the presidency of the Iowa Bankers Association before the annual convention at Cedar Rapids in June.

MR. SHADE has for many years been active in the affairs of the association, and Iowa could not select a safer or better man for this office. Many were in hopes that J. H. Ingwersen of Clinton would get after it this year, but he does not even seem to want to make the race. Later he may shy his castor into the ring.

HARRY R. DENNIS, president of the Sioux Falls (S. D.) Savings, along with his two brothers and Mr. Van Vechten, has sold out to William Ontjes, former cashier of the American National, who will consolidate the two banks.

THE American will liquidate and the Savings will increase its capital to possibly $300,000. Harry Dennis and his brother have incorporated and will conduct their big farm loan business as Dennis & Dennis. Really, this end of their business outgrew the bank in profit making.

THE Dennis & Dennis firm will be at 450 Boyce-Greely building in Sioux Falls and will take up farm loan business of any legitimate nature. They are among the best known bankers in the state, and fully responsible.

H. R. was kind enough to write, "Send me THE CHICAGO BANKER to the new address. Couldn't get along without it."

Detroit Plans

By unanimous vote of the American Bankers Association at the convention held in New Orleans during November last, Detroit was selected for the 1912 convention-city and the thirty-eighth annual convention will be held there during the week beginning Monday, September 9th. This date was decided upon at a recent meeting of the associated banks (see last week's BANKER) and clearing house of Detroit, which meeting was attended by President William Livingstone, of Detroit, and Secretary Fred E. Farnsworth, of New York. Every bank in the city of Detroit was represented at this initial meeting, which was held for the purpose of effecting organization, and was marked with enthusiasm, unanimity of feeling, and hearty co-operation. Secretary Farnsworth outlined in general terms the necessary preliminary action, and suggested the importance of the early appointing of committees, especially a hotel committee, which could systematize hotel-applications after the principal hotels have cared for all of the applications which they can receive.

The associated banks appointed the following committee of Detroit bankers, which is to name all of the local committees: William Livingstone, president Dime Savings; Emory W. Clark, president First National, and Charles Moore, vice-president Security Trust.

The Hotel Pontchartrain has been selected as headquarters. This hotel is new and of the best construction, being fireproof and up-to-date in every particular. The site occupied by it is famous in Detroit as a hotel-site for nearly a century. It has been occupied successively by the National Hotel, the Russell House, and now the "Pontchartrain." The hotel is in the center of the city on Campus Martius, convenient to all car-lines; is within one square of Griswold, the "Wall Street" of Detroit; faces the city hall and the square, as well as many important business buildings. It is ideally arranged for a headquarters hotel, as it possesses ampler accommodations for registration purposes, state headquarters, council, section and committee meetings, for they can all be held in this building.

WEISER CONCENTRATING INTERESTS IN IOWA

C. J. Weiser, president of the Winneshiek County State Bank of Decorah, Iowa, who was one of North Dakota's pioneer bankers, having entered that state twenty years ago, has sold to local parties in the several towns where he has owned banks the larger part of his North Dakota interests.

Mr. Weiser has great faith in the future of the state, but owing to its distance from his home in Iowa, and to the increasing demands on his attention from his local enterprises and their various ramifications, in order to devote some of his time to travel, he finds it necessary to curtail his operations. Mr. Weiser's Winneshiek County Bank at Decorah is a money maker, and has deposits close to a million and a half. His many friends will be glad to know that he will concentrate his interests and activities in Iowa. A statement of Mr. Weiser's bank printed on another page shows in detail the quick assets and marketable collateral held by the bank. It is as clean a statement as can be made.

President Waite

President A. I. Waite of the Missouri association was in Chicago Thursday, direct from Joplin, where the Missouri convention will be held, May 21st and 22d. He says present plans are to surpass anything heretofore done by this premiere organization which, naturally, will be "going some."

NEW BUILDING DEDICATED AT GOLCONDA

The officers and board of directors of the Pope County State Bank at Golconda, Illinois, invited everybody in the county, as well as a few neighboring bankers, to attend the informal opening of their beautiful banking room on Saturday last. Between the hours of 9:00 A. M. and 10:00 P. M., over 1,500 visitors had inspected the new quarters, and all were treated courteously by a reception committee composed of all of the officers and directors and their families. C. R. Hieronymous of the Harris Trust was among the Chicago visitors.

The new building is a two-story pressed brick structure, trimmed with white stone on the outside, and has a very beautiful entrance. The interior is up to date in every way, having white marble fixtures and wainscoting. The vaults are very complete and have two hundred safety deposit boxes, protected by electric burglar alarms. The total expenditure of the building and fixtures is something upwards of $30,000. It is about the prettiest banking room in southern Illinois. Refreshments were served and souvenirs given to all visitors. The officers are Edward B. Clark, president; Henry Walter, Sr., vice-president; Henry V. Hesselman, cashier; and Blaine Boicourt, teller.

A. I. B. Plans

George E. Allen, educational director of the American Institute of Banking, has sent out notice that the annual convention at Salt Lake will be held August 21st, 22d, and 23d. Attendance is expected to break all records.

MASON TO FACE CREDITORS

William A. Mason, sole proprietor of the failed Wilson Avenue Bank, agreed to meet his creditors' committee Friday morning. It was hoped he might explain what he did with the $30,000 of deposits that are said to be missing. And depositors expect to learn just what remains of the bankrupt banker's assets.

L. A. Goddard

L. A. Goddard, president of the State Bank of Chicago, who has been absent in Florida for six weeks, returned to the city this week.

Mainly About Banks and Bankers

OVER the ground wire we caught a conversation which sounded something like this after business of Mason City calling Waterloo over the Barbed Wire Line:

MASON CITY—Say, do you know I've been figuring up? We only lost the Progressive Movement at the New Orleans convention by fifteen votes. So I got busy and have the fifteen votes promised, so we'll put it over at Detroit. I hate to be beaten.

WATERLOO—That's all right about the new fifteen, but how about the old 265? Will they be there and stand up again? Then, too, where can we get three such vote tellers, as you, Charley, Sol. Wexler and William George?

MASON CITY—Did you think we added much strength? I'm not very proud of that part of the program, but Watts was fair, very fair, and do you think Livingstone will be for us or against us?

WATERLOO—Livingstone's all right but probably cannot see as well as Watts did. He might fail to "see" a Progressive if he was very far back on the side aisle. But, Charley, don't forget the 265 before you count your fifteen. There will be a lot more people from New York, Ohio and Pennsylvania at Detroit and far less from Oklahoma, Texas and Louisiana, where, naturally, they are "agin the government." So, don't forget the 265.

J. E. PLATT, secretary, sends in to say that the executive council of the South Dakota Bankers Association met at Huron February 6th and fixed the date for the next annual convention to be held at Belle Fourche, June 26th and 27th, 1912.

ILLINOIS, which probably will meet in Peoria this year, will be disconcerted by the September 9th date for the A. B. A. meeting at Detroit. Either it will be the first week of September or it will be a "post-season" affair, as happened once or twice before. Even September first week is early for Peoria.

EDWIN T. COMAN, Spokane, is over at Ocean Park, Cal., fishing and motoring and having a good time. Will be back at the Exchange National about April 1st.

T. R. PRESTON, down at Chattanooga, says he enjoys "Mainly About Banks and Bankers" as the "livest" thing which comes to his desk.

C. H. McNIDER of Mason City is off, this week, for a month at "doing nothing" in Pasadena territory. If he likes it he will stay five weeks.

C. G. HUTCHESON, Kansas City, says the C. K. C. bankers club enjoyed Joseph Chapman's "farmer" talk this week at the monthly banquet. Thornton Cook, who succeeded Chapman at the head of the express money order committee of the A. B. A., was on the program also.

FURTHER, Mr. Hutcheson says: "While I do not believe in flattery, I do think that a word of praise, when deserved, is not amiss, and with this in mind, will say that on Monday morning I look with interest to reading what 'Cashier' has to say about 'Banks and Bankers,' and find much that is of interest in that department of your paper."

R. C. STEPHENSON, South Bend, has called our attention to the loss which all Indiana bankers felt at the death of Frank Martin of the Indiana Trust Company. Mr. Martin was a man of ability and of very pleasing personality.

INDIANA HARBOR (Ind.) STATE BANK, of which G. J. Bader is president and Jas. G. Allen cashier, will be turned into a national bank shortly, with a capital of $100,000, under the name of Indiana Harbor National, with the same officers in charge. The present capital is $50,000.

THE New South hasn't anything on the New Farley National, which is up (or ahead) of the times in growth. Deposits in February, 1911, were $397,918.60, and in one year are up to $535,123.38.

A BANK robber who went up against that Minneapolis banker reports that he lost nothing but his revolver. He didn't have any money. Minneapolis bankers are nobody to try to rob, not even at bridge. Eh, Don?

WE hear that "Banker" Watson played the market when not playing the suckers who only read what the sign says. When is a bank not a bank? When it's not incorporated.

EVERY banker will be pained to learn that the little daughter of Arthur Reynolds, the one which underwent such severe illness last year, was hurt by an automobile since the family went to Pasadena for the winter. A careless chauffeur backed a machine over her while she was at play on the sidewalk, the wheels passing over both limbs. The doctors say she will recover, and be as well as before.

GROUP 7, Illinois, will meet at Sullivan on Washington's birthday and will be an agricultural event. President Irving Shuman believes in winter group meetings of a strictly business character rather than the usual summer outings.

PRESIDENT HARRIS of the state association will talk and H. A. Pearsons of Chicago is on the program. Both will talk farming and vocational education. Comrade W. G. Edens is down for "a talk," but Shuman says it will be in the complimentary sense—what the boys call "some talk."

THE counties in the group will each have a speaker on the program. J. E. Reese of Pana will speak for Christian county; E. W. Payne of Springfield for Sangamon; J. M. Allen of Decatur for Macon; Thos. P. Ross of Carlinville for Macoupin; Alf. Griffin of Nokomis for Montgomery; E. N. Herron of Shelbyville for Shelby county and Robert W. Noble of Bethany for Moultrie county.

THE sessions will be held in K. P. hall, beginning at noon. Mr. Harris, Mr. Edens and Mr. Pearsons will speak at a special evening session held in the Sullivan county court house, where a big farmer audience will be present. A luncheon will precede the noon meetings.

IT is said that a number of other group presidents share Mr. Shuman's idea about the winter being the best group meeting season, and that others will follow the Sullivan meeting, which promises to be a record breaker in both interest and attendance.

SECRETARY GEORGE D. BARTLETT, of Wisconsin, sends word that "the special committee appointed by our last convention to consider the subject of the organization of a company for the purpose of insuring bank deposits, and of which H. A. Moehlenpah of Clinton is chairman, has had several meetings and conferences with the insurance commissioner and the commissioner of banking. I think they hope to have a tentative plan within a short time for submission to our members, and when this is prepared I believe your readers would find it something of interest."

CHICAGO BANKER will be glad to herald the news of the interesting Wisconsin experiment. That state sent a commission to investigate the Oklahoma conditions, and is a very forward state so far as the adoption of modern laws is concerned. Bankers "all over" will want to know, and now it is up to Bartlett to keep us informed.

WE hear that Secretary Hoopes has had to call off some Texas group meetings because of an epidemic of "stiff neck." Too bad, and the usual Texas remedy for such things and snake bites is said to have failed entirely.

LAST week we referred (by stenographer) to an extension of the par list by D. R. Forgan in the Taft interests. Came out "power list" in the wash, but at that it wasn't so bad. Here is a letter it brought forth and which shows that some still take a joke seriously.

TO THE EDITOR: Your little editorial notice, "Winning Illinois for Taft," leads me to hope that my name may not pass wholly unmoted in your valuable journal. I have been nominated for president by the United Christian party and by the Free American party. My running mate is Samuel C. Carter, of Howard Lake, Minnesota. No financial sponsor for my campaign has been chosen, but a volunteer will be welcome. Presidential campaigns should be honest efforts to ascertain the will of the people, not mere boosts for favorite sons.

Respectfully,

Decatur, Illinois. DANIEL B. TURNEY.

NOW, here is a further chance for some good banker to get into politics (not very deep) by joining Mr. Turney's forces. He is willing, as you have seen.

Strong Support for State Supervision

Last week's issue of THE CHICAGO BANKER contained direct replies from the state banking departments of a large number of the states in which the law provides for complete supervision and inspection of all forms of banking. Since it has appeared Chicago has furnished two more "horrible examples" by the closing of the Wilson Avenue Bank on Friday last and the Leavitt Street Bank on Saturday, both of which were private institutions. More than seventy columns of printed matter have appeared in the Chicago dailies, describing the suffering of the poor, misguided depositors and dupes, who mistook these two institutions for real banks in which their funds would be safe and repaid to them upon call. It is out of the question to reprint the details of these events, except to say that in the case of the Wilson Avenue Bank the loss probably will run from twenty-five to forty thousand dollars, and so far as the depositors are concerned, practically will be total. In the case of the Leavitt Street Bank it is charged even by the cashier of the bank that the proprietor took the money which he, the cashier, had deposited, as well as that deposited by outsiders. This bank probably is a small affair, but the loss, so far as the depositors are concerned, will be total.

No new argument can be adduced from either of these instances, since they are an exact repetition of what has been happening in Chicago ten or fifteen times a year for the last twenty-five years. The Wilson Avenue Bank was the second bank to fail in the same building, under the same circumstances and with the same results. Both of them were private banks, and in each case the depositors lost their savings. This week further instances of how good banking laws have been passed, and how they are administered in other states, will be given.

Oregon Supervises Private Banks

Superintendent of Banks Will Wright, of Oregon, gives a clear and business-like statement of how bank supervision and inspection work in his state. He says: The amendments to the banking laws of Oregon, enacted by the legislature of 1911, were so sweeping as to practically constitute a new act. Under the original law, passed in 1907, all banks and "bankers" were placed under state supervision and inspection. Private bankers are required to set aside a fixed capital, not less than the amount required to be paid in by incorporated banks; and are required to comply with the provisions of the law in the same manner and to the same extent as incorporated banks. Since the law became effective, all new banks are required to incorporate.

Private banks have experienced no difficulty in adjusting their business, to comply with the

Banking superintendents, bankers and newspapers continue to pile up arguments favorable to a new law for Illinois and a separate banking department law, and appear to benefit by reason of being under state supervision. The first annual report of this department, dated December 1, 1908, shows twenty-two private banks under supervision. The fourth annual report of this department, dated January 1, 1912, shows but eleven private banks; and a number of these are contemplating incorporating or consolidating.

The 1911 amendments to the banking law provided for the liquidation of failed banks by the state banking department. Since this amendment became effective, two banks have been placed in charge of the department for liquidation; and both are now in process of liquidation. From present indications, the first, a country bank, with assets amounting to about $65,000.00, will be liquidated at an expense of about $1,000.00, and the second, a city bank, with assets of over $360,000.00, will probably be liquidated at an expense of less than $4,000.00. In view of the fact that liquidations handled by the state banking department are in the hands of experienced bank men and the legal questions are passed on by the attorney-general, there is a large saving in expense. Liquidations are also expedited; and the service of the special deputies is dispensed with as soon as liquid assets are realized upon. The final liquidation can then be handled by the regular force of this department, with little additional expense.

What the Law Says

The following is the section of the law of this state which relates to inspection of state banks:

"Every bank in this state coming under the provisions of this act shall be subject to the inspection of the superintendent of banks. The superintendent of banks or a duly appointed examiner shall visit every such bank twice in each year, and as often as the superintendent of banks shall deem necessary, and make a complete and careful examination of the condition and resources of said bank, the mode of managing its business and conducting its affairs, the action of its officers and directors in the investment and disposition of its funds, the safety and prudence of its management, the security afforded to those by whom its engagements are held and whether the requirements of the banking laws of this state are being complied with and such other matters as the superintendent of banks may direct."

Among the penalties provided for violation of banking laws of this state are the following:

Felony—Embezzlement or misapplication of funds or securities, 1 to 20 years in the penitentiary; Making or publishing false reports of condition, or making false entries, 1 to 5 years in the penitentiary, or fine of $1,000 to $5,000, or both fine and imprisonment; Receiving deposits, knowing bank to be insolvent, imprisonment not exceeding 5 years, or fine of $1,000 to $5,000.

Misdemeanor—For conducting a banking business, or using words "bank," "bankers," etc., in advertising, without certificate of authority, fine of $100 to $1,000; For failure to submit report of condition within 10 days from date of receipt of call, $25.00 per day; For failure to submit report of earnings and dividends within 10 days from the 1st day of January, $10.00 per day; For failure to install books, upon receiving instructions from the superintendent of banks, $10.00 per day.

General Penalty—For violation of any provision, for which a penalty is not expressly provided, fine of $100 to $1,000, or imprisonment in county jail not more than 1 year.

In this state private banks are assessed on a basis that is equivalent to assessment on capital, surplus and profits employed in other banks. There is no discrimination against the incorporated banks in the matter of taxation.

Favors Uniform State Laws

The adoption of uniform banking laws by all states would, in my opinion, be of great benefit to state banks. If uniform laws can be drafted, along lines that will meet conditions existing in every section of the United States, such laws will aid in placing state banking institutions upon a better and safer basis than it is possible to maintain under present conditions. The adoption of the National Reserve Association plan doubtless would have a tendency to require the enactment of uniform state banking laws, in order to better aid state banking institutions to take advantage of the proposed plan.

It doubtless will be necessary always for each state to maintain a separate banking department, so long as there are banking institutions to be supervised. With the adoption of the National Reserve Association plan, there will be a great many state banks that, by reason of insufficient capital or other causes, can not become members of such association. Such banks will not come under the supervision of the reserve association and should, therefore, be under state supervision.

The banking laws of this state give the superintendent of banks ample powers in the

New York Has Private Banking Bureau

New York state, as told last week, has a separate Private Banking Bureau, not under the commissioner of banking, but as a department of the office of State Comptroller William Sohmer at Albany, with its own superintendent. At the end of one year Mr. Sohmer made the following interesting report coupled with such suggestions and explanations as he thought would make the matter plain to those interested. Following is his official utterance on the matter:

The Private Banking Bureau

The losses during past years suffered by immigrants and the poorer classes through the failure and absconding of so-called private bankers of different nationalities have been so frequent and extensive that the legislature has from time to time sought by legislation to protect aliens and citizens of the state from such losses. The first enactments for this purpose did not secure the desired results. The discussion of the conditions continued, however, and the Sullivan Private Banking Act was finally enacted and became effective September 1, 1910.

The law provides, with certain exceptions therein contained, that "No individual or partnership shall hereafter engage directly or indirectly in the business of receiving deposits of money for safekeeping, or for the purpose of transmission to another, or for any other purpose in cities of the first class, without first having obtained from the comptroller a license to engage in such business."

It was the evident intent of this legislation to prevent irresponsible bankers from engaging in this business through a proper test of moral and financial responsibility by requiring continuing evidence of such responsibility and by exacting assurance in the form of a deposit of cash or marketable securities in an amount commensurate with the volume of the business transacted by each. Publicity is also secured by requiring statements of the financial condition of such bankers to be filed with the comptroller four times each year, such statements being open to public inspection.

Certain Exemptions Provided

The statute undertakes to exempt from the licensing provision of the act private bankers and others not engaged in the class of business it is designed to safeguard. In each case the burden of proving the right of exemption is placed on the banker. An individual or a partnership receiving money on deposit for safekeeping or for transmission to others, or for any purpose, when the average amount of each sum received on deposit during the preceding year shall be not less than $500, may, on proper proof to the satisfaction of the comptroller, be exempted from the other provisions of the act. The act also exempts hotel-keepers receiving money from a guest for safekeeping, also express companies having contracts with railroads for the operation of an express service thereon, and telegraph companies receiving money for transmission. Exemption may be had from all the provisions of the act by filing with the comptroller a bond, or money or securities in lieu of such bond, in the sum of $100,000, when the business is conducted in New York City, and the sum of $50,000 when conducted in Buffalo or Rochester.

Held Legal by U. S. Supreme Court

Prior to September 1, 1910, actions were begun in different courts for the purpose of testing the validity of the law. In January, 1911, the United States Supreme Court handed down a decision upholding its constitutionality.

The effect of this litigation was to deter those amenable to the provisions of the act from complying therewith, and as a result, up to January 1, 1911, only a very few of the private bankers throughout the state, to whom the provisions of the law were applicable, had complied with the licensing provisions or submitted evidence of their right to any of the various exemptions provided under section 29 of the act. More than one hundred private bankers of various nationalities, being with but few exceptions the very persons whose business it was the primary intent of the legislature to license, although apparently availing themselves of the exemption provided under subdivision 3 of section 29d, which, under the act of 1910, exempted express and telegraph companies receiving money for transportation, in reality sought to evade the statute by incorporating as express companies. It was apparent that many of these corporations were organized for the purpose of evading the law, consequently the comptroller caused a thorough investigation to be made concerning the business conducted by them. From the evidence thus obtained, it appeared that a large number of these corporations were receiving deposits of money for safekeeping in direct violation of the provisions of section 22 of the general corporation law. This evidence was transmitted to the attorney-general for such action as he might deem proper in the premises.

Further Amendments Necessary

To overcome this difficulty in the administration of the private banking law, section 22 of the general corporation law prohibiting the exercise of banking powers by certain corporations, was amended by Chapter 771 of the Laws of 1911. The result has been that at the present time nearly all those so-called express companies have either discontinued business under their charters, or have abandoned the transmission of money on their own account, and are now acting as agents of various transatlantic steamship companies, and by reason of this fact claim the exemption allowed under Chapter 771 of the Laws of 1911.

In conjunction with the Bureau of Industries and Immigration of the labor department, evidence of violations of the private banking act has been gathered, and from time to time has been referred to the proper prosecuting officer.

Section 26 of Chapter 348 of the Laws of 1910 provides that

"Each licensee shall keep books of account showing full and complete records of all business transacted, and a full statement of all assets and liabilities, and shall four times in each year, as of such days as the comptroller shall designate by a notice to be posted on the bulletin of his office, and by written notice delivered at the place of business of such licensee, or deposited in the postoffice in a postpaid wrapper directed to him at such place of business, file in the comptroller's office within ten days after the receipt of such notice, a written statement under oath, in such form as shall be prescribed by the comptroller, showing the amount of the assets and the liabilities of the licensee, which report shall be accessible to the public at all reasonable times."

Further Evasions Duly Met

The reports filed under this section seemed to be of doubtful value, as they could not be verified by this department. Therefore, following my recommendation, the legislature passed the Sullivan amendments of 1911, which, among other provisions, empower the comptroller to examine every applicant for a license or any licensee with respect to the nature and value of his assets, the manner in which the same are invested, the amount and character of his liabilities, and the conditions under which the business is conducted.

Pursuant to the authority conferred by Chapter 348 of the Laws of 1910, as amended by Chapter 393 of the Laws of 1911, effective June 21, 1911, the comptroller has completed the organization of the Private Banking Bureau of the department, with a view to carrying out the requirements of the statute. On August 1, 1911, a commissioner of private banks was appointed, and under the direction of the comptroller, has undertaken an aggressive enforcement of this law. The following letter was issued by the comptroller to all licensees under this act and to private bankers conducting business in first class cities within the state:

"Chapter 348 of the Laws of 1910, as amended by Chapter 393 of the Laws of 1911, which provides for the licensing of individuals or partnerships engaged only in the business of receiving money for transmission to another, or engaged in the business of receiving deposits of money, requires among its other provisions, that certain surety bonds be filed with the comptroller.

Private Banking Section

Section 25 of the private banking law establishes that, in addition to the five thousand dollars (in the case of those desiring to "engage only in the business of receiving money for transmission to another"), or ten thousand dollars (in the case of those individuals or partnerships desiring to engage in the business of receiving deposits of money for safekeeping or for the purpose of transmission to another, or for any other purpose) of cash or securities to be deposited with the comptroller, a surety company bond shall also be filed, the penalty of which shall be five thousand dollars, if the applicant is engaged in the business of transmission of money to another, and in all other cases the amount of such penalty shall, if the deposits of the applicant do not exceed twenty-five thousand dollars, be five thousand dollars, and if in excess thereof, the penalty of such bond shall be increased five thousand dollars for each additional twenty-five thousand dollars of deposits, or fraction thereof, not exceeding, however, a maximum penalty of fifty thousand dollars. The law thus provides for a safety fund of from ten thousand dollars to sixty thousand dollars. In each instance, five thousand dollars of the fund (if the applicant desires to engage only in the business of receiving money for transmission to another) and ten thousand dollars (if the applicant desires to engage in the business of receiving deposits of money for safekeeping, for transmission to another, or for any other purpose) representing the deposit required under the law must be in cash or securities, and the balance may be in a surety company bond, unless the applicant for the license prefers to deposit the entire fund in cash or securities.

Subdivision 5 of section 29d provides that the other sections of the law shall not apply "to any individual or partnership who would be otherwise required to comply with section 25 of this article, who shall file with the comptroller a bond in the sum of one hundred thousand dollars approved by the comptroller as to form and sufficiency for the purpose and conditioned as in said section prescribed, where the business is conducted in a city having a population of one million, or over, and if conducted elsewhere in the state, such bond shall be in the sum of fifty thousand dollars; or in lieu thereof, money or securities approved by the comptroller of the same amount. The provisions of section 29a shall be applicable to such bond, or deposit of money or securities."

"The provisions of this law apply only to cities of the first class, which are New York, Buffalo and Rochester. Accordingly, parties desirous of availing of exemption 5 in section 29d will be required to file a bond of one hundred thousand dollars, if conducting their business in New York City, and a bond of fifty thousand dollars if conducting their business in Buffalo or Rochester.

Personal Bonds Will in No Case be Accepted Under the Provisions of This Act

The department will accept bonds issued by any surety company, which, in accordance with the schedule of the United States Treasury Department, is authorized under act of congress to be accepted as surety for federal bonds, provided such company is authorized by the New York insurance department to do such business in this state.

Any applicant for a license may deposit and the comptroller will accept money or securities in lieu of any surety bond required by this act. Such securities must consist of bonds of the United States or of the state of New York, or of any municipality in the state of New York, or other bonds which are legal investments for savings banks in New York state, and must have a market value equal at least to the amount of the surety bond in lieu, of which they are deposited. The comptroller will pay to any licensee the same rate of interest on any cash deposit that he is able to secure from the depositary of such fund.

The department will furnish copies of the law, application blanks for licenses, the forms of affidavit for exemption, and the forms of bonds to be executed by the applicant, on request addressed to the Albany office or to the New York City office at 165 Broadway.

made of the condition, conduct and affairs generally of seven licensees under the act and of several applicants for a license thereunder, and it is gratifying to note that of all those examined, in no instance was it found that the applicant or licensee was insolvent, or that the condition of the business conducted was such as to render its continuance hazardous, although some licensees were not conducting business in strict accord with the law through misunderstanding of its provisions rather than from any intent to evade. In such cases recommendations made by the comptroller have met with prompt compliance on the part of the banker and almost invariably the private bankers licensed have evinced a marked willingness to comply with the law.

Since September 1, 1910, fifty-two licenses to engage in the business of receiving deposits of money and two licenses to engage only in the business of receiving money for transmission to another have been granted by the comptroller. Five hundred and four individuals and co-partnerships have submitted to the comptroller proof by affidavit evidencing their right to the exemption allowed under subdivision 4 of section 29d and twenty individuals and co-partnerships have availed themselves of the exemption provided under subdivision 5 of section 29d by filing with the comptroller a bond in the sum of $100,000 or $50,000 in money or securities in lieu of such bond.

The amount of money deposited with the comptroller pursuant to the provisions of the private banking law is$ 115,000

Alabama Supervises All Banks

A. E. Walker, superintendent of banking for Alabama, has expressed conditions in his state so as to make the banking law plain. He says:

All banks, whether private, partnership or corporation, are subject to supervision and examination by this department. The private bankers of this state did not oppose the new law, and, so far, none of the private banks have had any trouble in qualifying under the state law. I cannot say that the incorporation of any of the private banks has increased their business to any appreciable extent.

This department handles all liquidations and receiverships through a designated agent by the superintendent. In this connection, I will call your attention to Section 9 of the banking act, which says:

"Section 9. Whenever the superintendent of banks shall have reason to believe that the capital stock of any corporation or capital of any individual banker is reduced by impairment, or otherwise, below the amount required by law, it shall be his duty to require such corporation or individual banker to make good the deficit within thirty days after the date of the requirement by him, which requirement shall be in writing. The superintendent may examine, or cause to be examined into, the affairs of any such bank to ascertain the amount of such impairment or reduction of capital, and whether the deficiency has been made good as required by him."

I am not prepared at this time to say whether or not the cost of liquidation of a bank is any less than under the former laws, as I have only closed two very small banks, both of which were conducted by colored people. I am inclined to think a receivership can be handled at less cost under the new banking laws.

I will call your attention to Sections 7, 11 and 15 of the banking law, covering penalties.

"Section 7. Every bank carrying on a banking business within the state, other than national banks, shall be subject to the supervision and inspection of the superintendent of banks and the regulations and supervision hereof. The superintendent of banks shall, either personally or by competent examiner appointed by him, visit and examine every corporation doing a banking business, and every individual banker doing a banking business in and under the laws of the state of Alabama, at least twice in each year. On every such examination inquiry shall be made as to the conditions and resources of the corporation (or of the individual or individuals in case of individual bankers), the mode of conducting and managing the affairs of the bank, the action of its directors (in case of corporation, the investment of the funds of the bank, the safety and prudence of the management of the bank, and whether the requirements of its charter and of law have been complied with in the administration of the affairs of the bank, and as to such other matters as the superintendent of banks shall prescribe. In addition, the superintendent of banks shall have power, and it shall be his duty, in like manner to examine, or cause to be examined into, the affairs of every corporation and individual doing a banking business, whenever in the judgment of the superintendent the management and condition of the bank is such as to render an examination of its affairs necessary or expedient, or whenever in the opinion of the superintendent the interest of the public demands an examination. The superintendent of banks also shall have the power to examine, or cause to be examined, every agency located in this state of any foreign bank, for the purpose of ascertaining whether it has violated any law of the state, and for such other purposes and to such other matters as the superintendent shall prescribe. The superintendent of banks and every examiner acting under or appointed by the superintendent shall have power and authority to administer oaths and to examine under oath any person whose testimony may be required on the examination of any corporation or individual doing a banking business, or on the examination of any agency of any foreign bank, and shall have the authority and power to compel the appearance and attendance of any such person for the purpose of any such examination."

"Section 11. The superintendent of banks shall not visit or cause to be visited by an examiner, at stated times, any bank for the purpose of examination, nor shall the superintendent permit anyone to know at which times he will visit or cause to be visited any bank for examination."

"Section 15. All banks doing business within this state shall make to the superintendent, on the call of the superintendent for such report, not less than two reports during each year, according to the form which may be prescribed by the superintendent; such report must be verified by the oath or affirmation of the executive officers, or agents thereof, and in the case of a corporation, by the president or cashier or secretary."

I am not prepared to give an opinion as to taxation, as we have no banks in this state of which we do not know the capital stock. The banks in this state, whether private, partnership or corporation, are assessed in proportion to their capital, surplus and undivided profits on a graduated scale. The conditions of this state are so different from those in many other states that I would not support a movement for uniform state banking laws in all the states, as I do not think it would be practical.

I am not prepared to answer your 9th and 10th inquiries, as I am not thoroughly familiar with the Aldrich plan, but I do think that all states should have a separate banking department. The powers of the state bank commissioner in Alabama are ample under the law for the present.

New Banking Law in Nevada

Nevada has a new banking law which was adopted March 22, 1911. This law provides that any three or more persons, a majority of whom are residents of the state, may execute articles of incorporation and be incorporated as a banking corporation. When the capital stock of any bank has been paid in cash, the president or cashier transmits to the bank examiner a verified statement showing the names and places of residence of the stockholders and the amount of stock subscribed by each. The bank examiner thereupon examines into the affairs of said bank the same as if it previously had been engaged in business. If the examiner is satisfied that all of the requirements of the law have been met, he thereupon issues a certificate authorizing the bank to engage in the general business of banking, upon payment of the regular license fee. The act provides that "No individual, bank, banking firm, trust company, corporation, company or other corporation, incorporated under the laws of this state or any other state or territory or foreign country, doing a banking business in this state, except banks doing business under the laws of the United States, shall engage in the banking business in this state without first obtaining from the bank examiner a license in the form prescribed by him, authorizing such individual, corporation, firm, company or trust company, to use the name and transact the business of a bank." It is also provided that all banking institutions and trust companies, which at the time of the passage of the act were organized as corporations, and doing business in the state, shall be permitted to continue such business as incorporated, but in other respects their business and the manner of conducting the same must be carried on in accordance with the provisions of the act.

Private Banks Included in Supervision

Section 8 reads as follows: "Hereafter no bank or trust company shall be organized, and no bank or banker shall be permitted to carry on business with a less capital than twenty-five thousand dollars, and the full amount of the capital stock of any bank or trust company must be paid in cash before it shall be authorized to commence business, or any individual banker permitted to be in or continue in business. No bank in this state shall hereafter open or maintain any branch bank or office. All of the provisions of this act shall be applicable so far as may be to individuals, firm or associations, as well as to corporations."

Every bank in the state is required to make at least four reports each year, and oftener if called upon. These reports are made to the bank examiner, on the forms prescribed by him, verified by the oath or affirmation of the president, vice-president or cashier, and attested by the signatures of at least two of the directors. Each report must exhibit in detail, under appropriate heads, the resources and liabilities of such bank at the close of business on any past day specified by the bank examiner, and must be transmitted to him within ten days after receipt of a request therefor. They must be published in condensed form, within ten days after they are made, in a newspaper published in the county in which the bank is established. The bank examiner also has authority to call for special reports from the bank if he deem it expedient. If the bank fails to furnish the reports as requested, they are fined $50 for each day's delay in so doing.

Section 67 of the act provides as follows: "It shall be the duty of the bank examiner, or one of his deputies, to visit each and every bank, subject to the provisions of this act, at least twice each year, and oftener if he deem it advisable, for the purpose of making a full and careful examination and inquiry into the condition of such bank, and for that purpose the bank examiner and his deputies are hereby authorized to administer oaths, and to examine under oath the owners, stockholders and directors, and all officers, employees and agents of such banks or other persons."

The Nevada law permits the state banking department to handle bank receiverships, the bank examiner immediately taking charge of all banks in the hands of receivers.

Kentucky Getting a New Law

The house committee on banking was addressed last week during the session of the Kentucky legislature at Frankfort, by John Stites, of Louisville. Mr. Stites is chairman of the committee on banking jurisprudence and information of the Kentucky Bankers Association, and went to Frankfort to urge upon the house committee the necessity of enactment of the bill proposed by the Kentucky Bankers Association for the examination and regulation of state banks. Following a session which lasted until after midnight the legislators resolved to report the bill favorably to the house, with one or two minor amendments which are entirely satisfactory to the K. B. A. The senate committee already has reported favorably

CAPITAL ONE MILLION DOLLARS

ILLINOIS BANKING NEWS

By C. C. Burford

During the month of February the good roads and the high price of corn have caused a large amount of corn to be offered to the market. As many farmers were holding their last year's crop with the idea of getting sixty cents a bushel or thereabouts for their grain, a large number of them "let go" when this price was reached. Farmers have more funds on hands now than a few weeks ago. With the approach of the first of March a considerable amount of such money will be paid by farmers on their farm loans, and those who need to secure additional funds have arranged to make mortgage loans on or about the first of the month, which date is the financial cleaning-up time for hundreds of country bankers. Farm mortgage rates are quoted for the most part at five per cent with additional commission of one-half cent to two cents being charged. Rates, accordingly, vary from "5 and 1/2" to "5 and 2."

Harris to Address Student-Salesmen

B. F. Harris, president of the Illinois Bankers Association, is one of a number of speakers to a class in salesmanship organized by the Young Men's Christian Association of the University of Illinois. Mr. Harris will speak from the standpoint of the customer, and the subject of his address will be, "Getting the Interview."

New State Bank for Robinson

The state auditor has issued a permit for the organization of the Robinson State Bank with capital of $60,000. Robinson is in the heart of the oil district of Crawford county and has enjoyed a rapid growth. This will be the fifth bank for this enterprising little city. The incorporators are Harry E. Green, David A. Melford, D. Everingham, Edward E. Lindsay, Manford E. Cox and Roscoe I. Richards.

Mural Decorations for New Bank

Professor Newton A. Wells of the architectural decoration department of the University of Illinois will paint a farm scene descriptive of the university farms in the interior of the Illinois Title and Trust Company's new bank building in Champaign. On one side will be a binder cutting the ripened grain, and on the other side will be the outline of certain university buildings. Certainly this is a fitting decoration for a bank in Champaign, which city is located in the midst of both agricultural and educational surroundings.

Farmers Pay with Checks

As evidence of the almost universal use of checks by farmers is the record of a sale recently held near Kewanee. The proceeds of the sale amounted to about $4,300, and only two dollars were paid in cash.

Public sales of live stock and farm implements during the winter months form a prominent part of the financial life of out-in-state bankers and farmers. Very frequently the cashier or assistant cashier of banks in the neighborhood are employed as clerks of the sale on account of their knowledge of local credits. The work is often a problem to bankers, as the exposure to a man accustomed to inside work is necessarily great and yet they wish to be of service to the mainstay of the community—the farmer.

Springfield Wants New Coin

The city commissioners of Springfield are supporting the movement started by the city authorities of Cleveland, Ohio, who demand a three-cent piece. The Springfield authorities have signed a resolution similar to the one supported by Cleveland urging that the Buckley bill now pending before congress be passed. The coin is desired in Cleveland on account of the three-cent street-car fare. Springfield has the regular five-cent fare, but doubtless the commissioners operating under the new form of municipal government now popular in the Central West desire to see the cheaper transportation extended to their city.

Citizens Bank of Tolono

Established in 1904 as the second bank in Tolono, the Citizens Bank of that town has now a most satisfactory clientele and an increasing business. The president, Isaac S. Raymond, is one of the large land owners of that prosperous region, and the vice-president, J. A. Corbett, is vice-president of the Citizens National of Decatur, and is well known to Illinois bankers. The cashier is A. B. Campbell, who by his various activities is one of the busy men of the community. Besides being cashier of the Citizens Bank, Mr. Campbell is postmaster, is editor and publisher of the Tolono Herald, and is engaged in the insurance, real estate, and loan business.

Banker Fights Chinch Bugs

C. D. Hoiles, president of the State Bank of Hoiles & Son of Greenville, is at the head of a movement to stamp out the chinch bug nuisance in his county. The citizens of Bond county are fighting the pest and Dr. S. A. Forbes, state entomologist and professor of entomology in the University of Illinois, is directing the scientific part of the movement. Mr. Hoiles is president of a prosperous bank organized in 1869 and converted into a state bank a year or two ago. He is well-known to bankers in southwestern Illinois.

to succeed himself as a member of the lower house of the state legislature. Mr. Montelius has resided in Piper City since 1866 and entered the banking business there in 1873. The citizens of the "Panhandle," as the northern projection of Ford county is called, presented him in 1902 with a handsome gold badge set with diamonds and pearls bearing the inscription, "A token of esteem to John A. Montelius from his many friends in the Panhandle for his courteous and honorable dealings, while in business during the past years."

Epidemic of Forgeries

Down-state bankers report a flood of forgeries during the past few weeks. Bloomington, Lincoln and Springfield report trouble and a number of arrests have been made. A humorous side of the situation in Springfield was presented when an alleged forger on trial arose from his chair and quietly walked out of the circuit court room. Efforts to locate the escaped criminal were fruitless and his "get-away" was an easy one.

New Jefferson Opened

Bankers who plan to attend the 1912 convention of the Illinois Bankers Association probably to be held in Peoria will be interested in knowing that the New Jefferson Hotel in that city is now in service. The new hostelry cost half a million dollars, and is one of the best equipped hotels in the Central West. Governor and Mrs. Deneen attended the opening, which was recently held.

Banker Wins Suit

J. W. Quilen, a banker in Ipava, west of Peoria, whose bank failed in May, 1908, has been acquitted in the Fulton county circuit court at Lewiston on the charge of receiving deposits after knowing that his bank was insolvent. He was acquitted on technical errors.

Hamilton Sells Bank Interests

George H. Hamilton, president of the First National of Watseka, has sold his interests in that institution consisting of 260 shares of the total 500 shares. The control of the institution is again in the hands of the McGill family, who started the bank. Porter Mation will be elected president in place of Mr. Hamilton. The latter will enter the banking business again, probably in Kansas or Oklahoma.

William B. Ridgely in Springfield

Among the visitors at the annual Lincoln Day banquet in Springfield was William Barret Ridgely, a member of the well-known Ridgely family of that city and himself formerly actively engaged in the banking business in Springfield.

Illinois Notes

Seventy-five new postal banks have been designated in Illinois and within a few weeks all of the third-class postoffices will be savings banks.

DeLong Brothers, operating the Bank of Sadorus, a few miles east of Decatur, have plans drawn for a new bank building to replace the one recently destroyed by fire.

The First Finance and Trust Company of Streator, organized with a misleading title as a banking institution for the purpose of promoting factories, has, according to press reports, "fizzled," leaving small stockholders "to hold the sack" for $4,500.

The National Implement and Vehicle Show held in Peoria is one of the established features of social and commercial life in Peoria and very ably demonstrates that city's strength as a banking and business center.

Jackson R. Pearce, vice-president of the Ricker National of Quincy, has been called to Peoria as a witness in behalf of Charles Wheat, a bond salesman, who was charged with a confidence game by Miss Ellen Green of Mossville. Wheat was acquitted.

Harry M. Lott, formerly of Bloomington, has been named cashier of the State Bank of Saybrook.

Tuscola will entertain the Douglas County Bankers Association February 22d, with the usual business session and banquet. Group 6 of the Illinois Bankers Association will also meet in Tuscola some time in May.

Texas Plans

The executive council of the Texas Bankers Association will meet on the 22d of February to decide upon the San Antonio program. Secretary Hoopes says they are planning "to have a real good convention."

Mrs. J. L. Slocum, wife of James L. Slocum, president of the Richardson County Bank of Falls City, Neb., died at that place February 12th.

BANK CONSOLIDATION AT FARGO

Fargo, February, 12.—The Northern Trust Company and the Northern Savings Bank of this city have taken over the savings bank business and the bonding business of the Fargo Bond and Trust Company, which has been operating in the North Dakota Improvement building on First Avenue north. The savings business of the concern will be taken over by the Northern Savings and the Northern Trust Company will conduct the bonding business of the old company.

One-third of the bonding business is reinsured with the Dakota Trust Company of this city and the Northern Trust Company also reinsures one-third of the bonding business with the Northwestern Trust Company of Grand Forks. The Northern Savings in taking over the savings bank business of the Fargo Bond and Trust Company assumes all liability to depositors.

This transfer has been rumored for some time, but the change was not effected until last night, when a meeting of the stockholders and directors of both concerns was held. The business was taken over by the Northern Trust Company to-day. Treasurer H. P. Beckwith of the Northern is a member of the A. B. A. council and enjoys a national acquaintance among bankers. The president is Geo. H. Hollister, vice-president is F. F. Grant.

BANK GUARANTY FUND GROWS

Austin, Texas, February 12.—In a statement issued by B. L. Gill, state bank commissioner, it is shown that the state bank guaranty fund amounts to $581,275, of which $145,347 is in cash with the state treasurer and 435,927 is deposited with the banks participating in the fund. From new annual payments of the old banks and readjustment of payments of banks organized less than a year ago, a net gain of $61,309 was made. Since November 1, 1911, the beginning of the guaranty fund year, twenty-five new banks, paying $25,215, have been organized and seven banks have voluntarily liquidated and have drawn out $7,159, showing a net gain of $18,055.

BUILDING OWNED BY THE BANK

MILWAUKEE

NEWS LETTER BY CHALMER B. TRAVER

WISCONSIN

Owing to the unprecedented cold weather the Second Ward Savings Bank will not be able to enter its new building at West Water and Cedar streets until January, 1913, according to Vice-President Elser of the institution.

"The contractors were forced to abandon all work on the building during the greater part of January and this delay, with others of less serious nature, will put forward the probable date of the building's completion from September, when we expected to enter it, to January of next year," said Mr. Elser. The bank is experiencing no difficulty in carrying on its activities, however, as the present temporary quarters answer all requirements as fully as did the old building on the site of the present new one.

First National to Erect New Building

Permission will be given the First National Bank to erect its contemplated 16-story building at East Water and Mason streets, when an ordinance, drafted by the city building code commission, is enacted by the common council at its next meeting. The new ordinance provides that the maximum height of buildings shall not exceed 225 feet on the lot line, and will replace the old one providing that buildings should be no higher than the width of the street upon which they face. The enactment of the ordinance will conclude an imbroglio of several months duration regarding the validity of certain ordinances relating to building in the downtown district.

Merchants and Manufacturers

Officers of the Merchants and Manufacturers Bank have decided not to add two more stories to their new structure on West Water Street between Grand Avenue and Wells Street, following a conference with the building inspector. The original plans provided for only a two-story structure, then a change was made to eight stories. The final change in the plans would increase the erection cost $40,000, making an aggregate expenditure upon the new building of $250,000.

Teacher Conducts Smallest Savings Bank in Milwaukee

The smallest savings bank in Milwaukee is conducted by a teacher of sixth district school No. 1, who, despite the originality of her scheme, refuses to allow her name to be used. The depositors are the boys and girls in her classes and the deposits, which are received daily, range from one to ten cents, rarely more. There are more than thirty depositors, all of whom began their accounts with one cent or a nickel. No interest is paid, but the teacher believes that the depositors gain untold benefits from the bank in increasing immunity from the temptations of unwholesome candy and cheap, undesirable places of amusement. Several of the accounts which have swelled to considerable proportions since the opening of the school year have been recently withdrawn to defray the expenses of shoes, clothing, and other articles of more than ephemeral worth. One feature of the school bank is that since it was instituted the teacher has failed to discover a single boy or girl chewing gum or candy during the recitation period.

To Double Postal Savings

Postmaster David C. Owen believes that the postal savings deposits in Milwaukee, amounting to $135,000, could be doubled if depositories were established in the postoffice sub-stations in outlying parts of the city. At present the postoffice in the federal building is the only depository in the city.

Prof. Butler Speaks on "Bank and Financial Advertising"

Prof. R. S. Butler of the University of Wisconsin addressed the Milwaukee Advertisers Club Friday night on "Bank and Financial Advertising." This form of advertising, according to Mr. Butler, is one whose importance is just coming to be realized and one in which the acknowledged standards of salesmanship should be embodied in just as appealing a manner as they are in mercantile and other advertising.

Last Monday saw the opening of the Merchants and Savings Bank, Madison, in its new quarters in the Kirch block, 23 West Main Street. The interior is furnished in white marble, mahogany, and bronze. One of the features of the new building is a reinforced concrete steel-lined vault.

"The growth of the bank in the year and a half of its existence has justified the step we have taken," said Cashier Milo C. Hagan on the occasion of the opening, "and the officers and directors feel very much encouraged as the result of the business which has been built up during that time." The officers of the bank are: President, A. M. Stoddall; vice-president, T. C. McCarthy; cashier, Milo C. Hagan.

The First National Bank of Chicago has been approved as the reserve agent of the Batavia National Bank, La Crosse, Wis.

A man giving the name of J. C. Smith was apprehended in Stevens Point by Sheriff Guyant this week, on the charge of passing a forged check drawn on the State Bank of Goodhue, Minn.

The following Wisconsin postoffices have been designated by the postoffice department at Washington to become postal savings depositories to be opened March 8th: Durand, Hartland, Wausaukee, and Westfield.

GROUP 7, IOWA

Group 7, Iowa, will meet on same day as Group 7, Illinois—Washington's birthday. Tama and Toledo will be the places of meeting. The morning session will be at Toledo court house at ten o'clock and dinner will be served at one o'clock at Soleman's opera house in Tama.

The morning address will be by A. F. Dawson of Davenport, and in the afternoon Ernest R. Moore of Cedar Rapids and Arthur White of Vinton will talk. There will be a quartet and interesting short feature talks. The banks of Tama and Toledo join as hosts. Geo. D. McElroy of Vinton is president and B. E. Hakes of Williamsburg is secretary.

The Guaranty State Bank of Longview, Texas, was opened for business last week, which makes the fourth bank in that town. G. A. Bodenheimer is president, A. A. Batson, vice-president, and G. C. Finch, cashier.

Kansas Plans

Kansas will hold her silver wedding at the Topeka convention, May 23d and 24th. There will be given some prominence to this feature, though of course they do not intend to make the whole convention that by any means, but it will be made the occasion to mark the 25th mile stone in the life of the association—a sort of quarter-centennial celebration. The sessions will be held in representative hall, Capitol building. As a great many will come the afternoon before, the first meeting will be really on the evening of the 22d. It will be in the nature of an informal reception with some speech making and a general good social time, and will be given more especially in honor of the 60 original organizers of the Kansas Bankers Association, all Kansas bankers and guests participating.

The whole program is not yet slated up, but Secretary Bowman has engaged Professor J. Laurence Laughlin of the University of Chicago to conduct the discussions on currency reform. The greater part and perhaps the whole of a half-day session will be devoted to this and to the general floor discussions—questions and answers, etc., that will follow.

They are expecting Hon. Wm. Livingstone, president of the American Bankers Association, and will ask him to speak on "Banks as Factors in the Development of a State." Wm. J. Burns, president of the Burns National Detective Agency, has promised to be present and will address the convention on "Modern Protection for Banks."

Mr. Bowman has invited Hon. Jas. J. Hill but has not as yet had time to hear from him. Hon. J. N. Dolley, bank commissioner, will speak on "Departmental Regulations." There will be matters historical and reminiscent introduced; some of the subjects will perhaps be assigned but for the most part these will be participated in generally by the members on the floor. A sort of an omnibus legislative topic will be presented. The discussion will be by some one to whom it is yet to be assigned and general participation invited. The topic will probably be as follows:

"Shall the Kansas Bankers Association favor"—(a) The repeal of the federal bankruptcy law; (b) Modification of existing exemption laws; (c) A deed of trust law; (d) Mortgage tax law; (e) Law permitting national banks to loan on real estate and others perhaps will be added.

The movement among bankers associations to promote agricultural education and development also will be among the subjects to be presented by some one to whom it is yet to be assigned. Judge C. E. Lobdell of Great Bend will discuss a series of selected legal questions.

Topeka bankers are preparing to entertain the convention magnificently from beginning to end. There will not be a moment when they will not have the pleasure and comfort of their guests their chief concern. The one chief feature of social entertainment will consist of a theatre party that will be given on Thursday night, May 23d, in the Grand Opera House, complimentary to all the visiting bankers and guests. This entertainment will be distinctively high class and will as stated be reserved exclusively for delegates and guests.

In connection with the convention the building and loan associations of Kansas, which compose what is known as the B. and L. Section of the Kansas Bankers Association, will hold their annual convention in the supreme court room.

Also the usual separate session of the ladies, by the ladies and for the ladies, will be arranged for. This has come to be one of the features of the Kansas convention. The session is not merely a butterfly affair—it is a full half day session filled with a program of literary and musical numbers, chiefly the former, in which none but ladies participate and none but ladies attend. They will not even allow the good looking secretary of the Kansas bankers to enter their presence. The ladies have no organization but such a meeting in their interests always is prepared for them, some lady (wife of a Kansas banker) is chosen to preside and others to present in papers the subject assigned. The musical and other entertainment numbers are provided locally. The ladies representing the banks of Topeka make it their special delight to entertain these ladies socially in connection with this ladies' meeting.

The foregoing presents the features of the program so far as at present outlined, subject, of course, to changes, and shows Secretary Bowman to be quite up to his splendid reputation.

A postal savings bank has been ordered established at South Omaha on March 1st.

Southwestern reserve city news and gossip
—Special correspondence concerning also

St. Louis, February 14.—Bankers here report continued quietness in the general demand for credits, but with germs in the situation which point to a slight improvement and hardening of rates. The inquiry from the country is not quite so stagnant as has been the case for the past few months, and the local commercial demand begins to show more signs of a return to life. It is argued that there must be a turn, on the principle it is a long lane that has no turning. But, in addition to this comforting motto, there are specific indications that the next two or three weeks will uncover some good borrowing. Even the hand to mouth policy, which has been in force for so long, will result in revival, as merchants and large corporations have lived on their tissues so long that the time has come when the tissues must be renewed, or the body politic devour itself, as when a snake tries to swallow itself, beginning at the tail. During the past week or ten days fair payments have been made by the South on cotton loans, the slight improvement in the cotton market affording an opportunity for selling, but there is still quite a lot of loans of that character scattered throughout the South and Southwest. Clearings are beginning to pick up, and are now running well over those of the corresponding period a year ago, after several weeks of losses. Deposits are holding their own in good shape, and collections are reported for the most part as being satisfactory, though there are still backward spots, notably south of the Mason-Dixon line.

Merchants More Optimistic

A canvass of the big wholesale district developed more optimism than has been noted for some time. Buyers are beginning to arrive in goodly numbers, and sales for the month thus far are well in excess of expectations. A notable feature is that Iowa and Nebraska are sending more buyers here for the spring trade than ever before. This is shown by the purchases of tickets from those states made through the Interstate Merchants Association. Texas, however, has sent more merchants thus far than any other one state.

Oklahoma Bankers Dates Set

Meetings of the five groups constituting the Oklahoma State Bankers Association will be held beginning February 19th, with Group 4, at Okmulgee; Group 5, will meet at Ada on February 20th; Group 3, at Shawnee on February 21st; Group 1, at Clinton on February 22d, and Group 2, at Enid on February 23d. As has been the case for a number of years, a good representation of St. Louis bankers will attend these conventions, and talent from this city has been spoken for to deliver speeches before the Oklahoma bankers.

Scanlan Successor Named

Advices from Newburg, Mo., state that on account of the continued absence of John W. Scanlan, president of the Newburg State Bank, the state banking department at Jefferson City requested the board of directors of that institution to elect his successor. The board elected H. A. Root. B. H. Rucker of Rolla was chosen a member of the directory. Mr. Scanlan, who organized the Newburg Bank, and who had served as its president from the organization, mysteriously disappeared when making a trip to his farm, ten miles north of Newburg, December 19, 1911, and has not been heard from since. A reward of $500 has been offered by his family for his recovery dead or alive, and incessant search has been made ever since his disappearance.

State Treasury Statement

The monthly statement of the state treasurer of Missouri shows a balance on hand of $3,603,683, which is held and deposited as follows: Cash in treasurer's vault, $11,078; First National, Jefferson City, $178,463; Exchange Bank, Jefferson City, $177,566; German American Bank, St. Louis, $327,956; Mississippi Valley Trust Company, St. Louis, $2,720,064 and National Bank of Commerce, Kansas City, $188,545. There has been received into the Capitol building fund, from the sale of bonds, $232,500. Of this amount $130,886 has been disbursed, leaving $101,613.

Laclede Gas Company

Gross earnings of the Laclede Gas Light Company, according to the recent statement, decreased 3.5 per cent for the past year, but the net earnings increased $1,439,439, so that the year is considered a successful one. The total gross was $4,342,036, a decrease of $159-

087 from 1910. This, it is set forth, was due to a recent reduction in the price of gas. The net earnings for the year were $1,965,517.

New Barge Line Taking

The new barge line project, to connect St. Louis via the Mississippi River, with New Orleans, is gaining in favor daily with all classes of business men here. Subscriptions, unsolicited in numerous instances, continue to pour in, and in all likelihood the end of the present month will find the entire capital subscribed for. If this is accomplished, the company will at once go through the routine of formal incorporation, and at once purchase three steel barges and one iron-bottom towboat, on which options have been obtained. All the stock is being sold at par.

International Bank

The International Bank has taken a long lease on the old quarters of the Fourth National, at Fourth and Olive streets in the Rialto building, and will move as soon as alterations and improvements are completed. The site occupied at present by the International Bank will be occupied by the new United States subtreasury building. President Meier of the International says that the new quarters of his institution will be as up to date as any in the West. While not as large as many other St. Louis banking rooms, it will be equipped with every modern convenience and appliance for conducting a banking business.

American Bankers Affairs

Advices received at St. Louis this week indicate that the end of litigation, as a result of the fight for control of the American Bankers Assurance Company, is in sight. This corporation, which has a capital of $10,000,000, has been more or less involved in legal difficulties, for more than a year past. The special master, in the case of the state of Delaware against the company has filed a report with Chancellor Curtis, recommending that the attorney-general's motion for the appointment of a receiver be denied. If this is approved, the suit brought by the state will fall. The troubles of the company resulted from a fight for control between various factions and officers. It happens that the concern was floated at an unhappy time, as the failure of sundry insurance corporations newly organized made it a difficult matter to interest capital in new enterprises which dealt in insurance of any kind.

Company has virtually agreed upon a plan providing a capital stock of $1,000,000 for the new institution, which is to be known as the Missouri Savings and Trust Company. This is a larger capitalization than provided in the original plan and the committee believes it is more certain to insure success in the new enterprise than would a smaller initial capital. The members are still busy working out details and the completed plan will not be presented for a week or two more. As in the original plan, it is proposed to reduce the capital stock of the Missouri-Lincoln from $2,500,000 to $500,000 and exchange this for stock in the new corporation, each share holder getting share for share. To raise the additional $500,000 each stockholder will be entitled to subscribe his pro rata of the additional shares at par, paying cash. This will furnish a new capital of $500,000. The committee is arranging to underwrite such portion of the stock as is not taken by the present stockholders. Hanford Crawford is chairman of the committee.

SAVINGS BANKS FOR NEGROES

There are now 57 negro savings institutions in this country. Tennessee has four, Alabama seven, Georgia four, Mississippi 11, Virginia 11, Texas six, North Carolina six, Florida, South Carolina and Maryland one each; Oklahoma two, Pennsylvania and Massachusetts have one negro bank each and Illinois two, these being the only four in the North. Deposits in negro banks aggregate $5,200,000, and their capital stock is $1,600,000. The first negro bank was organized at Richmond, Va., in 1888, and the second at Birmingham, Ala., in 1890.

Oklahoma Plan

Enid, Oklahoma, February 12.—One hundred thousand booklets on the value of Kaffir corn as a farm product and substitute for Indian corn will be distributed this month by the Oklahoma Bankers Association through its members. The pamphlets are now in press. They contain sixteen pages, most of the reading matter being the text of an address by J. B. Adams, cashier of the Butler County Bank, El Dorado, Kansas, who has been invited to address the meetings of the five groups into which the association is divided this month.

W. B. Harrison, secretary of the Oklahoma Bankers Association, who has been pushing the Kaffir corn movement, says that the result of sending out this literature unquestionably will greatly increase the deposits of banks all over Oklahoma because of the good that will result from better farming. In Butler county, Kansas, after repeated crop failures the banks united at Mr. Adams' suggestion in a demand that the farmers plant a certain proportion of Kaffir corn instead of Indian corn, and made this demand a condition of loans to the farmers. The result, as told by Mr. Adams in his address, is a wonderful story of continuous prosperity and complete avoidance of crop failure. When Indian corn and other crops have been a complete failure owing to hot winds and drouth the Kaffir has "stood like a lone sentinel on the prairies," and enriched those who planted it.

Mr. Harrison reports that Oklahoma bankers are co-operating splendidly in this movement, which was first suggested to the association by its president, T. J. Hartman of Sulphur, and it is anticipated that the Oklahoma bankers will follow the example set in Kansas and make the planting of a small acreage of Kaffir corn a condition of loans to their farmer customers. In the last habitat of the Red Man, the abandonment of the Red Man's corn seems an anomaly, but the bankers are learning from experience that Kaffir is the most dependable crop, and they intend teaching this to the farmers.

ESSENTIAL POINTS GOVERNING FINANCIAL VALUE OF ENGINEERING PROPERTIES

S. R. Schaff, the well-known New York civil engineer, has written a very timely and exceedingly interesting book on the "Essential Points Governing the Financial Value of an Engineering Property," which essays to explain the influence of the engineer on the financial success of various large public or quasi-public properties such as railroads, water-supply systems, hydraulic power systems, irrigation enterprises and the like. The importance of the engineer and his report, with particular respect to its bearing on the question whether the property will return a satisfactory income on the investment, is brought out. The writer has wisely ignored technical reasoning and writes in a manner that is well understood by the investor as well as the skilled engineer. The work is printed by the Richardson Press, New York City.

According to S. P. Berry, chairman of the Fort Worth entertainment committee, 600 Texas bankers are expected to attend the seventh district association, which meets at Fort Worth, February 22d.

Editorial Comment

WHY HESITATE LONGER?

In our symposium of opinions (see this and last week's issue) furnished by the leading state banking superintendents frequent reference is made by those officials to the fact that all of the really effective new banking laws passed in this country in the last ten years have been prepared and piloted through the legislatures by the various state banking associations. This last week only a committee of the Kentucky Bankers Association spent the entire week before the legislature at Frankfort, and so effectively did they work that their new bill, practically without change, was reported favorably by the committee on banking from both the house and the senate. The new bill in Alabama was pushed through the legislature by the Alabama Bankers Association, which even held its yearly session at Montgomery, while the legislature was in session. Practically the entire body of the association attended the hearings of the committees on banking, and secured for that state a very admirable law. The coming May session of the Alabama association, to be held at Mobile, is to be given up almost entirely to a discussion of possible further benefits to be secured by amendments to the law, which was adopted one year ago. The state superintendent of banking for that state commends the state association very highly for the course which it pursued. When Minnesota obtained her new law, it was accomplished as the result of a prolonged battle with adverse interests throughout the state. The state association not only maintained a committee at the capital, but published a daily bulletin or paper putting forth the strongest arguments which could be made by the leading bankers of the state in favor of universal bank supervision. Wisconsin did almost exactly the same thing, except that it did not publish the bulletin. It kept a strong committee and its active secretary at Madison during almost the entire session of the legislature. Briefly these facts might be repeated as to how the thing was done in Missouri, Indiana, Michigan and Pennsylvania. Almost the same efforts have been made heretofore in Tennessee, Kentucky, Arkansas and one or two other states, where the result was either failure or a drawn battle. The opposition in almost every instance came not from the public, nor from any business interests in the state, but from those who were reaping illegitimate profits from a loosely conducted, free-for-all banking business, accompanied by innumerable failures, with total losses to the depositors in almost every instance.

Within one week Chicago has had two private bank failures. Putting all questions of dishonesty aside, and charging these two failures to inexperience, and lack of ability as well as capital, the result, in the light of above experiences, must be laid at the door of the Illinois Bankers Association. It has been shown by the records quoted in this paper in the last two issues that all of the remedial bank legislation passed within the past ten years has been done at the instance of organized state bankers association. In addition to those named one might mention Nebraska, Oklahoma, Washington, Kansas, Texas, California, and a long string of states, where the state organization prepared bills and fought them through to a place on the statute books. All of this history of the movement for better banking gives the credit, where it has been accomplished, to the state bankers association, and naturally enough where nothing has been done toward state supervision, the shortcoming must be charged up to a lack of enterprise on the part of the state association. Every important newspaper in the state of Illinois has commended the movement started by President Harris of the Illinois Bankers Association, toward having a new banking bill for Illinois with state-wide supervision. The fact that there were enough private bankers present at the meeting of the executive council at the Blackstone Hotel (assisted by representatives of large reserve banks, which court their business) to vote down a motion proposed by Mr. Harris only has stirred up the public press of the state and the public generally who want to know why Illinois must remain longer at the rear end of the procession of states. The vote which was cast at the Blackstone has been carefully tabulated, and the direct or affiliated interest of every man who cast his vote will show to the satisfaction of anyone that it was the vote of private interests and not of public good that put a negative recommendation upon the movement for better banking conditions. On this page will be found a splendid editorial from the Chicago Tribune of Tuesday last, giving further evidence that the powerful newspapers of this state can be depended upon to assist a movement which now appears to be under full swing, and which should culminate in the presentation of a carefully prepared banking bill before the next legislature at Springfield.

URGING BANK SUPERVISION

That the powerful elements among the Chicago dailies can be depended upon to help Illinois to a new banking law giving state-wide supervision is evidenced by the following strong and ringing editorial from the Chicago Tribune of Tuesday last. It says:

The failure of another private institution which in the absence of proper legislation has been permitted to do business under the reassuring name of "bank" emphasizes once more the urgent need of reform in Illinois in this respect. Coming sharp on the heels of the unsuccessful attempt by President Harris of the Illinois Bankers Association to induce the executive committee of that organization to endorse legislation bringing under supervision all banking institutions in the state, the collapse of the Wilson Avenue Bank is a timely lesson.

At the same time the Tribune is revealing day by day the evils of the loan shark business, another form of banking that needs drastic handling.

In this situation the public will look especially to the great Chicago banks to prove their sense of public responsibility and professional honor by taking a lead for this reform. President Harris and the men who are supporting him should be given open and strong support.

The leading Chicago bankers recognize not only the advisability of federal and state supervision, but they maintain the even more rigid examination of the clearing house. It is perfectly natural, therefore, that they should support the movement for general supervision of all banking. With their assistance legislation will be enacted that will bring Illinois into line with virtually all other states. Not to do so would be to evade their responsibilities as citizens as well as bankers.

Every other important paper is on record, not only those in the city, but those in the country towns. "Only start it," writes a Peoria editor, "and give us a chance to show our position in the matter." From Quincy an editor writes: "I've been for state supervision for twenty years. Enough poor people have been swindled out of their misplaced deposits to total an amount which would pay off the national debt." And thus it goes. Give the papers of the state a good bill to fight for, and the battle is half over.

MOVEMENT UNDER WAY FOR ELEVATION OF THE STANDARD OF THE CHICAGO BAR

A very much needed movement for the elevation of the standard of Chicago's legal fraternity is now under way. Investigation is to be made of those attorneys who take advantage of the pauper fees act, those who make themselves conspicuous about the jails, endeavoring to secure business from the class of unfortunates confined therein; those who watch the files in bankruptcy cases in the federal courts and the files of new suits in the various courts, and who send cards to the defendants in such suits, stating that they have special information of importance to them relative to the suit, etc.; "ambulance chasing" lawyers and law clerks practicing without a state license. The Chicago Bar Association is busily engaged in this laudable enterprise, and it is expected that charges will be filed against various attorneys for unethetical conduct, and in some cases that disbarment will result to the offenders. It is greatly to be deprecated that the majesty of the law should be sullied by practices of attorneys of this character, and greatly to be desired that the above movement shall be prosecuted vigorously and the undesirables eradicated from one of the greatest of professions.

BANKS UNDER SUPERVISION

During the past four or five years a great many state banks have been established to accommodate the outlying business districts of the city of Chicago. Nearly all of them have been money-makers from the start, and their growth continues at a rapid rate. These new state banks have been established largely in locations which heretofore have been served by unincorporated, private institutions. As a rule, the new banks have made much of the state supervision feature in all of their advertising, and most of them have included it in their window signs. The Old Colony Trust, almost in the shadow of the loop, has thought it to be a strong point. You will find in looking at their windows that it is sated: "Under state and clearing house supervision." Another institution, which has a private bank for a neighbor, is the Kenwood Trust and Savings Bank at 47th Street and Grand Boulevard. It states conspicuously on its window the following: "Under state supervision." We are told that this is the rule rather than the exception with all of the newer state banks which have been incorporated recently in this state; therefore, it must be considered a strong talking point with the public. If it is good advertising for the state bank, it is a good doctrine for the state, and argues in favor of the bill proposed by President Harris and his associates in the Illinois Bankers Association.

WHAT WARE & LELAND PREDICT

The big firm of brokers, Ware & Leland, in their weekly letter, which they send free on request say that "in general, we look for a continuation of the present dullness, with perhaps a tendency towards a lower level. The big interests are not in sympathy with the market, and are doing very little, except to support stocks when very weak."

The American Exchange Bank of Elkhart, Texas, has closed its doors and refused deposits.

KANSAS BANKING CONDITIONS

Bank Commissioner J. N. Dolley sums up as follows: Banking and business conditions in Kansas for January, 1912, exceeded expectations. Bank deposits have increased. Money has been in strong demand at reasonable rates for legitimate business purposes. The retail and general trade has been normal with the usual quiet pulse of the first month of the year.

The conditions of the 1912 wheat crop are most flattering, and one of the most promising in the history of the state. Whatever may be the finish, we have in sight to-day a wheat crop of from 100,000,000 to 125,000,000 bushels. The crop prospects for the current year are very pleasing. The farmers are beginning to talk and get ready for spring work.

The Kansas banker has become quite inquisitive in his relationship with the borrowers of the funds of the banks, requiring much information as to what the borrower intends to invest the money in that he calls upon the bank for. This is correct and good banking.

While credit is the greatest power in the business and banking world for success, it is also a dangerous privilege with many people. The banker is often a better judge than the borrower, as to whether he is borrowing money for a probable successful venture. And often the banker is as deeply interested, and possibly more so, as to the wisdom and success of his customer's undertaking. The banker is loaning funds that do not belong to him. They are sacred or trust funds, so to speak, of his depositors, and he should in every loan eliminate as far as possible the loss of those funds, and discourage in every way recklessness and bad business, and reduce it to the lowest possible minimum. He is the keeper in trust of his brother's purse, and under the statute takes solemn pledge that he will keep that trust most sacred.

I congratulate the Kansas bankers upon their being allowed the privilege to do a banking business in Kansas. No state in the Union offers the possibilities and rich future for banking and all other lines of business as does Kansas. If you cannot succeed in Kansas, do not blame Providence and your luck, because I do not believe you would succeed anywhere.

STATE BANK CHARTER REFUSED

Superintendent Van Tuyl, of the New York state banking department, has refused to approve a certificate of authorization to do business, filed by the Lincoln Bank of Barker, Niagara county, N. Y. There is a bank at Barker at present, and Superintendent Van Tuyl holds that it would be expedient to have two institutions in so small a place.

BANKER GIVES UP FIGHT ON EXTRADITION

Oklahoma City, Okla., February 15.—H. A. Burrell, formerly a banker of Brownstown, Ind., charged with embezzling $79,000, to-day gave up his long fight against extradition and started for Indiana. During the last sixteen months Burrell has been in jail here. Seventeen indictments stand against Burrell at Brownstown. The ground on which extradition has been resisted is that a prison sentence will mean death to him because of his extreme age.

THE TAMA-TOLEDO INDIANS

The banks of Tama and of Toledo, Iowa, which will entertain Group 7 on Washington's birthday, sent out their invitations on a picture postcard, saying "Come and eat 'Dog Soup' with us." The card bore a group picture of Indian children, clients of the Tama and Toledo banks.

PLAN TO SUE DIRECTORS

Terre Haute, Ind.—Stockholders of the American State Bank are preparing to bring suit against the directors for the larger part of the amount the stockholders say the bank is loser through the shortage of President W. H. Tabor, who has been indicted, and through bad loans he made. The total of such losses, it is said, will be found to be $100,000, and the directors are held to be responsible, either because of negligence or connivance. Under the state law stockholders are liable for twice the amount of their stock. It is apparent now that the receiver will not be able to pay more than forty per cent dividend, if that much, and the stockholders will be assessed.

BILL TO AID BANK RECEIVER

Senator Black, of Brooklyn, has introduced a bill at Albany, New York, making compulsory a public investigation by the state superintendent of banks of the affairs of all banks which he may take over as receiver. For the purpose of the investigation he must also employ an attorney residing in the district in which the bank is located, paying him from the funds of the banking department.

The bill follows a decision of the court of appeals, which held that the banking law in its present form gives the superintendent of banks no power to conduct a judicial investigation of a bank's management after it has been closed through failure. The decision was made in an action to compel ex-Comptroller Edward M. Grout to testify in the case of the Union Bank of Brooklyn, which is under the charge of Superintendent Van Tuyl.

Little Rock, Ark., February 14.—The executive committee of the Arkansas Bankers Association met here to-day and selected Little Rock for the annual meeting of the association. Tuesday and Wednesday, May 14th and 15th, were the dates agreed upon.

Chapter News

CHICAGO CHAPTER, A. I. B.

By OTTO J. KRAMPIKOWSKY.

The meeting of Chicago Chapter, held on Tuesday evening, February 13th, had the largest attendance of any so far held this year, and was a most sociable and enjoyable evening as well.

Chairman Harry S. Smale introduced James I. Ennis, already known to all members of the chapter, who spoke on "Negotiable Instruments," also giving an outline as to what will be covered in the eight lectures, which he will deliver before the class later on. Mr. Ennis stated that in the first lecture he would treat on the form and interpretation and the essential qualification of a check; in the second—the duty of the bank in paying checks, what the relationship is between the banker and the depositor, how long a time the bank is allowed in which to throw out checks on account of not sufficient funds. In the other lectures, he stated he would cover certified checks, what a teller should do in case of certifying a forged check, and what he should do in order to protect the bank from loss, what right a bank officer has to certify his own check. Mr. Ennis further stated that the first meeting of the class will be held Tuesday evening, March 5th.

After Mr. Ennis' speech, the following vaudeville program was on for the evening as well as the smoker: Mr. Roberts gave a piano and vocal selection, "When You Dream Don't Mention My Name." Mr. Baxley gave a monologue as well as a vocal selection. The First National Bank quartette, composed of Walter Hanson, Carl Rang, Louis Meyer and George Monkey, gave several very good selections. Carter and Carter, black face comedians, were there with their humor, making all present sit up and take notice. Next, last and near best, was our friend, nicknamed "Herman the Great," who took a stiff hat from a nearby member, pulled a guinea pig out of it, cans, flags, etc., and later handfuls of coin.

After the vaudeville program, the buffet lunch was served. There is no doubt that a few more evenings like this one in the near future are bound to bring results in the way of increased membership.

JANUARY CHAPTERGRAM OF THE TACOMA CHAPTER OF THE AMERICAN INSTITUTE OF BANKING

By GUY T. PIERCE, SECRETARY TACOMA CHAPTER.

Our meeting held on January 9th proved to be a great success, creating much enthusiasm among the large attendance present.

The entertainment committee had arranged a very interesting program. One of the numbers, an address on "Psychology in Modern Business," by Dr. F. W. Southworth, held the boys' closest attention.

Following Mr. Southworth's remarks, Mr. L. J. Muschek, a local hypnotist, gave a talk explaining the science of hypnotism, enumerating many wonderful things now being accomplished by the science. Mr. Muschek concluded by hypnotizing some of the boys, this part proving very amusing.

L. H. Flood, of the Scandinavian-American Bank of Tacoma, a professional comedian, having traveled in vaudeville some time ago, was next called on and it is quite needless to say that Mr. Flood's stories kept the club rooms in continuous laughter.

After lunch, which was served in the National Bank of Commerce lunch room, the meeting was adjourned.

QUICK WORK ON ADDING MACHINE

The world's record in adding on a machine was almost broken Tuesday at the annual adding machine contest of the San Francisco Chapter of the American Institute of Banking held at the club-rooms in the First National Bank building. The contest was won by Lloyd F. Head of the American National Bank, who listed and added 100 checks in 1 minute 56 3-5 seconds, which is within a couple of seconds of the world's record, now held by Will Stuart of Oakland. The second prize was won by William F. Gabriel of the Wells-Fargo Bank in 1 minute 57 2-5 seconds and the third by W. Clasby of the First National Bank in two minutes three seconds. The machines used in the contest were lent by the Burroughs Adding Machine Company.

GOOD CROP YEAR PREDICTED

Minneapolis.—According to Thomas E. Hayward, of Mandan, N. D., prospects for a good year in North Dakota never looked better. Mr. Hayward is associated with a string of eight banks in North Dakota, most of them west of the Missouri river. At their head is H. R. Lyon, vice-president of the Russell-Miller Company, Minneapolis.

Mr. Hayward has come to Minneapolis to study banking methods in the city's big banks. He is now at the Northwestern National. "Things are in very good shape in North Dakota now," he said. "There was abundant rains last fall and the ground was frozen soon after with the result that most of the water was conserved in the soil. Then there was a good deal of snow, with the result that the soil will be in much better shape this spring than it has been for several years."

BANK CLAIMS ALLOWED

Little Rock, Ark., February 14.—Chancellor Martineau to-day ordered a decree in the case of D. A. Frayser of Memphis against the Night and Day Bank of Little Rock, which was placed in the hands of Receiver Will Lewis last September, approving claims amounting to $56,826.27. The claims allowed will be paid a dividend of 20 per cent.

There were about 600 depositors who did not file their complaints in the time required by law, and nothing will be received by them.

The receiver to-day said: "There are claims to the amount of $13,000 that have neither been allowed nor disallowed, and if they are allowed the liabilities of the bank will be something like $471,000."

IMPORTANT RULING AFFECTING BANKS

Officers and directors of state banks in Ohio are permitted at stockholders' meetings to vote proxies given them by other stockholders of the institution, this being the holding in an opinion made public on Friday of last week by State Attorney-General Hogan in response to an inquiry from State Bank Superintendent F. E. Baxter. Federal laws specifically deny officers and directors of national banks the right to vote proxies, the intent being to prevent domination of the bank by the officers then in power. The state laws, however, are entirely silent on this point.

LENNON BANK SHY BUT $18,000

Lennon, Mich., February 13.—Creditors of the Lennon private bank of E. Burt Jenney are $17,000 better off than they supposed when the first inventory was taken. Thursday the second inventory, required by the second writ, revealed the fact that a receipt for $17,000 left by Banking Examiner Schethler had been overlooked in the first inventory.

This brings the shortage down to $18,000 instead of $35,000 as first supposed. The receipt left by the banking commissioner was for papers taken from the Lennon bank to the Dowagiac bank for comparison.

It was apparent Mr. Jenney himself does not know the condition of the bank. He admitted Thursday morning that the first inventory was correct, and that the shortage reached $35,000.

FIRST NATIONAL, PHILADELPHIA

The First National Bank, which has the distinction of being the first bank organized under the national bank act, on Tuesday resumed business in its old building, which has been completely remodeled to provide the handsomest offices occupied by any national bank in Philadelphia.

Vermont Program

The third annual convention of the Vermont State Bankers Association will be held at Montpelier, Vt., February 22, 1912, for which the following program has been arranged:

Address of welcome, Andrew J. Sibley, vice-president Capital Savings Bank and Trust Company.

Response by Henry F. Field of the Executive Council.

Report of Secretary, Treasurer and Executive Council.

Appointment Nominating Committee.

Address, "Report of the Monetary Commission," Congressman George W. Prince of Illinois.

General discussion of various topics, election of officers and adjournment.

A banquet has been prepared for the evening's entertainment at which Joseph A. DeBoer will preside as toastmaster, and an address on "Organized Education" will be delivered by George E. Allen, educational director of the American Institute of Banking.

BANKS MAY GET CUSTOMS FUND

Washington.—A report favorable to the deposit of customs receipts in national banks, when the secretary of the treasury so desires, was made to the house last week by the ways and means committee, which recommended for passage a bill introduced by Representative Lobeck of Nebraska. The bill would put the same restrictions on deposits as apply now to the deposit of internal revenue funds. One object of the bill is to divert $250,000,000 annual customs receipts at New York from the subtreasury in times of financial stringency.

FAVOR AMENDMENT

Indianapolis, Ind.—Many bankers are urging the members of the Indiana delegation to favor an amendment to the banking laws whereby national banks may be allowed to lend 40 per cent of their savings accounts. They contend that under the present law trust companies and state banks have an undue advantage over national banks. A provision of the proposed Aldrich banking plan permits national banks to lend 40 per cent of their savings deposits on first mortgaged real estate security.

NEW YORK BANK MERGER

Louis G. Kaufman, president of Chatham and Phenix National Bank, New York City, has announced details of the merger of the Jefferson Bank and the Century Bank. The consolidated institution will be named the Century Bank and will have a capital and surplus of $1,000,000. Mr. Kaufman will be chairman of the board and present officers of both banks will remain after the merger. H. L. Crawford, president of the Century, will be president of the institution after consolidation, and S. D. Scudder, president of the Jefferson, will be vice-president. Ten of the board members of the Chatham and Phenix National will be elected directors of the Century.

Aggregate deposits of the two banks amount to about $8,000,000. The Jefferson has a capital and surplus of $1,029,500 and the Century of $361,500. Total resources are about $11,000,000. The two main offices of both banks will continue together with their branches after the merger.

E. O. ELDRIDGE

It will please the large number of banking friends of E. O. Eldredge to know that he has become identified with the Irving National Exchange Bank, New York City. Mr. Eldredge was in the banking service at Oswego, New York, at the time of his election to the secretaryship of the New York State Banking Association in 1899. He served in this capacity for a number of years and is a man of winning personality.

BANK ACCOUNT SHORT

Veedersburg, Ind., February 13.—Business circles of Veedersburg were agog to-day when it was learned that Joseph K. Irvin, cashier of the Farmers Bank, had left town Saturday night and that an investigation of the bank's books showed an alleged shortage of about $14,000. The stockholders of the bank met Monday night and effected a reorganization. It is said that the shortage is due to bad loans. Irvin is a son of the late Maj. Samuel Irvin, who founded the bank, and has always been considered one of the solid young business men of Fountain county.

Clinton, Wis.—The Citizens Bank has increased its capital stock from $25,000 to $50,000. C. W. Culver is president.

CENTRAL WEST LETTER

By EDGAR P. ALLEN

Omaha

Although practically all prominent bankers in the Central West agree that business conditions are improving, the improvement is slow and the upturn not as definite or as rapid as had been expected. The bank clearings do not as a rule hold up well although in several cities gains have been slow during the first few weeks of the current year. Kansas City dropped to seventh place, giving way to San Francisco. Omaha gained while Fort Worth and Kansas City lost last week and Wichita showed up with a decided credit. The general business situation has been almost stagnant on account of unfavorable weather conditions although merchants throughout the section are making preparations for good business later on. Crop conditions could hardly be more favorable for this time of the year and it is predicted that wheat and corn will show an acreage larger than ever before.

Begin Prosecutions

As was hinted several weeks ago, criminal prosecutions have begun in connection with the failure of the American Union Trust Company of Kansas City. The company had absorbed the All Night and Day Bank and most of its troubles are traceable to the closing of the banking department. Liquidation of the company was undertaken by the Commerce Trust Company of Kansas City and depositors are being paid in full. But the investigations of the bank commissioner have disclosed sufficient evidence, in the opinion of the state authorities, to warrant prosecutions. A. R. Fuller, secretary-treasurer of the company, appeared voluntarily to answer to the charge of embezzling the funds of the bank and gave bonds. J. W. Thompson, a director of the bank, who is accused of obtaining money under false pretenses, also appeared in court and gave bond. H. W. Richardson, president, and J. C. Burch are charged with obtaining money under false pretenses, but they are in other states and if they are arrested their requisition will be asked for.

Reiffeisen System of Rural Banking

Governor Cruce, of Oklahoma, recently expressed much interest in the details of the Reiffeisen system of rural banking, which has been applied successfully in Germany. Governor Cruce has named I. H. Nakdiman and Earl G. Bayless, bankers of Salisaw and Claremore, respectively, as delegates to the Southern Commercial Congress at Nashville, Tenn., April 1st to 6th, inclusive. These delegates will pay especial attention to the discussion of the Reiffeisen system as given by David Lubin, a Californian, who represented the United States in the International Institute of Agriculture, maintained at Rome, Italy, by fifty civilized nations. By the Reiffeisen system the farmers of a locality form a co-operative society and, on the strength of their collective assets, obtain a loan for which they become severally and jointly liable. This loan is deposited in the co-operative bank of the association. The bank also serves as a depository for the savings of the members. The money is loaned out to the members for specified purposes connected with their farming business. In many instances, these little local banks have federated into central banks. During the 1909, German farmers transacted business in this way to the amount of $1,600,000,000. The plan has a number of advocates in this country who have made a study of farm finances, and who believe that the plan would be a good one to follow in cotton growing states.

Many Bond Issues During 1911

The year 1911 was characterized by many bond issues among the municipalities of the Central West, notwithstanding unfavorable conditions due to poor crops. The state of Missouri also voted $3,500,000 in special capitol bonds, which have not been sold, owing to the very low rate of interest accorded them and to the additional fact that they are taxable. Dallas, Texas, authorized heavy municipal bonds for road improvements. Perhaps the greatest bond activity, however, was in Oklahoma. Oklahoma municipalities voted to expend over ten million dollars in public improvements. Oklahoma City heads the list with $4,000,000 accredited to it, $350,000 was voted in a special election February 12th. Of this amount $100,000 is to be paid to the state as the forfeit of the State Capitol Development Company in the free state capitol project. Waterworks and sewers lead in the civic improvement program, while schools and other public buildings show fine records.

New Life Insurance Policy Ruling

Following the policy of strict regulation of all business institutions doing business in the state of Kansas, Ike S. Lewis, state superintendent of insurance, has issued an order that from March 1st of this year all life insurance policies in Kansas must contain a provision that in the event of the default of premium payments, after three annual premiums have been paid, the insured, without any action upon his part, is entitled to a stipulated insurance. "The great majority of life insurance companies doing business in Kansas have such a provision," said Mr. Lewis, "but there are some which do not." This provision shall not be required in term insurance of twenty years or less.

Bonynge Speaks at Meeting of Commercial Club

How to place the banking system of the United States on a scientific business basis, more equally distribute the surplus funds throughout the country, put the banking system on a substantial and adequate basis to meet the increasing and expanding business of the nation, formed the theme of an address delivered before the Kansas City Commercial Club February 8th by Robert W. Bonynge, of Denver, former member of congress and the national monetary commission. Mr. Bonynge advocated strong support of the Aldrich plan by the business men of the country. As a compliment to the speaker practically every banker of Kansas City was present at the meeting.

"Blue Sky" Law

State Bank Commissioner J. N. Dolley of Kansas has ruled that the famous "blue sky" law of that state shall apply to mutual and fraternal insurance organizations. His attention was called to the controversy that has been going on within the order of the Modern Woodmen of America, which proposes to raise rates to insure solvency. Mr. Dolley is in favor of this change, and has announced that every fraternal insurance organization doing business in Kansas shall put itself upon an absolutely solvent basis. The society of Modern Woodmen of America has been forced to announce an increase in its schedule of rates, effective January 1, 1913, and Mr. Dolley declared that it is doing the honest, straightforward, and only right thing for its membership by arranging its rates so it can carry out its contracts in the future beyond question.

Government Will Redeem $4,500

In the fire which destroyed the Farmers State Bank at Jamestown, Kan., last Christmas day, the heat was so intense that the safes within the vaults provided no protection for either the currency or coin deposited in them. The safes were shipped to Omaha, where experts opened them. The paper money was found to be reduced practically to ashes, while the coins, both silver and gold, were melted into lumps. Currency to the amount of about $8,800 was burned, most of it beyond recognition so far as the value of the denominations was concerned. The officials of the bank decided to send the burnt money to Washington for redemption. After three weeks work, treasury experts found evidence of the existence of at least $4,500 to be contained in the burnt pile, and accordingly Uncle Sam will redeem this amount. The ruling of the government is, that if two-fifths of a bank note can be found after its destruction by fire, one-half of its amount in value will be allowed. In case three-fifths of a note are found to exist, then the full amount of the stated value is allowed the owner through redemption.

Meeting of Group 5, Texas

The first of the group meetings of the Texas Bankers Association for the current year convened at Dallas, Tuesday, February 13th. This was Group 5, representing the north central counties of the state. The Dallas Clearing House Association had charge of the arrangements, and nearly five hundred bankers and outside visitors were in attendance. The sessions were held in the auditorium of the chamber of commerce and the business was handled at a single sitting of the group. The committee on arrangements consisted of J.

Howard Ardrey, Edwin Hobby, and George A. Pittman. Chairman W. D. Sanders of DeKalb, Tex., called the meeting to order, after which Mayor William M. Holland of Dallas delivered the address of welcome. On behalf of the bankers, A. V. Lane, vice-president of the American Exchange National Bank, also made a welcoming address, which was responded to by J. Andy Pondrom, cashier of the Texarkana National Bank. C. A. Canford, president of the Commercial State Bank of Sherman, delivered an address on "The Benefit from Concentrating Bank Accounts with Financial Reserve Association." T. C. Morgan, president of the First National Bank of Longview, discussed the question, "What Facilities will Interior Banks Require of Their Reserve Agents Under the Aldrich Bill?" The visitors and delegates were entertained at dinner at the Orient Hotel in the evening and later attended the theater.

Central West Notes

The Fort Worth, Texas, chamber of commerce has decided to take an active part in the campaign of the National Citizens League for the promotion of sound banking. In the form of a resolution it has extended help to the league and will do its part in the distribution of literature and forwarding the general educational movement.

Frank H. Burrow, vice-president of the Reserve National Bank of Kansas City, and of the First National Bank of Smith Center, Kan., was married February 8th to Miss Margaret Collins of Meyersdale, Pa.

C. G. Cochran, president of the First National Bank of Plainville, Kan., and also president of the Citizens State Bank of Hays, Kan., was in Kansas City last week, visiting his son, F. C. Cochran, vice-president of the Fidelity Trust Company. "The eastern part of the state is in fine shape," he said, "and from the central portion to the Colorado line there never was a finer prospect."

W. L. Norton, former president of the American National Bank of Bartlesville, Okla., was placed on trial February 12th in the federal court, charged with making false reports, false entries and misapplication of funds. Norton is indicted on eleven counts. All cases against Norton were consolidated and one trial will determine all.

At a recent meeting of the directors of the Fidelity Trust Company of Kansas City, Alfred D. Rider was elected treasurer of the institution. For some time Mr. Rider had been assistant treasurer. Thornton Cooke, vice-president and treasurer, now holds the former title only.

Dr. W. S. Woods, former president of the National Bank of Commerce, and now director of the Commerce Trust Company, of Kansas City, returned to Kansas City for a short visit last week from San Diego, Cal., where he has been living for some time. Dr. Woods was a pioneer banker of Kansas City and is now accredited as one of its wealthiest citizens.

J. Z. Miller, Jr., president of the Western Exchange Bank and also vice-president of the Commerce Trust Company of Kansas City, has gone to Texas, where he will attend the various bankers' group meetings in that state in the interests of the banks with which he is connected in Kansas City. Mr. Miller, before making Kansas City his home, was a Texan and enjoys a large acquaintance among financiers of the Lone Star state.

Among the visiting bankers in Kansas City last week were: J. B. Woods, president of the Farmers Bank at Smithville, Mo.; George W. Robinson, president of the Security State Bank, Wichita, Kan.; N. Harding, vice-president of the Fort Worth National Bank, Fort Worth, Texas.; E. J. McCreary, cashier of the State Bank of Sterling, Kan.; W. T. La Follette, a banker of Siloam Springs, Ark.; O. S. Kelly, president of the Farmers National Bank of Pound Creek, Okla.; Hugh Smith, president of the First State Bank of Tucumcari, N. M.; George S. Murphey, president of the First State Bank, Manhattan, Kan.; R. B. Robinson, president of the First National Bank of Checotah, Okla.; Thomas H. Bowles, president of the Allen County State Bank, Iola, Kan.; W. S. Hadley, president of the Citizens State Bank of Wichita, Kan.; C. F. Lamb, vice-president of the Franklin County State Bank, Ottawa, Kan.; H. F. Tolliver, cashier of the Farmers National Bank, Cordell, Okla.; R. L. Hartley, cashier of the Stockton Exchange Bank, Stockton, Kan.; Henry Picken, cashier of the Concordia Savings Bank, Concordia, Mo.; J. T. Chelf, cashier of the Farmers State Bank, Comanche, Okla.; and Carl H. Woodward, manager of the credit department of the Colorado National Bank, Denver.

The following reserve agents have been approved by the Texas banking department: The Texas Bank and Trust Company of Galveston, and the Union National Bank of Houston, for the Farmers and Merchants State Bank of Winnie; the City National Bank of Galveston, for the Hidalgo County Bank of Mercedes; the first National Bank of Rosebud, for the Lott State Bank of Lott; the Guaranty State Bank and Trust Company of Dallas, for the State Bank of Barksdale; the Fort Worth National Bank for the Alvord State Bank, Alvord, Texas; the City National Bank of Galveston, and American National Bank of Austin, for the First State Bank of Marquez; the Guaranty State Bank and Trust Company of Dallas, for the Farmers State Bank of Buffalo; the Stock Yards National Bank of Fort Worth, and the Central Texas National Bank of Waco, for the Clifton State Bank, Clifton; the Guaranty State Bank and Trust Company of Dallas, for the First State Bank of Salina.

HOMELY ADVICE BY COMMISSIONER DOLLEY

To the Editor: It has been a matter of wonder to me that bankers (supposed to be the most prudent class of business men in existence) should overlook the fact that their clerks fall into the habit of making a show in society or otherwise, beyond what would reasonably and fairly be allowable from their limited salaries.

It has always seemed to me that when a cashier, teller, bookkeeper or other employee begins to put on extra style and spend money extravagantly in dress or in other respects, the president or directors of the bank should institute an inquisition and call him before them to give information as to how he is getting the money for all that display.

They could at least say to him: "As you are working for us, it would be to the credit of this bank as well as to our own credit, if you exhibit enough courage and character to stand firm against temptation to spend money that you ought not to spend. If you wish to appear to the public as keeping up with the extravagant styles and expenditures of people you may come in contact with, it may be well for you to look for another position. It is not conducive to the good reputation of this bank, nor to your own reputation, for you to be associated with the ones who make such extravagant expenditures."

In case the clerk or cashier, whichever it is, seems not to take such admonition kindly, he should be let out without delay, as there are thousands of deserving young men who would be very glad to have the position and refrain from vanities that require expenditure of money beyond his income.

People not willing to be restricted by abstemious habits and those not willing to deny themselves for the purpose of accumulating money honestly have no proper place in the banking business.

Proper and vigorous supervision of this kind over the habits and aspirations of their clerks would save millions of dollars to the banks of this country, besides assisting their clerks to build up proper characters.

I am of the opinion that many of the defalcations of bank employees should be in a large measure chargeable to the officers higher up, who do not keep in close touch with the employees as to their daily habits, customs and manner of living; and oftentimes not paying them a sufficient salary for their services, largely due to their eagerness of paying large dividends.

Every employee of the bank should receive a fair salary, and be fully paid on a basis of his worth to the institution; and when he is receiving a fair salary and full compensation for his services, and cannot live within the amount, his services should at once be discontinued. If it is impossible to do this from the earnings of the bank, the bank should liquidate and go out of business, for the reason that it becomes a menace to the banking world and the depositing public, when its condition is such that its earnings will not provide a suitable wage and salary for its servants.

J. N. DOLLEY.

Northwest Letter

Banking news from Minneapolis—St. Paul financial center, and surrounding States, compiled by J. Edwards Smith

Says E. W. Decker, president of the Northwestern National, of the situation, in the Bank Review: "We look for business to go along in the even tenor of its way, without much expansion or launching of new enterprises until the political atmosphere is clear and crops for the coming year are assured. In the meantime it is safe to say that fundamentally conditions throughout the country are good. We only await reasonable assurance of the future to go ahead with renewed confidence."

Bankers Surety Company

The Bankers Surety Company has notified the state drainage commission in Minnesota that it will complete state ditches in two counties abandoned by O. F. Doyle. The surety company bonded the contractor. Expiration is extended to December 31st.

Scandinavian-American Has Fire

Defective wiring started a $10,000 fire in the Scandinavian-American Bank building, St. Paul, last Saturday, early. Contents of four vaults were not scorched. Temporary repairs were made to open the next working day. The bank fixtures valued at $2,000 and insured at $1,000 were estimated to be a total loss. The fire was at 3:18 A. M. and the burglar alarms rang to arouse the bank officials at 6:30 A. M. Thinking that some one was tampering with the cash boxes, Cashier J. A. Swenson and Assistant J. B. Jensen rushed to the bank and found they were late to the fire. The heating apparatus was no good after the conflagration. The building belongs to the bank.

New Loan Association for St. Paul

The St. Paul Provident Loan Association will begin business February 29th. It is anti-loan shark. A. W. Guttridge, former secretary of the Associated Charities, will be manager. Twenty per cent of $50,000 subscriptions has been called for. The remainder will be ordered in as needed. C. J. McConville is president of the association. Three were appointed to arrange for equipment. Five were appointed to make rates, settle on collateral and arrange details. The object of the association is to make loans from $25 to $200 at a legal rate. Bankers are on the official list of the association. The vice-president is F. A. Nienhauser, of the First National; treasurer, Louis Betz, of the State Savings; secretary, H. W. Parker, of the Merchants National. Mr. Guttridge addressed the Town Criers on loan sharking, and a resolution was passed to appoint a committee to urge business men and newspapers to get the city rid of that sort of people.

Farmers State at Hartland

The Farmers State of Hartland, Minn., is capitalized at $10,000. The incorporators are: E. A. Nelson, R. M. Olson, Jacob Hanson, Einar Warke, P. H. Donavan, L. S. Sorlie, W. J. Sorlie, E. R. Thykeson, J. F. Sheeham, L. O. Menggaard, Christ Thofson and others of Hartland, and H. E. Skinner of Albert Lea.

Will Sell Gold Bonds

St. Paul will sell, on February 29th, 4 per cent gold bonds for sewer and water purposes, amounting to $250,000. The date is March 1st. The corporation attorney's department has settled the question of validity of the bonds in their favor.

South Dakota Convention

The South Dakota Bankers Association is to meet June 26th and 27th at Belle Fourche. At a meeting of the executive council at Huron the bankers said that the stringency in money is due to the people adopting more economical living, with a frugality unknown before in the Northwest. The people are not seriously inconvenienced and are hopeful of a good crop year.

Grain Situation in Canada Exaggerated

On a visit to Minneapolis W. H. Saunders, manager in Calgary for the Canadian Bank of Commerce, says reports of the grain situation in Canada are exaggerated. He added: "Every year about this time the farmers of Canada try to unload their grain on the market. The result is that the railroads have not enough cars to move it. But empty cars are being rushed to Winnipeg with all haste to relieve the congestion, and large amounts are being shipped into this country over the two Soo lines."

Ehlers Re-elected President

Henry Ehlers has been re-elected president of the Dayton's Bluff State Bank, St. Paul. William Salisbury is vice-president, P. O. Skoglund is cashier and Edwin Ehlers assistant. The directors are: W. W. Dunn, William Salisbury, W. T. Lemon, Henry Ehlers, P. O. Skoglund, Frank Swanson, C. R. Peterson.

Bankers to the South

Twin City bankers have flown, many of them to southern climes. Vice-president A. A. Crane, of the Minneapolis First National, will flit with his family on Washington's Birthday to California. Dr. F. H. Wellcome, head of the Union Investment Company, has left for the West Indies cruise. J. A. Latta, vice-president of the Northwestern National, went to the West Indies, and J. S. Pomeroy, cashier of the Security National, hied himself to Havana. C. T. Jaffray and D. Mackerchar, vice-presidents of the First National, Minneapolis, went south to look over golf grounds.

Attended Wisconsin Group Meeting

L. E. Wakefield, Wells & Dekey Company; P. G. Leeman, assistant cashier of the First National; S. H. Bezoier, assistant cashier of the Security National; R. S. Macgregor, assistant cashier Northwestern National, were the Minneapolis representatives at the east central bank group meeting at Oshkosh, Wis.

Northwestern National Bank clerks who have special knowledge of banking subjects will be allowed to lecture the other bank clerks this season. The course was started by the

George F. Orde

The executive council of the Minnesota Bankers Association, on suggestion of George F. Orde, vice-president of the First National Bank, is considering taking up the good seed corn proposition in Minnesota this year. Charles R. Frost, secretary of the association, will report upon the plan in the near future.

Professor Andrew Boss and Professor C. P. Bull of the state agricultural college recently said that the seed corn problem this year will be serious. The farmers will plan a big acreage if they can get the seed, but there is a scarcity of good seed stock.

The Minnesota Bankers Association will not take up the matter if it is decided that it can best be handled in some other way, but will be ready to give assistance if its services are found necessary.

Banking Notes of Interest

The St. Paul Title and Trust Company has petitioned court for permission to distribute $50,000 to its stockholders. Hearing was set for February 23d. Five thousand shares are $30 par value each. The company has not been in active business for ten years.

BANK MESSENGERS ROBBED IN NEW YORK

New York, February 15.—Twenty-five thousand dollars in currency was stolen from a taxicab in the heart of the financial district this morning by three highwaymen, who sprang into the vehicle and overpowered W. F. Smith and Frank Wardell, messengers of the East River National Bank, 680 Broadway. Both messengers were badly injured and the robbers escaped with the money—$15,000 in $5 bills and $10,000 in $100 bills. The currency was being transported from the Produce Exchange Bank in the lower part of the city.

NEW BANK FOR CHICAGO

Springfield, Ill.—The state auditor has issued a permit to Edward C. Waller, Edmund A. Cummings and J. W. Broughton to organize the River Forest State Bank at River Forest, Cook county, with a capital stock of $50,000. A permit was issued also to Camillo Volini, Antonio Romano, Rocco V. Romano, Michels Di Cosola, Alessandro Conforti, Pasquale Mastroianni, Modestino Mastrogiiovanni, Gaetano S. Destafano, Giuseppe Monaco and Luigi M. Nigro to organize the Halsted Trust and Savings Bank in Chicago with a capital stock of $200,000.

DEATH OF EDWIN F. BROWN

Edwin F. Brown, a vice-president of the Central Trust Company, and formerly president of the Monroe National, which was taken over by the former bank recently, died on Thursday, after a lingering illness. He was a member of many clubs and financially interested in many enterprises. He began banking as the owner of the Manufacturers Bank, which later moved into the loop and became the Monroe National. He leaves a wife and daughter. Funeral was on Friday from his home in Evanston.

A charter has been issued to the Heard National Bank of Jacksonville, Fla., capital, $1,000,000. The officers are: J. J. Heard, president; W. B. Sadler and J. G. Boyd, vice-president; C. W. Hendley, cashier.

WASHINGTON TO HOLD COUNCIL MEETING

E. T. Wilson, vice-president of the National Bank of Commerce of Tacoma, chairman of the executive council of the Washington State Bankers Association, has issued a call for a meeting of the council in the office of the National Bank of Commerce, Tacoma, February 17th, at two o'clock p. m. The meeting will be for the purpose of selecting a place for holding the 1912 convention and fixing the date thereof; outlining the program of the convention; selecting a topic for the prize essay under the resolution adopted at the Wenatchee convention and the transacting of such other business as may come before the council. The agricultural committee has been notified to meet with the executive council, February 17th, for the purpose of outlining definitely the work of said committee and to arrange necessary steps to provide funds to enable it to satisfactorily carry on its work. The attendance at the meeting is expected to be large.

As the Oregon Bankers Association has selected Friday and Saturday, June 21st and 22d, as the date of the Oregon convention, and as the Idaho association will meet June 17th, 18th and 19th, it is probable that Thursday, Friday and Saturday, June 27th, 28th and 29th will be selected as the date for the convention of the Washington Bankers Association. In this way the dates of the three Pacific Northwest conventions will not conflict, but on the other hand, will be so conveniently arranged, that visitors from eastern states and California will be able to attend all three conventions with the least loss of time.

RAILROAD ENGINE FALLS ON BANK

Salt Lake City, Utah, February 15.—Five men were killed and three hurt when a locomotive hauling three cars loaded with ore left the track, rolled down a hill seventy-five feet and crashed through the roof of the Citizens State Bank and the Bingham dye works at Bingham, Utah, to-day. Three of the men killed were sleeping in the tailor shop. Fred Sharkey, cashier of the bank, was asleep in a rear room when the crash came. He was hurled into the street uninjured.

OUT-OF-TOWN BANKERS IN CHICAGO THIS WEEK

Pacific Northwest Banking News

Spokane, Wash., February 13.—One hundred representatives of banks with total deposits of $31,000,000 and paid-up capital of $4,825,000 and industrial institutions with capital of $20,000,000 attended the "good fellowship" banquet in the Hall of the Doges at Davenport's restaurant following the annual meeting of the Spokane Clearing House Association on February 6th, when Samuel Galland, secretary of the Northwestern Loan and Trust Company, was elected to the presidency, succeeding J. Grier Long, president of the Washington Trust Company. W. D. Vincent, cashier of the Old National Bank, was re-elected secretary and manager. J. P. M. Richards, president of the Spokane and Eastern Trust Company, was chosen vice-president. President Galland, D. W. Twohy, president of the Old National Bank, and Edwin T. Coman, president of the Exchange National Bank, constitute the executive committee. Speakers at the banquet were: J. T. Humbird, J. P. McColdrick, E. F. Cartier Van Dissel, A. N. Cantril, Eugene Favre, D. L. Huntington, Julius Galland, Charles A. McLean, J. Grier Long, M. M. Cooke, F. T. McCullough, Ira W. Bedle, W. D. Vincent, Joseph Bradley, F. M. March, Thomas H. Brewer, D. W. Twohy, E. O'Shea of Spokane and W. R. Baker of Colville, Wash. The committee on arrangements included R. Lewis Rutter, W. D. Vincent and Samuel Galland.

Bankers Indicted

F. E. Barbour of Spokane, deputy state bank examiner of Washington and formerly cashier of the Washington-Alaska Bank of Washington, capitalized at $50,000, in which he and his associates sold their interests to the Fairbanks Banking Company for $250,000 in 1909, has received word that he was recently indicted by the grand jury in connection with the closing of the Washington-Alaska Bank of Nevada at Fairbanks. He and Falcon Joslin, John Schram, W. H. Parsons and E. L. Webster of Seattle are to be arrested, following the investigation of the defunct bank. Mr. Barbour said he is at a loss to understand why he and his former associates should be drawn into the affairs of the merged bank, that closed its doors three years after they sold their interests in the original institution, organized in 1905, which had assets of $2,000,000 and deposits of $1,600,000, of which more than 90 per cent was held in reserve.

Church and Hospital Property Loans

J. E. Ferris, treasurer of the Union Trust and Savings Company, reports that the Mercantile Trust Company of St. Louis has through his house made a loan of $30,000 at 6 per cent for five years to St. Luke's hospital. The security is valued at $140,000. The first named company has placed $500,000 in loans on church and hospital property in the last twelve months. Mr. Ferris said: "These loans are more popular and regarded as safer than formerly and we have no difficulty in interesting eastern money in them."

Do Not Want Boone Pardoned

Richard H. Hill, one of the largest depositors and shareholders in the defunct Palouse State Bank, has forwarded a petition, signed by more than 300 business men and farmers, to Governor Marion E. Hay, asking that the application for the pardon of H. M. Boone, former state senator and president of the bank, be denied. The bank closed its doors in May, 1909, and Boone was convicted on the charge of larceny by embezzlement of $20,000. The defense appealed twice, but Boone was sentenced to serve from one to ten years in the penitentiary. Mr. Hill places his loss at $15,000.

Lewiston Case Closed

When Peyton Gordon, assistant attorney-general of the United States, moved the dismissal of the indictment, charging Frank W. Kettenbach, former president, with conspiring with C. W. Robnett, former bookkeeper, to abstract $137,000 from the Lewiston National Bank, one of the most interesting cases in the history of central Idaho, came to a close. Mr. Kettenbach was first brought to trial on indictments by the federal grand jury, charging embezzlement and making false entries and false reports to the comptroller of the currency, but the cases were dismissed at the instance of the government before the defense submitted its testimony.

Business Picking Up

G. H. MacRea of St. Paul, general passenger agent of the Chicago & Northwestern Railway Company, said in Spokane that business is picking up throughout the western country, especially west of the Rocky Mountains. Passenger business is better than it was a year ago, he added, and with the lumber and shingle mills starting on large orders the outlook is bright for a prosperous season.

7 Per Cent Dividend

Day & Hansen Security Company of Spokane, headed by W. T. Day, has paid its regular annual dividend of $70,000, or 7 per cent, on a capitalization of $1,000,000, besides adding $150,000 to the surplus fund. The company was organized four years ago. Mr. Day reports that the farm land operations and the banking business have been good the last twelve months, with brighter prospects for 1912.

Forger Given Three to Twenty Years

J. R. Baldwin, a public accountant, has been sentenced by Judge J. D. Hinkle in the Spokane county superior court to serve from three to 20 years in the penitentiary. He was convicted on the charge of forging a check for $1,500 on the account of the Langert Wine Company, by which firm he had been employed to audit the books.

Banking Notes

Traders National Bank of Spokane has forwarded to Rollins & Co., of New York, an issue of city park bonds amounting to $875,000, crediting the municipality with that amount, to which is added $13,000 premium and accrued interest from January 1, 1912. The bonds were sent by express, insured for $875,000 while in transit.

State Bank of Kahlotus, Wash., has transferred its accounts and other business to the First National Bank of Washtucna, Wash., of which W. A. Pearce, cashier of the first named, is president, and closed its doors.

George M. Fripp, president of the Boundary Trust Company of Grand Forks, B. C., said while in Spokane that the district is prosperous and will add several important industries to its payrolls this year.

John P. Vollmer, president of the First National Bank of Lewiston, Idaho, and E. S. Burgan, president of the First National Bank of Pullman, Wash., met in the Old National Bank in Spokane a few days ago after 42 years. Their first meeting was at Waitsburg, Wash., in 1870, when both were residents of the Palouse country.

Seattle

The Port of Seattle Commission has voted to submit the Harbor Island terminal bond issues, aggregating $5,000,000, to the voters of Seattle on March 5th. Two propositions cover the Harbor Island terminal scheme. The first is an issue of $3,000,000 of bonds to cover the cost of acquiring the necessary land on Harbor Island by condemnation, estimated at $2,000,000, and $1,000,000 additional for construction of the first concrete piers. The second proposition is a resolution providing for the issuance of an additional $2,000,000 bond issue.

SEATTLE BANKERS INDICTED

Seattle, Wash.—Indictments have been returned and warrants issued for the arrest of Falcon Joslin, John Schram, W. H. Parsons, F. E. Barbour and E. L. Webster, formerly officials of the Washington-Alaska Bank of Washington, which on October 1, 1910, was merged with the Fairbanks Banking Company to form the Washington-Alaska Bank. The indictments were returned by the federal grand jury at Fairbanks, Alaska. The text of the indictments has not been made public. The Washington-Alaska Bank closed its doors January 4, 1911, owing $900,000 to depositors, of which half has been repaid to them. W. H. Parsons, speaking for his associates as well as for himself, terms the action of the Fairbanks grand jury outrageously unjust to all involved. He further said: "In the year 1909 the stockholders received what they regarded as a very satisfactory offer of purchase and it was accepted. Now, almost three years since we severed all connection with the bank, charges are laid that would imply we can in some way be held responsible for its failure."

Frederick Groos, pioneer banker of San Antonio, Texas, and founder of the banking house of F. Groos & Co., died recently. He was 84 years of age and had lived in San Antonio since 1845.

upon the bill. The proposed act is formulated after state bank examination laws now in force with numerous other commonwealths. The Kentucky Bankers Association has worked for two years upon the measure which now seems assured of safe passage. It is the intention to put all forms of banking, not national, under state supervision.

Henry S. Henschen Quoted

The failed private bank of W. A. Mason, known as "Wilson Avenue Bank," kept its Chicago account with the State Bank of Chicago, which now is a judgment creditor to the amount of $5,000. Henry S. Henschen, cash-in cities of over 10,000. A national or state institution is safe. The legislature should be called on to protect the small depositor."

Abbott Scores Lax State Laws

W. T. Abbott, vice-president of the Central Trust, criticised Illinois lax state laws in a statement issued, when the Central Trust was appointed receiver for the Mason "bank." He said:

"This case is a good illustration of the effect of the undesirable banking laws in Illinois. Regularly organized state banks have been making efforts for years to secure the passage of an act making it unlawful for a man doing business as an individual to use the word 'bank.' Such efforts have proved fruitless.

"Probably not 1 per cent of the depositors in these institutions realize they are not doing business with an organized institution, but only with an individual, and that, so far as any security is afforded by any state supervision, they might just as well entrust their money to the grocery store or milkman.

"The Wilson Avenue Bank was William A. Mason. It was not a bank subject to inspection of state officials. It is impossible to give any statement of the relative assets and liabilities, because they are confused with other private affairs of Mr. Mason.

"Under the jurisdiction of the bankruptcy court it will be the duty of the receiver to collect and assemble all Mr. Mason's assets of every kind and distribute the net proceeds among all his creditors."

Record-Herald Editorial

The Chicago Record-Herald invariably supports supervision, and will support an effort to give Illinois a better banking law. On Wednesday morning it printed an editorial on "Another 'Private Bank,'" as follows:

Whatever the result of the turmoil over the disappearance of William A. Mason, whose Wilson Avenue "Bank" was closed by his absence, may be, the appointment of a receiver on the complaint of the depositors shows that the lack of regulation by the state apparently has produced a shortage of nearly $30,000.

The facts so far revealed again emphasize the need of state regulation of all so-called private "banks." With regulation comes a degree of protection to the depositors; without it they have no protection except the honor and ability to the man to whom they intrust their money. Many private bankers are highly responsible, but they should be willing to submit to regulation for the sake of the credit of the banking business.

When a state bank can be so readily and solidly organized in any neighborhood that needs banking facilities, the wonder is that so many irresponsible "private bankers" flourish. They do flourish, sometimes by offers of higher interest than regulated banks charge, sometimes because of neighborhood conditions. It is to the interest of all sound banking, however, as well as of the public invited to make deposits, that every "bank" should become a bank in a responsible sense.

When the above snap shot was taken it was in hope that an honest-minded private banker had developed who wanted the public to know his real status and responsibility. It came as a shock the next day when the Chicago Tribune wrote up the "bank" proprietor, S. Shulein as a "loan shark." Thus while it may please and profit a private banker to pose as a real bank it also may benefit a loan shark to pose as a "private banker."

"Great fleas have little fleas upon their backs to bite 'em, And these in turn have lesser ones, and so on ad infinitum" ier of the State, is a very outspoken advocate of state supervision. In speaking of the Mason failure he said:

"I will say that there could be no better example of the pernicious influence of these private banks. Under the present law, any one can rent an office, hang out his shingle, and say he has a bank. The result is that people are literally robbed of their earnings.

"One of our customers told me to-day that a poor laborer had been saving his money for twenty years, and had stored up $4,000. Half of this he left with Mason to pay for his house, and at one blow the whole thing is wiped out.

"This is not an extraordinary case. Scarcely a month has passed without the announcement of such a failure and the loss of lifetime savings.

"It points out the need of restriction. No one should be allowed to run a private bank

Accounts of Iowa banks invited. Reserve agents for national banks

Des Moines, February 14.—Although the state convention is several weeks away, politics are beginning to buzz and the members of the I. B. A. are beginning to be importuned to vote for favorites. Charles Shade of the First National of Rock Rapids is in the field for president. S. L. Stickney of the First National of Moulton is out for treasurer. Thus far no opponents have appeared to Percy W. Hall for secretary, and it is regarded as unlikely that Mr. Hall will have opposition. The Des Moines bankers are going after the convention in 1913. They will be on the ground at Cedar Rapids and will ask that the bankers select this city for next year's meeting. Fort Dodge and Dubuque are applicants for the convention also. They made formal applications at the convention held last year at Mason City.

Assessment on Des Moines Banks

The combined assessment on the banks of Des Moines will show an increase of more than a half million dollars in 1912 over 1911. This is the estimate of the city assessor from the reports of the banks filed with him, as the Iowa law now provides. The combined assessments last year totaled $3,856,347, of which the national banks were assessed at $2,709,874 and the state and savings banks at $1,667,194.

Taxes to be Refunded

The county of Polk will be out some $60,000 in taxes as a result of an order issued by the supreme court of Iowa instructing the county auditor to refund taxes to the banks of Des Moines. The taxes were collected on government bonds in past years. Recent holdings of the supreme court that such bonds are not assessable are responsible for the refund. The order from the supreme court provides for the refund of taxes for the years 1903, 1904, 1905, 1906 and 1907.

New Bank Examiner for Southeastern Iowa

George E. Grier has bought into the Citizens Savings at Iowa City and Iowa has a new bank examiner as result. A. J. Whinery of Marshalltown has been named by the state auditor to succeed Mr. Grier as examiner in southeastern Iowa. Mr. Grier was cashier of the State at Deep River and member of the legislature before he became bank examiner. He will remove to Iowa City early in March to become actively identified with the institution into which he has bought.

E. J. Curtin

E. J. Curtin, president of the Iowa Bankers Association, is preparing to make a showing on the question of bank taxation when the temporary state tax commission takes up that phase of the situation. President Curtin has named J. L. Edwards of Burlington, C. D. Ellis of Charles City and H. M. Carpenter of Monticello on the committee to represent the association before the tax board. In the meantime Governor Carroll has called a state-wide tax conference which will be held in Des Moines, March 20th and 21st. To this he has asked that each county auditor name three delegates, that each board of supervisors be represented and that assessors, boards of review and members of the general assembly attend. At that time action will be taken looking toward proper revision to be recommended by the tax board for the consideration of the next legislature.

Public Loan Bureau

Agitation against the loan sharks in Des Moines has finally resulted in the formation of a public loan bureau, or at least the probability that such an organization will be formed. The Greater Des Moines Committee and the Commercial Club have named committees to take steps toward such an organization. The bankers have become vitally interested in the question and pending the formation of the proposed public loan bureau they are taking care of small loans and furnishing money to those who are in the clutches of usurious agencies and did not know how to get out until the newspapers pointed it out to them.

Century Savings to Have New Building

Another new bank building is to be erected in Des Moines within the near future. The Century Savings will be the builder and the structure will be ten or twelve stories in height. President Lee Stevens and others interested in the bank have secured a valuable tract at Fifth and Locust streets diagonally across the street from the new Central State and adjoining the new Mechanics Savings. The Century will erect a U-shaped building, and the Mechanics will be in the center, while the Century will lease the air space above so that the offices in its structure will be lighted from all directions. The Century closes its lease on its present quarters within a few months. The erection of the new bank on Fifth Street, in view of the proximity of the Commercial Savings to the corner at Fifth and Locust, makes this a busy bank center of the city.

Northwest Davenport Bank Organized

The new Northwest Davenport Bank has been duly launched and the articles have been approved by the state banking department. Three hundred residents of that section of the city gathered at the meeting at which the bank was organized. Everyone of the 300 became stockholders. The institution will be known as the Northwest Davenport Savings and the capital stock will be $50,000. At the organization meeting, Peter Peters presided as chairman and Henry Jebens acted as secretary. Directors as chosen were Dr. J. S. Weber, Peter Peters, Henry Molst, Louis Puck, Ed. J. Mittelbuscher, Jacob J. Jepsen, Carl Behrens, Henry Jebens and Peter Kloppenburg. This meeting was unusual, and it is not often that a bank is organized at a public massmeeting.

Meeting of Group 10

The meeting of Group 10 at Ottumwa February 12th was the first of the season. Many Waunakee, Wis.—The Farmers State Bank is the title of the new bank organizing with a capital of $15,000. J. Shulk and Erick Simonson are interested.

Des Moines bankers attended the sessions. They report a most successful meeting. Full details will be given in a later letter.

Corn Contest

The State of Schaller has pulled off a corn contest all its own just to show that it is in full sympathy with the movement to add to the agricultural wealth of Iowa. There were forty-six entries in the show and Prof. Berger of Ames College, acted as judge. The prizes were awarded to the exhibitors of the best corn display and then Prof. Berger gave a talk on good corn and how to secure it. This will be a live topic in Iowa this year, as the seed corn from last year is not good and the banks will join in a general movement for the testing of the kernels before they are planted this year.

Bank in New Home

The State of Jewell is now located in its handsome new home. The structure is of elegant white enameled brick front with arched windows, light and roomy vestibule, terraza floors and marble finishing. The furniture is elaborate and thoroughly suited to the needs of a modern institution while a room in the rear, set aside for the convenience of guests of the institution, is proving most popular.

Peoples Savings at Cedar Rapids Has Rapid Growth

Despite the fact that bank bankers are taking exceptions to the style of architecture of the new Peoples Savings at Cedar Rapids, Cashier J. B. Burianek, Jr., is pointing out that the structure is adding to the business of the institution. For instance, the resources have now passed the million dollar mark. February 3, 1911, the resources were $895,371.81; February 3, 1912, they were $1,011,045.97. How is that for growth? The deposits are now $934,643.55, and Mr. Burianek points with pride to the fact that they are all local. The bank officials claim that while the bank looks peculiar at first, the banker who stops to study it will see that it is eminently practical and excellently designed for business purposes.

Banking Notes

W. G. Pooley, a banker at Jefferson, has been involved in a rather sensational alienation suit in the courts of Green county. Recently his wife, whom he married in Des Moines in 1910, returned to her parents, Mr. and Mrs. O. J. Dutton of Grand Junction. Pooley thereupon brought suit against them for alienation, asking damages of $50,000. The jury awarded him $11,000. The case will be appealed.

The Dolliver Savings at Dolliver went up in smoke last week, and as a result the owners of the structure are out $6,000. It is probable that the building will be rebuilt. The fire started in living-rooms above the bank.

G. L. Tremain, president of the Peoples State at Humboldt, is seeking to dispose of $60,000 in bonds for the Northern Iowa Power Company. This corporation owns the water power at Humboldt.

Paul G. Clark has been chosen vice-president of the Red Oak National to succeed Henry Blinns, retired. F. E. Crendell succeeds Clark as cashier.

Henry W. Bruhn, cashier of the Eldridge Savings at Eldridge since it was organized in 1899, has resigned to accept, on April 1st, a position with the Western Implement and Motor Company at Davenport, Ia.

Walter Posey while "sitting in" a poker game with two friends at Mechanicsville discovered that he was out of funds, whereupon he issued checks for $40 and handed them to his partners. The checks were drawn upon the Cedar Rapids Savings. When the two poker players showed up with the checks, Posey was found to have just $2 on deposit. The young man was arrested but charges were dismissed upon reaching a private settlement.

It is announced that the First National of Garner and J. J. Cosgrove of Titonka will organize a new bank at Woden and build a $4,000 building for it in the near future.

The Iowa State Savings at Burlington is getting ready to tear down its present three-story structure and prepare for the erection of a handsome eight-story, fireproof building in its stead.

John Williams and James Burns, who were found guilty of the robbery of the Derby Bank, were sentenced to fifteen years apiece in the Ft. Madison penitentiary. They will appeal.

The application for the organization of the new First National at Corydon has been approved by the comptroller of the currency. The capital stock is $75,000. The incorporators are C. W. Steele, L. Kimple, C. L. Clark, F. R. Fry and F. B. Fry.

Frank C. Carson has been chosen cashier of the Johnson County Savings at Iowa City. He is the son of T. C. Carson, for many years president of the institution.

Postal savings banks will be established March 5th as follows: Blanchard, Corwith, Deep River, Elkader, Fairbanks, Farmington, Fredericksburg, George, Gilmore, Kellerton, Lawler, Leon, Milo, Murray, Nora Springs, Panora, Redfield, Ruthven, Sidney, Thompson.

The Iowa State Bank and Trust Company at West Liberty is erecting a temporary building in the street while its new stone structure is in process of construction. This is a novel idea but was sanctioned by the town council.

Among out of the city bankers who were in Des Moines recently were President W. D. McErin, State Savings of Rolfe; Cashier R. A. Clerk, Commercial Exchange, Elkhart; President M. H. Head, First National, Jefferson; Vice-President D. H. Thomas, State National, Iowa Falls; Vice-President J. N. Olmstead, State of Woolstock; Cashier T. D. Ball, Iowa State Savings, Creston; President J. V. Casady, Norwalk Farmers; President J. A. Brown, State Savings, Chariton.

Jesse A. Wells, president of the German Savings, Des Moines has returned from a business trip to Boston.

Simon Casady, president of the Central State, Des Moines has gone to New Orleans and thence to Panama for a six weeks' visit on the isthmus.

Sioux City

By JOHN J. BIDDISON.

The Farmers Trust and Savings Bank and the National Bank of Commerce began operations on Wednesday, February 14th, a charter having been received a few days prior to this time. The new national started with a capital stock of $100,000, it being the intention to increase the capital as the business grows. The business will be conducted in the old banking room in the Farmers Loan and Trust building and having the same close association with the trust company as formerly but confining its business to the usual run of a national bank. This required the elimination of realty loans and the like. The officers of the bank are: G. R. Whitmer, president; T. F. Harrington, vice-president; J. B. Alexander, cashier; C. B. Toy, assistant cashier; J. W. Van Dyke, assistant cashier.

Kearney to Organize Bank

After two weeks' association with the Davidson Brothers Company department store as publicity promoter, E. T. Kearney, for 25 years a prominent banker of Jackson, Neb., has reverted to his original intention, and announced the pending organization of a new private bank, to be known as the "Mid-West," which will be opened for business about March 1st, at 408 Pearl Street. Mr. Kearney in explanation stated that his relations with the store were pleasant but that he had been used to being his own sole boss for too long a time to take kindly to any sort of instructions from others. He expects ultimately to convert his new bank into a national.

South Dakota Convention

The members of the executive committee of the South Dakota Bankers Association, including President N. M. Brown, of Sturgis, and Secretary J. E. Platt, of Clark, met last week in Huron, S. D., and fixed June 26th and 27th as the date for the annual convention, which will be held in Belle Fourche. Members of the committee compared notes and agreed that crop conditions are promising and that, while there will be a considerable demand for money in the spring and summer, especially for seeding expenses, yet conditions are wholesome. A good many homesteaders will be obliged to ask for extensions of time on paper, however.

Banking Notes of Interest

Banks in the White Owl country of South Dakota, which was especially hard hit by last season's drouth, are now resuming the loaning of money on live stock, after a year in which the ban has been absolute. Settlers were in many cases in sore straights because of inability to raise money in the customary way.

Efforts are being made to arrange for the reopening of the Meade County Bank to resume, after having closed a month ago. It is proposed to permit depositors to withdraw funds in limited amounts at intervals of three months and to renew old time certificates for stated periods. Nearly all the depositors have signed such an agreement, and it is said when a sufficient number have agreed to the plan capital from Sioux Falls will tide the bank over.

The Farmers and Merchants Bank, of Armour, S. D., has increased its capital stock to $15,000 from $10,000, most of the increase coming out of earnings of the last two years.

The Dolliver State Bank, of Dolliver, Ia., lost its building by fire last week. The loss was $6,000, with insurance of $3,000. It is planned to rebuild.

R. S. Pike, receiver in the bankruptcy case of F. S. Barnes, of Marcus, has fixed February 23d as the date for selling 130 shares of stock owned by the banker. They must bring not less than $115 a share, the amount of the appraisal.

Among the Visiting Bankers

Herman Fortin, cashier of the Farmers Bank, Salix, Iowa, was in Sioux City Wednesday on business.

Walter R. Hubbard, president of the Farmers State Bank, Lane, S. D., was in Sioux City Wednesday.

D. M. Inman, president of the First National Bank, Vermillion, S. D., was transacting business in Sioux City Wednesday.

C. L. Millett, president of the Stock Growers Bank, Fort Pierre, S. D., was in Sioux City on business Thursday.

Judge A. D. Bailie, vice-president of the Citizens National Bank, Storm Lake, Iowa, was in Sioux City Friday.

L. T. Swezey, president of the Vermillion (S. D.) National Bank, and an old time resident of that section, died last week and was buried beside his wife, who had just passed away in the South and had been brought home for burial.

W. F. Reickhoff, vice-president of the Northwestern State Bank, Orange City, Iowa, and president of W. F. Reickhoff & Co., investment bankers, was in Sioux City Saturday on business. Mr. Reickhoff owns one of the buildings which was damaged by the big fire when the Mondamin hotel burned, and was here adjusting the insurance.

WILDE ACQUITTED

Portland, Ore.—Judge J. P. Kavanaugh in the state circuit court February 3d instructed the jury in the trial of Louis J. Wilde of San Diego, charged with embezzlement from the Oregon Trust and Savings Bank, defunct, of this city, to return a verdict of not guilty. The instruction of the court was given following the delivery of a decision in which the court upheld the contentions of the defense that the state had failed to prove the allegations charged in the indictment, and that the indictment itself was insufficient in that it was not returned within the time limitations provided by the statutes. The indictments charged Wilde with the embezzlement of $90,000 of the bank's funds in connection with the sale of Omaha Telephone bonds, which were sold to the bank for $500,000. The commission on the sale was alleged to have been $100,000, of which Wilde and W. Cooper Morris, cashier of the bank, are alleged to have received and divided $90,000.

BANK EXAMINATION ENDED

Milwaukee, Wis.—After working steadily for nearly two years, government experts employed by the attorney-general's department have finally concluded the examination of the books of the defunct Mineral Point National Bank, according to word received by LaCrosse government officials.

Philip Allen, vice-president of the bank, is now serving ten years at Leavenworth prison for wrecking the institution. Following his conviction Allen appeared before the federal grand jury in LaCrosse, in November, 1909, and gave evidence which helped to indict Calvert Spenseley, president of the bank and a leading lawyer of Mineral Point, on a charge of conspiring to make false statements to the bank examiners.

Before Mr. Spenseley could be tried on this charge it was found necessary to summon special examiners from Washington to go over all the bank's records from the time that Allen's defalcations started until the bank was closed and the embezzling vice-president arrested. The auditors found the bank's books and records so badly muddled that the examination occupied nearly two years.

With the auditing completed, it is anticipated that Spenseley will be tried at the next term of United States court in Madison, in the event that the evidence warrants his prosecution. The attorney-general's department in Washington will determine this question.

OKLAHOMA BANK BOUGHT

The Bank of Commerce of Sulphur, Okla., has been purchased from T. J. Hartman and Noble Mitchell by R. M. Estes and C. A. Bryan, both formerly connected with the Central Reserve Bank of Oklahoma City. Mr. Estes is president and Mr. Bryan is cashier. They will change the bank from a state to national institution and increase the capital stock from $25,000 to $50,000. It is reported that the old officers will take charge of a bank at Tulsa.

Los Angeles

The merger of the Union National, Union Savings and the San Gabriel Valley banks, of Pasadena, which was decided upon November 1st, last, was completed February 1st, and the three institutions are now conducted under the terms of the new arrangement. The savings business of the San Gabriel Valley Bank has been taken over by the Union Savings Bank, which, on the other hand, will maintain a commercial department in the San Gabriel Valley Bank building. However, practically all of the commercial business has been absorbed by the Union National Bank. The merger necessitated some changes in the officership of the banks. The officers of the Union National Bank now are: Frank C. Bolt, chairman of the board of directors; H. I. Stuart, president; C. W. Smith and E. H. Groenendyke, vice-presidents; H. L. Mouat, cashier, and William H. Magee, assistant cashier. Others on the board of directors are: H. H. Robinson, T. P. Phillips, Thomas D. Wayne and F. A. Ford. Mr. Bolt is also chairman of the board of directors of the Union Savings Bank. Mr. Stuart is president; Sherman Washburn, E. H. Groenendyke and C. J. Hall, vice-presidents, and H. L. Mouat, cashier. The directors of this bank are: Stuart Bolt, C. J. Hall, E. H. Groenendyke, George W. Stimson, S. Washburn, E. R. Braley, E. S. Goshney, J. E. Jardine, C. W. Gates and H. M. Robinson.

January bank clearings were the largest monthly exchanges ever recorded in the history of the city, according to James B. Gist, manager of the Los Angeles Clearing House Association, and cashier of the Central National Bank. If the present enormous increase in business continues, it is possible that a monthly record of $100,000,000 will be established before the year closes.

Bankers say that there has been no extraordinary business to swell the clearings this month, but simply a gradual and consistent growth. Last year the daily clearings averaged more than $3,100,000 and thus far this year the daily average has been almost $3,500,000. Total bank clearings for January, 1912, were approximately $93,000,000.

Los Angeles county is to have another bank, to be located on Third and Thomas streets, in Pomona. It will be known as the Los Angeles County Bank.

FINANCIAL OUTLOOK

The Fourth National of New York, in its monthly letter on business and financial outlook, says:

"Since the year has opened there has been a steady outflow of capital from the United States, caused by the rapid return flow of dividend money to New York and the limited demand from borrowers on speculative collateral, or from those having great business undertakings to finance. This plethora of money became so pronounced that the New York bank surplus (excluding the operations of the trust companies) by the middle of January reached the largest total reported for that date since 1897.

"As a result of these conditions, and because of the much more attractive rates offered for money abroad, the total outstanding advance made to foreign markets by American lending institutions probably exceeds to-day $150,000,000. In other words, the volume of these credits created in favor of our banks on the other side is already at the high level of last year, and if the movement continues it is fair to assume that the figures in the near future will break all records. Such a situation seems to be inevitable, unless the expulsion of capital should be immediately checked.

"In this way the American money market has become much of the cheapest in the world, and the situation here is protected by the fact that we will be in a position to draw gold against this huge foreign credit fund should unexpected need develop on this side. This is a really extraordinary situation and shows that for at least a considerable portion of the present year the foreign money market will be virtually in the hands of American bankers. This is only another instance of the fact that money invariably seeks the dearest market, or that which bids the highest rate.

"Although business is quiet, it is by no means bad. Advices from various sections show relatively satisfactory returns and a fairly confident tone. The talk of a "money trust" investigation, tariff revision and untried legislation has been a deterrent to business in some quarters, but the disposition has been to take things quietly until after the Presidential election, or until the issues of the next campaign have been pretty well developed. This is a good sign, since it prevents undue speculation and insures for the country continued adherence to a conservative policy. So far there is nothing in the situation to suggest that the public mind will be seriously unsettled by political controversies.

"There is still important financing to be done by the railroads and the industrial corporations. This is the season for bond offerings and some important announcements may be expected in the near future. The bond market is considerably broader than it was, and there is an unquestioned investment demand from private investors and from institutions. Because of the peculiar conditions existing abroad, and the heavy financing which the great foreign markets have to provide for, it may be doubted whether Europe will be in position to make large purchases of our securities for several months to come. The banks there would no doubt bid for short-term notes, but the chances are that the market here would absorb any reasonable offerings with ease.

GROUP 1, PENNSYLVANIA

Philadelphia, February 12.—Members of Group 1, Pennsylvania Bankers Association, have departed from their usual custom by inviting prominent democrats to deliver addresses at the annual banquet, which this year will be held next Thursday night at the Bellevue-Stratford. The speakers will be: Ollie M. James, of Kentucky, who will respond to the toast, "The South and Socialism"; Martin W. Littleton, of New York, "Government of Industry," and Rt. Rev. Charles E. Woodcock, D. D., of Kentucky.

The toastmaster will be J. R. McAllister, president Franklin National Bank and executive head of Group 1, Pennsylvania Bankers Association, which group comprises bankers of Philadelphia. The banquet will be in charge of the following executive committee: J. R. McAllister, chairman; Arthur V. Morton, secretary; Joseph Wayne, Jr., L. L. Rue, William T. Elliott, Charles J. Rhoades, John H. Mason, B. M. Faires, William A. Law, Charles S. Calwell, Howard W. Lewis and E. Walter Clark. A committee of fifteen well-known bankers has been selected as an honorary reception committee.

TEXAS BANK TAKEN IN CHARGE

Austin, Texas, February 13.—Commissioner of Insurance and Banking Gill to-night telephoned Chief Bank Clerk Chambers that he had taken over the Paige State Bank of Paige, Bastrop county, and the affairs of the bank will be liquidated. This bank has a capital of $10,000 and the deposits amounted to $30,000, and loans $46,000. E. F. Brown, who became involved in bankruptcy proceedings at Houston a few days ago, is the president of this bank.

LEADS AMERICA IN BANK CLEARING GROWTH

The bank clearings for the city of Edmonton, Canada, for the month of January, 1912, show an increase over those of the same month of last year of 124.8 per cent. This fact has been noted by several of the leading eastern papers, and they point out that Edmonton leads all the cities of America by this increase. In the list issued, Calgary comes second in increases with 48 per cent; Regina third with 45.8 per cent, while Kansas City has a decrease of 11 per cent, which is the poorest showing of any city given in the list.

Another thing which is giving rise to much inquiry is the single tax, a modified system of which is now in operation in the city. The Toronto Financial Post has an article, too, which draws attention to this as one of the advances made by Edmonton, and points out at the same time the growth of the city as shown by the increase in city property values. The same article shows that the assessment for this year will amount to over $70,000,000.

GET ONLY $67 IN PENNIES

Princeton, Ind., February 14.—Burglars blew the vault doors of the Patoka National Bank, at Patoka, early to-day, but were evidently frightened away before they had opportunity to get into the safe. Three bags of pennies, amounting to $67, found outside the safe, were taken.

The burglars then stole a horse and buggy belonging to Dr. S. I. Arthur, drove to near this city, turned the horse loose and escaped. The robbery was not discovered until the bank was opened at 8 o'clock this morning. The burglars are believed to have been experts.

ARIZONA BANKS MERGE

Phoenix.—The Farmers and Merchants Bank of Phoenix went into voluntary liquidation January 31st, turning its accounts and securities over to the Valley Bank of this city. Not a cent will be lost by depositors, and the stockholders expect to receive a material dividend. The bank was organized about a year ago. At no time has the local bank had any considerable deposits. The Valley Bank, last weeks, also absorbed the Union Bank, an institution with over half a million deposits, and now is the largest financial institution of Arizona, with about $2,700,000 deposits.

CLOSED BANK WILL REOPEN

Portland, Ore.—Plans for the reorganization and reopening of the American Bank and Trust Company's bank which was closed December 18th, are under way, and it is hoped to have the new institution ready for business early next month. Outside capital is behind the movement. The capital of the new bank will be $250,000, or $100,000 more than that of the closed institution. The reorganization plan is developed to the extent that a large number of the heaviest depositors have approved it. The plan has been worked out by George L. MacGibbon, cashier of the closed bank, who has opened temporary offices at 928 Chamber of Commerce building.

A. S. French, cashier of the Farmers National at Fullerton, N. D., has resigned.

EUROPEAN-AMERICAN BANK

Geo. C. Van Tuyl, Jr., superintendent of the New York state banking department, has announced that another dividend of 15 per cent will be paid to creditors of the European-American Bank, New York City, on February 17th.

The bank was taken over by the state banking department on August 6, 1910, and depositors have already received 60 per cent from the liquidation bureau of the department. Amount of approved claims filed against the bank's assets aggregated $177,549. The present 15 per cent dividend means a disbursement of $29,981 to depositors.

"BLUE SKY" LAW IN MASSACHUSETTS

The committee on banks and banking will shortly consider a radical bill "to regulate the sale of investment securities." This bill, if enacted, would extend the authority of the bank commissioner to regulation of the business conduct and the security issues of general business corporations, associations and individuals, except a certain list of companies which the bank commissioner may designate as exempted from the provisions of the act and except banks, real estate mortgage companies, building and loan associations.

By this bill it is provided that, before any individuals, co-partnerships, associations or corporations, domestic or foreign, save the exempted ones, may engage in business or attempt to sell any stock, bonds or other securities of any kind, they must file with the bank commissioner a detailed statement showing the plan upon which they propose to do business, copies of all contracts, bonds or other instruments which they propose to make with, or sell to, investors, and itemized accounts of financial condition and the legal authority under which they exist. The bank commissioner may then issue to the applicants licenses to proceed or he may forbid their doing so, according to whether or not the applicants are solvent, and provide "a fair, just and equitable plan for transaction of business and in his judgment promise a fair return on the stocks, bonds and other securities offered or to be offered for sale."

The law follows the general lines of the "blue sky" law successfully enforced in Kansas.

Books on Banking, Finance and Economics

Credit. By J. LAWRENCE LAUGHLIN, of the Department of Political Economy, University of Chicago. Postpaid, 53c.

The nature of credit and its effect on prices have long been a subject of disagreement among economists. Its basis is commonly assumed to be money or bank reserves.

Essentials of Business Law. By FRANCIS M. BURDICK, LL. D., Professor of Law in Columbia University. 12mo. Postpaid, $1.50.

This book shows how the rules of law governing the commonest business transactions have been developed, and it tells what they are to-day. Technical law terms have been discarded as far as possible, and when they are used they are so explained and illustrated as to be easily understood. The principles of law are simplified and expressed in clear, lucid everyday speech.

Foreign Exchange. Tables converting foreign money into United States money, and United States money into foreign money at all commercial rates of exchange used in financial transactions between the United States and foreign countries. All about foreign exchange, including various forms of foreign commercial paper and terms, abbreviations, etc. For banks, bankers, steamship agents, importers, exporters and manufacturers. Cloth, $5.00.

Government Regulation of Railway Rates. By HUGO R. MEYER. A Professor of Political Economy in the University of Chicago. Postpaid, $1.60 net.

Investment Bonds. By F. LOWNHAUPT. Postpaid, $1.90. Prospective investors who wish to make advantageous use of their money will do well to take notice of this volume. The author does not theorize, but tells only plain facts of the relation of the bond to the issuing corporation, and of the general investment aspect of the instrument.

Money and Credit. By WILBUR ALDRICH. Postpaid, $1.37. This volume contains much valuable information and much sound discussion on money and credit.

The Banking and Currency Problems in the United States. By VICTOR MORAWETZ. The author takes up the problem of the national monetary commission, appointed by congress, and discusses the means of providing a permanent safe-guard against money stringencies and panics. Postpaid, $1.10.

The Principles of Money and Banking. By CHARLES A. CONANT. It is a new and complete exposition of its subject. Two volumes. Postpaid, $4.25.

The Pitfalls of Speculation. By THOMAS GIBSON. Postpaid, $1.20.

A book dealing exclusively with marginal speculation, and analyzing in a clear and simple manner the causes of failure in speculation, with a suggestion as to the remedies.

The Use of Loan Credit in Modern Business. By THORSTEIN B. VEBLEN. Postpaid, 25c.

The Investors' Catechism. By M. M. REYNOLDS. Cloth, by mail, $1.10.

"Investors' Catechism." Contains all that it is essential for the beginner to know, and opens the way for a thorough study of the whole subject of investment. The author has for the sake of clearness and simplicity adopted a catechetical style which is somewhat novel in this sort of literature.

The above books are the best of their kind, and will be promptly forwarded upon receipt of price.

OHIO BANK INVESTIGATION

Ottawa, Ohio, February 12.—Investigation into affairs of the First National Bank of Kalida, Ohio, made since Cashier J. W. Miller committed suicide, on January 29th, discloses the fact that there is a shortage of $25,000, the same amount for which the bank is capitalized. The shortage was concealed by forged notes on farmers in the vicinity of Kalida. The depositors of the bank will be paid in full.

Robbers entered the building of the Bank of Meno, Okla., a small town seventeen miles west of Enid, during the night of February 12th. They had cut the telephone wires and provided horses for escape. The explosion of the charge placed in the safe aroused the people of the town and they scared the thieves away before any money was taken from the bank.

CLOSE TEXAS BANK

Austin, Texas, February 12.—The state banking department has closed the Paige State Bank of Paige. The institution is a guaranty fund bank with deposits amounting to about $30,000. Edward F. Brown of Houston, who also operates private banks elsewhere, is president. Mr. Brown, a few days ago, filed a petition in bankruptcy, but alleged his assets are sufficient to meet his liabilities.

J. W. Hayes, who has been cashier of the bank at Sadler, Texas, for the last five years, has resigned that position, which is now occupied by C. D. Perry, recently of Saline, Tex.

PEOPLES TRUST, Clinton, Iowa, has gained between Februaries 1911 and 1912 in deposits $157,623.48. Total now runs well over three and one-half millions. Cash items nearly one million. Capital is $300,000, and surplus (all earned) the same. Now that the bank is doing so well we'd like to see President Joe get after that Iowa association presidency. He has earned it times over.

AMONG Chicago's visitors over the holiday on Monday were Nelson H. Greene of Moline, Charles B. Mills of Clinton, Ia., and E. M. Duroe of Sioux Rapids.

UNION TRUST AND SAVINGS at Spokane, which is an allied institution of the Old National, has taken on quite a spurt in its growth. Trust accounts now amount to $5,123,846.85. This is the bank of which W. J. Kommers, who formerly was "building commissioner" for the Old National, is cashier. He has made a pretty good record in both institutions.

CHARLES G. DAWES, down at Palm Beach, took a fly across the waters of Lake Worth. He did not go in a gas machine, mind you, but in a regular mechanical flyer, which shows that Mr. Dawes believes that for some things, at least, gas has a rival.

CHICAGO newspapers are having a great deal of sport with the "black art" banker, who sold tricks and magic to his depositors as a quicker way of getting title to their money than having them deposit it. He called his institution a "savings bank," and on his letter-heads he referred to himself as "Grand Vizier of the Prince of Darkness."

MR. PUPAUSKY'S "bank" episode would have attracted a great deal more attention had it not occurred within forty-eight hours after the disappearance of "Banker" Mason from the "Wilson Avenue Bank."

YOUR uncle Dinwiddie continues to do good things in spreading the savings bank gospel in and around Cedar Rapids. His latest is an offer to furnish free blank deeds, mortgages, releases, contracts, leases, notes, and other legal documents, to customers or prospective customers of the bank. Report has it that this brought a considerable number of callers and a large amount of new business.

MR. DINWIDDIE also offers to perform a great many services for his patrons without charge, such as figuring up interest, settling accounts, drawing up papers and advising with administrators, executors and trustees. In fact, he has a long list of things in his free service department.

AMERICAN NEWS COMPANY has printed at twenty-five cents a copy a booklet protesting against what is called "Our Fifty Year Experiment in Mixing Politics with Finance."

IT is a very clever booklet on the subject of separate reserve associations as a substitute for the proposals of the National Monetary Commission. The author is J. Howard Cowperthwait, the author of "Money, Silver and Finance," and other works of a similar nature.

"BUSINESS EXPERIENCE" is a little leaflet issued weekly by the Everett Audit Company of 79 West Monroe Street, this city. It purports to be "priceless," and it is. It usually contains about half a dozen short articles touching upon the science of accounting, keeping cash records, reporting for federal taxes, and kindred subjects. The current issue has an article on "Borrowing More Money," and telling of circumstances where country bankers bought valuable commercial paper after city banks had declined. There is no charge for the paper. The last issue contains commendatory letters signed by George M. Reynolds and Chauncey J. Blair.

"HARPER'S WEEKLY" is having considerable fun over its prediction that just as soon as Col. Roosevelt learned women had votes, he would declare himself in favor of women suffrage. The joke is that the Colonel promptly did it.

NORTH DAKOTA has a "Better Farming Association," with headquarters at Fargo. The association and its work are being strongly supported by the bankers of the Northwest.

AS an offset of the Chapman-Harris propaganda of teaching farmers how to farm, a certain farmers' organization has started out to show bankers how to bank. In short, they are distributing literature descriptive of what they think they are entitled to, under the head of "Agricultural Banking."

CITY BANK AND TRUST COMPANY at Mobile, publishes a monthly for free distribution, called "The Progressive Banker." The current issue is called the "Depositor's Number," and is a very worthy publication.

D. ARTHUR BOWMAN & CO. of St. Louis have issued a booklet entitled "The Trend of Investment," which is devoted chiefly to railroad bonds and land-development subjects.

IRVING SHUMAN, cashier First National Bank, Sullivan, Illinois, patriotically assisted at the Iroquois Club's reception to Governor Woodrow Wilson, held at the La Salle Hotel on Lincoln's birthday.

H. R. AISTHORPE, cashier First Bank and Trust Company, Cairo, called on Chicago banking acquaintances Saturday. Mr. Aisthorpe says they have had their share of cold weather in their section of Illinois during the past two months.

MR. AND MRS. CARL WEIL of Lincoln, Neb., visited the financial district on Saturday. Mr. Weil is assistant cashier of the National Bank of Commerce at Lincoln, and reports business as being in satisfactory condition in their section of the country.

MILWAUKEE bankers will kindly note the fact that we have engaged a new correspondent from that point. Chalmer B. Traver, at present with the "Milwaukee Sentinel," has taken the place of Mortimer I. Stevens, whose other engagements have become so pressing that he was obliged to give up the work. Mr. Stevens occupies a strong position with the financial men of Milwaukee and Wisconsin, and will continue to take a warm interest in the affairs of THE CHICAGO BANKER. Mr. Traver has been employed on the different newspapers of Milwaukee, and has a large acquaintance among the bankers of that city. It will be his endeavor to give us a high-class letter from that point, including personal items about banks and bankers, which have been made such a feature in this publication.

GEORGE M. REYNOLDS has telegraphed his membership in the new Taft Club, of which D. R. Forgan is chairman. Mr. Reynolds has been an ardent Taft supporter, and believes the governmental policies are safe in his hands. This move on the part of Mr. Reynolds will add greatly to the strength and security of the president in his campaign for renomination. Bankers, as a rule, believe there is too much puff and powder about the third term matter to merit serious attention, and most of them prefer a substantial, quiet and effective executive in preference to a noisy and meddlesome one.

DOCTORS of Chicago soon will meet in a city convention to try to figure a title for a new disease. It will be something like "private bankeritis," such as now seems to afflict "Banker" Mason, and which became almost an epidemic in South Chicago on Thursday.

"BANKER" MEDOSII at 9458 Ewing Street, took to his bed on Wednesday because of "a gathering of depositors in front of his place of business, who threatened violence." It is astonishing what a sensitive condition of health develops in depositors in these small "banks" beginning earnestly for their money.

MR. MASON is confined to his bed at the house of relatives, and probably is suffering from this new disease. John C. Cunningham, who is investigating the bank's affairs for the Central Trust Company as receiver, is quite anxious to have the assistance of the sick man. Mr. Cunningham is quoted as saying: "If the bank were a state or national institution, there would be plenty of ground for a criminal prosecution." He further said: "But it is a private bank, which means that what action will be taken depends upon the depositors and the creditors entirely."

THIS merely piles up additional reasons why there should be state supervision, so that when a banker misappropriates the funds of his depositors, he not only can be but will be punished immediately. Furthermore, under state supervision depositors have a claim against the assets of the bank, whereas in the case of a private bank, they have a claim against only his estate, along with those to whom he may owe money in real estate deals and other matters of investment or speculation.

RUMOR has it that Mr. Mason has been active in the grain and stock markets recently, and that this adds greatly to the confusion in settling his estate.

PLEASE recall the explanations which have been volunteered in the "banker's" behalf. First, his telegram explaining his absence was not delivered; second, he went to the rescue of the widow of a deceased friend; third, he is confined to his bed by an illness, which the doctors probably will call "private bankeritis."

NOT any one of these excuses is in the least legitimate. The facts chiefly are that Mr. Mason is not a banker; had no capital and no experience, and never should have been permitted to open anything resembling, and certainly nothing called, a bank, whereby he might deceive and delude the public.

CASHIER.

NATIONAL CONVENTION AMERICAN INSTITUTE OF BANKING

For the national convention of the American Institute of Banking which will be held this year at Salt Lake City on August 21st, 22d and 23d George A. Jackson of the Continental and Commercial National of this city will be chairman of the committee on transportation. The following are members of his committee: H. E. Hebrank, of the Union National, Pittsburgh; A. R. Stinger, of the First National, Portland, Oregon; D. C. Borden, of the Holston National, Knoxville, Tenn.; R. W. Lindeke, of the National German-American of St. Paul, and I. L. Bourgeois, of the Chelsea Exchange Bank, New York. Mr. Jackson has been reappointed chairman of this committee for the sixth time. A good time is promised to all delegates who attend. Numerous side-trips, such as visits to Yellowstone Park, or Cripple Creek, etc., will be arranged.

A Weekly Paper Devoted to the Banking and Financial Interests of the Middle West

FEBRUARY 24, 1912

Entered as Second-Class Matter January 15, 1903, at the Post Office at Chicago Illinois, under Act of March 3, 1879

10 CENTS A COPY

At Washington

Chairman Joseph Chapman has called a meeting of the A. B. A. committee on agriculture at the Williard Hotel, Washington, for 10 A. M., Wednesday the 28th inst. The committee has been invited to appear before the congressional committee on agriculture on the 29th. The hearing will be on the McKinley farm demonstration bill, and others of like nature. Not less than ten will leave Chicago on Tuesday the 27th. Secretary Edens has made reservations on the Pennsylvania.

WEIL ROTH GET PARK BONDS

The firmness of the municipal bond market is shown in the announcement that $90,000 4 per cent South Park Commission of Chicago bonds were awarded to Weil, Roth & Co., at par, less $129 for expenses. This makes the net price 99.856 per cent. The proceeds of the bonds are to be used for street paving along park property.

MONEY SITUATION BRINGS NEW ISSUES

Showing that the corporations are taking advantage of the plentiful supply of loanable funds to bring out many delayed issues and place themselves in position to carry on new work, the total authorized capital issues within the last ten days approximated $215,000,000, while new securities issued or about to be placed on the market aggregated about $80,000,000. In January the authorizations footed up $516,892,675, while the output of capital issues broke all preceding records for the opening month of any year, amounting to $340,892,896. Under the circumstances, February promises to be another big month in this respect.

SULLIVAN GROUP MEETING POSTPONED

The meeting of Group 7, Illinois, called at Sullivan for Thursday, was postponed by President Shuman, for the reason that trains were running only at intervals and his chief orators were "snowed in" at Chicago. A later date will be announced.

THE DAY OF THE BIG STORM

Chicago visitors to the financial district Wednesday included F. F. McElhinney, president Black Hawk National, Waterloo; Wilson H. Doe, cashier Home National, Elgin; Feo. W. Boyden, vice-president Farmers State, Sheffield, Illinois; Walter A. Rosenfeld, vice-president Rock Island National, Rock Island, and W. H. Holzinger, president Bank of Annawan and cashier of the Geneseo Savings, Geneseo, Illinois.

GROUP 8, ILLINOIS, JUNE 5TH

Group 8, Illinois Bankers, will meet at Jacksonville on June 5th, as decided at the meeting of the group executive committee on February 12th, at Quincy. J. L. Miller, secretary, will send out programs as soon as the committee having the matter in charge shall make its report.

Bankers in the Public Eye

LOUIS G. KAUFMAN
NEW YORK

JOSEPH CHAPMAN, JR.
MINNEAPOLIS

THE great Northwest has produced two of the "attractive" bankers who are much in the public eye today. They attract both financial and moral support to the things in which they are interested. Mr. Kaufman comes from Marquette, in fact still is president of the First National there. He hasn't been a New Yorker quite two years, yet he has doubled up two nationals into one strong one, and now it is announced he has amalgamated two state banks into one which will operate as an ally to the national. Keep your eye on Mr. Kaufman. Mr. Chapman is a deliver. He dug up the chapter movement and the "express money order fight." Now he gets express packages simply addressed "To the Farmers' Friend, Minneapolis." Fruit has been born of his farmer movement. He spoke last month to the Des Moines Bankers' Club, and last week to the Bankers' Club at Kansas City—all on farming. The A. B. A. is on the work, and Chapman is the chairman of its committee. Yes, and his friends are booming him for chairman of the executive council next year (if they wait that long), with every chance of winning out.

"Banker" Mason

William A. Mason, head of the defunct Wilson Avenue Bank, was examined at some length Friday morning by Attorney John C. Farwell representing the depositors of the insolvent institution, and by Archibald Cattell for the receiver. The examination was conducted in the presence of a court reporter in Room 462, Monadnock Block. During the course of the quizzing it developed that the "banker" had made some speculations in the stock and grain markets, resulting in his loss of about $2,000. The witness stated that he never had kept any record of his various plunges. These operations were extended over a period of the last six months. When questioned as to the reason for his leaving Chicago, and taking a large amount of money from the vaults of the insolvent Wilson Avenue "Bank," Mr. Mason was unable to give a satisfactory explanation. He stated that he had had a nervous breakdown, and that he had passed through a period when he did not know what he was doing; that when he came to, he found himself in a hotel in Buffalo. He also was unable to give a satisfactory explanation of the discrepancy between the moneys received as deposits during the time he was conducting his private "bank," and the amount of his disbursements during such period. When questioned as to whether he had any available money at the present time, he stated that he had about $2.50. The examination will be resumed on Monday morning at ten o'clock.

TWO BANKS IN NEW QUARTERS

The North Avenue State Bank announces the opening of the bank's remodeled and enlarged rooms in its building at North Avenue and Larabee Street.

Glen Ellyn State Bank will open their new banking room this (Saturday) evening. The remodeling has brought counting room, vaults and fixtures right up to date.

ORGANIZE A BANK AT BREMEN

The State Bank of Bremen was organized on Saturday at Tinley Park, Ill. The bank, the first organized in the township of Bremen, will have a capital stock of $25,000. Christian Andres is president.

Mainly About Banks and Bankers

AFTER this week it is "open season" for the private bankers in the State of Illinois. On Tuesday morning the membership of the state association received a communication from President B. F. Harris asking for categorical replies to certain questions propounded in the circular. Mr. Harris wants to know exactly how the bankers of the state stand on the question of bank supervision.

THE first question, "Do you believe in state supervision of all forms of banking by the state, except national?" will put the banks of Illinois squarely on record either as advocating the present reign of unsupervised banking with its accompanying failures, or favoring state supervision of the right kind.

MEMBERS were given an opportunity to express themselves as to whether or not mere restraint reserving the right to use the words "bank," "banker," etc., would be satisfactory. Question four is the real gist of the communication. It reads: "Should Illinois continue to permit unrestricted or 'private' banking?"

IN response to a resolution passed by the Springfield convention the members are asked to declare their position on the question of having a separate banking department for Illinois, thus taking bank supervision entirely out of the state auditor's office, where it is run simply as a department and operates in a very routine fashion.

THE Kansas "Blue Sky" amendment to her banking law, putting all forms of stock and security selling concerns under supervision of the state banking department, is one of the proposals. It is estimated that from three to five hundred illicit concerns would be put out of the way within thirty days by the adoption of such a law in Illinois. The effect its adoption had in Kansas was to cut down the number of investment companies from six hundred to forty. Full details of this law were furnished to the members by Mr. Harris.

IT is important that the members of the Illinois Bankers Association reply promptly. There is to be no evasion of the question. It is not intended to make the answers public, and mere silence will not be interpreted either as favoring or opposing bank supervision. What Mr. Harris wants is a frank, open avowal of the position taken by the paid-up membership of the Illinois association. He is entitled to this by virtue of his office, if for no other reason.

THE examination into the Wilson Avenue Bank by the Central Trust Company, receiver, has revealed nothing very promising to either the depositors or creditors. In the eyes of the law all are classed as creditors. The examiner reports that never in his experience with bank failures has he found so few real assets available as in the present case.

IT is said by those who have been on the inside of this examination that the Wilson Avenue Bank never could have qualified for a charter, and that at no time during its existence ever could have passed an examination successfully. The lesson in this is that with state bank supervision we never would have had the Wilson Avenue Bank, and if, perchance, it had been in operation before the law became effective, it would have been closed with the first visit of the examiner. It furnishes an unanswerable argument in favor of bank supervision.

"BANKER" PUPAUSKY was before the United States court on Tuesday of this week, on trial for misusing the mails. In addition to running his private bank, he dealt in "black art," and sold a book to his depositors teaching "how to make a woman love you"; "how to be safe from mad dog bites"; "how a girl may get a sweetheart," and a long string of other deceptive accomplishments.

THIS is the bank in which the cashier charges that even his own private funds were absorbed by the "banker," when he was helping himself to the money of the depositors.

THE South Chicago "banker," Boskopf, remains in seclusion with his bank closed. He probably is suffering from that disease, which comes to "bankers," when they are forced to face their creditors with neither assets nor excuses. "Banker" Mason is in the same condition relatively.

RICHARD HENRY LITTLE in his department of the Chicago Tribune has a fancy story entitled, "Of the Tribe of Pupauskys." It deals with the Chicago private banker, who dealt in "black art" and deposits, exchanging one for the other, to his own great profit.

VOL. 1, No. 1, of the "Guaranty News," put out by the employees of the Guaranty Trust, New York, is out and is "very promising." An article by F. W. Ellsworth on "Building a Bank's Business," has the following:

ADVERTISING is merely telling the public what you have in the way of facilities and inviting their use. Some banks, which are still hugging to their breasts an ancient and cadaverous tradition, are afraid to tell the people what they can offer them. Some banks are afraid to tell the people anything at all about their institution for fear of offending this old tradition. Most of the banks to-day that are growing have everlastingly buried this relic of old times, and in a dignified and conservative manner are advertising for new business and are securing it.

J. A. TUBBS, assistant cashier of the National Bank of Monmouth (Ill.), visited Chicago Monday and reports business conditions as being satisfactory in their locality, the deposits running high.

K. N. & K. CO., New York, send out the following summary: "The bank position throughout the United States is unquestionably strong for this season of the year and there can be little doubt that the advances made in connection with the exploitation of 'speculative enterprises' stand to-day at the lowest level of many years. The agitation of a new tariff law is naturally giving some concern to business men but the outlook for the country as a whole is reassuring and the general situation has not to-day the elements of weakness which were present last year and at many previous periods."

MY policy and chief effort, as president, are to bring the Illinois Bankers Association into the field of public service as one of the strongest and most representative of all state voluntary organizations. It owes a public duty, and therefore should justify its existence by proper use of its "talents."—B. F. Harris.

THE A. B. A. committee on field demonstration work, headed by Joseph Chapman, with B. F. Harris, W. D. Vincent and others in the work, will go to Washington, probably on Tuesday, the 27th. There will be a hearing on the field demonstration bills before congress.

CONGRESSMAN McKINLEY of this state will give a dinner to members of the committee of congress and to the visiting bankers. McKinley and Harris are "Champions," and the congressman introduced the bill which Mr. Harris had prepared.

AT a meeting of the board of directors of the Illinois National Bank of Peoria on last Friday, C. A. Anicker, assistant cashier, was advanced to the cashiership and C. J. Seehaas and T. H. Fuchs, tellers, were elected assistant cashiers. Mr. Anicker takes the place made vacant by the election of Wm. C. (Continued on page 31)

VOLUME XXXII

CHICAGO, FEBRUARY 24, 1912

NUMBER 8

Bill Against "Blue Sky" Banks and Promoters

The "Chicago Tribune" has merged its fight against the loan sharks of Chicago with its contention in favor of bank supervision. Naturally these two subjects ran together when it was discovered that the loan shark trust controls and operates a great number of alleged "banks" and "trust companies." Some of these institutions they boldly have designated as "savings banks." In other cases they have copied almost literally the titles of leading trust companies in this and other cities. This enables the loan shark in his private capacity to tell a constituent who is becoming restless, that his loan can be transferred to a "bank." Then the transfer is made to the "bank," and new notes signed, the rates varying but little from about 5 per cent a month. Following are some of the incidents culled from recent issues of the Chicago daily papers, which bear in this question. They will be printed here without material alteration.

"Savings Bank" a Loan Shark Adjunct

The Chicago Tribune says that one of the worst loan sharks in Chicago operates under the guise of a "savings bank." This fact may have an important bearing on the matter of state regulation of private banks when this subject comes up before the legislature next year.

Some of the past operations of this bank may also result in the throwing of the majority, if not all, of Chicago's hundreds of loan sharks into bankruptcy.

The particular loan shark referred to is the South Side Savings Bank, at 728 West Sixty-third Street. At this location is the "bank." There is also a "city office" at 314 Tacoma building. The "bank" is made up of Louise E. Crews, Lorin H. Bronte, and John E. Breen. One of the Tribune "loan shark" bureau lawyers has sued the "savings bank" and its allies, who have collected $850 at $7.50 per week on a loan (often transferred between the sharks and the bank) of $150, and the original loan still shows nothing paid on the principal. It really is a "horrible example" of what may happen when the use of the word "bank" or "savings bank" is unrestricted and loan sharks are allowed to flourish.

Sues for Return of $850

Attorney Cermak has brought his suit in equity demanding the return of $850 paid by these poor people in usury over and above the principal and 7 per cent interest. A temporary injunction has been issued against the South Side Savings Bank, Crews, Bronte, Breen and Hopkins, forbidding them to make any attempt to collect further money from Mrs. Hyde.

The legal propositions involved in this bill in equity have never been decided in Illinois.

New legislation proposed for Illinois which will be aimed at irresponsible banking, loan sharks, "blue sky" promoters and salesmen of valueless stocks. Kansas law approved by prominent bankers of Chicago

It is believed generally that usury once paid cannot be recovered. But if the court of chancery, which professes to do justice unbound by the rigorous technicalities of the common law, gives the relief asked for by Mr. Cermak the end of the loan shark business in Chicago may be in sight.

Every one of the loan sharks in the city exists on usury. They have collected, by threats, intimidation, false representations, conspiracies, and frauds of many kinds, millions and millions of dollars of usury from the poor of Chicago.

If a precedent is established in the South Side Savings Bank case, by which these unfortunates may recover that usury from the plutocratic loan men who have deprived them of it, the loan shark industry will become highly unprofitable.

Plan to Oust "Blue Sky" Banks

The naming of a committee from members of the Illinois Bankers Association to draft a bill for suppression of the "blue sky" and "gold brick" get-rich-quick concerns of Illinois was scheduled for this week.

B. F. Harris, vice-president of the First National of Champaign and president of the state association, sent out circular letters to the members. Unless opposition develops he will appoint a central committee to consider the plans and present a draft at the annual meeting of the association in the fall.

The support predicted by Mr. Harris appears to be materializing. For some time sentiment in favor of the suppression of the swindling establishments operating in Chicago and the country districts has been apparent. The sequence of "bank" failures, most of them in Chicago, has aroused strong sentiment against the irresponsible concerns, neither incorporated nor clothed with any legal authority for accepting deposits.

Mr. Harris hopes to have a new law prepared which will end them both and place enforcement of both sections in the jurisdiction of the state bank commissioner.

Ready to Start the Fight

The members of the Illinois Bankers Association, comprising the leading officers of the national, state, and private banks of the state, are to be asked to join in a campaign against the "gold brick" investment companies now operating in the state.

Along with this campaign is one against the private banks. Admitting the responsibility of a good many of these institutions, President Harris of the state association insists their present purposes can be followed quite as well under state supervision. At the same time, those which are irresponsible can be driven out. It is significant that in a test ballot last year about one-third of the private bankers who are members of the association signified their willingness to operate under state charters, if this was the will of the association.

Mr. Harris has secured copies of the "blue sky" law passed by the Kansas legislature a year ago and now in successful operation. Copies of this law will be sent to all Illinois bankers, and they will be asked to co-operate in the passage of a similar law by the Illinois legislature at the next regular session.

Provisions of Kansas Law

The Kansas law places under supervision of the state banking commissioner all companies dealing in any way in stocks, bonds or other securities, except for United States and Kansas bonds, bonds of Kansas municipalities, and notes or mortgages on real estate in Kansas.

Before any concern can offer or attempt to sell securities other than these it must register with the state banking commissioner and secure a permit from him. Violation of the law carries a penalty of from $200 to $10,000 fine and from one to ten years in the penitentiary.

The banking commissioner is instructed to demand all statements regarding financial conditions, plans, and the nature of the securities to be offered for sale. After examination of these documents he is to make his report. If the report is favorable the company is authorized to begin business. If it be unfavorable the permit is not granted and operation in Kansas is forbidden.

Each month the company allowed to do business is to draw up a trial balance of its condition. This report is open to examination by any stockholder or investor. There also are complete semiannual reports made as of condition of June 30th and December 31st, published by the state. At any time that insolvency is apparent the commissioner is instructed to so notify the attorney-general and the company's affairs are wound up in receiver's control.

Agents Must Register

The investment company also is forbidden to have any agents at work unless they, too, are registered with the secretary of state.

The immediate result of the operation of the law has not been a series of prosecutions. On the other hand, there has been little occasion for prosecution. Whereas there were 600 companies coming under the classification of "investment companies" a year ago, there are only forty-seven which have come under the law. The others have joined an emigration out of Kansas. One of them, whose business with Kansas investors had approximated $400,000, did not move into an adjoining state, but to make sure of avoiding prosecution retired into Canada.

Kansas Officials Tell of Plan

"A good many of the other concerns have moved into nearby states," said J. N. Dolley, the Kansas banking commissioner, who prepared the bill, "and we are now receiving inquiries from these states as to the purposes and effectiveness of our law.

"I would not be far wrong if I should say that 98 per cent of the investments by Kansas citizens in foreign mining, oil, realty, utilities, and other companies in the past have proved unfortunate. The promoters had no intention of paying interest, let alone the principal. I think that is a condition of the past."

Charles G. Dawes for Supervision

"I do not see that the presence of either section will weaken the other," commented Charles G. Dawes, president of the Central Trust Company of Illinois. "On the other hand, the questions are closely associated and should properly be taken up together.

"As a general thing the swindling concerns which, without paying any attention to the state banking regulations, call themselves 'trust companies,' thus posing as a state institution of the same name, operate in bad securities.

"The state has a duty to its investor just as it has to its savings depositor. Both duties are neglected at present. It is time for a more stringent supervision, and the bankers association would seem to be an efficient agency for starting the reform."

Hutchinson Approves Idea

Charles L. Hutchinson, vice-president of the Corn Exchange Bank, expressed approval of both ideas incorporated in the Harris program.

The adherents of the Harris plan show confidence in the ability of such a law to stand after it is once passed, and point to the success of the Kansas legislation as evidence. They count on the active support of numerous large Chicago banks whose names have been copied by "get-rich-quick" concerns.

Trade on Reputation of Others

Some of these establishments have advertised their second mortgages, their oil, mining, and rubber stocks, their bogus bonds whose only security investigation shows to be a few acres of the surface of Salt Lake or nothing. These offers have appeared over names closely resembling the names of standard Chicago banks, but with a different address, and thus swindlers have traded on the reputation of the standard banks and trust companies to the annoyance of the latter and the eventual dismay of deceived patrons.

At the same time Hempstead Washburne, ex-mayor of Chicago and a director of the Hibernian Banking Association, advocated a law by which use of the words "bank" and "banker" will be prohibited, except to those who have state or federal charters.

"Without knowing the merits of the Mason bank on Wilson Avenue, it is but one more example of the lure of the word 'bank' for neighborhood depositors," Mr. Washburne said. "After the crash comes the best that can happen is a receivership and the attendant litigation attached to these ornaments of a failure.

"The 'banker' lives in comfort during the receivership, the victim transfers his credulity and cash to another 'banker,' and the real banker—state or national—whose institution is regulated by statute, and his shortcomings promptly punished by imprisonment, is, in the mind of the confiding depositor, classified with the unreliable real estate dealers, pawnbrokers, loan sharks, and others, because our statutes permit these people to blazon upon windows and stationery the alluring word, 'banker.'

Tries in Vain for Law

"For more than fifteen years I have advocated and endeavored to get our legislature to pass a law which will prohibit the use of the words 'bank' or 'bankers' by any persons, firm, or corporation unless they have complied with the state banking laws, which provide for continued examinations and prison penalty for violations.

"About four years ago my brother-in-law, J. V. Clarke, now dead, who at that time was president of the Hibernian Banking Association, and I went down to Springfield and tried to get the legislature to pass such a law. We made no headway, however, as the representatives from the country districts opposed such a measure. They came from country towns where most of the banks are conducted in connection with the real estate or insurance business.

"Restrict Use of Name"

"Most any one can call himself a 'banker' under present conditions. I find, upon looking through the classified section of the telephone directory, that there are eighty-five persons or corporations listed as 'bankers.' Few of them are operating under the regulation of the state or federal banking laws. The use of the words 'bank' or 'bankers' by loan sharks, real estate agents, or any one who takes a notion to use the word in connection with his business should be prohibited, unless they are subject to regulation.

"I think when the legislature convenes again an effort should be made to secure the passage of a law similar to the one I have outlined. It would make impossible the present misleading use of the words and would increase the confidence of the people in the established institutions, which are subject to rigid regulations."

Richard P. Hagen of 4303 North Paulina Street, a representative in the legislature from the sixth senatorial district, announced he was having drafted a bill providing a $5,000 fine for misuse of the term "bank." He may endeavor to drive out private banks altogether by legislation.

Auditors Finish Work

No ray of hope cheered creditors of the Wilson Avenue Bank when the Central Trust Company, the receiver, finished its inventory of the assets.

John C. Cunningham and R. G. Goldbeck, auditors for the receiver, admitted to depositors that the inventory failed to give a more encouraging aspect to Mason's affairs. Later, from inside sources, a statement was made that the bank's total assets, as scheduled by the receiver, would not reach $12,000, while the liabilities, it was said, would be above $50,000. Of the assets notes and equities in real estate amount to about $8,000 and shares of stock of $4,000. Mason's personal debts have not yet been included in the liabilities.

"Mr. Mason must explain some of his transactions, particularly in real estate, before his affairs are cleared up," said Mr. Goldbeck. "He clearly is insolvent, according to our findings."

Only Four Private Banks in South Carolina

B. J. Rhame, state bank examiner for South Carolina, in replying to our letter of inquiry informs us that there are but four private banks in his state; that "No state, branch or private bank, or individual receiving money on deposit, is exempt from at least one yearly examination." Section 2 of the act of 1906 provides:

Kansas City Bankers Hear Joseph Chapman's Farm Talk

The bankers of Kansas City still have a warm place in their hearts for the "dawg" which has been kicked around so much lately. They have immortalized him in verse and song, and last week at a dinner of the Bankers Club at the Baltimore badges commemorating the self same "dawg" were pinned, silently and reverently, on the lapel of the coat of every one present. The buttons read, "You Gotta Quit Kickin' My Dawg Aroun'," and appended to the button is a miniature "dawg," done in everlasting bronze and suspended by the animal's spinal column. That was the only reference to the Missouri "dawg" on Thursday night of last week.

The Schubert Club of twenty-four voices entertained the bankers with half a dozen artistically rendered selections. Each number was enthusiastically received and, at the close, a rising vote of thanks was tendered the singers.

Rural Education Plan Wrong

That the system of education in the country schools for the last 100 years has had a remarkable tendency to make the country boy and girl dissatisfied with their surroundings and has caused them to drift to the cities in great numbers, leaving the old folks discouraged and often helpless on the farms, was a statement made by Joseph Chapman, Jr., of Minneapolis, Minn., a guest of the club.

Mr. Chapman is vice-president of the Northwestern National Bank of Minneapolis and chairman of the committee on agricultural development and education of the American Bankers Association. He chose the title of his committee for his subject.

"In Minnesota," Mr. Chapman said, "boys and girls are leaving the country and flocking to the cities. Hired help is hard to get and

The chairman of the A. B. A. committee on agricultural development and education tells what has been done and what is planned to better the condition and the income of the farmer and his boys and girls expensive, and the result has been that many farms have been abandoned, a condition which has existed in New England for some years.

Bankers Essay Reform

"Three years ago the Minnesota Bankers Association set about to investigate this condition. This brought the report that the education the boy and girl was getting in the country was wrong. In almost every instance it was found that the teacher was a young woman from the city, just out of college. She was there because she had to be; she was discontented, and this had a tendency to make the children still more discontented with their lot in the land of green fields and waving grain.

"The next step was an investigation of conditions at the Minnesota agricultural colleges, which were found purely political. Although the association was told that it would have hard sledding with the board of regents, a letter was written to the chairman and a copy given to the press. There was no reply and when this fact was made public, the chairman advised them to 'keep their hands off.'

How the Plan Succeeded

"We told the regents that we had 'the goods' on them, and that if they would not select a new dean of the school, we would appeal to the republican legislature and 'make the fur fly.' In ten days we had a new dean. That was the first link in the chain of our plans."

Mr. Chapman said there are 19,500,000 school children in the United States, more than one-fifth of the entire population. Of this number 93 per cent are in the elementary grades and 92.3 per cent of the latter are in public schools. Of this original number 5.3 per cent are in high schools or second grade colleges and fewer than 2 per cent are in universities or higher colleges.

"Think of these figures," Mr. Chapman continued, "and realize that our entire educational system here is to prepare a pupil for college, when only 1.7 per cent ever reach there.

"While the last census showed an increase of 16,000,000 in population seven-tenths of that

We will welcome the opportunity of proving to you the benefits which will accrue from forming a connection with us was urban and only three-tenths rural. Hull House, Chicago, recently found 20,000 idle men below the age of 25 living in the cheap lodging houses, sleeping on soggy, wet floors, and these were boys from the country in the city looking for work. At the same time the old folks were trying to sell the farm because they could get no one to run it for them.

System is Blamed

"Our investigation led us to believe that the educational system of this country is to blame for this. For 100 years we have been educating boys away from the farm, inspiring them with an ambition to go to the city to make their fortunes. There is nothing in our country school education to teach the boy or girl to love the country.

"In 1909 Minnesota had 435,000 school children, costing the state $14,000,000 annually. Of this number four-tenths of 1 per cent were being taught to be producers, and the other 99.6 per cent to be consumers. In 1909 we succeeded in establishing ten high schools in Minnesota, costing $2,500 a year each, where the children were taught agriculture and domestic science. We had to go into seven states to get teachers for those ten agricultural high schools. At the last legislature we succeeded in establishing twenty more of these schools over the state, and there was a perfect clamor for them. At the state agricultural college now only teachers are turned out. These receive $2,500 a year, while teachers in the academic grades get but $750. Twelve states in all now have become interested in this movement. In addition to what we already have, fifty other high schools are doing something in the way of agriculture, domestic science and industrial training.

Means Much to Banks

"If this has proven a good thing for Minnesota—and it certainly has—it is just as good for every agricultural state in the Union. What has Missouri done? Open your eyes! Wake up!"

Mr. Chapman said that this movement should be taken up by the bankers if for no other reason than a selfish interest. To show the effect of a crop failure on his bank alone, he said that the failure in South Dakota last year decreased the deposits $5,000,000. He continued:

"Here in the city, if a boy doesn't learn a trade in the schools, where will he learn it? You know the limited number of apprentices permitted by labor unions. Give him the trade right in the schools; let him leave there prepared to earn his living, and not begin at the bottom on starvation wages."

Mr. Chapman said that a committee from the National Bankers Association will go to Washington in a few weeks to urge the passage of the Loeper bill, which provides that the government pay $6,000 to each state in the Union, the states to appropriate a like sum, the money to be used exclusively in educational extension work among farmers. This is to be increased so that in ten years the government will be appropriating $10,000,000 for this purpose.

Express Companies Scored

Thornton Cooke, vice-president of the Fidelity Trust Company, before Mr. Chapman spoke made a short talk on "Express Money Orders." He is chairman of a committee of the American Bankers Association of the same name. Mr. Cooke told how the express companies all over the world are in direct competition with the banks. He said that in the small towns these companies never have money with which to cash their own orders.

Mr. Cooke called the express companies "a great branch banking concern, with no known capital, issuing no public statements, with no known system and under the direct supervision of no one."

Mr. Cooke told what the American Bankers Association has accomplished in the way of issuing "travelers' checks, good any place on earth." The Bankers Trust Company of New York is the agent which stands good for all of these travelers' checks, no matter by what bank issued. Many foreign countries also have taken up the plan, using the same agent. Last year $20,000,000 worth were issued.

"Last year," Mr. Cooke said, "$700,000,000 worth of express and postal money orders were issued. To offset this the American Bankers Association now is planning a combination domestic-foreign money order good the world over, using some great financial concern to back all as coming from one source.

"There are 25,000 banks in the United States. Of these but 3,000 have agreed to go into the domestic-foreign money order business. It will require more than this to make it a success. We want them all."

BANKERS ELECT OFFICERS

Albany, February 19.—At the final session of Group 5 of the New York State Bankers Association here Saturday night the following officers were elected: Chairman, James A. Reynolds, Kinderhook; secretary, George A. White, Albany. Seymour Van Santvoord, counsel to the Governor, and State Senator Franklin D. Roosevelt, were among the speakers at the annual banquet.

NEW PRESIDENT FOR GUARDIAN TRUST COMPANY

At a meeting of the directors of the Guardian Trust Company, of New York, held February 15th, Edward F. Clark, formerly first vice-president, was elected president to succeed Robert C. Lewis, resigned. The other officers were re-elected. Alfred M. Barrett was elected a director of the company to fill a vacancy.

Keytesville, Mo.—W. E. Hill, one of the most prominent bankers in North Missouri, died last week.

ANOTHER NEW YORK BANK MERGER

Announcement was made on Tuesday of the proposed merger of the Bankers Trust Company with the Manhattan Trust Company. To effect the consolidation the capital stock of the Bankers Trust will be increased from $5,000,000 to $10,000,000. The combined institution, it is figured, will have deposits of about $160,000,000, thus ranking as the largest trust company in the city.

Of the new stock $4,000,000 will be sold to stockholders of the company and $1,000,000 will be issued in exchange for $1,000,000 of the Manhattan Trust Company's stock.

Following is the statement issued by the Manhattan Trust Company:

"Negotiations, which were considered at the time of the sale of the Manhattan Trust Company's property at the corner of Wall and Nassau streets to the Bankers Trust Company, two years ago, have now been renewed and successfully concluded, and will shortly result in a merger of this company into the Bankers Trust Company.

"By the terms of the proposed merger plan the Bankers Trust Company will increase its capital stock from $5,000,000 to $10,000,000.

"Of the new stock $4,000,000 will be sold to its present stockholders and $1,000,000 will be exchanged for $1,000,000 outstanding capital stock of Manhattan Trust Company. The two sets of offices in the new Bankers Trust Company building will now be thrown into one, and in fact the proximity of these offices has been a factor in bringing about the merger."

The consolidated company will move into the Bankers Trust Company building about the middle of April.

A distinctive feature of the Bankers Trust Company is that its directorate is made up exclusively of officers of the leading banks in the United States. There is no single financial institution in the country which has as directors so many officials of other national banks, banking houses and financial interests, and because of this it has been regarded as a company for banks and bankers only. Twenty-seven bank officials of this city, Chicago, Philadelphia and Kansas City compose this board.

F. H. GOFF ADDRESSES GROUP 8, PENNSYLVANIA

That bank directors should direct, and not be satisfied to be mere figureheads, trusting to the honesty of their officers, when so often bank officers have been found dishonest, was the declaration made to the members of Group 8 of the Pennsylvania Bankers Association at their annual banquet at the Hotel Schenley, Pittsburgh, on Wednesday evening, by President F. H. Goff of the Cleveland Trust Company. He made this declaration in a straight-from-the-shoulder sort of talk in which he did not apologize for his opinions because some courts have held differently, and he insisted that when men assumed the office of bank director, they should be ready to assume with it the responsibility that morals told went along with it. Bank directors can direct, he maintained, and they should be required to.

Mr. Goff was the principal speaker at the dinner, which was attended by the bankers of Pittsburgh and vicinity and their ladies to the number of five hundred. The social features were not overlooked in the appointments, the music or the handsome cut glass favors, which every woman carried home as a souvenir. The dinner was presided over by H. M. Landis, chairman of the group, and former State Senator John S. Weller was toastmaster, the other speakers in addition to Mr. Goff being former Congressman J. Adam Bede of Minnesota and former Representative M. Clyde Kelly of Braddock. The toastmaster took note of the fact that the dinner was being held on the eve of Washington's birthday, and devoted most of his talk to the "Father of His Country." The statesman from the West made a typical Adam Bede talk, which had no special topic assigned, but which was entertaining from the start; while the member of the legislature from Braddock waxed eloquent and poetic in telling of "The Ideals of Progress."

CAPITAL ONE MILLION DOLLARS

ILLINOIS BANKING NEWS

By C. C. Burford

The opinion of John R. Trevett, vice-president of the Trevett-Mattis Banking Company of Champaign, on the question of farm loan mortgages is especially valuable, as this firm has made a specialty of such business for half a century. Established in 1861 by the late A. C. Burnham as an investment banking house, the present business is well known to loan agents and to bankers of the Central West. The firm name was changed to that of Burnham, Trevett & Mattis, later to that of Trevett & Mattis, and in 1903, when the business was reorganized into a state bank, the present name of the Trevett-Mattis Banking Company was adopted. The bank does a large commercial banking business as well as a colossal farm loan business, and a year ago a handsome new banking room finished in white marble was occupied. The arrangement of the interior places the commercial banking and the farm loan departments on opposite sides of the building with separate staffs for each so that both divisions of the business are on a par from the standpoint of the customer and the visitor. A savings department was recently added.

When asked for a statement regarding the condition of the farm loan business at the present first of March, Mr. Trevett gave the following general review of the situation at a representative of THE CHICAGO BANKER:

March first is the date set by a large percentage of land buyers to close their deals and a large number of loans are yet to be completed—not until after this month will it be possible to gather reliable statistics as to the number and the aggregate amount of mortgages filed.

We are of the opinion the number will be much less, but on account of the increase in size of loans, the aggregate will probably equal that of former years. With land selling at from $200 to $300 per acre, the buyer finds it necessary to ask for larger amounts, even though he borrows but one-third the purchase price. The supply of funds seems to be adequate to meet all legitimate demands. In this connection it is interesting to look back over the period of half a century we have been making a specialty of farm loans, and note the change in conditions.

Years ago the loans were held principally by individual investors, but as interest rates declined the private investor sought more profitable, even if more risky, fields and the farm loan business of to-day in Illinois is controlled by corporations, such as the insurance and trust companies and savings institutions, who are more interested in the safety of the investment than in a high interest rate.

Livingston County Bankers Meet

A meeting of the bankers and bank clerks of Livingston county was held at Pontiac with representatives there from every town in the county. A banquet and a talk-fest formed the diversions of the afternoon and evening. C. R. Tombaugh of Pontiac is president of the association; J. C. Corbett is vice-president and Edward Herr is secretary. Both of the latter are from Chatsworth. Among those who attended was Frank L. Smith, president of the First National of Dwight, internal revenue collector at Springfield and candidate for gubernatorial honors in Illinois.

Many Loan Sharks at Joliet

It is estimated that over three thousand persons, or one-seventh of the adult population of the city of Joliet, are in the clutches of the loan sharks against whom such a worthy campaign is now being directed by the press and the public. Sixty per cent of these persons are mechanics and laborers who have been forced to contract loans during the recent period of dullness. Lack of saving in the past is given as one reason for the financial embarrassment of so many laboring people. City and county officials and many public-spirited citizens have joined in the movement and free legal advice will be given with a view of stamping out the evil.

Edens Speaks at Kankakee

William G. Edens, assistant secretary of the Central Trust Company of Chicago, was on the program as one of the speakers at the eighth annual banquet of the Kankakee Commercial Association. Mr. Edens gave "a talk" on "Commercial Organization." Others who spoke were Bert L. Cooper, of Kankakee; Professor Henry B. Ward, of the University of Illinois, and Judge C. F. Perry, secretary of the chamber of commerce of Quincy.

New Banks in Cook County

A permit has been issued for the incorporation of the State Bank of Oak Park with capital of $100,000. The permit was issued to C. P. Billings, James Harer and George F. Flessler. The Bremen State Bank of Tinley Park, Cook county, has been authorized to begin business with capital of $25,000. George Boldt, John C. Andrews and Henry L. Brueggeman are given the permit. Another bank authorized to begin business is the Cook County State Bank of Berwyn, with capital of $25,000, the permit being given to Henry Pillinger, Edward C. Cronwall and Harold B. Pillinger.

A BIG INVESTMENT OPPORTUNITY

New York, February 21.—The well-known banking firm of Henry L. Doherty & Co., 60 Wall Street, New York, is now offering for public subscription $750,000.00 of Ozark Power and Water Company common stock and $1,500,000.00 Electric Bond Deposit Company 6 per cent cumulative guaranteed preferred stock at the price of $1,000.00 for $500.00, par value of Ozark Power and Water Company common stock and $1,000.00, par value, of Electric Bond Deposit Company 6 per cent preferred stock. Terms of subscription at 20 per cent down and the remaining 80 per cent in four monthly payments of 20 per cent each.

The Ozark Power and Water Company will develop a 15,000 h. p. hydro-electric power on the White River in Southwest Missouri, and already has signed contracts for the full amount of power which will be developed. The Electric Bond Deposit Company is a holding corporation for high grade gas and electric bonds and preferred stocks, and the monthly dividends of one-half of 1 per cent on its preferred stock are guaranteed by the Gas Securities Company of New York, which has liquid assets of over $2,800,000.00.

Subscriptions are to be received for the new stocks until March 1st. The success which attended the public subscription to the Cities Service preferred and common stocks offered in November, 1910, by this firm, and the advance, which has taken place in both these stocks since that time, make certain that the present offering will be quickly taken by investors.

AUGUST BLUM TALKS ON "SERVICE"

A talk on banking service, quite out of the ordinary, was made by Vice-President August Blum of the First National at the recent annual dinner to the employees of that bank. Replying to the toast, "Service," Mr. Blum said:

"This evening is given over to happiness and good fellowship, but while merriment and kindly humor reign the hour, I think that some earnest words may also be fitly spoken. The text from which I am to speak is only a little word but its two syllables contain almost the entire compass of human life, its meaning and its purpose. The standard of man's value is not gold. The degree of his success is not gauged by the size of his bank account. The Good Book does not say 'Well done, thou good and faithful money-maker.' What then entitles us to the crown of merit? Search the entire field of human action, weigh and measure what men are doing and you must arrive at the conclusion that only he is entitled to respect and admiration whose work results in benefit to his fellow men, to his city, to his country, even to unborn generations. In other words, it is the service we render which marks the value of our being.

"Service is the twin sister of labor. The two march hand in hand, but while they closely resemble each other, there is a great difference between them. Labor represents the material side of work. It would be folly to deny or ignore the importance of this material side. We owe it to ourselves and to our families to provide a competency and procure the comforts and decencies of civilized life. But service stands for the ideal side, the spiritual aspect. However humble a man's work may be, the service he renders in the vast household of humankind ennobles it. However exalted leaders may be in the realm of thought or industry or banking or statesmanship, if by word or deed or example they do not help on the progress of humankind, help make the world better and sweeter—then indeed the builders build in vain.

"On the coat-of-arms of the Prince of Wales appears the legend, 'Ich Dien' ('I serve'). You have all heard of that great king, the greatest whom Germany has produced, who was proud to proclaim himself the first servant of the state. We cannot all be kings, but we can all conceive and carry on our work in such a spirit as to raise it to the higher level, where Labor's beautiful sister holds her sway."

BUILDING OWNED BY THE BANK

MILWAUKEE

NEWS LETTER BY CHALMER B. TRAVER

WISCONSIN

Milwaukee banks report business active and collections satisfactory. Receipts from the country banks are light and there is a good demand for shipments.

Bankers at Republican Meeting

Wisconsin banks were well represented at the gathering of 700 Republicans in Milwaukee this week to do honor to Attorney-General George W. Wickersham and pledge their support to President Taft during the coming presidential campaign. Among those from the state who attended were: L. Albert Karel, president of the State Bank of Kewaunee; Henry Fetzer, president of the Bank of Sturgeon Bay; and A. W. Hamacheck, cashier of the Bank of Algoma. Other visitors to Milwaukee during the week include George W. Burton, president of the National Bank of La Crosse; E. A. Dow, president of the State Bank of Plymouth; George J. Kispert, cashier of the Farmers and Merchants Bank of Jefferson.

New Skyscraper for First National

E. H. Burnham of E. H. Burnham & Son, Chicago architects, is in Milwaukee securing bids for the new skyscraper building of the First National Bank at the corner of Mason and East Water streets. Active building operations will be commenced early in May.

Income Statements Soon Due

George D. Bartlett, secretary of the Wisconsin Bankers Association is reminding all state banks that statements of incomes for 1911 must be filed before March 1st with the internal revenue collector of the district in which the bank is located. On or before April 1st, each bank is also required to fill out and file with the Wisconsin tax commission at Madison, the state income tax statement. As the new income tax law states that "any bank which has paid taxes during any year upon its shares assessed to the individual stockholders thereof shall be entitled to present the receipt thereof and have same accepted by tax collector at its full amount in the payment of taxes due upon the income of such bank during said year," it is thought that the state income tax will have to be paid only in a few cases as nearly every bank will have paid more personal property tax under the present law than the income tax will amount to.

Notorious Safe Blower Held in Milwaukee

The police of Columbus, Ohio, believe that they have in Edward Lavery, recently arrested in Milwaukee, a member of the famous Lowry gang of safeblowers, which in 1910 pulled off a series of "jobs" in the state of Ohio that netted its members nearly $25,000 in booty. Lavery was discovered in the house of correction, where he was doing a ninety-day sentence for vagrancy. It is thought that he anticipated renewed activity on the part of the Ohio police and took this means of concealing himself. Among the "jobs" which he stands accused of participating in, are the robbery of the Hilliard (Ohio) City Bank of $5,729, the robbery of the Mademore (Ohio) Bank of $2,900, and the similar looting of six other smaller banks and postoffices in the state. Most of the members of the gang have been rounded up, and are "doing time" at Fort Leavenworth and in the Ohio penitentiary.

Agricultural Extension in Colleges

State bankers are being urged to support the bill now before congress, providing for agricultural college extension appropriations in each state now maintaining an agricultural department of its university. As Wisconsin has already developed agricultural extension work upon an appropriation exceeding that stipulated in the terms of the federal appropriation bill, no additional appropriation will be necessary on the part of the state to make the proposed federal appropriation available.

Forgers Rearrested

Michael Schoner and Hans Boessl, who, it is alleged, fled from Bavaria after forging bills of exchange amounting to $20,000, have been rearrested by United States Marshal H. A. Weil. The men were arrested last October, Boessl at Athens, Wis., and Schoner in Milwaukee, upon request of the German government. While they were being held pending extradition proceedings, a dispute over the tenure of office of Commissioner Francis Bloodgood led to their release by habeas corpus and their subsequent arrest by the immigration authorities on charges of being undesirable citizens. Upon their dismissal from this charge on Tuesday they were arrested for a third time on the original grounds.

How to Advertise

"Fifty per cent of the bankers might as well throw their money away as to spend it for the class of advertising they do," said Professor R. S. Butler, of the University of Wisconsin, addressing the Milwaukee Advertisers' Club at a recent meeting. "They continue the same stereotyped method of advertising liabilities and resources, and 90 per cent of the people do not understand that feature of banking. The live bank is the one which advertises in a manner that creates new business."

Madison Bank Merger

A consolidation of the three largest banks of Madison was announced this week. The merger, which includes the Bank of Wisconsin, the Capitol City Bank, and the Merchants and Savings Bank, will give Madison the largest bank in the state outside of Milwaukee. The new institution's capitalization will be nearly $600,000, while its resources will approximate $3,500,000.

Explains High Prices

That high prices prevailing all over the civilized world are due primarily to the enormous increase in the world's supply of gold was pointed out by T. M. Wild in an address before the Draper School, Madison.

"The volume of gold in the United States in 1896 was 1½ billion dollars, or $21.44 per capita," said Mr. Wild. "In 1911 the volume was 3 1-5 billions, or $34.20 per capita. Under these conditions the economic theory that, other things being equal, prices vary inversely as the amount of money in circulation explains the rise in prices to a certain extent. All external conditions being the same to-day as they were in 1896, prices would have increased exactly 38 per cent, but, owing to other causes, among them the difficulty of marketing, prices, during this time, have increased nearly 60 per cent. The remedy for this situation lies with the organization of the ultimate consumers, as the producers, shippers, and retailers are already organized.

Banking Notes of Interest

The Milwaukee Association of Accountants and Bookkeepers heard a report from the committee on higher accounting at its monthly meeting in Eagle hall this week.

Vice-President William Bigelow of the First National Bank has left for the Bermuda Islands with his wife and daughter.

Robert W. Bonyge, Denver, member of the National Monetary Commission, addressed members of the Oshkosh Chamber of Commerce on the central reserve association Monday night.

Articles of incorporation of the Exchange National Bank of Oshkosh were approved this week by State Bank Commissioner A. E. Kuolt. The capitalization is $50,000 and the incorporators are William J. Glatz, J. C. Zentener, and Herman Eilers.

I. A. Abrahams, president of the defunct Abrahams fur store of Seymour, has been arrested on a charge of forgery, William Michelstetter, president of the Seymour State Bank, having sworn out the warrant.

The increase of the capital stock of the Chicago and Wisconsin Valley Railroad Company from $40,000 to $484,000 precedes the resumption of construction of the Madison-to-Merrill interurban line this spring, according to officers who have gone to New York to arrange for the shipment of material.

BANK WINS DUQUOIN BOND SUIT

Duquoin, Ill., February 19.—The suit brought by the First Bank and Trust Company of this city against the city of Duquoin for $13,000, due on bonds issued during the Angel administration, has been decided by Judge B. W. Hope, of the circuit court in favor of the bank.

BANK GUARANTY FOR ARKANSAS

Little Rock, Ark., February 21.—Satisfied from past experience that the legislature will not exact a state banking law, Robert S. Warnock of Columbia county, member of the general assembly for the sessions of 1909 and 1911, announced he has decided to initiate a banking bill, modeled after the bill he introduced in the last legislature, the purpose of which is to guarantee bank depositors against loss through bank failure. He has already prepared 1,000 petitions and the work of securing signatures will begin at once. It is the purpose to have the required number of signatures by May 9th to authorize the submission of the question to the voters at the next general election.

The main feature of the proposed law is that the banks must either contribute to a general guaranty fund, as in Oklahoma, or be liable to depositors to the amount of three times the bank stock held.

EQUITABLE TRUST COMPANY

The Equitable Trust Company of New York City, after March 1st, will occupy the banking rooms of the Trust Company of America at 37 Wall Street, the merger of the two concerns becoming effective on that date. Alvin W. Krech, president of the Equitable Trust Company, has paid over the $5,000,000, which gives him control of two-thirds of the $2,000,000 stock of the Trust Company of America, his offer of $375 a share having been accepted. The owners of the remaining one-third of the stock will receive the same price.

PRIVATE BANKS LICENSED

More than thirty private banks have received licenses under the new law of Pennsylvania. They are located in Philadelphia, Allegheny, Luzerne, Berks, Lehigh, Northampton, Lackawanna, Schuylkill and Westmoreland counties. Fifteen banks filed the required $50,000 bonds and were exempted under the law. In all, about 125 applications for licenses have been filed by private banks.

The Territorial Trust and Surety Company has begun business in Muskogee, Okla. C. N. Haskell is president. Its banking room is in the Turner hotel building. It was capitalized for $250,000.

Southwestern reserve city news and gossip
—Special correspondence concerning also
the tributary territory, by J. Vion Papin

St. Louis, February 21.—Specifically the past week or ten days have developed no change in the local monetary situation, but a gradual betterment is reported in many directions. The demand for funds is improving, and slightly firmer rates are slowly working to the surface. For the moment commercial wants seem to be restricted, and there are various predictions as to how long this will continue. This much is pretty certain, however, that the agricultural needs of the South, principally Texas, this spring are going to be early and heavy. Despite the big cotton crop in Texas, things down there are not in such excellent shape. Prices paid for the crop were low, and a bad feature is that a large and important area of that state had a failure of feed crops, and will have to expend heavily for maintaining farm animals until after the spring plowing. The feed bill in Eastern Texas will be the largest in years, and all this money is going out of the state, with scant prospects of its returning, save in so far as it will help to fertilize the soil. Banks down there have paid-up obligations promptly enough, but they have not the large balances here and at other serve centers which are customary at this season. As a result they will need lots of money, and require it early. Similar conditions exist in parts of Missouri and Arkansas. In parts of the Southwest conditions are fine for the early planting of cotton, while elsewhere they are not so promising, and it is nearing the season when the seed must be put in. On the whole, however, the ground is in good shape, and general outlook for crops is about as good as could be expected at this time.

Husbanding Resources

Several of the large nationals here have been carefully husbanding their resources, and will show heavily in the reserve item at the next call of the comptroller. Speaking of this one of the heads of a bank following this policy said: "Most of our funds are being loaned, so as we can get them in within thirty days. We are satisfied our customers are going to need a lot of money within the next four months, and when the drain begins we will be in a position to meet it. Many of our contemporaries took quite another view, and hold that the present conditions of apathy are going to endure for many months. They scoff at the idea of any near rush for money. Of course it is simply a matter of judgment, which nothing but the sequel can show the wisdom of. We would rather not earn dividends for two or three months more than run the risk of not being prepared. It is true the commercial world is moderate in its needs just now, but even without a revival, the simple conduct of the economy of the country must soon result in replenishment in the near future.

Bankers Looking Over Texas

A party of St. Louis bank representatives, and bankers from other cities of the Middle West are jaunting around through Texas, for the purpose of getting in touch with conditions and attending meetings in the Lone Star state. Before returning the party will visit all the leading districts of the state, and individually members will stop at Arkansas and Oklahoma points. In the party from St. Louis are R. S. Hawes, the itinerant vice-president of the Third National; F. W. Wrieden, of the National Bank of Commerce; George M. Trumbo and James R. Seawell of the Mechanics-American National; E. M. Hubbard and Wm. B. Taylor of the Boatmen's Bank; I. L. Jones of the Mercantile Trust Company; T. C. Tupper of the Central National; William McChesney Martin of the Mississippi Valley Trust and Con P. Curran of the Con P. Curran Printing Company.

Company Changes Name

At a special meeting of Citizens Savings and Trust Company of East St. Louis this week the name was changed to the Southern Illinois Trust Company. Henry D. Sexton, president of the Southern Illinois National, is the controlling factor in the trust company, and after the first of March the latter institution will share the quarters of the Southern Illinois Bank in its new building at Broadway and Collinsville Avenue.

Candy Company Re-elects

The National Candy Company re-elected all of its officers at its recent meeting. They are: O. H. Peckham, president; A. J. Walter, secretary; F. D. Seward, treasurer; V. L. Price, vice-president; Frank Sibley, vice-president. Members of the executive committee chosen were: V. L. Price, chairman, O. H. Peckham, A. J. Walter, F. D. Seward, F. A. Menne of Louisville, A. W. Paris of Minneapolis, and R. M. Bates.

Grain Men Favor Barge Line

St. Louis Merchants Exchange has gone on record as favoring the proposed steel barge line between St. Louis and New Orleans. The organization committee of the line appeared before the Exchange directory to present the proposition in detail to the grain men. There was considerable enthusiasm at the meeting, and to a man the flour and grain men endorsed the enterprise, and specifically promised support in the way of freight just as soon as the barges are in operation.

Financial Institutions Merge

By taking over the general banking business, savings and commercial accounts, of the Commercial Trust Company, the Union Station Bank increases its total resources to something over $1,000,000. The deal, which has been under consideration for several weeks, was put through in short order after the final negotiations were agreed upon. The Commercial Trust Company will retain its offices at Jefferson and Olive streets, but will devote its energies entirely to a trust and real estate business. It is stated there will be no change in the officers of either company, but a representative of the trust company will be transferred to the Union Station Bank. The Commercial Trust has deposits of about $250,000. The legal end of the merger was handled through Boogher and White, attorneys. The bank was represented by its president, Charles E. Lane, and Major A. C. Landon acted for the trust company.

Reports are Contradictory

Reports relative to the legal entanglements of the American Bankers Assurance Company are mixed and varied. According to John S. Leahy, attorney for litigants seeking a receivership, the appointment of a receiver has been recommended to the Chancery Court at Wilmington, Del., by the special master appointed by the court to inquire into the proceedings. A recent news telegram from Wilmington stated that exactly the reverse had been recommended by the master. Leahy says the master finds that it would be improper to dismiss the suit because A. C. Landon, president of the company, and others who purchased the Missouri Farm Colony land bonds held by the company might thereby escape personal liability. These bonds have been one of the main issues in the fight. The Delaware suit was brought by the attorney-general at the instance of the state insurance department. In addition actions have been brought in the St. Louis courts.

Mercantile Buys Bonds

The Mercantile Trust Company has purchased the $100,000 bond issue of the Fulton, Mo., special eight-mile road district, paying a premium of $755. This is one of numerous municipal obligation issues, which have been taken by local financial institutions and bond houses. The issues cover improvements in Missouri, Arkansas, Texas and Oklahoma. Since the first of the present year the total of such purchases will run well over $1,000,000.

National Bank of Commerce

The Wayne Iron Company, Charles W. Hays and others have brought suit in the St. Louis circuit court to restrain the National Bank of Commerce from selling securities amounting to $500,000 to satisfy certain notes. The plaintiffs allege they purchased the securities from James T. Long and the Holliday-Klotz Land and Lumber Company, and assumed indebtedness owed by Long and the Holliday Company to the bank and the Hamilton Investment Company, which is controlled by the bank or its officers. The securities comprise $400,000 bonds of the Holliday Company, $56,000 bonds of the Williamsville, Greenville & St. Louis Railway Company and 211 shares of stock in the Williamsville company. The indebtedness against this collateral is $264,000.

Advices received at the Third National from Charles H. Huttig, president of that institution, are to the effect that he is rapidly working back into complete health. Mr. Huttig is still in New York, and will not return to St. Louis until his recovery is absolute, but he is riding and driving and enjoying all the diversions of the Metropolis, and his weight has gotten up to 160 pounds, very near normal.

WOULD CHANGE BANKING LAWS

Austin, Texas.—Commissioner of Insurance and Banking Gill has reached the conclusion that a change or amendment is needed to the state banking law which will provide that no state bank shall be chartered and organized in Texas with less than $25,000 capital stock, and intends to make this recommendation to the thirty-third legislature. The commissioner claims that these small banks, with a capital of only $10,000, are always a source of much trouble to the department. Of course he does not mean to say that all such banks worry the examiners and the department, but quite a large percentage of them come within that classification. The commissioner believes that a capital stock of $10,000 is not sufficient backing for a bank. It is impossible to employ first class men to look after the business of such a small institution, as the volume of business is not generally great enough.

Another matter which the commissioner has under consideration is a proposed recommendation to place certain banks now operating in Texas with charters granted by the legislature prior to 1876, under state supervision. Up to that period a banking corporation could obtain a charter to conduct a banking business without such bank being under the supervision of the department of banking. There are now about fifteen of these ancient banking institutions operating in the state, all of this period. These banks may operate without being subjected to the supervision of the commissioner of banking, and the only check placed upon them is a provision in the law which gives authority to the attorney-general to make investigations of affairs of such banks whenever it is deemed advisable. The commissioner believes that these banks should be subject to examination by the state bank examiners. During the session of the thirty-first legislature a bill was introduced in the house having for its object the placing of these banks under the supervision of the department of insurance and banking. The bill passed the house and passed the senate, but a vote to reconsider prevailed in the senate and the bill was returned to the committee, where it finally died. There was considerable opposition developed to the measure during its consideration in the senate. Some of these banks have amended their charters many times since they were incorporated and in many instances the names have been changed, capital stock increased or decreased as the case may be.

Editorial Comment

HOW IT CAN BE DONE

There are many adages in the English language intended to teach that there are more ways than one of doing a thing and doing it properly. Several of our western states, and New York and Pennsylvania among the eastern states, have attempted to restrict by law the use of the words "bank," "banker," etc., to incorporated institutions. South Carolina discovered a much neater and more expeditious way of decapitating the obstreperous near banker. It passed as a part of its corporation law and as a part of its banking law a statute which explicitly declares that "Every company, association, person or persons not incorporated under any law of this state, or of the United States, for banking purposes, who shall keep an office or some place of business and engage in the business of loaning money, receiving money on deposit, buying and selling bullion, bills of exchange, notes, stocks, or other evidences of indebtedness, with a view to profit, shall be deemed a bank, banker or bankers, within the meaning of the provision of this chapter." That little joker put every bank in the state of South Carolina under the laws which provide supervision and inspection for banks and bankers, and brought private banks into a position where they must pay their full share of taxes on capital, deposits, and other funds employed in their business. In other words, they are taxed just the same as state banks are taxed, and are supervised and inspected just the same as state banks are supervised and inspected.

For the purpose of taxation, all unincorporated banks in South Carolina are obliged to make out a sworn return giving a full account in detail, covering notes, bills receivable, paper discounted, cash items, stocks, bonds, real estate and the average amount of all deposits made with them. These are averaged for the different months in the year, and with certain exemptions, furnish the basis for the amount upon which taxes shall be assessed and paid. It may be possible that some of the western States which have failed to restrict the use of banking titles may yet find it more easy to classify unincorporated banks as real banks, and thus put them under the banking law. This probably would have the same effect in other states that it had in South Carolina. There remain but four private banks in the state, and three of them maintain a capital and surplus, just as do the state banks, make all of the usual reports to the state bank examiner, and pay their fair share of taxes, just the same as do all other banks. This matter of taxation has been a red-flag to the unincorporated bankers of Illinois for a long time. They do not seem to feel that they have been paying as large an amount of taxes as private bankers as they would be compelled to pay as state bankers. Furthermore, the profits are all their own, whereas as state banks, there might be stockholders who would claim a share of the dividends. The objection to maintaining a known capital in the business and keeping the funds separate from the private funds of the banker are other matters which look like treacherous grounds to many.

The South Carolina statute provides very severe penalties for making excessive loans to officers and directors, for making false statements and for evading taxation. For any of these offenses the law provides that the guilty person "shall be punished by fine or imprisonment, or both fine and imprisonment, at the discretion of the court." In the news columns of this paper will be found a summary of the South Carolina banking situation, so far as state supervision is concerned. This was prepared by State Bank Examiner Bryan J. Rhame.

DONALD R. RICHBERG

The Chicago Progressive Republican League has endorsed Donald R. Richberg of this city for the office of state's attorney. This organization is made up of those who have favored such progressives as Roosevelt, La Follette, Merriam, Jones and others. They are a power in this city and county. Mr. Richberg is a son and law partner of his father, John C. Richberg, national expert in uniform legislation matters and leading tax authority of this city. There will be numerous other candidates for the same office at the coming primaries, but Mr. Richberg will receive the support of the members of the organization which has placed his name on their ticket, and ought to be supported by all those who desire to be sure of a clean, able and persistent administration of this most important office. He has no known alliance which could claim any favors at his hands. The progressive republicans are not the kind to seek to tie up their candidates to anything but a plain, practical administration of the laws as they at present exist.

THE DYNAMITE CONSPIRACY

As a culmination of the arrest and conviction of the McNamaras, the United States government has unearthed evidence of a gigantic conspiracy of the International Association of Bridge and Structural Iron Workers for preventing the employment of non-union labor, by dynamiting the work done by it, and thus seeking to deter employers from patronizing such help. The existence of such a conspiracy has been suspected for some time, owing to the fact that non-union men always were employed on the buildings, bridges, etc., which were the objects of the work of these arch-fiends. After the conviction of the McNamaras, the national government, at Indianapolis, the headquarters of the iron workers' association, backed by the department of justice at Washington, determined to get at the bottom of this great conspiracy. The federal courts have but little jurisdiction in a case of this kind, the matter being almost entirely for the state courts. The only point which confers any jurisdiction on the United States is this: There is a federal statute prohibiting the transportation of explosives on passenger cars engaged in interstate commerce, and another against conspiracy to violate any law of the United States. While the transportation of explosives on passenger cars is in itself a serious offense, the ultimate results accomplished by means of such material are far more grave. The punishment, which the federal government can impose is inadequate for the crimes committed by these degenerates, who make murder their profession. The penalties appear to be limited to two years for each offense. The only possible hope of the infliction by the national government of sufficiently severe punishments, is that cumulative penalties may be imposed upon offenders guilty of separate criminal acts. The prosecution and punishment of those guilty of this reckless and malicious disregard for human life are matters lying within the jurisdiction of those states in which the crimes were committed. It is high time state authorities were stirred to action by these disclosures, and that they vigorously prosecute the offenders. If convicted, they should have meted out to them the extreme penalty of the law, as a deterrent against the future commission of such acts. It is incredible that we Americans, living in our advanced stage of civilization, should have in our midst men with such debased and degenerate characters. This wholesale perpetration of homicides reminds one of the days when one studied ancient and medieval history. It is up to the states to get busy and to rid the community of these social parasites.

FOR WILSON

Oklahoma is a long way from New Jersey and only a long jump from Missouri, yet Governor Wilson won out at the state primaries nearly two to one over Champ Clark. Harmon was among those who "also ran." The county primaries were held last week to select delegates to the democratic state convention, which will select delegates to the national convention. Wilson carried 32 counties, with 252 delegates; Champ Clark carried 22 counties, with 200 delegates; 16 counties, with 120 delegates, sent uninstructed delegates, and Harmon carried one county, with 16 delegates. Wilson's big popular lead over Champ Clark, who lives in Missouri, next door to Oklahoma, foreshadows the Jersey man's triumph in the state convention. Now that Taft's renomination seems almost certain, the nominee of the democratic party becomes more important. A man like Governor Wilson who would attract the progressive republicans would be the logical candidate. Can the democrats be as smart as that?

L. E. Stevens

Security, service, savings—these form a trio which every bank should advertise, so President L. E. Stevens of the Century Savings Bank, Des Moines, Iowa, declared in a paper which he read to the Admen's Club of Des Moines at its meeting last week.

Here are the reasons, Mr. Stevens says, why this is the essential trio in bank advertising:

First—Security, for without safety for his funds, what man is going to entrust them to any bank, no matter what attractive terms may be offered?

Second—Service, because after security a man wants the most and best he can get for his money.

Third—Savings, because it is the real foundation of all fortunes, and without it a bank's advertising for business would be rather barren of results.

Under the head of security, a bank should tell of all the safeguards adopted for the protection of the depositor's money, including its frequent examinations by trained and experienced auditors from the state or national banking departments; its regular monthly or quarterly examinations by a committee from its own board of directors; the careful scrutiny of its loans and investments, and other evidences of careful management by the directors; the integrity of its officers; of the employees all being under bond for fidelity of service; of the burglary and holdup insurance on its funds, and of the fact that not only must its entire capital stock and all accumulated surplus and undivided profits be swept away through losses or otherwise before depositors can lose a dollar, but that under the laws the shareholders have what is known as a double liability on their stock and would have to pay in, if required, an assessment equal to their holdings, or double the original subscribed capital. Therefore, under even reasonably competent and honest management, a bank cannot lose enough to cause a loss to depositors, and your attention is called to the fact that it has been many years since an Iowa bank under either state or government control has failed. The whole banking business is established on confidence, and banks should educate the public to believe in the security and safety of their institutions first.

What is Service?

Service.—It covers a wide range, but to my mind the average public does not know all the things its banker is prepared and glad to do for it. Through advertising, it can be taught that our business is not only to take your money on deposit and promise its safe return on call, but if you are a commercial customer, to furnish you a nicely bound leather book for keeping a record of the deposits and furnishing a book of lithographed checks with stubs that you may pay your bills in this manner, getting the best kind of a receipt therefore. In fact, the bank keeps your books without charge and gives you a monthly statement of your receipts and expenditures, with balance on hand; for, I take it for granted, none of you admen ever have an overdraft at the close of the month. In the savings department a pass book is given, but as interest is paid on the balances the account is not subject to check, and withdrawals must be made over the counter. To those that prefer, banks will issue time certificate of deposit, payable at a fixed date in the future and drawing interest at the agreed rate.

Talk on Savings

Savings.—Volumes have been written on this one subject, and, like on the subject of love, the half has never been told. "Large oaks from little acorns grow," "Save the dimes and the dollars will take care of themselves," "A penny saved is a penny earned," and kindred old and time-tried sayings are familiar to you all. In its advertising campaign, a bank has a larger field in dwelling on the wisdom, advantages and necessity of saving than any other one subject. It could not be handled adequately in a paper that would take all afternoon to deliver, and I'll not attempt it.

The three principal things, therefore, in my judgment for a bank to advertise are security—service—savings.

Hint to Bankers

And when the banker gets the prospective customer inside his doors he should not give him the icy stare and chilly reception our friend spoke of last week, but give him instead the glad hand, see that he is courteously treated by the clerks and made to feel that the most pleasant part of his business experience is the opening of a bank account. Bank advertising would count for more if people were

Influence of Banking Upon International Relations

Lecture by Norman Angell before the London Chapter of the British Institute of Banking

London, February 7.—Considerable interest had been taken in advance in Mr. Angell's paper, if only by reason of the keen controversy which has been aroused by his famous book, "The Great Illusion," and from Mr. Angell's opening remarks it was clear that he was pleased to have the opportunity of placing his views on the connection between the peace of the world and international financial relations before an audience of expert bankers.

At the outset, the lecturer disclaimed any intention of dwelling upon the details of banking, and then proceeded to deal directly with the special subject on which he had been asked to speak. He said:

Among those who deal with international affairs, you will find a type of writer, with a taste presumably for the melodramatic, who would have us believe that behind every diplomatic difference and every international settlement stands what he is apt to call "the sinister figure of the international financier." According to this view, nations and people are but mere pawns in the hands of those who constitute that mysterious entity "the money power." War is declared, we are given to understand, because "the money power" wants it, or it is not declared because it does not want it. You are aware, of course, of the somewhat childish confusion between the personal power or influence of a merchant or financier and the forces of which he may be the trustee, which makes such a picture for the most part a caricature. Separate even the most powerful of these "sinister figures" from the interests or the economic forces, of which for the moment he may be the representative, and he is reduced to practical impotence.

To this day, of course, the connection of the great credit institutions of the continent with their respective governments is a very much closer connection than that which exists between the banks and the government in this country. The Syndicat des Agents de Change in France, for instance, cannot, or, at least, does not, authorize the official quotation of a security on the Paris Bourse without the express sanction of the government; and although such control has never received the authority of an act of Parliament, the great French credit institutions do not facilitate the issue of any large foreign government loan in France without it having received the approval of the government. Indeed, it is well known that in the issue of such loans they are guided to no small extent by the political necessities of the government. In the case of Germany, political control, though not operating in quite the same way, is still more direct. Bismarck, on more than one occasion, practically compelled banks to operate on the market at his dictation in certain cases, in order that he might exercise diplomatic pressure on a foreign government. Whether it is desirable that a bank should be compelled to carry on its business not solely with a view to its security and prosperity and in the interests of its clients, but also with a view to purely political purposes, is a question on which I think you would have very grave doubts, especially since, as I think I shall be able to make plain to you before I have done, the political object almost always miscarries and has had, both with France and Germany, in every single important case shown by the history of the last forty years, effects the exact contrary to those aimed at by the respective governments.

It is not, therefore, of this alleged personal control of policy by great financial interests, a subject upon which a vast deal of nonsense due to the misconception at which I have attempted to hint, has been written, that I want to treat, but the influence of banking operating in quite another way; by the unnoticed impersonal forces which the ordinary week-day, humdrum work of banking has called into existence; the cumulative outcome of those numberless every-day operations that take place almost completely outside the control of governments or financiers.

By banking, I mean all that the word can legitimately imply: the whole process of the systematic organization of credit. And I think I can show you that banking, in this large sense, thanks to the evolution and development of those sensory nerves, is bound to bring about not merely a considerable, but a revolutionary, change in the general conduct of the organism which we call human society—bringing vividly to its consciousness certain errors in conduct, errors which become increasingly painful by reason precisely of the developments of its nervous system.

And this sensitiveness is shown, of course, mainly where the organism works with most difficulty: in the relationship between nations. And I believe that in the never-ending struggle which every nation carries on, in the attempt to adapt itself to environment, it is bound to discard more and more certain habits which have marked it in the less developed stage.

When a Viking king of old landed on these shores from his own state, and hammered his way into a Saxon stronghold, capturing all the cattle and corn and slaves and women that he could lay his hands upon, and squeezing the population for Danegeld, he sailed back to his own state just so much the richer by what he could load on his ships, and when he got back home his own state had practically suffered nothing by the devastation which he might have created in securing his loot. Now imagine a modern, a German Viking landing on the shores, rifling the great national treasury chest, say the vaults of the Bank of England, destroying our railroads, destroying all the commercial records he could lay his hands on, blowing safe deposit vaults into the air, putting into effect, indeed, Blucher's "Was für Plunder" as ruthlessly as he liked: loading his ships with the thirty or forty millions that he could secure in this way, and sailing back to Germany. Would he, like his predecessor of the eighth, ninth or tenth century, have found that as an offset to the proceeds of his little expedition there was no damage to German trade or to German prosperity? Take one item only—the plunder of the Bank of England's metallic reserve. Remembering the special position of the Bank of England, the relation of its small reserve to the large international business done, and recalling certain incidents in which the state bank of a foreign country at a time when that country was in a political sense bitterly hostile to us, has in quite recent times come to its help, I think many will agree that I am hardly overstating the case in saying that the act of unimaginable economic vandalism would close the Bank of Germany itself. Even if it did not do that, it would involve loss and cost to German finance and trade greatly exceeding in amount the value of the loot secured. An operation of the kind I have described which, quite profitable in the old days from the point of view of the invader, would in our day not merely be profitless, but involve to the conqueror a loss infinitely greater in amount than the tangible booty which he could secure.

Can we say, therefore, that the international relationship of these two cases is identical, unchanged in character? That plunder, and the motive leading to it, is quite as simple a matter now as then? Of course we cannot. It has fundamentally changed. The whole character of the relationship is different, owing to factors introduced by our credit system.

That is not all. I have spoken of the intangibility of wealth. It is intangible in two ways. You, of course, know that most wealth in its modern form depends upon the security of commercial contract, and that if you upset such by overriding the processes of law by military power—if the courts will not enforce the mortgage bond—the wealth which these instruments represented disappears, in a large part at least. The confidence which gives them value has gone. But modern wealth is intangible in a second sense.

I once asked a chartered accountant, very subject to attacks of Germanophobia, how he supposed the Germans would profit by the invasion of England, and he had a very simple program. Admitting the impossibility of sacking the Bank of England, they would reduce the British population to practical slavery, and make them work for their foreign taskmasters, as he put it, under the rifle and lash. He had it all worked out in figures as to what the profit would be to the conqueror. Very well, let us follow the process. The population of this country is not allowed to spend their income, or at least are only allowed to spend a portion of it, on themselves at all. Their dietary is reduced more or less to a slave dietary and the bulk of what they earn is to be taken by their "owners." But how is this income, which so tempts the Germans, created—these dividends on the railroad shares, the profits of the mills and mines and provision companies and amusement concerns? The dividends are due to the fact that the population eat heartily, clothe themselves well, travel on railroads and go to theatres and music halls. If they are not allowed to do these things, if, in other words, they cannot spend their money on these things, the dividends disappear. If the German taskmasters are to take these dividends, they must allow them to be earned. If they allow them to be earned they must let the population live as it lived before—spending their income on themselves; but if they spend their income on themselves, what is there, therefore, for the taskmasters? In other words, consumption is a necessary factor of the whole thing. Cut out consumption, and you cut out the profits. This glittering wealth which so tempted the invader has disappeared. If this is not intangibility the word has no meaning. Speaking broadly and generally, the conqueror in our day has before him two alternatives: to leave things alone, and in order to do that he need not have left his shores, or to interfere by confiscation in some form, in which case he dries up the source of the profit which tempted him. It is evident we have here, on the very first analysis, two fundamentally important features in which the early pre-economic statecraft would quickly prove unworkable in our day; in which the motives dictating the relationship of states are subject to great modifications. It is merely silly to argue (and yet I have heard it argued by a great university professor) that there is no change. All that remains in doubt is the degree of such change and its direction: whether it has moved sufficiently far as yet to reach a condition which makes military power economically futile as I have declared.

THE success of the Everett organization rests upon the confidence the business world has in its reports, its methods and its business integrity. With a full realization of this fact, the Everett executives place themselves squarely on record as exponents—in the broadest sense—of the "square deal."

Now I want you to recall for a moment the proposition with which I started this paper: namely, that the relations of states are rapidly modifying in obedience to quickly changing conditions—the greater division of labor set up by quicker communications, that this intensified division of labor sets up a condition of necessary interdependence between those who share the labor, that this condition of interdependence in its turn involves a necessary subsidence of the factor of physical force as between them; that this subsidence of physical force not only weakens necessarily the rôle of political control, but the very complexity of the division of labor tends to set up co-operation in groups which cut right athwart political frontiers, so that the political no longer limits or coincides with the economic; and that finally, partly as the cumulative effect of all these factors, and partly as the direct effect of devices born of the necessity of coordinating such factors, you get what I may term telegraphic financial reaction—a condition of sensibility by which the organism as a whole becomes quickly conscious of any damage to a part; that the whole may be summarized in the statement that military force is more and more failing in its effect, and must finally become—I think it has already become—economically futile. Just remember those propositions and then recall the facts of the historical sketch which I have just given you, and ask yourself whether they are not confirmed in every single detail.

At the beginning of that story we find a marauding state inflicting all the damage that physical force can inflict and suffering itself little harm. At the end of the story we get a condition in which one state cannot inflict damage anything like as great, without such damage reacting disastrously on the state inflicting it. At the beginning we have an England which could have seen all its political rivals annihilated without damage, at the end we have an England in which such a thing would spell starvation to its population; at the beginning a power like Spain able to exercise military force as fantastically as it pleased, to bleed to its apparent profit another people, at the end a condition in which the use of military force in any such way would be fatal to the prosperity of the country so using it; at the beginning such interdependence so slow of growth that 2,000 years hardly shows a development therein, at the end of the interdependence growing so rapidly and becoming so sensitive that, having no effect on the policy of a great Continental State in the third quarter of the 19th century; it dominates that policy in the first decade of the 20th. However you may test the general propositions I have laid down by the history of human development, you will find that they stand that test absolutely.

And they stand it because this condition which I have attempted to indicate is not merely a condition of the relationship of one nation to another, it is the essential condition of the relationship of all men to all other men individually; the forces which I have been trying to illustrate, but with I fear so feeble a result, and which it is the immense privilege of banking to have illustrated in a commercial form, are the forces which have made possible organized society.

There are those, of course, who will tell you that the whole thing is very regrettable; that it is sordid that the conduct of men or nations should be guided by what they are pleased to call money considerations. Well, it all depends what you mean by money. Genuine banking must be built upon a basis of the prosperity of the community as a whole; a condition by which one group can make huge profits by disaster to another, unhealthy speculation, booms, swindles, are deadly enemies of the sort of banking which this Institute represents. It stands and must stand in close alliance with sound trading, the prosperity of the people as a whole. But what does general prosperity imply? It implies all those efforts by which men, women and children of the world are fed and clothed, and housed and warmed. If, instead of misusing a word to which ancient and irrational prejudice attaches, one uses a little imagination and sees what money and banking really represent, how different an aspect does the whole thing assume! Indeed, is it not plain that banking is going far to destroy a very ancient and very pernicious illusion—a greater illusion than any with which I have dealt heretofore, namely, that there is some contradiction between interest and morality, that high ideals must necessarily be in conflict with material advantage, that the higher welfare of the race is in some wonderful way founded upon a sacrifice of its material welfare?

I know that you would not want me to indulge in highfalutin in this matter. But this condition of commercial interdependence, which is the special mark of banking as it is the mark of no other profession or trade in quite the same degree—the fact that the interest and the solvency of one is bound up with the interest and solvency of many; that there must be confidence in the due fulfilment of mutual obligation, or whole sections of the edifice crumble, is surely doing a great deal to demonstrate that morality, after all, is not founded upon self-sacrifice, but upon enlightened self-interest, a clearer and more complete understanding of all the ties which bind us the one to the other. And such clearer understanding is bound to improve, not merely the relationship of one group to another, but the relationship of all men to all other men, to create a consciousness which must make for more efficient human co-operation, a better human society.

CENTRAL WEST LETTER

By EDGAR P. ALLEN

Omaha

There is at least one banker in Kansas City who is thoroughly pleased with conditions. And there is not a banker, or anybody else for that matter, in the Central West who is better posted from his own intimate knowledge of conditions than this same Kansas City financier. James T. Bradley, cashier of the National Bank of Commerce of Kansas City, is a true westerner, although he has had national experience in banking and financial operations. Thus the correspondent of THE CHICAGO BANKER was made to feel much of Mr. Bradley's enthusiasm when he called upon him the other day for an expression as to the banking situation in the Central West. "Everybody is feeling fine," exclaimed Mr. Bradley. "Crop conditions were never better and the people are in excellent spirits. The ground has been frozen from two to three and a half feet and is mellowed and enriched and there has been an abundance of moisture. Last summer and fall there was a decided slump in incomes among the farmers due to shortened crops, and resources have been drained to a considerable extent, which will be felt during the present year. But no one could wish for a more wholesome revival than seems now imminent. Ordinary banking business is fairly active although the demand for money is a little below normal. Funds are easy and deposits are increasing. Yes, you may say that things are fine, fine," concluded Mr. Bradley as he turned to take care of an accumulated crowd of customers.

New Kansas City Bank

The Security State Bank is the name of a new institution which opened its doors for business in Kansas City last week. It occupies quarters at Thirty-ninth Street and State Line and will bid for business in the stock yards and packing districts. It begins business with $25,000 capital, and J. C. Simpson, assistant secretary of the Commerce Trust Company of Kansas City, is its president. W. R. Parker, formerly of Parsons, Kan., is cashier. Others interested are: C. J. Mustion, J. A. Haner and F. W. Hapst. These with the two officers are the directors. The bank will make a specialty of savings deposits and it is announced that the bank will set a new pace for this class of business by paying 4 per cent interest instead of the 3 per cent rate maintained by the up-town banks.

W. H. Holmes Back from East

Walton H. Holmes, president of the Pioneer Trust Company of Kansas City, has just returned from a business trip to New York, Philadelphia and Chicago, although he spent most of his time in New York. He returns to the Central West entirely satisfied with conditions here and really feels sorry for the poor easterner who is trying to make money in the banking business. "I prefer taking my chances in the West," said Mr. Holmes. "To quote some of the leading bankers of New York, 'It looks like a mighty lean year for the banks in the East.' Well, I told them this was not the situation in the West by a long shot. In the East they are paying 2 per cent for money and loaning it for 3 and 3½ per cent. There is nothing much in that sort of business, unless done on a mammoth scale. Out here we get 5, 5½ and 6 per cent. No new banks are being started in the East; in fact, the tendency is the other way. Large concerns are consolidating for the purpose of lessening their operating expenses and increasing their capital. While the outlook in the East may be 'lean' the prospects in the West are extremely bright. With the abundant snowfall a record crop is forecasted."

Death of Col. Hiram W. Lewis

Col. Hiram W. Lewis, a pioneer financier of Kansas and for many years closely identified with various banking institutions in Wichita, died February 14th in a Chicago hospital, where he had gone to undergo an operation. Mr. Lewis at the time of his death was president of the Gold Savings Bank of Wichita and immediately after the news of his death reached his home the Wichita Clearing House Association called a special meeting to take suitable action. It was in 1876 that Col. Lewis went to Wichita and opened the Farmers and Merchants, which later became the Kansas National, and now is one of the foremost financial institutions in Kansas. While Mr. Lewis was president of this institution he was president also of the National Loan Company of Wichita, the First National of Pratt, Kan., and the Kingman National of Kingman, Kan. He has important interests in the milling industry of southern Kansas as well as in many other enterprises all over the Southwest. Of a large family of children who survive him, one, Philip K. Lewis, was associated with his father in the banking business.

Those Who Attended Oklahoma Group Meetings

The Kansas City bankers who made the rounds of the Oklahoma group meetings last week occupied two special sleeping cars with a special diner attached. It was a jolly party and those who composed were: H. L. Jarboe, Jr., Drovers National Bank; C. W. Allendorfer, First National Bank; C. W. Moore, National Bank of Commerce; R. M. Cook, Interstate National Bank; E. H. Gregg, National Bank of the Republic; E. P. Davis, Southwest National Bank; C. B. McClusky, National Reserve Bank; J. L. Johnston, National Reserve Bank; J. C. English, Traders National Bank; R. C. Menefee, Commerce Trust Company; T. F. Brady, representing the Commerce Trust Company; George G. Moore, New England National Bank; J. A. Jackson, representing the Gate City National Bank; J. D. Wright, Peoples National Bank, Kansas City, Kan.; Jerome Thralls, Kansas City Clearing House Association; C. C. Jones.

Group 4, Oklahoma

Group 4 of the Oklahoma Bankers Association met last week at Okmulgee with more than 100 bankers in attendance. There were large delegations from Kansas City and other points outside the state. J. B. Adams, a banker of El Dorado, Kan., delivered an address upon Kaffir corn. He said that this single crop has changed the condition of his county from poverty to prosperity, in the face of last year's crop failures. C. W. Allendorfer, of the First National Bank of Kansas City, discussed the Aldrich plan, and explained wherein it would benefit the country banker. The convention closed with a banquet.

A. I. B. Chapter Organized at St. Joseph

A chapter of the American Institute of Banking has been organized in St. Joseph, Mo. Jerome Thralls, manager of the Kansas City Clearing House Association, officiated at the organization and explained the nature of the organization. A committee was appointed on further business and an election of officers will be held within the next few weeks. Mr. Thralls reports a great deal of enthusiasm among the bank employees of St. Joseph, and predicts a successful future for the new chapter.

District 5, Texas, Meeting

About three hundred bankers representing the fifth Texas district met in Dallas last week and held an unusually successful convention. The program, which has been published in these columns, was carried out without substantial change. The members of the Dallas Clearing House Association were hosts and every possible provision was made to give the visitors a good time. Among the bankers from out of the state who arrived to meet their Texas friends at this and other Texas group meetings were: Alexander D. Campbell, New York; Mr. Harrity, W. H. Hurley and L. H. Grimmey, all of Chicago; James R. Leavell, M. A. Raylor, R. S. Hawes, Mr. Hickey, all of St. Louis; J. R. Dominick of Kansas City. The following group officers were elected: Chairman, Fred A. Newton, cashier of the Citizens National Bank, Ennis; vice-chairman, W. B. Sellers, cashier

R. T. FORBES - President
J. E. COMBS - - Cashier
R. S. BRITTAIN, Asst. Cashier

of the First National Bank, Winnsboro; secretary, John B. Preston, cashier of the Allen State Bank, Allen. One of the amusing incidents of the meeting was the announcement that Champ Clark would deliver an address. It happened that this particular Champ Clark was not the well-known speaker of the house, but the cashier of the First National Bank of Frisco, Texas, who bears the same name. Mr. Clark declared that he would rather be a Texas banker than president.

Among the Visiting Bankers

Among the visiting bankers in Kansas City last week were many who came to attend the Automobile Show in Corvention Hall. The following circulated among the local financiers: C. C. Nelson, Fort Scott, Kan.; F. P. Metzger, Topeka, Kan.; C. D. McDonald, Fort Scott, Kan.; J. E. Campbell, Nowata, Okla.; C. P. Blood, Douglass, Kan.; T. J. Kennedy, Cedar Bluffs, Kan.; H. R. Central West Notes

Bondholders of the Omaha Independent Telephone Company held a meeting recently and placed the affairs of that company in the hands of a special committee. The men present at the meeting represented $1,200,000 of the bonds and a proposition was favorably considered to sell the property, which is now in the hands of a receiver.

Charles E. Mullin, formerly cashier of a Pittsburgh, Pa., national bank, and Clarence C. Waller, formerly connected with a bank at Fort Smith, Ark., were released recently from the federal prison at Leavenworth, Kan.

During a sand storm two robbers entered the Seminole National Bank of Seminole, Tex., last week, and, finding the cashier alone, they locked him in the vault and got away with $3,500 in currency. They overlooked a package of money of great value which was in the vault.

Banking and improved banking methods were the subjects discussed recently at the annual dinner of the Maryville, Mo., Commercial Club. The chief guests of the evening were G. H. Mahan, of Hannibal, Mo., president of the Missouri branch of the National Citizens League; J. N. Finning, of St. Louis, secretary of the Missouri branch, and R. T. Forbes, president of the First National Bank of St. Joseph, Mo.

The controlling interest in the First State Bank of Larned, Kan., has been sold by F. D. Lowrey, retiring cashier, to John E. Wagner of Fowler, Colo. The bank has a capital of $60,000.

W. L. Norton, former president of the American National Bank of Bartlesville, Okla., is being tried at Muskogee, Okla., on the charge of misappropriating $27,000 of the bank's funds. Norton was indicted on eleven counts.

E. F. Brown, banker, broker and president of the Brown Brick and Tile Company of Houston, Texas, has been arrested charged with a technical violation of the state banking laws in making a loan out of the funds of the Paige State Bank without first securing the consent of the directors. Mr. Brown was president of the bank at Paige, Texas.

All of the cases against W. A. Wilson and N. D. Sanders, of Kansas City, and Thomas Baird and George T. Bacastow, of Arkansas City, Kan., growing out of the failure of the Citizens and Farmers State Bank of Arkansas City, have been dismissed. The men were directors of the bank when it failed. There are civil action suits against all four men amounting to $98,000 said to be due depositors and these cases will be tried.

J. Hayes of Grayson county, Texas, has been appointed to close the affairs of the Paige Bank which failed recently.

Waco, Texas, is considering the proposition of a bond issue for $400,000 to build a water works pumping station and filtration plant.

E. E. Emmett, of Arapahoe, Neb., state bank examiner, has been appointed a national bank examiner by the secretary of the treasury.

The Argyle State Bank of Argyle, Texas, was robbed of $1,700 last week. A sheriff's posse was hot on the trail of the thieves when a punctured automobile tire delayed the feet of justice and the bandits escaped.

There is much talk in Missouri just now of nominating James Cowgil, state treasurer, as democratic candidate for governor. Mr. Cowgil is very popular and lives in Richmond, Missouri.

William H. Hill, a veteran banker of Keytesville, Mo., died last week.

James F. Stewart, a banker of Webb City, Mo., twenty-three years, died last week. He was president of the Mineral Belt Bank for eighteen years.

The Kansas City, Mexico & Orient Railroad is offering its stockholders $10,000,000 ten year 5 per cent first mortgage collateral trust bonds at par. The proceeds of the sale of these bonds will be used to pay for the building of the main line from San Angelo, Texas, to Chihuahua, Mexico, where connection with the National Railway of Mexico will be made. The company at last reports has outstanding $12,500,000 preferred stock, $12,264,135 common stock and $18,190,000 first mortgage 4 per cent bonds.

The Commerce Trust Company of Kansas City has been appointed trustee for the Great Western Cement Company of Iola, Kan., which decided to issue bonds in the sum of $350,000 to pay the debt of the company and provide operating money.

R. L. Beattie, assistant cashier of Gate City National Bank of Kansas City, has purchased stock and will soon assume active management of the Union National Bank of Bartlesville, Okla. Before coming to Kansas City Mr. Beattie was president of the Bartlesville National Bank.

Effective March 1st, John N. Sparks will be president of the Stockyards National Bank of Fort Worth, Texas, succeeding J. L. Price, who retires to become president of a trust company in Atlanta, Ga.

H. E. Corbin, bond representative for a firm of financial brokers in Chicago, was a Kansas City visitor last week.

The State Bank of Collinsville, Okla., has been granted a charter, with $10,000 in capital stock. The incorporators are John G. Butler and L. S. Butler of Collinsville, and C. H. Bassett of Norman, Okla.

PITTSBURGH CHAPTER NEWS

By H. E. HEBRANK, PRESIDENT.

Pittsburgh Chapter American Institute of Banking held their "Big Night" meeting at their assembly hall and club rooms in the Jenkins Arcade last Tuesday night. On account of the interesting program for the evening the hall was packed long before the hour for starting, over six hundred members and non-members being in attendance. Those coming late were compelled to stand, something unusual for the local chapter.

The meeting opened with selections by the Columbia Symphony Orchestra of 25 pieces, followed by an address by the national president, Raymond B. Cox. His subject was "The Institute and its Benefits." On account of the great ovation given Mr. Cox it was some little time before he could proceed. His address was listened to with great interest, for he handed out some startling facts. He pleaded for more activity and greater effort for the non-members, also said that the large financial institutions are looking for efficient young men to-day and it is up to every bank clerk to make good.

The annual money counting contests resulted as follows:

First prize—Wm. Jolly, Peoples National Bank.

Second prize—Jos. H. Young, Union National Bank.

Third prize—A. G. Wells, Pittsburgh Bank for Savings.

The adding machine contests resulted in 250 checks being listed in 4 minutes.

First prize—A. J. Harnack, Federal National Bank.

Second prize—A. T. Eyler, Union National Bank.

Third prize—M. S. Vandervort, Monongahela National Bank.

Banking news from Minneapolis—St. Paul financial center, and surrounding States, compiled by J. Edwards Smith

Bankers have been asked by the state committee on agriculture and education to get in touch with the farmers to see about seed corn so that the 1912 crop will not be inferior. J. W. Wheeler of the Security Trust Company, St. Paul, member of the committee, says: "The corn acreage of Minnesota has increased about 500,000 bushels in each decade the last thirty years, and we are afraid the ratio of increases will be imperiled this year by a lack of high grade seed. At this time we are urging the importance of seed selection. The circular has been compiled by men who know their business and will be of great use to the farmers."

Want Customs Deposits

With customs collections in Minneapolis amounting to $500,812 last year and the collections in January $97,282, twice as much as the previous January, the Minneapolis bankers approve of any plan that will permit customs deposits to remain in the banks accepted as depositories.

W. H. Dunwoody in New York

W. H. Dunwoody, chairman of the board of the Northwestern National, said in New York: "We in the Northwest are more dependent on the crops for our prosperity than any other source of wealth, and, although it is too early to make predictions along that line, in one respect, at least, the prospects are unusually good. While a year ago the ground was very dry, and we entered the spring with little moisture, this year there is perhaps more moisture frozen in the ground than for many years past."

Will Observe "Famine" Day

F. M. Prince, president of the Minneapolis First National, as chairman of the branch of the Red Cross Society, will join with others in having March 10th observed as "famine" day in all the churches. "Some contributions for the famine victims are coming in, but we ought to have more. If the horrible conditions in China were understood there would be an overwhelming amount subscribed here for relief work."

Open Twin City Stock Exchange

The Twin City Stock Exchange in Minneapolis was opened last week in the Kasota building. Sandwiches, punch and cigars were on the menu of entertainment by the officers. H. Batchelor, treasurer, says delay due to non-arrival of fixtures has been overcome and the exchange will be in full operation this week. Members of committees are to be selected tomorrow. The exchange reports nineteen members and fifteen applications. The limit is 100 members.

Bankers Re-elected Directors

Three bankers have been re-elected directors of the Northwestern National Life Insurance Company: F. A. Chamberlain, president Security National; J. A. Latta, vice-president Northwestern National; A. A. Crane, vice-president First National. Total benefits to stockholders in the year are reported at $1,714,055; loans were made policy security amounting to $332,727. Surplus is $335,271. Earnings for 1911 were $74,713, of which $34,161 went in dividends.

Stenehjem Reaches Minneapolis

Whether because he was playing whist at the time, or because he is a banker, G. A. Stenehjem, cashier of the Farmers State at Arnesgard, N. D., is not sure, he went into the ditch with a Great Northern Oriental Limited train and bumped his chin. A slide of a few hundred feet, time tells, seems to have little effect on the passenger trains of this road, further than to disarrange the outside paint design and scatter the seat cushions about the aisle. Occasionally something worse happens, but this time Mr. Stenehjem was able to continue on one of the cars of the original train tied to the Fast Mail train of the same road and hauled to Minneapolis. The car was the observation and buffet combination and his ride to Minneapolis was going some. A broken rail made the trouble. Mr. Stenehjem was coming to Minneapolis anyway, but he thought he would book passage on the train that was to go into the ditch, which he did.

Banking Notes of Interest

E. A. Moie has retired as cashier of the Rochester National Bank, Rochester, Minn., to become secretary of the Maass & McAndrew Company, plumbing contractors.

H. A. Wheeler, president of the United Trust and Savings, Chicago, last week addressed the Minneapolis Civic and Commerce Association and the St. Paul Association of Commerce on the work of the Chicago Association of Commerce, of which he was once president.

The First National of Corydon, Iowa, has been approved with $15,000 capital, on application of C. W. Steele, L. Kimple, C. L. Clark, F. R. Fry, F. B. Fry. The existence of the Anamosa National, same state, has been extended to 1932.

O. H. Havill was found guilty at Little Falls of receiving deposits in the State Bank of Bowlus, Minn., unlawfully. The jury was out four hours and fifteen minutes.

J. P. O'Malley, Perry, Iowa, banker, has come out as candidate for the democratic nomination for congress from the seventh district.

$1,000,000 BANK FOR HOUSTON

The comptroller has approved the application to organize the South Texas Commercial National Bank of Houston, Texas, capital $1,000,000, to succeed the South Texas National Bank of Houston and the Commercial National Bank of Houston.

The McGregor (N. D.) State Bank has purchased the business of the State Bank of McGregor and the latter will be liquidated.

KENTUCKY STATE BANKING DEPARTMENT CREATED

The state senate of Kentucky recently passed Senator Herman D. Newcomb's bill creating a department of state banking under control of a bank commissioner, deputy and three inspectors, by an overwhelming vote. The commissioner will be appointed by the governor under the measure, and he will in turn appoint his deputy, and the three inspectors. The department will be bipartisan in nature, the commissioner to be of the same political faith as the party in power, while the deputy shall be of the other leading party.

Two of the examiners are to be of the same political faith as the commissioner, while the remaining one shall be affiliated with the same party as the deputy commissioner. The bill provides that the commissioner shall receive a salary of $3,600 a year, his deputy $2,500, and the examiners $2,000 each. The department of state banking shall examine every state bank in Kentucky at least twice a year and as much oftener as it shall think necessary. The cost of maintaining the department will be borne by state banks, the scale of assessments running from $15 to $250, determined by the combined capital and surplus of the respective institutions.

ANNUAL BANQUET, BALTIMORE CHAPTER A. I. B.

Arrangements have been perfected for the annual banquet of the Baltimore Chapter of the American Institute of Banking to be given at the Emerson, on the evening of March 2, 1912. The principal speaker of the occasion will be Morgan Shuster, ex-treasurer-general of the Persian Empire, whose convenience was consulted in fixing the date of the meeting. Among other notable persons who will make addresses are Senator Hitchcock of Nebraska; Congressman Slayden, of Texas; Governor Golsborough, of Maryland, and Mayor Preston of Baltimore. Congressman Harry Covington, of Easton, will be toastmaster.

The Missouri "Dawg Song"

The Missouri "Dawg Song," which has been set to music and is printed here in full words and chorus, was sung at the Kansas City, Mo., Bankers club dinner Tuesday night, January 23d, at the Baltimore, by a quadruple quartet, directed by C. G. Hutchinson of the First National, and led by T. F. Brady of the Commerce Trust Company.

Wunst me 'n Lem Briggs 'n' ol' Bill Brown
Tuk a load of cawn to town;
An' ol' Jim—dawg, the onery cuss—
He jes' natchelly follered us.

CHORUS.

Every time I come to town,
The boys keep a-kickin' my dawg aroun';
Makes no difference if he is a houn',
They gotta quit kickin' my dawg aroun'.

As we driv' past Sam Johnson's sto',
Passel o' yapes kem out the do';
When Jim he stops to smell a box,
They shied at him a bunch o' rocks.

They tied a tin can on his tail,
An' run him a-past the county jail,
'N' that plumb natchelly made me sore—
'N' Lem he cussed 'n' Bill he swore.

Me 'n' Lem Briggs 'n' ol' Bill Brown,
We lost no time in a-jumpin' down,
An' we wiped them ducks up on th' groun'
Fer kickin' my ol' dawg aroun'.

Folks say a dawg kain't hold no grudge,
But wunst when I got too much budge,
Them town ducks tried to do me up,
But they didn't count on ol' Jim—pup.

Jim seed his duty thar an' then,
An' he lit into them gentlemen,
An' he shore mussed up th' cote house square,
With rags 'n' meat 'n' hide 'n' hair.

This song will be "official" at both republican and democratic state conventions in Missouri, and at the bankers convention and banquet at Joplin, so "you all" might as well qualify by committing air and words to memory.

NEW OHIO BANKS

Columbus, Ohio.—State Bank Superintendent F. E. Baxter has issued certificates permitting two new banks to begin business. They are the Orrville Savings Bank, of Orrville, $40,000 capital stock, and the Payne State Bank, of Payne, Paulding county, $50,000 capital stock.

S. H. Brenneman is president, and H. P. Shantz, cashier of the Orrville Savings, which takes over a private bank, which has been in successful operation many years. Abe Ackerman is president of the Payne State.

Fred C. Mills, with the Union Square Savings Bank, New York City, for several years, has been made assistant cashier.

Pacific Northwest Banking News

Spokane, Wash., February 26.—City commissioners of Spokane agreed at a conference with representatives of the Spokane Chamber of Commerce and financial, commercial and industrial interests on February 14th, to submit to popular vote a proposal to issue $500,000 bonds for the construction of a municipal auditorium, as soon as a petition bearing the names of 2,000 electors, favorable to the plan, is presented to the council. E. F. Cartier Van Dissel, chairman of the auditorium committee, announces that a campaign will start at once with a view to having an election as early as possible this spring, saying also there is every reason to think that the taxpayers will approve the bond issue, in which event building operations will begin immediately afterward. Spokane will entertain a score or more of conventions this year, including the National Grange and other large gatherings.

Railroad Taxes

Statistics compiled by the tax commission show that of $1,946,255 collected in taxes for 1911, the railroads in Washington paid $947,435. The total amount collected for the last year was $29,033,234. The increase in real estate and personal property was about $900,000. The report shows that the taxes paid by railroads increased from $2,334,000 to $3,181,000, which means that of every $100 paid in taxes $11.30 is paid by the railroads on their track and right of way.

Establishes Sinking Fund

Spokane city council has established a sinking fund for the redemption of $875,000 park bonds, maturing in 50 years. The fund, which will be invested in city warrants at 6 per cent, was started with the premium of $13,000, due from the sale of park bonds. The park bonds were dated January 1, 1912, and as they have just been turned over to the purchasers, about $5,000 in interest has accumulated, which the sinking fund commission has placed in the interest-on-bonds fund.

Guy C. Browne

Guy C. Browne of Spokane, son of J. J. Browne, owner of a string of banks in eastern Washington and northern Idaho, has returned to Wenatchee, Wash., to become cashier of the Columbia Valley Bank, succeeding C. E. Owens, resigned. Mr. Browne will be assisted by F. D. Case. Mr. Owens and his associates have purchased the stock of the Farmers and Merchants Bank.

Will Conduct Mortgage and Realty Business

H. H. McLane and George L. Newcomb of Chicago, where the first named is a member of the firm of James M. McLane & Co., have established offices in Spokane to conduct a general mortgage and realty business. Mr. Newcomb said: "We have secured practically an unlimited sum of eastern capital for investment in the Spokane country, and especially in Spokane real estate mortgages. We believe we will be able to offer money at remarkably low rates because of our Chicago connections.

Idaho Bank Taken Over by Stockholders

State Bank of Kendrick, Idaho, which closed on February 8th, following an examination by V. W. Platt, state bank commissioner, will be taken over by stockholders, who subscribed $35,000 at a meeting on February 12th. Emmett Eastwood is the receiver in charge. The bank was established in 1897 with a capital of $25,000, represented by notes of the president, John Bradbury, his brother, Edward Bradbury, cashier, and several others. These are due in 1916. The liabilities are placed at $162,500, including $20,000 due other banks, and the deposits amount to $118,000. The assets, including the notes of the officials of the bank, cover the liabilities.

Fire Loss in United States

Franklin H. Wentworth of Boston, secretary of the National Fire Prevention Association, said at a meeting of the credit men's branch of the Spokane Merchants Association that the destruction of $250,000,000 worth of property by fire annually is impoverishing the nation. He urged that every precaution be taken. W. D. Vincent, cashier of the Old National Bank, presided, the address of welcome being delivered by Mayor W. J. Hindley.

R. Lewis Rutter

R. Lewis Rutter, vice-president of the Spokane and Eastern Trust Company, was re-elected president of the Western Union Life Insurance Company at a meeting of the trustees on February 13th. R. Insinger, manager of the Northwestern and Pacific Hypotheekbank, continues as vice-president. Charles Borden, of Denver, was appointed to the position of auditor and assistant secretary. The stockholders voted to set aside the company's earnings to surplus instead of paying a dividend. This gives the company a surplus of $140,000. The capital stock is $200,000, all paid in.

Banking Notes

Connor Malott, manager of the mortgage department of the Spokane and Eastern Trust Company, reports there is a surplus of money available for mortgage investments at from 5 to 8 per cent on income, residence and farm property.

Charles E. Meek, assistant cashier of the Fourth National Bank of New York and vice-president of the National Credit Men's Association, said while in Spokane recently there is no cause for alarm over the business outlook, as the country is in good condition.

M. S. Bentley, who is now in southern California, is planning to establish a bank near Second Avenue and Howard Street in Spokane for the accommodation of business houses and residents on the south central part of the city.

W. H. Welty, a banker at Colfax, Wash., convicted some time ago, has given himself into the custody of the officials of the penitentiary at Walla Walla. He was sentenced some time ago to serve an indeterminate term.

Because the lithographer neglected to include the seal of the city of Spokane in printing the coupons of a bond issue of $875,000, recently sold to E. H. Rollins & Sons of Chicago and New York, the buyers have asked for the return of the money. C. B. Woods of Chicago, a bond expert, represented the city in the transaction, and had charge of the printing of the bonds. The commissioners have ordered the changes made.

First National Bank of Bend, Wash., has awarded a contract for the construction of a bank building costing $20,000. The structure will be of pressed brick.

John J. Cadigan, formerly of Boston, was elected president of the New World Life Insurance Company, of Spokane, on February 14th, succeeding Edward J. Cannon, resigned. E. J. O'Shea was re-elected secretary and Philip Harding continues as manager. John J. Martin, of Boston, was re-elected a director. The company's cash assets are placed at $400,000.

D. W. Twohy, president of the Old National Bank, has gone to Honolulu on a vacation.

Des Moines, February 22.—Pre-convention politics have begun to boil more briskly since the first group meeting of the year was held at Ottumwa, February 12th. At this meeting representatives from Des Moines, Davenport, Dubuque and Fort Dodge were on hand, boosting for these various cities as the place for holding the 1913 convention. Des Moines won the day and secured the passage of a resolution favoring this city as the meeting place. The resolution declares Des Moines is the logical point for the convention. It is evident that other group meetings are likely to be face to face with similar delegations and doubtless the campaign will grow lively before the convention meets at Cedar Rapids this year. Two new candidates for treasurer of the state association also came to the front at Ottumwa. One is Frank Epperson, vice-president of the Manning & Epperson State of Eddyville and the other is E. L. Stickney, cashier of the First National at Moulton. The group very wisely decided not to take stands on this question, since both bankers are from Group 10. The resolutions recommend both bankers as thoroughly worthy and suggest that their friends get together and throw the strength of the group to whichever candidate develops the more strength prior to the state convention. One resolution is somewhat unique. It reads like this: "We congratulate the people of the state of Iowa upon the present satisfactory banking conditions. We especially commend the bankers of the state for having finally stopped the drainage of money from our state for investment in western and southern states and northern provinces. While Iowa is strong and rich, we do not believe it fair or just to our own business interest that we should furnish the money to purchase the balance of the United States and Canada also."

S. F. McConnell of Bloomfield was chosen chairman of the group and Ben Brown of Ottumwa was chosen secretary. The executive committee will consist of these two and Ned McCauley of Appanoose county; J. S. Moon of Monroe county, L. E. Butler of Mahaska county, J. R. McKey of Keokuk county, and J. W. Young of Van Buren county.

Henry Meyer, assistant cashier of the National City of Chicago, read a splendid paper on "Relations of City and County Banks." Senator J. F. Webber spoke on taxation. S. F. McConnell, chairman, gave a splendid address at the opening of the session. Secretary P. W. Hall of the I. B. A. spoke upon the work of the association. It was a well attended and most interesting group meeting.

Group 7 Holds Meeting

Two group meetings were held February 22d, Group 7 at Tama and Toledo, "Iowa's Twin Cities," and Group 11 at Burlington. George D. McElroy of Vinton is chairman of Group 7 and B. E. Hakes of Williamsburg is secretary. The program for this meeting, called at ten o'clock in the court room, opened with prayer by Rev. C. L. Nye of Toledo, music by the Imperial Male Quartet of Cedar Rapids, and address of welcome by H. J. Stiger, vice-president of the First National of Toledo. Chairman McElroy made the response. B. E. Hakes, secretary, gave his report. After music by the quartet, Hon. A. F. Dawson, president of the First National of Davenport, gave the principal address of the session. His subject was "Pending Currency Legislation." Dinner was given at Soleman's opera house, Tama. Dr. Frederick E. Brooke, president Leander Clark College was toastmaster. Responses were given by Emerson Deputy of the Northwestern Banker, Des Moines, on "Publicity, Pro and Con"; Sherman DeWolf of Reinbeck, state senator, "Legislation and the Banks"; S. C. Huber, director Commercial Savings, Tama, "The Musquakie"; Ernest R. Moore, president American Trust and Savings, Cedar Rapids, "The Banker's Anthem"; Arthur White, director Peoples Savings, Vinton, "The Cureall for Public Distress." This concluded the program, which was remarkable throughout for strength and general interest.

Group 11 Program

The program for Group 11 at Burlington was opened at the Hotel Burlington, where registration was held. At 11 o'clock, the bankers assembled at the Garrick Theater. The principal address of the forenoon was given by A. O. Wilson, vice-president of the State National, St. Louis on the subject, "The Situation and the Day." Then followed a moving picture display put on by Manager Root of the theater. There were then reports of committees and election of officers. The banquet at 12:30 was at Hotel Burlington. The first address was by Hon. F. M. Molesberry, "The Capitalization of Suspicion." Secretary P. W. Hall of the Iowa Bankers Association spoke following Mr. Molesberry. Judge J. C. Power of Burlington conducted a question box on the nex tax law. The meeting was well attended and the discussions were of especial interest to the financiers of Southeastern Iowa. E. R. Lacey of Washington as chairman of the group presided at the business sessions.

Bankers Want Square Deal

The taxation committee of the Iowa Bankers Association appeared before the state tax commission last week and took up the cudgel for fair treatment to bankers in the matter of taxes. The committee, which went before the commission is composed of C. D. Ellis, vice-president of the Security Trust and Savings, Charles City; J. L. Edwards, president of the Merchants National, Burlington; Secretary P. W. Hall; A. H. Gale, City National, Mason City, and State Senator J. F. Webber of Ottumwa. The committee was given splendid attention and was kept busy until six o'clock in the afternoon. Members of the commission asked many questions, indicating that they are intensely interested and sincere in their desire to better bank conditions from a taxation standpoint. Iowa bankers feel that the law enacted by the legislature last winter assessing them upon an 80 per cent valuation while other property pays on 20 to 25 per cent is decidedly unjust. The members of the committee made it plain that they do not ask any advantage. But they want a square deal. They would prefer uniform taxation upon a 100 per cent basis with a lower levy, or they favor a flat millage rate providing they are on an equality with the farmer or merchant. Senator Webber claimed that at present Iowa banks are cutting down their surpluses because of taxation. He declared this is working against the best interests of the Iowa banks.

A. A. Crane, president of the Bank of Harrison, Idaho, will be a candidate for the governorship of Idaho at the coming general election.

Kreutsinger Arrested for Theft of Mail Pouch

Several banks have been interested in the arrest of Albert Kreutsinger at Council Bluffs on a charge of implication in the theft of a pouch of mail from the Milwaukee depot in that city and the subsequent destruction of $65,000 in checks and drafts. Much of the paper was drawn on Des Moines banks, and it has required considerable extra work to untangle the muddle. Albert Custin, also placed under arrest, made a confession in which he implicated Kreutsinger and another, and told of witnessing the burning of the pouch.

Des Moines Bankers to Give Dinner

Des Moines bankers are preparing to give a dinner and ask Governor Woodrow Wilson of New Jersey to make an address when he speak in Des Moines, March 1st. It is purposed, at this writing, to invite bankers from all over Iowa to attend. There is some objection to the political phase of the question, which it is feared would creep into the arrangements so that at this writing, the affair is in the embryo stage.

Banker Out for Congress

O. Mosher, banker at Walnut, Iowa, has announced that he is coming out for congress on the democratic ticket in the ninth Iowa district. A meeting of his friends at Council Bluffs launched the candidacy. J. P. O'Malley, a banker at Perry, is in the race for congress in the seventh district on the democratic ticket, and it is not unlikely that Parley Sheldon, the Ames banker, will make a similar announcement.

State Banks in Satisfactory Condition

Conditions indicate that the banking reports in answer to the call of Auditor Bleakly for the condition at the close of business February 7th will be entirely satisfactory. The state and savings banks of Des Moines will probably show a slight decrease in deposits and an increase in loans. This is the hard quarter for the banks for it precedes the settlements of March 1st, which always require much cash.

Corn Contest

Among the successful corn contests held by banks the past year, that of the Cedar Falls National at Cedar Falls ranks well towards the top. This institution offered prizes of $85 in cash to the boys under sixteen, who would raise the largest yield of corn from a single acre. Twenty boys entered the contest and the prizes were awarded a few days ago.

Farmers and Merchants at Harlan Has New Building

The Farmers and Merchants at Harlan opened a fine new building with a reception, which was attended by fully 5,000 Shelby county people. St. Catherine's Guild of the Episcopal Church served lunch for the guests while each gentleman was given a cigar and each lady an American Beauty rose. The building is reported a beauty. Its exterior is Carthage marble, the interior finish is circassian walnut with tile floors, marble wainscoting and thoroughly up-to-date fixtures. The bank, which is six years old, has a capital stock of $50,000 and deposits of $400,000. E. C. Clapp, is president; E. M. Herbert and A. C. Clapp, vice-president; R. D. Prouty, cashier.

Cedar Rapids Banks Show Increased Deposits

Cedar Rapids banks are rejoicing over a nice increase in deposits for the year ending January 31st. At the annual meeting of the clearing house association last week, the total clearings for the year were shown to be $65,899,329.73, an increase of $9,185.06 over the preceding year. During the past year many items coming from Chicago have been sent direct to the banks and in previous years this passed through the clearing house, otherwise the increase would be more noticeable. Officers elected were James E. Hamilton, president; John Burianek, Jr., first vice-president; Louis Woukon, second vice-president; Frank Filip, treasurer; W. J. Elliott, secretary and manager.

Banking Notes

L. J. Yaggy, cashier of the First National at Davenport, who keeps his eyes open upon all occasions, picked up a check thirty-five year old on the street of that city. It was drawn May 31, 1877, and was payable to L. G. Gage, cashier of the Citizens National, which has since been absorbed by the German Savings.

The Garland Corporation lost out in an effort to secure $18,437 from the Citizens Savings at Waterloo and the Waterloo Loan and Trust Company. After a long session the jury brought in a verdict in favor of the defendants. The suit was brought to secure balance of the proceeds of eleven promissory notes, which the plaintiff claimed was due it under the terms of an old agreement.

Plans have been completed in Des Moines for the erection this year of a seven-story structure, which is to be located in East Des Moines by H. E. Tarchout. The second floor will be occupied by the Iowa Trust and Savings Bank. The building will cost about $200,000, and will be a credit to the city and state.

The Newton News says: "At a meeting of Des Moines advertisers the other day, an authority on advertising stated that banks should be advertisers. Of course this is true. The wonder is that Des Moines banks have not recognized the necessity sooner. All the banks of Newton have been advertisers this long while."

Hollinger & Larimer have bought the A. E. Dorn bank at Chariton and according to the newspapers they paid $5,750 for it.

The Callender Savings has filed articles increasing its capital stock from $12,000 to $20,000.

The Farmers National at Webster City will enlarge its present structure.

Mrs. A. W. Murphy, wife of President Murphy of the First National of Shenandoah, has been visiting friends in Des Moines.

Fred S. Risser, cashier of the Central State, Des Moines, is the happy father of a son left at the Risser home by the stork.

Charles H. McNider, president of the First National at Mason City, has been chosen president of the Southwestern States Cement Co. He has been at Dallas, where he has extensive interests.

The new Northwest Davenport Savings at Davenport reports the following officers: President, J. S. Weber; vice-president, Peter Peters. A committee was named to receive applications for cashier. This is the bank which was organized at a mass meeting some time ago.

J. W. Huntington, who has for same time poked his face through the windows of the Jefferson Savings at Jefferson, announces his retirement to private life.

Des Moines bank clearings for the week ending February 17th totaled $4,118,890 an increase over the clearings for the corresponding week last year of $531,844.

Theodore Doerfler, cashier of the bank at Wesley, and formerly with the German Savings at Dubuque, died last week. He was a promising young banker.

Sioux City

By JOHN J. BIDDISON.

Every prospect pleases, and man isn't as vile as he might be, in the opinion of John L. Large, vice-president of the First National bank, who, having surveyed the field, pronounces it good. Business is getting bigger and bigger as the spring season draws nearer, and the advent of warm weather, having put money into the pockets of those many farmers who hauled corn to market, is resulting in the payment of debts. A considerable amount of paper not collectible until March 1st is now being taken up by farmers, he says, and his bank has done more business of this nature in the first 20 days of the present month than in the whole of February last year. Farmers are moving their grain and their live stock in large quantities for good prices while the favorable weather lasts for fear that another severe freeze may make the roads impassable. Last week was a record breaker in the local live stock market in hog receipts.

A. O. Wilson, vice-president of the State National Bank, has been invited to deliver an address, subject, "The Situation and The Day," before Group 2 of the Iowa Bankers Association at Burlington to-day, and has accepted. This is an important group, having eighty-five banks as members, and a large gathering is looked for.

Among the Visiting Bankers

R. C. McKinney, cashier of the Cleghorn State Bank, Cleghorn, Iowa, was in Sioux City on business Tuesday.

W. W. McElrath, president of the Merville State Bank, of Merville, Iowa, was in Sioux City Wednesday in attendance at a meeting which a committee of the Commercial Club held with reference to the organization they are perfecting in the interest of the betterment of farming in Woodbury county.

W. A. Schaetzel, president of the Union County Bank, Elk Point, S. D., and Oluf Johnson, cashier of the First National Bank of that place, passed through Sioux City Thursday on their way to Grand Island, Nebraska, to attend a duplicate whist tournament. These men are both experts at that game, and gave a good account of themselves.

M. M. Taylor, assistant cashier of the First National Bank, Plainview, Nebraska, was in Sioux City Friday.

J. S. Wilson, cashier of the First National Bank, Hull, Iowa, was in Sioux City Saturday.

W. A. Sanford, vice-president of the First National Bank, Cherokee, Iowa, was transacting business in Sioux City Monday.

A. J. Gregory, assistant cashier, was in Sioux City Monday in the interests of the Farmers Bank, Salix, Iowa.

sure of proper treatment after accepting the printed invitation to call and open an account.

The banker is himself to blame for much of the money kept in the stocking banks, by not educating the public to do its banking business with banks and in allowing it to continue to believe, as it has for decades, that a bank is an awesome place, and only for the very rich. He should take the public into his confidence and put his business on the same level as any other legitimate business. Proper publicity by banks would go a long ways in curing any feeling of unrest and lack of confidence, and, while possibly not a cure for panics, would certainly make them less frequent and less severe.

THE MASON ASSETS

The Mason private-bank assets when filed by the receiver showed 250,000 shares of "perfectly good" (paper was good) mining shares, development shares, Nevada Frog, and the like. Surely these "investments" would not have passed the bank examiner, had the bank been under supervision. The mere fact of supervision would have precluded even a thought of such use of the depositors' money.

INDIANA BANKER DEAD

Newcastle, Ind., February 21.—David W. Kinsey, 65 years old, died at his home in South Main Street this morning after two weeks' illness. Mr. Kinsey was prominent as a Republican, and at the time of his death was cashier of the Citizens State Bank, a position he had held for nearly forty years. He had served as county clerk, and numerous other capacities, being a member of the city school board for a number of years, and largely responsible in bringing the schools to the present high standard. He was affiliated with many lodges and other organizations. One daughter, Mrs. Harry E. Jennings, survives.

PARIS SAVINGS BANK

The accounts have been issued of the Paris Savings Bank for the year 1911—a savings and provident bank independent in principle, but using its deposits to invest in state securities, often under the immediate supervision of the state. This bank received 372,000 deposits in 1911, of which 41,500 were from new depositors. The total amount deposited was 39,380,000 francs. Withdrawals amounted in the course of the year to 43,750,000 francs for 187,000 persons, of whom 30,000 closed their accounts. On December 31, 1911, the total deposits in the Paris Savings Bank amounted to 116,750,000 francs, and the number of depositors was 674,500. There is no cause for surprise at the comparatively small number of depositors, because the postoffice savings bank is a very formidable competitor of the private savings banks. The total amount due to depositors, which was 120,290,000 francs on January 1, 1911, diminished in the year by more than 3,500,000 francs. The bank is trustee for 37,380 inscribed bonds, representing a capital of 34,770,000 francs. The accounts of the ordinary savings banks (those of the postoffice savings banks are behindhand) show that withdrawals during 1911 exceeded deposits by 152,178,000 francs—a diminution of 23,156,000 francs, for it must not be forgotten that 129,000,000 francs was paid as interest on the deposits. The position has much improved lately, as during the first ten days alone of 1912 the deposits in the ordinary savings banks were 632,000 francs, whilst the withdrawals were only 155,000 francs—a big excess of deposits for so short a period.

Convention Stories

The following are little anecdotes told at annual conventions held by the Washington Bankers Association at Wenatchee on September 14-16, 1911, and at the California Bankers Association at Lake Tahoe, June 15, 16 and 17, 1911.

In his address of welcome to the visitors at the Washington convention, Frank Reeves, president of the Wenatchee Commercial Club, told the following:

"We feel towards you this morning, my friends, like the young lover did after he had been successful. You know he had been going with the girl for a number of years, and he never quite got up courage to pop the question; he approached it with fear and trembling, and finally one time, at the psychological moment, before he knew what he was doing, he said: 'Jane, will you marry me?' 'Why,' she says, 'yes.' 'Oh!' he says, 'thank heaven!' 'Why,' she says, 'why didn't you ask me long ago, and I would have said "yes" any time?' He couldn't speak for joy, then he turned around and looked up to God's sunshine and he says: 'I ain't got anything again' anybody."

At the same meeting, Joseph Chapman, Jr., vice-president of the Northwestern National at Minneapolis, in speaking on "The Relation of the Banker to the Farmer," prefaced his remarks by the following:

"Gentlemen of the Washington Bankers Association: Your cordial reception reminds me somewhat of the story a lady once told; she made a great speech and the audience kept busy with prolonged applause, and finally she came out and said that in the village where she lived there was a woman, who was all the time calling Tommy, whether she had anything special on her mind or not. If she did not think of anything she would go to the door and bawl out 'Tommy!' So one time she called a little louder than usual, and Tommy poked his head out from around the fence and said, 'Say, maw, do you really want me or are you just hollerin'?"

George P. Wiley, cashier Waterville Savings Bank, in talking on "Some Questions of Interest to a Country Banker," at the Wenatchee convention, related this incident:

"A speaker at a bankers convention in the Central West told of a boy who had been led by his father to anticipate for some time the opening of a bank account, and who finally was taken to the village banker. In introducing this official, his father said, 'James, my boy, this is Mr. Lovett, the village banker, and that you may know what a banker is, my son, I wish to state that he is a man with comparatively little money of his own, but one who undertakes to take care of a great deal of other people's money.'"

In speaking on "Clearing House Examinations," at the same meeting, Charles W. Riehl of St. Joseph, Missouri, offered the following:

"A minister in Baltimore, not noted for the brevity of his discourses, started his sermon one Sunday morning, and after about ten minutes, stopped suddenly and said, 'Brethren, I am sorry to announce that I cannot proceed any further this morning. I have a dog at home that is very fond of paper, and this morning he chewed up the rest of my sermon, consequently I will not be able to deliver it to you.' After the service was over, a visiting elder from one of the other churches met him and said, 'Pastor, has that dog of yours any pups?' 'No,' he said; 'why?' 'Well,' he said, 'I would like to get one for our preacher over there.'"

At the California convention, John Perrin, member of the currency commission of the American Bankers Association, in speaking on "The Plan for Monetary Legislation Suggested by Senator Aldrich," said all good women of fashion expect to go to Paris when they die, and that he was tempted to say that all good bankers hoped to live in California before they die, at least half a dozen bank presidents at the convention at Los Angeles the preceding fall had confided as much to him. Being impressed with that idea, he proceeded to acquire a modest house in Pasadena, so as to keep them company. He adopted as his conviction as to the weather that which he had read in the prospectus. He spent a few weeks in Pasadena the preceding winter. At that time there were three of his directors there, and thirty-two Indianapolis (of which town Mr. Perrin is a resident) people at one hotel at dinner one day. It had rained continuously for about a month without a break, but he assured them with all the fervor of a Native Son, that it was a very exceptional season.

Mr. Perrin also said: "I am extremely appreciative of the honor of being invited to address the bankers of this great state. I also may say to address the ladies. At a recent convention where I had the honor of delivering an address, one lady told me afterwards that it was a lovely address, and that she was thoroughly convinced, and I told her that if anyone doubted the value of her judgment, to apply to me for a certificate."

At the same convention, in discussing the question of a central bank, some objection was raised to the members voting on the question at that time; that they had heard only one side of the question, and that they ought to have an opportunity to hear the other and form their conclusions before committing themselves to an endorsement of that proposition.

H. S. Fletcher, representing the Bank of Watsonville, said: "I had the advantage of being in Nashville, and hearing this Aldrich question discussed, and on able paper delivered by J. B. Forgan of Chicago. I also had the opportunity of listening to George M. Reynolds, and I want to assure you people here that, in my estimation, George M. Reynolds is the brainiest banker in the United States."

He is a man that can hold his own in any community, in any company. He could go out on the street and make a Socialist, or any other man, who was advancing opinions with which Mr. Reynolds did not coincide, feel ashamed of himself, and he is a man that we all can be proud of as being a banker."

Honorable E. D. Roberts, state treasurer of California, in talking on the "Depositing of State Funds in Banks," stated that when notified by R. M. Welch, the secretary, that he would be called upon for a few remarks at the convention, he felt his usual attack of stage fright coming on, and that he notified the secretary, informing him that he had lost his voice. The secretary thereupon suggested that he prepare a paper and that an auctioneer would be hired; he also assured him that as he had not lost his voice clamoring for office, it could not be overtaken so very much and he should have recovered by that time.

Mr. Roberts in commenting on this, said: "This reminds me of meeting a friend from southern California in the Palace Hotel shortly after my appointment. We greeted one another with a handshake, and his first question was, 'What brought you up here?' I remarked that I was just down from Sacramento on business, and incidentally said, 'You know I am state treasurer.' He again shook my hand and begged my pardon for not remembering, saying, 'I forgot, but of course I voted for you.'"

TEXAS BANK STATEMENT

Austin, Texas.—The state department of insurance and banking has just made public a condensed monthly statement of the condition of the fifteen state banks maintaining savings departments at the close of business January 31, 1912. This statement shows the total resources of the savings departments of these fifteen banks to be $1,545,627.74, being as follows: County, city, town or school bonds $8,422.20; first mortgage railroad bonds $48,009.81; first liens on real estate worth double the amount loaned thereon $1,157,548.61; currency $129,004; specie $168,643.12; other resources $34,000. The liabilities are: Amount due depositors: $1,538,525.91; undivided profits $6,076; time certificate deposits $1,025. Total $1,545,627.74. Required cash reserve (15 per cent total deposits) $230,932.45; actual cash on hand $297,647.12; excess of amount required $66,714.66. The commissioner says this statement shows the savings departments to be in excellent condition.

INSURES MISSOURI BANKS

The Equitable Surety Company of St. Louis has obtained the fidelity bond business of the Missouri Bankers Association, which has 1,500 banks in its membership. For ten years this insurance has been written by an eastern surety company under a contract by which it paid a commission, which went into the treasury of the association. A similar contract has been made by the Equitable, which was able to annex the line because it is a home company.

Philadelphia.—Edward W. Clark, of E. W. Clark & Co., has been elected a director of the Fourth Street National Bank, filling the vacancy caused by the resignation of Roland L. Taylor.

BANK THIEF GIVEN SEVEN YEARS

Vernon, Tex., February 20.—Frank Holloway, recently arrested in Chicago, where he declared he had robbed banks in Panama, Vancouver, Texas and Oklahoma, has pleaded guilty to two cases against him in connection with the Harrold, Tex., bank robbery two years ago. He was sentenced yesterday to serve seven years in prison. When Holloway was arrested, he announced he had participated in many crimes, some of them dating back several years.

Philadelphia

More than six hundred bankers from all over the country attended the annual banquet given by Group 1, Pennsylvania Bankers Association, at the Bellevue-Stratford last week. J. R. McAllister, president of the Franklin National Bank, was toastmaster. The speakers included United States Senator Ollie M. James, of Kentucky, who responded to the toast, "The South and Socialism," and Martin W. Littleton, representative from the First congressional district, New York, who spoke on "Government of Industry," a question which is agitating the business world more than anything else at the present time. An address by Bishop E. Woodcock, of Kentucky, completed the program.

Over two hundred bankers attended the seventeenth annual meeting of Group 2, Pennsylvania Bankers Association, at the Bellevue-Stratford, on Lincoln's birthday. Officers were re-elected with the exception of Montgomery Evans, of Norristown, who retired as president, and was succeeded by William C. Husted, cashier of the First National Bank of West Chester. The meeting adopted resolutions calling upon the Pennsylvania Bankers Association to obtain legislation by the state concerning joint accounts, there being a difference of opinion now over the legal standing of such accounts.

ATTEMPTED BANK ROBBERY FOILED

Oakland, Cal.—A tunnel 50 feet long, beginning in the basement of the Advent Mission in Seventeenth Street, and directed toward the vault of the Bank of Commerce, was discovered last week, and reported to the police by F. Harlow, a mission-worker, who slept in the church building and heard men at work beneath the structure. Several policemen were set to watch the premises for the return of the criminals, but they had evidently become aware that their work had been discovered, and the police finally gave up the hope of their return and closed up the mouth of the tunnel, which lacked 100 feet of the distance necessary to reach the bank's strong room. Three feet of concrete, reinforced with steel rails, would have had to be dynamited had they succeeded in reaching the vault, according to Geo. Stitt, manager of the bank.

MONTANA BANK EXAMINER FOUND GUILTY

Richard Goodhard, national bank examiner, and receiver for the First National Bank of Billings, Montana, is declared by a jury to have engaged in a conspiracy to force the sale of some horses to one R. D. Currier. The horses were forced at about 40 per cent of their value and were held as part of the assets of the bank, the action thereby defrauding the creditors of the closed bank. It was proven in the trial that Goodhard forced one of the creditors of the bank to sell the horses to Currier under threats of prosecution. The action against Goodhard was taken to vindicate the officers of the bank.

NEW DENVER BANK

The Germania State of Denver, Colorado, capitalized at $30,000, was organized last Friday, February 16th. Wm. Bierkamp, Jr., is president and I. P. M. Schiele is temporary cashier. It will be open for business on and after Friday, March 15th.

BANK ROBBERS OPERATING IN GEORGIA

Atlanta, Ga., February 21.—Robbers blew open the safe of the Austell Bank at Austell, Ga., fifteen miles west of Atlanta, early on Monday and escaped with about $2,500 in cash. Two men carrying large sacks were seen leaving the bank soon after the explosion and posses with track dogs have gone in pursuit.

INDIANA BANK FORMED

Indianapolis.—The Irvington Bank has been incorporated with $25,000 capital stock. The new company marks the first enterprise of that character, which has been started in the suburb. The president is John B. Simmons of Wilkinson; vice-president, R. I. Marsh of Irvington, and the cashier is J. F. Evans of Wilkinson. The bank probably will be located on East Washington Street, but the site has not been definitely selected.

COLORED PRIVATE BANKER MAR- RIES

Jesse Binga, a colored private banker and real estate dealer on South State Street, was married on Tuesday to Miss Eudora Johnson, "the richest colored girl in the city."

"THE NEW DEMOCRACY"

"The New Democracy," by Dr. Walter E. Weyl, the eminent economist, is an essay on certain political and economic tendencies in the United States. The author tells how in 1832 Alexis De Tocqueville, the philosophic student of popular government, conceived this land to be the "most democratic country on the face of the earth." It was then popularly believed that this newly formed nation, the product of the valor of those staunch patriots, who fought for and won the freedom to which they believed they were entitled, would teach its elders the lessons of popular government. But alas, this has not proven to be the case. America no longer teaches democracy to an expectant world, but herself goes to school to Europe and Australia. Our ballot laws come from a nation younger than ours; our students of political and industrial democracy repair to the antipodes, to England, Belgium, France and semifeudal Germany. Why has not this expectation been realized? Why have we allowed our foreign competitors to outdistance us as regards economic conditions? What will be the ultimate result? All these and similar questions are answered by Dr. Weyl in this most interesting book. The author points out that while this nation has grown in wealth, power and prestige, we are no longer imbued with the spirit of democracy possessed by our forefathers, which was one of the foundation stones on which this great nation was built. Before answering these questions, Dr. Weyl first inquiries as to the reasons for the loss of American democratic supremacy, which he believes to be three. First, believing that we already had it, we thought there was nothing more for which to strive; second, the existence of slavery; third, when De Tocqueville was studying our institutions, America stood at the parting of the ways. She had to choose between the attainment of the rights of men and the conquest of the continent; between democracy and material progress. We believed that the pressing need was not liberty, equality and fraternity, but the creation of a type of man who would be fitted to play the rôle of conqueror. We have not achieved democracy, but what have we attained? Dr. Weyl's reply to this is "a resplendent plutocracy." At first we were reluctant to admit that such was the case. That it is, however, cannot be denied. What is this American plutocracy? It is, the author says, "That system of industry in which a large and increasing portion of the income of society flows into great reservoirs which are pre-empted and controlled by private corporations." The trust succeeds because it is unified; on the other hand, consumers and competitors are easy victims because of their lack of organization. It is impossible to estimate just what will be the future development of these gigantic combinations whose primary purpose is the stifling of competition. Our anti-trust legislation is crude and inadequate to meet the exigencies of the situation; it attacks not the economic foundations of the plutocracy but the integrity—the wholeness—of business. A question which naturally suggests itself is: How long will this plutocracy endure, and to what will it give way? There are many who believe that the trusts will emerge unscathed from the battle which is being waged against them; that the Declaration of Independence will end in government by check book. There is reason to believe, however, that the trend of America is not toward plutocratic rule. There is a spirit of new democracy. Dr. Weyl declares this new democracy will be primarily social. In obedience to that spirit, we are freeing ourselves from the unique standard of pecuniary pre-eminence. A new insistence is laid upon human life and human happiness. If this ideal state of affairs is attained, we still shall be beset by many of the present day difficulties. The establishment of such a state would be slow. The author declares that for this century we need but take the forward step. If we can extirpate misery, that will be progress enough.

The book is very ably and forcefully written, and will make excellent reading for all who are interested in economic conditions.

HAWAIIAN BANK PROSPEROUS

Honolulu.—At the annual meeting of the Bank of Hawaii, President C. H. Cooke reported a satisfactory growth in all departments, deposits having on December 31st reached the sum of $4,732,206.92, from $4,152,685.83 1910, sales of exchange amounted to $12,506,211.81. The gross profits were $164,497.97, from which expenses and losses were charged off amounting to $81,541.43, leaving a net profit of $82,956.54. Out of this amount the annual dividend of $48,000 was paid and $34,956.54 carried to undivided profits. During the year $100,000 was transferred from undivided profits account to the surplus account, making that account $500,000 and still leaving $85,057.30 in undivided profits. On account of the amount of funds on hand and the consequent lowering of interest rates, it was found necessary to lower the rate of interest paid on ordinary deposits in the savings department from 4½ to 4 per cent, the new rate going into effect on January 1, 1912.

the book has its name printed in the blank and on front and back cover.

EX-PRESIDENT E. E. CRABTREE of the Illinois association adopted the book for his bank, the first one to use it, and he says, "No family can get along without it." The farmers make special trips to town to get it. The book contains "instructions" how to use and benefit by it.

THE Ware & Leland bank letter, free to banks requesting it, explains the market situation in detail in a simple way, verifying it by quotations. This week's letter concludes: "In general we look for an erratic market and think that coppers and steels on all reactions may be purchased for good profits, and that later in the spring the railroads will show considerably higher prices."

GEORGETOWN (Ky.) NATIONAL has absorbed the Scott County Bank. The Scott County Bank was organized five years ago. It had never declared a dividend. W. J. Carley, the cashier, will be with the Georgetown National for the present. CASHIER.

BANK FOR ITALIAN CITIZENS

Application has been made at Springfield for a charter for the State Bank of Italy, an institution that will do a general banking business, but which was designed primarily to furnish banking facilities for Italian citizens in Chicago. The bank will have a capital of $200,000 and a paid in surplus of $50,000. It will be at Halsted and Taylor streets, and is expected to be ready for business about April 10th.

The directors of the bank, so far as selected, are Pasquale Schiavone, Edward C. Dapples, Frank Gazzolo, Michael F. Schiavone, R. C. Keller, William N. Rumley, William R. Moorhouse, George Lytton and D. J. Schuyler, Jr.

Mr. Schuyler is the principal organizer. It is probable a well-known Italian will be elected president.

White to the presidency of the bank, a short time ago.

FRANK D. BRUNDAGE of New York is working West, bearing the K. N. & K. gospel, and at this writing is breaking away Trinidad, en route to Phoenix as a farther step toward California. On conditions he says:

"I FIND business exceedingly quiet all over this country. There is too much politics in the air to expect any improvement very soon. There is a strong Roosevelt sentiment all over the West."

CAN anything be more truthful or forceful than the following from The Review? "When trade paper publishers are forced to discuss 'how to get subscribers to take magazines from the wrappers,' it doesn't look as if the advertiser received much of a run for his money."

A NEW YORK banking journal of considerable age continues to operate a farce known as a list of "Representative Attorneys." It claims to publish the list for the benefit of "bankers who may be obliged to seek legal advice under the statutes of the several states."

ONLY fourteen states are included on the "list" and the total of legal firms named is but seventeen. If the "Representative Attorneys" are so scarce that there are none, for instance, in Illinois, the thing should be dropped. If it really is an advertising scheme, and the "representative" attorneys pay the line rate, it is time for the coroner, at least for that department.

TEXAS seems to be having her own time with the refugees, who have been driven out of Kansas by the "Blue Sky" law and passed on by Oklahoma because of restrictions in that state on the sale of stocks and bonds of a certain character. The banking commissioner of Texas is receiving protests from bankers all over, calling his attention to various companies and promotions, which are being pushed in their territory.

B. L. GILL, the commissioner, says that "there should be some law placing the sale of stocks, not only of insurance companies, but of other corporations, under public supervision, and the last two reports of this department have recommended earnestly the passage of such a law. The legislature of the state of Texas up to this time has not seen fit to pay any attention, whatever, to such recommendation."

THE commissioner says he is well aware of the fact that there are many fraudulent concerns fleecing the people of the state by the sale of worthless shares, and that there are many other companies, whose shares are worth but very little but which are being sold. He deplores the fact that there are no laws in the state to prevent this business, except the general laws touching upon the subject of swindling.

"THE TEXAS BANKERS RECORD," which is the official organ of the state association, has commended the "Blue Sky" law of Kansas, in a strong editorial, and is calling upon the members of the state association and upon the legislature to pass a similar act for Texas.

TEXAS has a supreme court ruling, which holds that foreign corporations without a permit to do business in the state cannot maintain a suit in the Texas courts, and that district judges should dismiss such suits. This is looked upon as good state policy, and the state bankers want the same sort of a decision as to the sale of stocks.

IN closing his comment upon the Kansas "Blue Sky" act, Commissioner Gill said, "There is no legislation more needed in Texas. It is among the first things to concern every banker in the state, and now I hope the matter will not be dropped, and that the next session of the legislature will definitely provide for a 'Blue Sky' law in Texas."

A BOLD daylight robber took advantage of the business methods prevailing in the Bank of Silvis, a private institution at Silvis, Ill., the other day.

THE bank is run in the rear of a drygoods store. When the proprietor went home for his noon meal, he neglected to lock up the cash. When he returned it was gone. It is said by J. Lee Crowder, the proprietor, that a much larger sum might have been taken if the thief had been posted fully as to its whereabouts.

ROCK ISLAND COUNTY, Ill., which contains the two thriving cities of Moline and Rock Island, at last statement time had fifteen banking institutions. The total deposits in these banks run well over seventeen millions of dollars. The largest of the fifteen is the Peoples Savings Bank and Trust Company of Moline, with three and one-half millions. Those which have two millions or more are Moline Trust and Savings; State Savings Bank and Trust Company of Moline; Central Trust and Savings of Rock Island and the Rock Island Savings Bank. The "Bank of Silvis," referred to in the above paragraph, is included among the fifteen, but makes no statement as to its deposits, and thus does not figure in the total.

OKLAHOMA group meetings scheduled for this week met at Ada, Okmulgee, Shawnee, Enid and at Clinton. At each meeting the subject of kaffir corn occupied the principal place on the program, the speaker being J. B. Adams of Eldorado, Kan.

MR. ADAMS is known throughout the western states as "Bun" Adams, and is said to be one of the best talkers in the southwest section. He is an ardent advocate and believer in kaffir corn, as the one thing needful for the salvation of Kansas and Oklahoma farmers.

EDITOR A. G. MARRS of "The Bank Deposit Guarantee Journal," in speaking of bank examiners says, "No good bank, private or incorporate, should dread the coming of the examiner. They should be glad to see him. If the bank is wrong in any way he is there to place it right. The bank examiner should be made and kept independent of political influence."

WASHINGTON NATIONAL at Ellensburg, Wash., celebrated its tenth anniversary on February 14th by giving a banquet at the Antlers Hotel. Each member of the banking staff, and all the directors replied to toasts, and a very pleasant evening was spent. The Washington National began business on February 3, 1902, with a capital of $15,000 and $8,000 in deposits. It now has a capital and surplus of $100,000 and deposits of close to three-quarters of a million.

PRESIDENT A. J. CURTIN of the Iowa Bankers was in Chicago most of the week attending the convention of state fair association officials. He left only in time to take in the Tama-Toledo group meeting and will be back again on Tuesday next to join the farmer-banker delegation going to Washington to appear before the farm demonstration or agricultural committee.

MR. CURTIN is an enthusiast on the farm end of the banking question and is on the Northwest Conference committee and on the Iowa State Board of Agriculture. He hasn't heard, up to now, of any other candidate for the Iowa presidency but Charlie Nash, mentioned in this column last week. In Iowa they do not have rotation in office.

R. L. RINAMAN "blew in" on the big storm on Wednesday. "Had the same thing in St. Louis on Tuesday—only more of it." He was trying to induce some of his old friends to come down to the Bankers Club dinner—at the other end of the big bridge—for next Thursday evening, the 29th.

THE Law Committee of the A. B. A. will be in session in St. Louis at that time and will be guests of the club. Members of the committee are Pierre Jay, chairman, New York, Bank of The Manhattan Company; John F. Hagey, First National, Chicago; Lynn H. Dinkins, Interstate Trust and Banking Company, New Orleans; Isaac H. Orr, St. Louis Union Trust Company, St. Louis; Thos. B. Paton, New York, general counsel for A. B. A., and Jno. H. Sturgis, Franklin Savings, Boston, Mass.

THIS is quite a neat compliment and it is whispered that the St. Louis boys are going to do other things besides singing the "Dawg Song" to them.

THE seal and official button of the Illinois Bankers Association contain as the motto or watchword of the organization, "Unity and Progress." When President Harris donned the official badge he took it at its word, except that he reversed it, so that it now reads, "Progress and Unity." Things are moving. The supervision folder is good state banking gospel. There isn't a depositor in the state but wants supervision of the best sort.

THE "press comments" should show the public mind to even the doubtful. It seems to be unanimous. Now let every member bank come out honestly and vote for supervision. No state or national bank can vote otherwise without stultification. Banks in Chicago volunteered to go under much stricter supervision than state or nation imposes when they adopted the clearing house plan.

NO pamphlet of its size ever went out on a better mission. It is intended to show the light to those who have been groping in darkness, and to give strength to the weak and "straddling." Don't be a straddler. Come right out and vote.

A. C. McLAUGHLIN of Jacksonville, a banker with experience with farmer customers, has designed and copyrighted a "Farmer's Record and Account Book" of the simplest and most practical kind.

FARM papers, bankers, and agricultural teachers all over the United States have been advocating a simple system of bookkeeping for the farmer, knowing that one of the weak features in American farming is the failure to apply business principles or system. This book is so arranged that the farmer can keep a separate account with each product of the farm and at the end of the year can tell his profit or loss and to what to attribute results.

IT keeps up an inventory so that he is in position to borrow at the bank quickly and with entire safety to the banker. Interest and other tables are included and a department of "Hired Labor" and one for "Household Expenses."

THE book is neatly bound and will be sold cheaply, in quantities to one bank in a town for distribution. Bankers in southern Illinois say it is the best ever. It has a department "In account with Blank Bank," which ought to make a hit. The bank giving out

Commissioner Dolley to "Blue Sky" Skeptics

Bank Commissioner J. N. Dolley, of Kansas, certainly has started the largest wave of reform legislation in the way of protective supervision over investment companies that this country has seen in fifty years. Practically every state which has a legislature in session has a similar bill up for passage. THE CHICAGO BANKER referred to Commissioner Dolley the criticism of two leading Chicago bankers upon that provision of the law which grants a license to security-selling companies. As has been stated elsewhere in this paper, at first the criticism seemed quite impressive; later on its lack of effectiveness was apparent. The whole question, however, was referred to Commissioner Dolley, and in the following strong letter he has made his reply to their exceptions:

To the Editor: I have your favor of the 22d, stating President B. F. Harris of the Illinois Bankers Association has started a campaign for bank supervision in that state, and that he is making inquiry of the Illinois association members as to what their position might be on the adoption of such a law as our "Blue Sky" law, putting investment companies under supervision.

I note you say that Charles H. Bosworth, president of the Peoples Trust and Savings Bank, and E. D. Hulbert, vice-president of the Merchants Loan and Trust Company, point out that there is considerable danger in state supervision of investment companies and that they fear that the commissioner in charge of the examination of securities might err and possibly indorse a bad project, thus making the state an aid to a bad swindle. I differ with them as to their position and venture to state that they do not understand the workings of this law. I am certain that the State of Illinois is overrun at this time with an army of fake stock sellers and has been for many years past, and in my judgment Illinois (similar to Kansas as a state) in the past has been negligent as to its duties in not protecting the citizens of its commonwealth against these large forces of swindlers.

A successful business man or commission of successful business men, will make very few mistakes in deciding whether a certain concern should be allowed to sell its wares in their state, and plainly upon the face of the Kansas permit it states that the banking department in no wise recommends this investment. I do not think their objection well taken. You could as well apply it to bank supervision in that we should not have state or national banking departments for fear that the comptroller of the currency or the bank commissioner might permit irresponsible men to organize a bank and through its organization swindle a certain community.

Under the Kansas law each concern is compelled to submit sworn financial statements, etc., the books and business of the concern are subject to supervision and inspection as much so as a state bank. Even if the bank commissioner or a commission should admit a company that should not be admitted it is no argu-

At Washington

Washington, D. C., February 29.—All members of the special committee on agriculture, representing the American Bankers Association, present in Washington, were cordially received by President Taft in a very pleasant conference. Mr. Taft expressed great interest and sympathy with the efforts of the committee and repeatedly stated his willingness to co-operate in the great work. Congressman McKinley entertained the committee at dinner on Wednesday evening, and a special hearing was accorded them by the committee on agriculture of the house. Messrs. Harris and Chapman spoke at the hearing, and on Friday morning Governor Herrick will speak before the committee. The senate also has invited the visitors to appear before its committee on agriculture and forestry. Chairman Underwood of the house committee has been very cordial to the visitors and expressed deep interest in the work. The effectiveness and prestige of the A. B. A. committee were increased very largely by the attendance of President William Livingstone of Detroit, who attended all the meetings of the committee, and was along with them when they had their interview with the President. He is very enthusiastic about the prospects and expects to have at least one agricultural session at the Detroit convention in September. W. G. Edens, who represented Chicago, was the active spirit in making plans and appointments for the committee, being much at home in administrative circles in Washington.

GROWING SOUTHERN ILLINOIS BANK

The First Bank and Trust Company of Cairo, as shown by a publication of its statement in another department of this paper, is continuing to make rapid growth. This is one of the oldest and strongest banks in southern Illinois and located in a splendid commercial city. It has for its officers men who are experienced in banking and business affairs. Col. J. S. Aisthorpe, the president, is one of the potential members of the Illinois Bankers Association, and in times past has been a power in the ranks of the American Bankers Association. His friends are seeking to make him a candidate for chairman of the council at the coming convention, with every prospect of success.

Mainly About Banks and Bankers

IT is rumored that Chairman Chapman called his agricultural committee together in Washington, not solely for the purpose of making an onslaught upon congress, but "for devising ways and means." The ways and means part of it refers to a large accumulation of invitations to speak at group meetings, conventions and club banquets, which Chairman Chapman wants to divide up among the principal members of his committee.

FOR years Mr. Chapman has been a favorite with state secretaries when they wanted a "live number" on short notice. As time passes this seems to have become a confirmed habit with some until there seems to be little time left on the Northwestern's calendar for regular banking business.

IT happens that the agricultural committee is composed mostly of "talking bankers." Mr. Harris is one of the ablest speakers in the big association, and is almost, if not quite, as willing as Mr. Chapman to "go to it" when opportunity occurs. Mr. Curtin of Iowa is a good talker, and also a very hard worker in the field. Baker of Wisconsin is very clever on his feet, and W. G. Edens, secretary of the Illinois committee and member of the A. B. A. council, is almost as busy with his "engagements" as is Mr. Chapman.

IT is to be hoped that the agricultural committee, having at its command the services of a number of university men of high rank who are willing to engage in the farmers' uplift work, can devise a plan whereby there will be an agricultural and educational number on every state program this year.

IT is said that President Livingstone of the American Bankers Association is contemplating a farmers' session at the Detroit convention. It might be possible that Mr. Hill would deliver his agricultural speech which he expected to make at Springfield (he spoke on currency) and which did not come off at the latter convention. As a drawing card it is doubtful if Mr. Hill has a single rival on this particular subject.

ANOTHER speaker of national importance, and who might be obtained, is President Howard Elliott of the Northern Pacific Railway. He has shown a versatility and a measure of ability in the public speaking line of a most uncommon kind.

AMONG those who left on the Pennsylvania Tuesday morning to appear before the congressional committee on agricultural development and education were Joseph Chapman, Jr., chairman; E. J. Curtin, president of the Iowa Bankers; B. F. Harris, president of the Illinois Bankers; L. A. Baker, of New Richmond, Wis., and W. G. Edens, secretary of the Illinois committee. Joseph G. Brown of North Carolina sent a telegram saying that he would join the committee in Washington.

THIS committee had a morning session at the Willard Hotel on Wednesday, the 28th, and in the evening were entertained at dinner, along with members of congress serving on the agricultural committee, by Congressman McKinley, of Champaign, Ill.

MR. MCKINLEY is on this important committee, and introduced the Illinois bill in congress for farm demonstration, now known as "the McKinley Bill." As President Taft's campaign manager he will have unusual influence in congress for anything of a party nature, and farm demonstration being under way at present in nine of the democratic states, it is not likely that democratic members will oppose its extension to northwest territory.

IT looks like a good bet that congress will do something in this most important matter, and that the bankers of the country will feel encouraged to take up other public questions and exert their powerful influence for other benefits collateral to the banking business.

THE Louisiana Bankers will convene this year at Covington, on April 26th and 27th. Secretary L. A. Broussard has extended invitations to bankers all over the country to attend this year's convention, which he promises will be most interesting.

HOME SAVINGS AND STATE BANK at Peoria, over the signature of Charles E. Ulrich, vice-president, is distributing farm literature, and calling the attention of farmers to the possibility of doubling their crops and telling them how to do it. Mr. Ulrich further offers additional literature upon request, and is having a great many responses.

THE Illinois Bankers Association has sent out a pamphlet entitled "How Robbery of the Soil can be Prevented." This is a very suggestive little circular compiled by the agricultural committee, and should be in the hands of every farmer in the state. Down-state banks could not do a better thing than to get a supply of these documents for distribution.

AMERICAN NATIONAL at Richmond has increased its capital from $600,000 to $1,000,000, making capital, surplus and undivided profits read $1,660,000. The total resources of this prosperous bank are over seven millions. Oliver J. Sands is president and O. B. Hill, cashier.

PRESIDENT IRVING SHUMAN, of Group 7, Illinois, in calling off the Washington's Birthday meeting at Sullivan, sent out a very diplomatic letter, saving the farmer feature from all chance of blame. It reads:

"WE are having a regular blizzard to-day (22d) in central Illinois, and the trains into Sullivan are running from four to six hours late. I got into communication with the members of the executive committee of Group 7, and we have postponed the date of holding our convention until we can secure more favorable weather conditions. We had received enough acceptance cards to indicate that our meeting would have been one of the largest group meetings that ever has been held, and I could not bear the thought of allowing the meeting to be cut in two on account of weather conditions, especially when we are trying to have a strictly agricultural program. And had the attendance not been what we had hoped for it to be, the agricultural feature might have been wrongfully charged with the light attendance."

GROUP 7 is on the job, however, and ample notice will be sent out for a later date when the committee can make the necessary arrangements. Mr. Shuman (percheron horses, dairy cattle and banking) isn't the kind to let the main issue be forgotten.

MARCH still is blustery enough to make us seek indoor comforts and diversions, and we turn to books and magazines with a zest which perhaps will be lacking later, when the spring sunshine lures one to the open. Lippincott's for March will be found a most desirable fireside companion during these last few weeks of cold weather.

FIRST, there's a rather remarkable complete novel, entitled "The Lustrous Lady," by Will Levington Comfort, who wrote "Routledge Rides Alone." The setting is original, the plot novel, and the characters intensely human—annoyingly human, at times. A rare love story, of course, yet with plenty of brisk action to make it appeal to the unsentimental.

NOW that you are tired of the muck-raking publications, is a good time to turn back to good old Lippincott's. Each number has a complete novel—such as you later would pay $1.50 for—and ten short stories by the best writers. It is the best literary magazine in America to-day at any price.

LEWIS E. PIERSON has hit upon a plan of educational work among the business men of New York which will likely be quite as effective as it is novel. Over the super-scription of the Irving Exchange National he has advertised free literature on the currency question.

THE bank over which Mr. Pierson presides has ready five pamphlets which it agrees to send upon request—all or one, as may be desired. The booklets now ready are:

Report of the National Monetary Commission.

Importance of Monetary Reform to Business Men—John V. Farwell.

Banking Reforms and the National Reserve Association—J. Laurence Laughlin.

List of publications of the National Monetary Commission and how they may be obtained.

A Simple Explanation of Modern Banking Customs.

THE Irving is right in the heart of the mercantile district of New York and is a commercial bank, hence the thought and the opportunity are met under propitious circumstances. On the general issue the ex-president of the American Bankers Association states his position on the currency in happy, (Continued on page 31)

Bank Commissioner B. L. Gill on State Supervision

One of the very best letters of this series from state bank examiners has come from B. L. Gill, commissioner of banking and insurance for Texas. His letter follows:

"To answer your request of February first for information relative to the state banking system of Texas, and the matter of uniform banking laws in all the states, would fill a volume, so I shall endeavor to reply to your questions in their order as briefly as possible. This state permits private banking and also allows private banks to make a bond under the guaranty of deposits law equal to its capital stock if it will submit to examination and make reports, but it must use on its stationery, signs, etc., the words 'unincorporated' to distinguish it from a state bank. The private banks that come into the state system are treated the same as a new proposition, that is, if they have acceptable assets they desire to place in the new bank they are taken, if in the judgment of the examiner, who checks them in, they are satisfactory. If not they are rejected, so that such a bank starts off clean.

Does Not Believe in Private Banks

"I do not think private banks should be permitted, as I believe in supervision as the best safeguard of a banking system, and this should be compulsory and not merely optional for advertising purposes. I know of no private bankers who opposed the present state banking law, and we are constantly liquidating and taking over private banks as outlined above, but the commissioner permits a private bank to organize and transfer its business to the state bank in the way stated, always with the understanding that it retire from business as a private bank as we do not want the same parties in the same community to operate both a state and private bank for obvious reasons. The principal reason they have for incorporating is the confidence of the public in a state bank because of publicity, supervision and the guaranty of deposits, and a consequent increase of business. This department handles the liquidation of failed state banks taken over by it, through a liquidating agent appointed by the commissioner, under his direction, and whose salary is the same as that of a bank examiner. So few have been so handled and none of their affairs yet closed up so no figures are at hand.

"State banks are examined each quarter, or four times a year. No officer can borrow a dollar without the written consent of a majority of the directors. The penalty for this violation is imprisonment in the penitentiary for a term of not less than two years. A director can borrow 10 per cent of the capital stock without such consent, or 25 per cent with it. A violation of this makes the borrower and the officer or director approving it subject to two years' confinement in the penitentiary upon conviction.

Favors Separate Banking Departments

"I am disposed to believe that the adoption of the National Reserve Association plan would have a tendency to cause uniform banking laws to enable the banks of the various states to more readily meet the requirements of the association and adjust themselves to them in their transactions with the association.

"Replying to your question as to whether I believe each state should have a separate banking department, will say this is also a conditional matter. In this state we have one department controlling the banks and insurance business. We have over 700 banks and as many insurance companies to supervise, and the suggestion has frequently been made that these two should be separated, as the department is growing so rapidly that it is becoming difficult for one man to properly supervise, and it is also a difficult matter, and in fact almost impossible, to get both an accomplished bank man and insurance man in one who has the training and capacity to grasp and supervise the technicalities of both. If you mean that the banking department should be distinct from that of treasurer and auditor, as prevails in some of the states, I think it should be. I think the banking commissioner should be vested with the strongest discretionary powers possible. He should not only judge of the character and reputation of the stockholders, and the ability, character, reputation and experience of the active officers, as he has in this state as commissioner of banking, and as a member of the state banking board, but he should have the power and authority to say whether or not there is need for a bank in the community in which it is authorized, and this latter is one thing lacking in our law, which we hope to have corrected at an early date."

Penalties are Scarce in Texas

"The failure of a state bank examiner to report a violation to the bank commissioner, and the failure of the commissioner to report such violation to the county or district attorney within ten days shall, upon conviction, be punished by a fine of not less than $100 nor more than $500, or by imprisonment in the county jail for not less than three nor more than twelve months, or by both such fine and imprisonment and removal from office. Any officer, director, clerk or agent of any state bank who embezzles, abstracts, etc., any of the funds of the bank, or draws or executes any document, etc., or does anything with intent to deceive the officers of the bank, the examiner or commissioner, or one who aids or abets any officer, clerk or agent in any violation, shall be deemed guilty of a felony and upon conviction shall be punished by a confinement in the state penitentiary for a term of not less than five nor more than ten years.

"In answer to your question, 'If I would support a movement for uniform state banking laws in all the states,' will say I would, but do not believe this could be accomplished fully, because of varying conditions in the different states. Even in this state, which is so large and has such a diversity of crops and collaterals, discretion is used by the commissioner of banking in the enforcement of certain technical matters that are subjects of conditions, because it must be remembered that the distance across this state is equal to the distance from Chicago to the Gulf of Mexico, or from Chicago to the Atlantic Ocean. By this I mean uniform law, generally speaking, would be desirable, but certain provisions would have to differ in each state to conform to the varying conditions. The effect of such a law would be to the people of each state what the national statutes are today; understood by all the people of all the states to be uniformly the same as in their own state, and the simplicity of such uniformity would render the understanding of it better and easier, and consequently desirable because of this.

New Banking Law in Maryland

Commissioner of Banking J. Dukes Downes of Maryland has furnished the following summary of the new laws in his state. He says:

"The legislature of 1910 enacted a general banking law, which placed all banking institutions under supervision, but did not include private banks or bankers. So far as I am aware there was no opposition to the law on the part of private banks. Within less than a year after the passage of this act the resources of the institutions under supervision increased to the extent of nearly $10,000,000. I would say that the law does not at present provide for the handling of receiverships of banks by this department, though there is an amendment now before the legislature, with every probability of its being passed, providing that the bank commissioner shall act as receiver, without compensation, the actual cost of such re-

"The new law provides for the inspection and examination of banks, and I shall take pleasure in sending you a copy of the same as soon as I can procure one. Unfortunately I have none on hand at the present time. I heartily approve of uniform laws regarding the conduct of banking in the several states, but would not be willing to commit myself upon any plan until I had had an opportunity to go into the matter very thoroughly.

"I could hardly say what effect the adoption of the National Reserve Association plan would have upon the banking laws in the different states. So far as I can recall the bank commissioner of this state is vested with all necessary powers, with the exception of those to be provided for in the amendments now before the legislature. I expect to have the banking law, with amendments, printed as soon as possible, and will then take pleasure in sending you a copy."

Banking measures are up in every state in which a legislature is in session. Every state is anxious to have a "best banking law" with complete supervision and responsibility. Kentucky has just adopted a strong bank inspection law and Ohio is about to pass a double-liability clause in its new state constitution in deference to popular demand. New York has on passage an amendment to the savings law which seems justified by experience.

Double Liability for Ohio

The new Ohio constitution will copy the double liability clause from the national banking act, and will also contain restriction on the location and capital stock of new banks, limiting the capital to the population in the same way the national banks are limited.

The constitutional convention, now in session at Columbus, has plans for defining banks as corporations chartered under the banking laws of the state, and limiting banking business to such. This was done by Wisconsin 10 years ago, and has put the private bank out of business.

Private Bankers to Fight

Private bankers, in session at Columbus, named a secret committee to combat this provision. There are 245 private banking concerns in the state. An effort will be made to have another section drawn that will compel banks with only part of their capital paid in to pay in the remainder. Attorneys are investigating how this may be done. Double liability is on the amount of stock subscribed, and if only half is paid in the result is that such stockholders are liable to a quadruple liability.

The power of the state to inspect the foreign corporations that want to sell their stock in this state is being investigated, and power will be given the legislature to provide that safeguard to state investors. Stacey B. Rankin, secretary of the Ohio Bankers Association, in a statement before the committee, said that only 76 members of the body had responded to the inquiry as to how they stood on double liability, although over 300 letters were sent out. Of this number 32 favored the change and 44 opposed it.

New York Laws Pretty Strict.

The name of the Mortgage Company of America has been ordered removed from the doors of the office of that concern in the Singer Building, New York, because of the failure of the company to obtain permission from the banking department to do business in the state. William L. Moyer, president of the company, says the company is making no efforts to transact business until it is prepared to do so in strict conformity with the laws of the state, and that the offices were opened and maintained solely for the purpose of selling stock in the new enterprise. In the opinion of outside interests, however, it is said that the movement was an initial one tending to the inauguration of the Bankers Guarantee Trust Co., a Delaware corporation.

New Amendment to Banking Act.

In accordance with Superintendent Van Tuyl's recent recommendations, Assemblyman Allen, of Oneida, chairman of the house banking committee at Albany, has introduced a bill to amend the state banking law, which provides that savings banks shall be examined by the superintendent of banks at least once a year, instead of biennially, as at present; that the superintendent shall have power to examine every agency of a foreign banking corporation doing business in this state to ascertain whether it has violated any law of the state; that an examination may be made in the discretion of the superintendent after he has taken possession of the property and business of any banking corporation or individual banker, and for such other purposes as the superintendent shall prescribe.

Other New York Bills.

Last week too new bills were introduced at Albany which are strongly recommended by the American Bankers Association and the National Credit Men's Association. One makes it grand larceny in the first degree for a person knowingly to make any false statement in writing in respect to his own or some other person's or corporation's financial standing for the purpose of procuring the delivery of personal property, the payment of cash or the making or extension of a loan or credit. The second bill makes it a forgery in the third degree to alter or destroy any account or to make a false entry in an account, statement of financial condition or book of accounts or willfully to omit material entries, if done with intent to defraud. This provision is not to apply to any employe who, without personal profit, merely executes his employer's orders.

More Private Bankers Disappear.

Unable to stand the investigation of Pennsylvania State Banking Department under the recently enforced "Private Bankers Act," or to meet the demands of their depositors two Italian bankers have closed the doors of their institutions and mysteriously disappeared with the funds of their depositors and friends. One of the absconding bankers is Vincenzo D'Abruzzo, who was one of the two arrested some time ago on a test case to determine the constitutionality of the act and was out on bail. He is one of the ring leaders in the fight to enjoin the state from enforcing the new law.

Maryland Association at Work

The administration committee of the Maryland Bankers Association held a special meeting last week at Baltimore, at which resolutions were adopted requesting that a communication be addressed to the governor, the president of the senate and the speaker of the house, calling their attention to the provisions of the law creating the office of bank commissioner and defining his duties. Under this law, the commissioner is the only person who has the power and authority to pass upon applications for a charter for a bank, trust company or any corporation to be operated under the corporate laws of the state. The action is taken in view of the persistency with which certain senators and house delegates go to their respective bodies for a charter for a new corporation, without apparently knowing that neither the senate nor the house can act upon such an application.

Burt Jenney at Lennox, Mich., who is also president of the State Savings Bank at Dowagiac, which was recently closed by the state banking department, being told that the liabilities of the concern would amount to $125,000, with nominal assets of $65,000, proceeded to plaster the institution with attachments. How the Michigan Law Reads 5275. Section 6. No person or firm doing business under this act shall advertise or put up signs, or use any device or contrivance whatever tending to convey the impression that the place of business of such person or firm is an organized bank; but in all such cases such person or firm, if they advertise at all, must use their individual or firm name, and state in such advertisement the names of every member of such co-partnership or firm; in case any person or persons shall violate any of the provisions of this section, they shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and shall each, upon conviction, be punished by a fine of not more than two hundred dollars and costs or by imprisonment of not more than six months in the county jail.

5276. Section 7. The state treasurer shall, when his attention is called to violations of any of the provisions of this act, refer the same to the attorney-general, who shall proceed, when warranted by the evidence, to collect the penalties as herein set forth; and all suits or proceedings for the violations of any of the provisions of this act shall be first commenced in the circuit court of the county in which the business office of said person or firm is located.

State Supervision

President B. F. Harris of the Illinois Bankers Association left Chicago on Tuesday morning for Washington, going as chairman of the association's committee on agriculture, to appear before a committee of congress on the subject of an appropriation for extending farm demonstration work. In the three days before his departure he received 578 replies to cards sent out by him, taking a vote by mail on the question of complete bank supervision for Illinois, and on the question of supervision of security-selling companies by the adoption of a "Blue Sky" law such as they have in Kansas. Of these 578 replies, 475 voted promptly for supervision of all kinds of banking in the state. Ninety voted "no" and thirteen were undecided. This ballot alone represents 37 per cent of the entire membership of the association, and 85 per cent of the vote cast was unqualifiedly in favor of supervision of private banking.

From the strictly private bankers the vote returned showed that ninety were opposed to state supervision, eighty being in favor of it and thirteen indifferent; the total vote cast by the private bankers in three days being 183. Only 49 per cent of those who voted, voted against state supervision, which shows that the gospel of responsible banking has been at work all over the state.

There were 461 votes in favor of the "Blue Sky" law, seventy-eight opposed and thirty-nine "Not sufficiently informed to vote." This is a preference of 80 per cent in favor of state supervision over security-selling companies. One peculiarity that the ballot shows is that out of the ninety private bankers who voted unqualifiedly against state supervision of private banks, twenty-nine voted in favor of supervision of security-selling companies, which would indicate that some of them, at least, are in favor of supervision for almost anything except their own institutions.

The letter containing the voting card was addressed to the presidents of banks. In the city of Chicago at this season of the year there are a great many bank presidents absent on their annual vacations. However, the thirty banks which did vote promptly were unanimous in favor of supervision. On the subject of supervision of security-selling companies, there was one opposed, twenty-two for and seven undecided out of the thirty Chicago banks voting. A great many confidential letters have been written to Mr. Harris, and at least sixty of them are from private bankers. All of these sixty, except fifteen, are in favor of some kind of state supervision for private banking. It was impossible in the brief time at Mr. Harris' disposal to tabulate these letters, except the mere statement that 75 per cent of them are willing to have supervision of some sort instead of the present reign of "Go as you please" banking. It was the intention of President Harris to make direct reply to all of the confidential letters received, but his call to Washington temporarily has prevented this. He expects to be absent from the state about ten days. That those who have written to him may not be entirely disappointed in the matter, he sent out, just before leaving Chicago for Washington, a letter of explanation covering in a general way most of the points raised by his correspondents. These letters will not be direct replies to many of the letters which he received, but are sent out simply to show that Mr. Harris did the very best thing he could under the circumstances.

Briefly, the vote which has been cast up to the date of this writing shows that 85 per cent of the organized banks which cast their ballots voted for strict supervision, and that 80 per cent of those which cast their ballots voted for supervision of security-selling companies. It further shows that one-third of the private bankers who voted against bank supervision were in favor of state supervision over security-selling companies. If this proportion keep up until the end, it will show the high standard position which the membership of the Illinois Bankers Association takes upon the question of supervision. No legislature can find any reasonable excuse for not passing such a law when this representation is laid before it.

Henry A. Haugan

Henry A. Haugan, vice-president of the State Bank of Chicago, expects to leave the city next week for a month's vacation in California.

A call for condition of state banks in Texas was issued for February 20th by Commissioner Gill. The call found an even 700 state banks in Texas, the greatest number in the history of the state.

Strong Support for Bank Supervision in Illinois

The failure of William A. Mason, doing business under the name "Wilson Avenue Bank," has brought to the attention of newspapers, and through them to the public, certain evils of the present banking system, or rather, some defects in the present Illinois laws which have long been known to bankers and been the subject of their most earnest and serious consideration.

The fundamental fact is that under our present banking laws any person or firm (but not a corporation) may hang out a sign or paint in gilt letters on their windows the word "Bank" or "Bankers," and in their individual and personal capacity transact all general banking business (except issuing bills and notes for circulation). Among the banking functions they receive deposits and loan money but without the requirement of any report to or examination by the state banking authorities. They are responsible to no one except the same theoretical responsibility which attaches when A hands his money to B in the street and asks B to keep it for him until he calls for it.

That there are honest and well-managed private banks does not admit of controversy. The fault is in the system and not in the majority of men engaged in the business. That these private banks serve a useful purpose in scattered communities of farmers and small villages is equally beyond question. In those localities there is not enough business to support a large incorporated bank. The reason why private banks have enjoyed a measure of success in those communities is this: The private banker is usually the most wealthy and responsible man in the community. His neighbors all know him and his wealth in land, buildings and live stock is daily before

Vice-president W. T. Abbott, of the Central Trust, Chicago, points to the Mason fiasco as a lesson to the whole people of the state. Changes which he thinks desirable in the law their eyes. He is the man to whom they would naturally turn as the depository of their savings or for advice in their financial affairs. On the other hand, he is familiar with the banking needs of these same neighbors and their ability to repay. Hence, loans to them based on his personal judgment and secured on property, also under the daily observation of all, are in such cases the wisest investments for the funds of his depositors.

But when the community reaches a size where this intimate and mutual acquaintance and knowledge ceases, at that point the usefulness of the private bank stops together with the excuse or reason for its existence. Beyond that a system which permits the private bank is all wrong notwithstanding an occasional good example. Banking business, except in the smallest communities, should be confined to incorporated companies acting under national or state laws and subject to rigid examination by the banking department of the government. There is no other safeguard for depositors.

The possible insolvency or failure of the private bank or the individual doing business as a private banker is not the only or greatest evil. Even if such a bank is well and honestly managed, on the death of the private banker the affairs of the bank must be closed up in the same manner as all his other business affairs, namely, through the probate court of the county in which he lives. There are necessarily involved in it all the delays and vexations which are inevitable in connection with the settlement of any man's estate in that court. The depositors cannot get back their money until the affairs of the estate are fully settled, the estate found to be solvent and sufficient of the securities sold or otherwise realized upon to enable a distribution to be made. If a regularly incorporated bank should, through bad loans or investments become insolvent, its affairs are administered by officials of the banking department either of the state or national government. In case the other resources of the bank are insufficient to pay the deposits, then the stockholders in such bank must contribute in addition to their stock an assessment equal to the par value thereof. This is known as the double liability of the stockholders. In Chicago, in addition to the rigid examination by the state officials, a supervision is also maintained by the clearing house association over all banks which are members of that association, and the loans and investments of those banks are so diligently scrutinized that to-day there is practically no risk that the depositors in those banks will not receive their money in full, and also, what is quite as important, they are cer-

Various changes in the law have been considered from time to time which have failed passage in the legislature for reasons which need not now be discussed lest this might be construed as criticism where criticism is not intended. One addition to the law would be to make it a criminal offense for any person or firm to use the word "Bank" or "Banker" in a way to invite deposits of money with himself. The same law should likewise visit with severe punishment any person or firm using the word "Trust" as a part of his or their business name, thus advertising themselves as being a trust company. The legitimate services of a trust company are brought into disrepute by unscrupulous persons making use of this title as a means of deliberate fleecing the unwary through dealings in questionable mortgages and other wildcat securities. The number of their victims may not be so great as in the case of the failure of a private bank, but the individual hardship is just as severe.

The effect of such a law should be to restrict the use of the words "Bank," "Bankers" and "Trust Company" to those corporations which exist by virtue of law and are subject to government inspection. This would require all banks (not national) to form an incorporated company under the laws of the state with an actual paid-up capital and to be at all times subject to state inspection and compelled to report to the state banking department at regular intervals. The state cannot discriminate between good and bad private banks. There must be some law uniform in its application but with a graduated scale of capital requirements so as not to cut off the small villages from banking facilities adequate to their needs. The essential point to be reached, the end to be obtained, is publicity; an understanding, on the part of the depositors, of the nature of their dealings with their bank. We found from personal investigation that all the depositors in the "Wilson Avenue Bank" (except a few business men) supposed that they were dealing with a real banking institution and not with William A. Mason as an individual. The one essence of the amendment of the law is to make such provision that if John Smith as an individual invites people to deposit their money with him, he should designate his relation to them in such a way that they shall make their deposits understandingly, and with a full knowledge of the difficulties they will encounter when they want to get their money back; that if he becomes insolvent either through dishonesty or bad investments they will never see their money again; that, if honest and financially intelligent, he may die at any moment and their funds be tied up until his estate has gone through the probate court, that he is subject to no supervision, and that at the best his personal responsibility is no greater than if the money was handed to him on the street.

Though the unfortunate depositors will remember the Mason case for a long time and it will result in many cases in great individual hardship, it will soon cease to be a matter of interest to newspapers and the public. But it must not be forgotten that it is only through agitation in the papers, constant and not spasmodic over a particular case, and continued in season and out, until the legislature shall enact into law some bill embodying the above provisions, that our state will be relieved from this crying evil and gross injustice to the poor and ignorant.

HOUSTON BANKER DIES

Henry S. Fox, Sr., president of the Houston National Exchange Bank, and one of Houston's most honored and respected business men, died very suddenly at his home on February 20th.

A. Barton Hepburn, chairman of the Chase National Bank, and Clark Williams, president of Windsor Trust Company, New York City, have left for Valdosta, Ga., where they will spend about two weeks quail shooting. Mr. Hepburn will then go to Hot Springs, N. C., for another two weeks, returning to New York about the middle of March.

CAPITAL ONE MILLION DOLLARS

ILLINOIS BANKING NEWS

By C. C. Burford

B. F. Harris, president of the Illinois Bankers Association, has spent this week in Washington, where he has been working with the members of the agricultural committee of the American Bankers Association in calling the attention of members of Congress to the McKinley bill now pending which will carry out the idea of the Minneapolis conference of "banker-farmers" held last fall.

National Citizens' League in Peoria

The meeting of the National Citizens' League of Illinois at the New Jefferson Hotel in Peoria brought together a number of bankers, financiers, and business men. Alexander H. Revell, of Chicago, delivered the principal address of the day and declared himself strongly in favor of "banking reform and the fundamental principles of the bill prepared by the National Monetary Commission now pending in Congress." Mr. Revell demonstrated that the "monetary problem is not political and that the bill under consideration must provide a square deal for the small merchant, the small banker, the farmer, the wage-earner, and the man in the street. Like the sun and the rain, the beneficent effects of a good monetary system will be felt by rich and poor alike."

The Fight on Loan Sharks

Illinois newspapers and citizens are aroused by the war on loan sharks. Not only is the work of these brokers in Chicago and the larger cities of the state recognized as a distinct evil, but in many smaller towns, merely villages and "burgs," there is usually a Shylock dealing with the people in a high-handed way. Railroad shops and manufacturing establishments throughout the state have their money-lenders who demand exorbitant interest for small loans. The Survey Press Bureau is furnishing to newspapers some excellent publicity matter which may aid in quickening the public conscience on this question.

"Made-in-Rockford" Show

Rockford will again demonstrate its financial strength in its annual "Made-in-Rockford" show. Commercial clubs from several cities in northern Illinois and southern Wisconsin will attend the show, among them being La Salle, Freeport, Elgin, Oregon, Beloit, and Janesville as well as representatives from the Chicago Association of Commerce, the Fox River

Manufacturers Association, and the Illinois Manufacturers Association. Other cities have used these exhibitions for publicity purposes with success, among them being Bloomington and Peoria.

Menard County Bankers Meet

The Menard County Bankers Association met in Petersburg with a day session and with luncheon at noon. C. C. Frackleton, cashier of D. S. Frackleton & Company of Petersburg, is chairman of the association and Mr. Purvines, of Tallula, is secretary. Protective work against fraud and burglary will be urged by the Menard county bankers.

High Prices for Illinois Soil

The soaring prices of Illinois land seem to be the usual custom now. Instances are common where farming land has been selling for $250 an acre or better. A farm of fifty-five acres in Morgan County near Jacksonville was sold recently for $256 an acre, an unimproved tract in Coles County near Charleston has been sold for $250 an acre, while the transfer of a farm in Piatt County near Monticello with old improvements for $400 an acre seems to be the highest reported for purely farming lands.

The question as to how long these prices will continue to soar is an interesting economic topic for bankers and land-owners. But the consensus of opinion is that Illinois land of the first quality will never be any cheaper, but rather more expensive. The security of the investment, its borrowing power, and its quick sale when necessary are powerful assets for the Illinois land-owners. Farm products in grain and live stock continue high, and these figures help the price of land. Public sales of live stock this winter have demonstrated that heavy young horses, brood mares, dairy and beef cattle and swine have commanded uniformly high prices. A sale near Paxton brought $28 a ton for timothy hay; $16 a ton for oats straw, and $14 a ton for wheat straw. The invasion of the motor truck seems to have had no effect on the demand for chunky young horses, but drivers are not selling so well.

State National of Bloomington

The State National of Bloomington reported deposits of $1,047,730 at the date of the last call, February 20th. The State Trust and Savings Bank, an allied institution, reported deposits of $307,210, so that the combined deposits of these combined banks is nearly one and a half millions. H. K. Hoblit, cashier of the State National, and E. M. Hoblit, cashier of the State Trust, are among the leaders in Bloomington's younger bank circles. The Hoblit family have been connected with this bank for many years. A handsome and substantial banking house of the monumental plan has been used by the banks for two or three years. Jacob Funk, a member of the well-known pioneer Funk family is the president.

WM. A. MASON A BANKRUPT

Mason, owner of the "Wilson Avenue Bank," was declared a bankrupt by U. S. Judge Landis on Monday. Mason ultimately would have been forced into bankruptcy, even if he had not made unprofitable speculations with the depositors' money. This became known yesterday during the banker's examination before Referee in Bankruptcy Frank L. Wean.

Of the 900 depositors who trusted their savings to Mason, about 700 were school children, according to the attorney for the receiver. The deposits were in small savings banks loaned by Mason.

Mason admitted that up to January 31st there was a legitimate shortage of $9,272.09. He said he lost money from the beginning.

"My expenses always exceeded my earnings," he said.

"You kept right on receiving deposits, did you?" inquired Attorney Archibald Cattell, representing the receiver.

"Yes, sir."

"Let us sum up, then," suggested the lawyer. "You had deposits amounting to $43,000. You said your investments amounted to $11,000. Other items totaled $10,000. You turned but $2,000 over to the receiver. The difference is $20,000. Where is that?"

Mason squirmed about in his chair, looked at the ceiling and then at the floor.

"I don't know," he finally said.

"How do you account for that sum of money disappearing?" was asked.

"I just don't know," was his answer.

Although the questioning continued in various forms, that was as much information as was obtained.

DEATH OF EBENEZER BUCKINGHAM

Ebenezer Buckingham, business man, banker, and one of the early residents of Chicago, died Sunday afternoon at his residence, 2036 Prairie Avenue.

In late years Ebenezer Buckingham became connected with the Traders Insurance Company, the Northwestern National Bank, and other enterprises. In 1890 he succeeded George Sturges as president of the Northwestern National Bank, a position he retained until the merger of that institution with the Corn Exchange National Bank. Then he virtually retired from active business life.

MILWAUKEE

NEWS LETTER BY CHALMER B. TRAVER

WISCONSIN

In response to the call of State Bank Commissioner, A. E. Knolt, all state and savings banks in Milwaukee this week published statements of their statuses at the close of business February 20th. Business is reported quiet and collections satisfactory. Receipts and shipments are light.

Arranging for Group Meetings

Secretaries of the several groups of the Wisconsin Bankers Association met at the office of George D. Bartlett, secretary of the state organization, on Wednesday to outline programs for the group conventions which will be held in rotation preceding the state convention in Milwaukee in June. Those present were: H. D. L. Adkins, First National Bank, Elkhorn; Carl Rosholt, State Bank of Rosholt, Rosholt; Milo C. Hagan, Merchants and Savings Bank, Madison; W. R. Dysart, First National Bank, Ripon; William D. Brady, Citizens State Bank, Rice Lake; and E. J. Wilds, State Bank of Bangor, Bangor.

Milwaukee News Notes

E. J. Hughes, assistant cashier of the First National Bank, went to Chicago Wednesday on business.

The First National Bank has been approved as the reserve agent of the First National Bank of Hayward.

Three Arrests for Forgery

Three arrests on forgery charges were made in Milwaukee this week. Becoming conscience-stricken, M. H. Ingalls, a bookkeeper employed in Milwaukee, surrendered himself to Sheriff Arnold with the statement that he was wanted for forgery at Marquette, Mich., and Chief-of-Police J. H. Manning, of that city, and Harry Williams and Walter Trupke were arrested for forging and uttering checks on the National Exchange Bank of Milwaukee and confessed. They secured check blanks being prepared for the H. W. Johns-Manville Company while in the employ of the Milwaukee Lithographing Company, and the absence of the customary numbering on the checks led to their arrest. George Heyder, self-confessed forger and burglar arrested last week, was sentenced in municipal court to eight years at Waupun.

Must Serve Out Term

According to the decision of the Wisconsin supreme court, Lawrence Murphy, convicted "loan shark," must serve out his term at the house of correction on the charge of usury. Attorneys of the wealthy Milwaukee loan broker have exhausted all expedients to have his term curtailed.

Wisconsin Notes

The audit of the city books started this week. The contract was awarded to the W. E. Heal Audit Company, Washington, D. C., for $5,680.

The Wisconsin state treasury is refusing to accept personal checks in payment of state taxes, returning all such with the advice that a draft is more acceptable.

Robert Simonds, Lake Mills, a student at the University of Wisconsin, pleaded guilty this week to a charge of passing worthless checks on Madison stores. Bail was fixed at $1,000 and the case adjourned for a month.

A new state bank has been incorporated at Wheeler with a capital of $10,000. The bank will occupy temporary headquarters until spring, when a new building will be erected.

At a meeting of the stockholders of the American Exchange Bank of Merrillan this week, it was voted to change the name of the institution to the State Bank of Merrillan and to increase the capital stock to $10,000. A new building will be erected during the coming summer.

James T. Gregory, for many years cashier of the Ashland National Bank, has resigned his position to devote his time to timber interests in the West. He was succeeded by Carl Rudquist, formerly assistant cashier.

A. J. Frame, president of the Waukesha National Bank, will leave for San Antonio, Texas, on Sunday. A stop will be made at Memphis, en route, where he will address the bankers and business men on March 5th. Mr. Frame will speak before a similar audience at Little Rock, Ark., the following day.

Articles of incorporation for the First State Bank of Solon Springs have been filed with the secretary of state. The bank is capitalized at $15,000 and is the first at Solon Springs.

Bids for the construction of the new Lincoln County Bank Building at Merrill were opened this week.

Walter Brown, formerly connected with Stevens Point and Marion banks, has disappeared from his home at Arnott, Wis. He left home on February 15th, leaving deposited money undrawn and without extra clothing and has not been seen or heard from since.

A SPECIAL REVIEW ON ERIE

Messrs. Ware & Leland, bankers and brokers of this city, have issued a special circular reviewing the present condition of the Erie Railroad Company, its resources, and securities. They are taking a very strong position and are advising customers to purchase Erie common for a "good speculation." These shares selling below par in this country. The ing to-day at 32, being the only trunk line shares selling below par in this country. The circular contains full details with a statistical summary, and will repay well the time necessary for making a careful investigation of the proposals made by Ware & Leland. It will be sent to anyone upon request. The firm's address is 160 West Jackson Boulevard, Chicago.

HELP ON "BLUE SKY" LAW

Lawrence, Kan., February 28.—When a concern which has an invention that will revolutionize transportation in a few months tries to sell stock in Kansas hereafter, the engineering department of the state university will take a look at the contrivance. J. N. Dolley, state bank examiner, asked Chancellor Strong for the co-operation of the university in enforcing the "blue sky" law.

"Many applications to sell stock are based on inventions," the bank commissioner said. "Here is a man who would utilize an undeveloped power of nature and get a billion horse power a minute. All he needs is a few hundred thousand dollars that he hopes to get from the prosperous farmers of Kansas."

The banking department will pass upon the business end of these companies and the merits of the mechanical inventions will be tested at the university.

Secretary P. C. Kauffman, secretary of the Washington Bankers, sends out the following: "At a meeting of the executive council of the Washington Bankers Association held in Tacoma, an invitation was extended by E. T. Wilson, chairman, on behalf of the associated bankers of Tacoma, to hold the seventh annual convention of the association there the last week in June. A similar invitation was extended by C. J. Lord, president of the Capitol National of Olympia, on behalf of that city. It finally was decided to hold the convention jointly in the two cities as follows: Date of the convention to be Thursday, Friday and Saturday, June 27, 28 and 29, the business sessions to be held in the city of Tacoma Thursday, June 27, and Saturday, June 29, the whole day Friday, June 28, to be given up to the entertainment of the delegates, visitors and guests; a steamer to be chartered to take the entire party a trip on Puget Sound to the city of Olympia, where they will be welcomed by the citizens and bankers of Olympia and entertained for the day, returning to Tacoma that same night. Saturday afternoon the bankers of Tacoma will entertain the visitors and delegates by an automobile ride to Tacoma's beautiful Country Club for a banquet and dance.

Pomona, Cal.—The Claremont National Bank has received its charter. The capital of the bank is $30,000. The board of directors will buy a site and erect a building at once. The directors are: J. T. Brooks, president; W. S. Palmer, J. S. Cooper, A. W. Towne, A. W. Smith, and M. F. Palmer.

GROUP 10, ILLINOIS, OFFICIALS CONFER

The chairman of the executive committee and other officials of Group 10, Illinois, held a conference at Cairo on February 22d with twenty-eight members present. Dinner was served at one o'clock in the private banquet room of the Halliday Hotel, and the session continued until 4:30 p. m. There was a general discussion of group work and short talks on banking conditions in southern Illinois, which were very much enjoyed by those present. One of the principal topics was the time and place for holding the next annual meeting of the group. This was left in the hands of the officers to decide. General sentiment seemed to favor holding the meeting as near the time of the meeting of Group 9 (set for May 23) as possible. The purpose of this is to give officials of outside banks and officers of the state association an opportunity to attend both group meetings on consecutive dates. Benton and Carmi were both spoken of and an invitation also was at hand from Carbondale. J. S. Aisthorpe of Cairo is chairman of the group and E. B. Jackson of Marion is secretary.

VISITING BANKERS IN CHICAGO

Among visiting bankers in Chicago during the past week were the following: E. J. Hughes, assistant cashier of the First National, Milwaukee; William Woodward, president of the Hanover National, New York; D. S. Culver, president of the Minnesota Bankers Association, St. Paul; Joseph Chapman, Jr., vice-president of the Northwestern National, Minneapolis; George Woodruff, president of the First National, Joliet; McLane Tilton, secretary of the Alabama Bankers Association, and wife; F. J. Woodworth, vice-president of the First National, of Cleveland; J. V. McDowell, of the First National of Forrest, Ill.; William G. Hegardt, cashier of the American Exchange National, Duluth. Mr. Hegardt reports easy conditions of money in the Northwest. George M. Burr, of Sands and Burr, Manistee, Mich., was a caller at the First National. "One of the strongest banks in the state of Michigan—and a private bank at that," said August Blum.

St. Louis

Southwestern reserve city news and gossip
—Special correspondence concerning also
the tributary territory, by J. Vion Papin

St. Louis, February 28.—Ultra quietness was the feature in the local monetary situation during the past week. Practically all bankers here are unanimous in the opinion that things could not be much quieter. The following of the head into the ring after the hat has served to further upset things, and render money more timid, according to the heads of several of the larger financial institutions. This added political unrest, it is believed, will still further defer general business activity, which, it is maintained, cannot be resumed until after the conventions, and even then there may be such uncertainty that only the election can settle and adjust things. The recent bank statement showed an extremely strong position, that is strong like the strong walls of a fortress, but it also showed no foment of activity within said walls. Loans, deposits, and reserves all increased since the December statement, but the expansion in loans did not keep pace with the former items. As a result, the heaviest percentage of gain was shown in the cash and sight exchange items. Several banks showed husky gains in deposits, which would be most satisfying, were only the demand for credits better and rates slightly higher. Only one of the larger institutions showed a decrease in loans. On the whole, the statement is satisfactory, and to a demonstration shows that this center is in a position to cope with any situation which may develop, either before or after the election. Collections are reported as being for the most part satisfactory, though there are some backward spots in the South and Southwest. One very hopeful factor in the situation just now is the seasonable weather and excellent crop outlook. Though this is early for forecasting what yields are likely to be, the indications now are the most favorable in years, and the expectations along these lines may go far to offset uncertainty attendant upon presidential year.

Bankers' Trust Company

The Bankers' Trust Company, which owns and controls a chain of country banks, has increased its capital stock from $1,000,000 to $1,250,000, the increase having taken place March 1st. Stockholders of record on that date were permitted to subscribe for the new stock on most advantageous terms, which fact is responsible for the recent high prices obtained for Bankers' shares.

Commonwealth's New Building

The Commonwealth Trust Company has arranged a $1,500,000 loan with the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company of New York for a twenty-one story office building on the northeast corner of Broadway and Olive Street, the site occupied at present by its banking edifice. It is stated that all the leases have been purchased in the property involved, with the exception of one on the old Third National Building. Tenants of the old structure have been notified to vacate by May 1st, on which date wrecking will commence. The plan embraces a quarter of a block, extending on Olive Street to the alley, and on Broadway to the building occupied by the Scarritt-Comstock Furniture Company. It is understood that the Commonwealth Trust will occupy the new Bank of Commerce Building during the period of construction, though this has not been decided, and the building on the northeast corner of Broadway and Locust Street, which the Trust Company owns and which was formerly the home of the Mechanics-American National, may be utilized.

Fight on Tax Mortgages

Members of the St. Louis Real Estate Exchange are considering measures which they desire to have presented to the Missouri legislature at the next term, in the hope of obtaining legislation in the interest of their line of business. Chief among the things wished for is a repeal of the taxation on real estate mortgages. This was suggested by Festus J. Wade, president of the Mercantile Trust Company, at the annual meeting of the Exchange. Mr. Wade held that as all real estate was taxed, mortgages or other securities on real estate should be exempt. The Mercantile Trust has an enormous business in its real estate department.

Victory for Missouri-Lincoln

The suit of E. M. Dorsey against the Missouri-Lincoln Trust Company to recover $10,000, which the plaintiff lost in the West End Realty Company, was decided in favor of the Trust Company. Several similar actions hinged on this decision, and the outcome is an important victory for the company, and will doubtless materially aid the success of its plans for reorganization. The West End Realty Company was formed to take over a tract of residence property in which the Missouri-Lincoln was interested. The scheme did not work out, and when the property was sold for debts there was nothing left for the stockholders. It was shown that Dorsey was an officer in the West End Realty Company and in a position to ascertain the character of his investment. The failure of the deal was attributed to general depression in the realty market. Along with the Missouri-Lincoln as a company, A. A. B. Woerheide, August Schlafly, Thomas Wagner, and Pinckney French were named as defendants.

Steel Barge Enterprise

Numerous applications have been received by the St. Louis-Gulf Steel Barge Line Company, now in process of organization, from neighboring cities on the Mississippi River for stock in the company. Commercial organizations in these smaller cities indicate that they believe the barge line should not be made exclusively a St. Louis enterprise, as its operation will benefit the entire Mississippi Valley. Lewis B. Boswell, of Quincy, Ill., secretary of the Upper Mississippi River Improvement Association, has made strong representations for the area he represents. A. L. Shapleigh, acting chairman of the organization committee, says that while members of the committee appreciate the co-operative spirit displayed by Mr. Boswell and others, it is unlikely that shippers outside of St. Louis will be invited to subscribe to the preferred stock. When increased business necessitates increased capitalization, outside subscriptions will be considered.

Grover Succeeds Wells

James H. Grover, bond officer of the Mississippi Valley Trust Company, has been elected president of the Mortgage Guarantee Company, to succeed Rolla Wells, who retired to become vice-president and member of the directory. Mr. Grover was also elected a vice-president and director of the Mortgage Trust Company, a company affiliated with the Mortgage Guarantee Trust Company. He will assume the duties of his new offices early this month. Mr. Grover is a St. Louisan by birth, and has had his entire business experience in this city. He was a partner of his father, Hiram J. Grover, until the latter's death in 1903. He was made bond officer of the Mississippi Valley Trust in 1910.

tion and Southern Illinois and Missouri bankers was held on Thursday in the rooms of the St. Louis Clearing House Association. The committee has been asked to investigate the plan to separate savings deposits from commercial assets. It is intended to prevent using the savings, under the ninety-day notice rule, to pay depositors whose claims cannot be deferred. Members of the committee are: Pierre Jay, chairman, of New York; John F. Hagey, of Chicago; Isaac H. Orr, of St. Louis; Lynn H. Dinkins, of New Orleans; John H. Sturgis, of Boston; and Thomas B. Patton, of New York.

CLOSES A BIG OHIO BANK

Columbus, Ohio, February 26.—Announcement was made to-night by F. E. Baxter, state superintendent of banks and banking, that he had taken charge of the Columbus Savings and Trust Company. The bank was incorporated January 5, 1901, and had an authorized capital of $1,000,000 and paid in capital of $610,000. Mr. Baxter expressed the opinion that depositors will be paid in full. He said constant withdrawal of deposits since the failure of another local banking institution last December had reduced the assets and he had deemed it his duty to take charge, in view of the inability of the management to realize upon certain securities.

Columbus, Ohio.—Harry E. Hayes, wealthy banker and clubman of Cleveland, who is serving a term of five years in the Ohio penitentiary for embezzlement, was granted a parole by the state board of administration. The parole will take effect July 1st. Hayes has served nearly two years in prison.

TAKES CHARGE OF OHIO BANK

Columbus, O., February 27.—F. E. Baxter, state superintendent of banks and banking, has taken charge of the Columbus Savings and Trust Company. The bank had an authorized capital of $610,000. Mr. Baxter expressed the opinion that depositors would be paid in full.

BANKED IN ICE BOX

Cleburne, Texas, February 26.—While the family of S. E. Rawls was away last Friday night some one entered his home, stole $450.15 that had been hidden in the ice box and then set fire to the house.

State Banking Commissioner B. L. Gill of Texas attended the Dallas bankers' meeting recently and said that the banks of Texas were in fine shape and were in safe hands. Mr. Gill is accompanied in his rounds of the Texas meetings by various state examiners.

Washington.—The National Bank of Commerce of Guthrie, Okla., has been placed in voluntary liquidation.

Editorial Comment

A USEFUL ORGANIZATION

The Chicago papers are daily commending "the usefulness of the Illinois Bankers Association" and cheering on its way the movement for a better banking law and a separate state banking department. Every paper, from the modest to the grand—all have engaged in the work. The Record-Herald approves "a movement within the association to bring the private banks of the state under control of the state banking department, to create in Illinois some regulation of the sale of 'investment stocks' and to inculcate among citizens habits of thrift and sound investments. Much favor is being expressed for these propositions. Every organization of business or technical men can find a broad field for its energies and usefulness if it realizes the interdependence of interests and the need of combined action that are so marked features of present-day civilization. The broader the field the better, for the good of both public and private interests."

The Chicago Tribune says that the work is being pushed wisely and that the "association is carrying forward the campaign for banking supervision with energy and practical sense." In conclusion of a splendid editorial the Tribune says: "It is to be hoped the bankers of this representative organization will concentrate their influence and adopt well considered measures to bring about proper supervision over all banking and loan enterprises in Illinois. It is a discredit to the people of the state and to the banking fraternity especially that we are so far behind in our legislation in this field."

Kentucky has just passed a new banking bill establishing state supervision by an almost unanimous vote. It creates a separate banking department, too, that the law may be efficiently enforced. The two things are necessary to take bank examiners and the conduct of the office entirely out of politics. Illinois needs universal bank supervision but little worse than she needs a separate banking department with a commissioner and examiners on civil service basis.

RESPONSIBILITY FOR STOCK-SELLING ENTERPRISES

The proposal to give to Illinois a statute putting stock-selling and investment houses under state supervision and control has met with very general favor. A note of criticism has arisen, however, first from Mr. Bosworth, an experienced bank examiner and president of the Peoples Trust of this city, and second from Mr. Hulburt, vice-president of the Merchants Loan and Trust of Chicago, a student of banking in its higher sense. These gentlemen fear that if stock-selling concerns are put under supervision, the state might be led into endorsing questionable enterprises by error of judgment, and that the state might assist in some instances of disposing of worthless securities. At first this seemed a much more formidable criticism than it did on second thought. Those who have studied the banking situation in Canada are fully aware that Canada is without bank supervision to-day for the sole reason that some of the more conservative bankers believed that the state by supervision and examination might be held responsible for banks which really were not trustworthy, and that thereby the government might induce people to place their money in unsound institutions. This sort of argument would be laughed at in Chicago and in contiguous states, yet practically it is the same as that offered by Messrs. Bosworth and Hulburt. The same sort of doubt would prevent the state from allowing a surgeon to practise least he might be guilty at some time of malpractice, or a druggist least he might at some time give the wrong medicine and thereby cause a death.

The so-called "Blue Sky" law of Kansas had the same objections raised against it at the time it was before the legislature. Finally the advocates of this measure succeeded in pacifying the objectors. This celebrated law compels all those applying for a license to sell stocks and securities to file, under oath, full details of organization, as well as a full financial statement, giving a list of the officers and principal stockholders. The commissioner then either may take their word for it, or he may proceed to make a detailed investigation. He must be satisfied that the concern is solvent, and that there is a fair, just promise of return to those who invest. He then issues a certificate to the company, or refuses it, according to the facts placed before him. Heavy penalties are provided for trying to do business without this license. Every seller of stock, bonds and other securities in Kansas must carry with him a certificate which states that his company has complied with the law. This certificate tells where full detailed information (made under oath) may be found by which anyone interested may satisfy himself that it is a legitimate concern. It is recited upon the face of the certificate in very bold type that "The banking commissioner in no wise recommends the securities to be offered for sale by such company." The banking commissioner simply has done all that he can to prevent worthless, fraudulent or fake securities being sold. This is a great deal and would save unnumbered millions of hard-earned money to the people of this country if adopted in every state. The commissioner may at any time make additional examinations, just as he is permitted to do in the case of banks. If he shall find at any time that the assets do not equal the liabilities, or that the methods are judged to be unsafe, he may apply for a receiver, just as he may do in the case of a bank in a similar condition. The state assumes no more responsibility for the concern which it permits to sell stock than it does for a bank which it permits to receive deposits and to conduct a banking business. There can be very little question when books are properly kept and statements sworn to and made of public record, about the solvency of a bond-selling company, and so far as experience has gone with the new law in Kansas, it has given the greatest satisfaction. Oklahoma has a law similar in many respects, and the Texas Bankers Association is moving to have a law of the same kind passed in that state. We have it from Secretary Hoops that that state has been overrun by sellers of doubtful securities, stock in life insurance companies, bonds based upon swamp lands and mountain tracts and other worthless stuff, since they were thrown out of Kansas and Oklahoma. In another part of this paper will be found a very able article by State Banking Commissioner Gill of Texas, covering the same ground, and making a most able argument in favor of supervision over all banks and over all such companies as are included in the "Blue Sky" law of Kansas. The general article in this issue on bank supervision will be found full of good argument in favor of strict banking laws in all the states and in favor of a separate banking department as against those which are included in the office of the state treasurer, the state auditor, etc.

STRAW BALLOT INDUSTRY

Every presidential year, and in other important elections, certain newspapers largely given over to politics use up a great deal of space and a great deal of the time of their readers with announcements of the results of straw ballots. These ballots never fail to support the candidate who is being supported by the paper itself. Dishonesty is not charged in this matter, for it might appear to be reasonable that the readers of a certain paper might be supporters of the policies of that paper; in fact, this is taken for granted. The more boisterous an editor might be in supporting Col. Roosevelt, the more likely the boisterous Roosevelt voters would be to subscribe to his publication. Thus it would come about that any straw ballot, however honestly secured, through the columns of that paper would be prejudicial to the interests of the other candidates. It will be remembered that in the Merriam-Harrison campaign the Merriam papers deluged their readers with straw ballot proposals, and in no instance was the learned professor elected mayor of Chicago by less than five to one over his chief opponent. Now for the practical end of it. When the actual election came the Merriam votes did not seem to materialize; he was quite decisively beaten at the polls. No straw ballot thus far attempted has shown President Taft in his true strength. Indeed, two papers have announced that Debs, and some other equally unmentionable candidate, had surpassed the worthy president in the voting. It should not be forgotten, however, that of the 1,076 delegates which will compose the 1912 Chicago convention, Taft already has forty elected and instructed for him. These are all that have been elected thus far. It may be that the next forty, and a number of succeeding forties also will be instructed for his renomination. It is quite one thing to conduct a straw ballot in a partisan paper and show strength for a chosen candidate, and quite another to deliver the votes to him on the floor of the convention. This should not be lost sight of by those who are interested in the outcome of the republican national convention to be held in this city in June.

OH, WHAT A DIFFERENCE!

You may have noticed a habit that our living ex-president has of putting things rather strongly, at times, to use no "uglier" word. In his Columbus speech Mr. Roosevelt made statements about Lincoln which the records will not bear out—again to use no "uglier" word. They were very wide of the facts as shown by the record. The colonel was justifying his past attacks upon the courts and his then attack coupled with a bold advocacy of the "recall." He is rather fond of coupling his own with the name of Lincoln, but—again the facts. This is what the colonel said:

Lincoln actually applied in successful fashion the principle of the recall in the Dred Scott case. He denounced the supreme court for that iniquitous decision in language much stronger than I have ever used in criticising any court, and appealed to the people to recall the decision—the word "recall" in this connection was not then known, but the phrase exactly describes what he advocated.

You can not imagine anything farther from the truth. To put it right up to Mr. Roosevelt, where he ought to "recall" his Columbus address so far as it applies to Lincoln, one only has to read what the great Lincoln really did say. In style, temperament and in loyalty to the courts it may be a revelation to some. Lincoln said:

Judicial decisions have two uses: first, to absolutely determine the case decided, and secondly, to indicate to the public how other similar cases will be decided when they arise. For the latter use they are called "precedents" and "authorities." We believe as much as Judge Douglas (perhaps more) in obedience to and respect for the judicial department of the government. We think its decisions on constitutional questions, when fully settled, should control not only the particular case decided, but the general policy of the country, subject to be disturbed only by amendments to the Constitution, as provided in that instrument itself. More than this would be revolution. But we think the Dred Scott decision is erroneous. We know the court that made it has often overruled its own decisions, and we shall do what we can to have it overrule this. We offer no resistance to it.

There you have the language of a lawyer and a statesman, just as you would expect a Lincoln to utter them. He did not call the court "a jackass" nor advocate a recall, nor did he say one word to justify Colonel Roosevelt's charge that Lincoln "denounced the supreme court" "in language much stronger than I have ever used." Read the two extracts again and get a little more light on the Oyster Bay peculiarities in truth and in English.

RECORD DEPOSITS IN CHICAGO BANKS

The high record for deposits in the Chicago and other reserve center banks may indicate dull business and lax demand, but it also indicates sound banking and business conditions. The expansion and speculative interests have been eliminated to an unusual degree. The national banks of Chicago have published statements of their condition at the close of business on February 20th. The figures for the fourteen national banks totaled $486,021,426 in the matter of deposits, against $441,124,807 on December 5th, the last previous call, and $403,187,141 on January 11th, one year ago.

In the matter of loans there was an increase of $23,762,145, compared with December 5th. Cash resources reached a total of $201,836,909, compared with $180,068,377 two months ago, and $162,866,282 one year ago.

Reports of the largest state banks indicate a gain in the matter of deposits for those institutions.

However, the percentage of increase by the state banks will not equal that of the nationals. The latter have received a large volume of funds from the country banks. The state institutions are more local in their character. Besides several of the latter have had more deposits on previous occasions than at this time. The Illinois Trust, which published yesterday $94,477,482 in deposits, showed on September 2, 1911, $98,204,029.

The First Trust and Savings showed $53,127,480 on this call, whereas on June 8, 1911, its deposits were $55,911,570. The State Bank of Chicago shows but a trifle more in deposits than it had on September 2, 1911. The Merchants Loan and Trust makes a record at $66,343,829 deposits. The Continental and Commercial Trust and Savings Bank at $22,134,993 is about $744,000 below its record last December. The Northern Trust shows on this call $31,816,412, being its record.

Individual exhibits by the national banks make in the most instances records so far as published statements are concerned, but both the Continental and Commercial and the First National have been several million dollars higher than their present figures. But compared with the call of December 5, 1911, Continental National deposits are 10 per cent higher and First National about 9¾ per cent.

Both make the best showing in their history in response to calls of the comptroller. The National City Bank has a marked increase in deposits. The Corn Exchange National is at the top. The Live Stock Exchange is easily at its best figures, and among the smaller banks the National Produce and the Calumet make good comparisons.

CHAPTER NEWS

CUBA CHAPTER A. I. B.

By W. H. MORALES, VICE-PRESIDENT

Dr. Orestes Ferrara, president of the House of Representatives, gave an interesting talk in Spanish on the subject of "The Bank of France and Its Note Issues," before the American Institute of Banking on January 7th in Havana. Mr. Olavarria, cashier of the National Bank of Cuba, presented the speaker, stating that he needed no introduction to a Cuban audience.

In his opening remarks, Dr. Ferrara explained that while in the National University, where he has lectured almost daily for six years, his task is greatly facilitated by addressing men of a uniform degree of training, he doubted not that his remarks would merit the attention of the Chapter, because of their bearing on the vital question of Cuban currency, which after ten years of national existence, continues in a crude and transitory state, and must some day be resolved on a definite national basis.

"The Bank of France," said Dr. Ferrara, "is perhaps the most complete and famous banking organization of the age in which we live. It is the only institution of a public character which has survived through the vicissitudes of the past century in France. Launched into existence in the year 1800, when Napoleon Bonaparte was first consul of the nation, it commenced its career at a time of civil chaos, after France had emerged from the Revolution of 1793 as an impoverished nation instead of the great financial power that she has since become.

"With her treasury exhausted, her armies unpaid, an enormous public debt to meet and old institutions fallen, it was impossible for the nation to conduct its affairs through the old and shattered banking organization, of which nothing remained but millions of depreciated paper. The field of finance was then lacking in expert economists, such as are common to our period, but a master mind was destined to relieve the situation.

"A number of prominent French bankers, at this juncture, united and constituted the Bank of France, with a capital of 30,000,000 francs, under a charter which expired in 1803, conferring the following powers: (1) The making of discounts on three solvent signatures; (2) The making of collections for the state; (3) The receipt of demand deposits; (4) The issuance of notes payable to bearer on demand, or to order after sight, in such degree as to insure a prompt redemption; and (5) To receive time deposits in a savings department, payable at fixed periods. Napoleon believed that the power to issue paper money should be vested in a single institution, under the patronage of the government, and with his accustomed decision and foresight, he selected the Bank of France for the purpose.

"Several other banks at that time exercised the privilege of issue, to a limited extent, in order to suppress which he dictated, in 1803, regardless of any prior vested rights, a decree, giving to the Bank of France the exclusive privilege of issuing bank notes in Paris. In arbitrary terms he provided in that law that the Commercial Discount Bank, the Comptoir National, La Factorerie, and others associations in Paris should cease to issue their notes, and commanded them to retire their outstanding paper money forthwith. He at the same time extended the term of the Bank of France to the year 1818, with a view to raising its credit.

"The dictates of the sovereign, however, were not enough to promote confidence in the institution, of which Napoleon was himself a shareholder. During the financial crisis of 1805, speaking to M. Perlegout, president of the bank, he declared that a brilliant national exploit was necessary to make the Bank of France a permanent power in the land. His active mind planned a formidable manœuvre, which he personally conducted, the sequel of which was, in his own language, the laying of the bank's cornerstone upon the battlefield of Austerlitz.

"We thus have the unique example of a great national bank establishing its credit, not on the ability of its administration, the economic wealth of the country or the expansive tendency of modern banking systems, but on the successful issue of a great battle which was fought for the express purpose of inspiring confidence in national institutions.

"The circulation of paper money by the Bank of France has been based from its very outset, on the principle of a free issue, within certain prescribed limits, regulated by the amount of negotiable paper held by the bank, as opposed to that of an issue limited by lawful cash reserves, which many other nations have adopted.

"The monopoly of issuing notes, given by the law of 1803, formed the alliance between the institution and the state, and Napoleon demanded its aid to finance the nation in furtherance of his plans. In 1806 the capital of the bank was increased to 90,000,000 francs. Its charter was again extended twenty-five years, viz., until 1843, as a means of protecting the shareholders by strengthening their stock. To further subject the institution to the state, the enactment provided that the governor and two deputy governors should be appointed by the emperor, to whom they should swear fealty, and that the statutes of the bank must bear his approval.

"M. Perlegout, president of the bank, was opposed to the policy of expansion and state control of the institution. His objections were overruled, however, with the remark that the bank must become great, even if against the wishes of its president.

When Napoleon abdicated in 1814, he abandoned his hold on the institution, and it was sought to re-establish it as a private bank on the basis of 1803, but it was too late, as the government recognized the need of it for a state institution. A temporary suspension of its operations ensued, however, and when it resumed later, several of its branches were discontinued, giving place to departmental banks, which continued to flourish in the isolated localities for several years.

In 1840 the charter was again extended to 1867.

"During the financial panic of 1847 the bank was obliged to suspend specie payments, and again from 1870 to 1876.

"In 1846 the departmental banks were compelled by law to merge in the Bank of France, owing to the discredit resulting from their notes also having been made legal tender during the suspension period. This epoch was known as the general revolution, when the leading nations of Europe were in a state of civil strife.

"As a result of the fusion of the departmental banks with the Bank of France and the corresponding increase of its capital, the power and prestige of the institution became greater than ever.

"Before its maturity in 1867, the charter of the bank was again extended to 1897. Its history during the Franco-Prussian War, as well as the Second Monarchy, was one of pre-eminent service to the nation. During the Bloody Week of 1871, when the threat of burning all Paris was partly put into execution, the bank was saved through the financial services which it had rendered to the dominant party. At the close of the Franco-Prussian War it played the leading part in paying off the great war indemnity of 1,500,000,000 francs levied by Germany as a condition of evacuating French territory.

The present charter of the bank expires in 1920. Its capital of 182,500,000 francs has not been increased since 1857 and is distributed among 153 branches. With its maximum note issue of 3,800,000 francs, it is apparent that the circulating medium of the country has not augmented in keeping with the enormous development of the country's wealth, but the amount has been found adequate for practical needs, by reason of the extensive use of credit in the form of bank checks which largely prevails. The notes of the bank are a legal tender in payment of debts, and are redeemable by the bank in either gold or silver coin, so that the country is on a bimetallic basis.

"In addition to its character as a bank of issue, the institution is also the principal clearing house of the country. This explains why the operations of the official clearing house are so small as compared with those of other countries.

"The question will some day arise in Cuba as to which of the recognized systems should be adopted for its people, that is, whether the free system, the limited system, or one that is mixed, wherein the state will have a certain amount of control without prejudice to the institution. The free system, I believe, is not considered favorably by the United States, nor has the purely state system been a success in Latin-American republics. Modern nations are not likely to desire arbitrary state institutions, such as obtain in Russia, Sweden, and partly in Germany.

"While the question is not a political one at present, it will doubtless be an issue some day, and not only the bankers and students of economics will do well to take cognizance of the subject, but the people themselves, by reason of their interests being concerned."

Dr. Ferrara's talk was applauded by three cheers from Cuba Chapter and words of appreciation from its officers. Despite the small amount of time at his disposal he has promised to conclude the subject at a future lecture.

CHICAGO CHAPTER, A. I. B.

BY R. M. COLEMAN

The next general meeting of the Chicago chapter will be held Tuesday evening, March 12th. One of the principal speakers for the occasion is J. Laurence Laughlin, chairman of the executive committee, National Citizens League, and a man with a world of knowledge of banking and economics. Mr. Laughlin will address the chapter on "Banking Reform and National Reserve Association."

Raymond B. Cox, president of the associated chapters, stopped off on his way to New York for a day's visit, and was shown the town by a delegation who met him at the train.

Mr. Ashly, chairman of the debate committee, has unfolded plans for a class in public speaking. Much enthusiasm has been aroused and a great number have affiliated themselves with the debate society, to be able to take advantage of this opportunity.

Banking and Finance Class Examination, as Reported by President Smales

The banking and finance class which terminated Tuesday, February 20, 1912, with an examination on the subject was one of the attractive educational features of the year. Over 153 members of this class, or over 50 per cent who enrolled at the beginning of the year, attended 80 per cent of the meetings. Out of this number 56 took the examination, or about 33 per cent of the active members of the class. Where were the other 67 per cent to let such a valued opportunity slip by them? Some may have felt a little timid about passing the examination, but I am of the firm opinion that at least 80 per cent of the 97 active members that failed to make the examination would qualify, if they made the effort.

With this firm opinion I have in mind to hold another examination in the latter part of April, say, at the completion of the law course in negotiable instruments, providing a sufficient number of those members of the class who attended say, 75 per cent of the meetings, will agree to take such examination. This examination means a 50 per cent credit toward qualifying for the institute certificate.

Following is a list of the members who passed the examination, also those who have passed in addition the law examination which entitles them to their certificate:

C. A. Elsner, J. W. Hayes, and Fred G. Letchford, Central Trust Company; Frank A. Lindsten, Chicago Clearing House Association; Maurice A. Milenbach and L. E. Wilson, Chicago Savings Bank and Trust Company; Bernard E. Ehlers, Fred C. Johnson, J. W. Olson, Clarence A. Robb, Theo. G. Schafrank, Otto W. Schreiber, and H. L. Sievertsen, Continental and Commercial National; C. S. Hall and J. W. Youle, Corn Exchange National; H. A. Anderson, Bruce Baird, H. S. Beckwith, Harry Carlson, W. G. Coggeshall, Charles Johnson, J. W. Johnson, George C. Loveless, Frank L. LePelley, E. J. Mulvihill, Gustave H. Peterson, C. E. Schiffner, J. O. Sorg, and E. A. Stanton, First National; Roy R. Marquardt, T. S. McCarty, and Daniel W. Westervelt, First Trust and Savings Bank; Edwin C. Baur, F. S. Kingore, A. W. Lander, and Herbert C. Roer, Fort Dearborn National; Wm. R. Dowell and H. K. Roney, Illinois Trust and Savings Bank; M. D. Goldberg, Live Stock Exchange National; Fred W. Roth, National Bank of the Republic; John W. Gorbey, Peoples Trust and Savings Bank; John G. S. Linner, State Bank of Chicago; and W. H. Damon and Gustav Hake, Union Trust Company.

CENTRAL WEST LETTER

By EDGAR P. ALLEN

Omaha

In the interval between December 5, 1911 and February 20, 1912 an increase of over $8,000,000 was shown by the Kansas City banks. The last national bank call found the national banks in splendid condition and the total resources of the twenty-nine state and national banks of this city amount to about $153,000,000. With an increase of over 7 and a half millions in deposits in national banks in the past eleven weeks, there has been a gain of 5 millions in cash items and an increase of nearly 2 millions in loans. Kansas City appears to have a firm grip upon sixth place in the clearings list of the United States after a season of fluctuation. While its gains have not been heavy they have been steady ranging from 40 millions to 45 millions a week. Other cities in the Central West have made favorable showings and Omaha has enjoyed heavier gains than Kansas City. The last clearings statement shows Omaha with 29.1 per cent gain over the same period last year. Wichita, Fort Worth and St. Joseph, Mo. are also in the increase column.

Omaha Club Holds Banquet

The Washington Day banquet at the Omaha club was one of the biggest events of the present season among Omaha business men and bankers. The guest of honor was John Barrett, director general of the Pan-American Union and formerly minister to Panama, who advised the commercial interests of the Central West to get ready for the important trade which he predicts will come with the opening of the Panama canal. "It will be almost criminal lack of foresight," declared Mr. Barrett, if our commercial interests fail, after the government has expended $400,000,000 on the canal to make an organized and persistent effort to take advantage of all the new conditions of demand and supply. And yet the chambers of commerce, boards of trade and other commercial organizations and the large manufacturing, exporting and importing interests of Chicago and other western cities are making very little effort, compared with what they ought to do, in studying the countries, the peoples, the markets, the products and commodities of trade."

Making Preparations for Convention

Plans are being completed by the Joplin Clearing House Association for the convention of the State Bankers Association of Missouri which meets in that city on May 21st and 22nd. Joplin entertained this association in 1908 and the success of that convention is still well remembered among the financiers who attended it. The chief problem presented to the Joplin bankers at this time is how to find accommodations for the hundreds of visitors who are expected. At a meeting of the Clearing House Association recently plans were discussed for the various features of the convention. J. A. Cragin and J. E. Garm, members of the executive committee of the state association are Joplin bankers and have charge of the arrangements. The following committees have been appointed: Reception—J. A. Cragin, chairman; and all of the directors of the Joplin banks and trust companies. Entertainment—James E. Garm, chairman; T. B. Jenkins, Julius Becker, J. O. Dodson and F. T. Snapp. Speakers—T. W. Cunningham, chairman; W. M. House, John F. Wise, H. M. Ramsay, Sr., and J. H. Spencer. Hotel—Joel T. Livingston, chairman; John Carroll, H. A. Richardson, J. B. Johnson, Henry D. Dufflemeyer, W. B. Gallentine, H. M. Ramsay, Jr., and Fred D. Wagner. Several additional committees will be appointed within a few weeks.

Oklahoma Group Meetings

Groups 3, 4 and 2 of the Oklahoma Bankers Association met last week at Shawnee, Okmulgee and Enid respectively. Group 4 which met at Okmulgee is the largest of the five groups of the state and the meeting was attended by 150 bankers representing 176 banks in seventeen counties in the central eastern part of Oklahoma. The feature of this meeting was an address on "What Kaffir Corn will do in Oklahoma from the Standpoint of the Banker," by J. B. Adams of the Butler County Bank of Eldorado, Kan., and an address on the "Aldrich Plan in Relation to Country Banks," by Judge L. F. Parker of the First National Bank of Vinita. Bartlesville was chosen as the convention city in 1913. The following officers were elected: A. L. Churchill, Vinita, chairman; W. S. Vernon, Coweta, vice-chairman; and H. E. Kennedy, Okmulgee, secretary. "Safe Farming and Banking" was the title of an address delivered by John T. Field before Group 3 at Shawnee, February 21st. This meeting was largely attended and the following officers were elected: A. J. Fluke, vice-president of the National Bank of Commerce, Shawnee, chairman; J. C. Lillard, president of the First State, Seminole, vice-chairman; R. W. Yakish, cashier of the Bristow National, secretary. Holdenville was named for the next meeting. Nearly 200 bankers took part in the fifth annual meeting of Group 2 of the Oklahoma Bankers Association at Enid February 23rd.

"Bankers' Colony" will be Increased

The "bankers' colony" at the Federal Penitentiary at Leavenworth will be increased soon by the arrival of four recruits. They are: A. H. Stout and A. J. Titus of Cherokee, Okla., and H. M. Dearing and his son, Palmer

M. Dearing of Albion, Mich. Stout and Titus were found guilty last week in the United States District Court at Guthrie, Okla., on one count of six in an indictment charging them with misappropriation of funds from the First National Bank of Cherokee. Stout was president of the bank and Titus was a director. The Dearings confessed to forgeries amounting to $165,000 that resulted in the closing of the Albion National Bank in January.

Texas Group Meetings

Two notable group meetings of Texas bankers were held last week following the general series of group meetings which have been held in various Texas districts since January 1st. The fourth district meeting was held at Waco February 19th with Chairman J. C. Reynolds of Moody presiding. The address of welcome was delivered by Abe Gross of Waco and the response was by M. A. Traylor of the Stockyards National, St. Louis. J. E. Ferguson of Temple discussed "The Attitude of the State and National Departments Toward Overdrafts." W. R. Boyd, Jr., of Dallas, secretary of the Texas section of the National Citizens League for the Promotion of Sound Banking, spoke of that organization and its principles. It had not and would not, he said, advocate or oppose either the Aldrich bill or any other banking measure. What was needed, Mr. Boyd said, was a law that would insure commercial safety, a measure not dominated or controlled by politicians. W. W. Woodson, of Mart, talked on "The Relationship That Should Exist Between Country Banks and their City Correspondents." J. Howard Ardrey, cashier of the City National, Dallas, spoke on "Bank Consolidations: Are They Good For Both the Banks and the Public?" The speaker contended that consolidations are advantageous and that they do not restrict resources of the legitimate borrower. In referring to Congressman R. L. Henry's contention, that there was a money trust, and the latter's resolution that the same be investigated, Mr. Ardrey said that banks were handling business along proper lines. Bankers in New York have aided during the money panic, he said, but Washington was controlled by political agencies. Waco was selected as the permanent meeting place of the Fourth District Bankers Association in the future, and the following officers were elected: Chairman, A. J. Dossett, Cameron; secretary, G. S. McGehee, Waco.

On February 22nd the members of the Seventh District Bankers Association of Texas met at Fort Worth. In the absence of the chairman, John P. H. Jones of Childress, W. G. Newby of the American National, Fort Worth, called the association to order. The first address was that on "Cooperation Between the Bankers and the Farmers of Texas Along the Lines of Agricultural and Vocational Education," by Joe Hirsch, vice-president of Corpus Christi National, Corpus Christi, Texas. A paper by Commissioner of Insurance and Banking, B. L. Gill of Austin on overdrafts was read by Oscar Wells of the Union National of Houston. J. M. Logan of Fort Worth, national bank examiner for Texas, discussed this paper and approved the advice contained therein. The following officers were elected: S. B. Norwood, president of the First National of Cleburne, chairman, and P. R. Waldrop of Crowell, secretary. The invitation extended by a committee of business men of Cleburne to hold the next convention in that city was accepted. Among the bankers from outside of the state who made the rounds of Texas group meetings beginning at Dallas February 13th and including Houston, San Antonio, Austin, Waco, Brownwood and Fort Worth were: Carl D. Coonly, New York; G. H. Demseraub, Chicago; M. H. Grimme, Chicago; H. O. Shed, Guthrie; J. M. Helling, Kansas City; W. H. Hurley, Chicago; H. I. L. Burroughs, Kansas City; B. L. Jones and W. H. Bleckley of Wichita.

Central West Notes of Interest

O. L. Cully, vice-president of the Farmers State of Larned, Kan., and Mrs. H. L. Cully, a heavy stockholder in that institution, have sold the controlling interest in the bank to W. L. Earl, cashier of the First State of Alton, Kan. Mr. Cully will move to Colorado where he has other banking interests.

State Bank Commissioner John E. Swanger of Missouri is expected to announce his candidacy for the Republican nomination for governor next week. State Treasurer James Cowgill of Missouri is expected to be a candidate for the same office on the Democratic ticket.

William Woodward, president of the Hanover National of New York, was a visitor in Kansas City's financial district last week. Mr. Woodward is 32 years old and is at the head of a bank which has deposits of $110,000,000. He is traveling in the west informing himself on the financial and crop outlook for 1912.

The jury in the case of John B. Sneed, the millionaire cattleman and banker of Fort Worth, Tex., charged with the murder of Captain A. G. Boyce, was unable to agree. Captain Boyce, the victim, was the father of A. G. Boyce, Jr., who eloped with Mrs. Sneed last November and the killing grew out of this scandal. All parties connected with the case are wealthy and have extensive banking interests in Texas.

Jerome Harrington, president of the First National Bank of Watonga, Okla., and George H. Hamilton, president of the First National Bank of Watska, Ill. have bought heavy interests in the State Savings of Wichita, Kan.

The new stockholders will materially increase the capital of the bank.

E. F. Swinney, president of the First National Bank of Kansas City, and Mrs. Swinney have returned to Kansas City after a three weeks' tour of the south. They were accompanied by W. S. Kinnear, president of the Kansas City Terminal Railway Company, and Mrs. Kinnear.

Raymond B. Cox of New York, president of the American Institute of Banking, has been invited to address the Texas association meeting at San Antonio in May. It is believed that he will accept.

Among the visitors in Kansas City's financial district last week were: E. L. Langford, bank commissioner of Oklahoma; M. R. Sturtevant, vice-president of the Central National, St. Louis; D. A. DeYoung, cashier of the First National, Prairie View, Kan.; T. M. Walker, president of the Atchison Savings, Atchison, Kan.; R. H. Hazlett, president of the Eldorado National, Eldorado, Kan.; W. H. Matthews, cashier of the Farmers and Merchants Bank, Kiel, Okla.; John R. Lindburg, president of the First National, Pittsburg, Kan.; M. H. Mallott, president of the Citizens Bank of Abilene, Kan.; J. S. Corley, president of the State Savings, Wichita, Kan.; J. M. Dosbaugh, president of the Dosbaugh National, Cedarvale, Kan.; George T. Inge, president of the First National, Garden City, Kan.; F. S. Hall, president of the Baxter National, Baxter Springs, Kan.; W. H. Dill, president of the Citizens State, Okemah, Okla.; J. Lovering Smith, secretary of the Joplin Trust Company, Joplin, Mo.; A. N. Ruble, cashier of the First National, Pawhuska, Okla.; E. C. Sims, cashier of the First State, Hartshorn, Okla.; M. H. Potter, president of the State Bank of Turon, Kan.; J. S. Morse, president of the Phillips County Bank, Phillipsburg, Kan.; U. G. Soul, assistant cashier of the Merchants American National, St. Louis; A. N. Rubie, cashier of the First National, Pawhuska, Okla.; John F. Brown, cashier of the Bank of Saskwa, Saskwa, Okla.

William T. Kemper, president of the Commerce Trust Company of Kansas City, one of the most prominent Democratic leaders of Missouri, has been urged to accept the nomination for mayor of Kansas City. Seldom has a man resisted such insistent importuning as has come to Mr. Kemper from the members of his party in Kansas City, but he has firmly declined. He says he cannot afford to give up banking to become an office holding politician. Mr. Kemper is very wealthy and is one of the heaviest stockholders in several Kansas City banks and trust companies.

The Commercial National and the First State Bank and Trust Company of Brady, Tex. have consolidated by the Commercial increasing its capital stock and absorbing the smaller institution.

The Morrisville State Bank of Morrisville, Mo., has introduced a decided innovation for this part of the country. It is paying interest on checking accounts. This is a new bank which opened for business December 20th last with a list of very substantial stockholders.

W. L. Norton, former president of the Columbia Bank and Trust Company of Oklahoma City, and the American National Bank of Bartlesville, Okla., was found guilty last week by a federal grand jury on three indictments on charges of making false entries in the bank books, illegal transferring of money from the banks to other companies and pretended claims. Norton broke down completely when he heard the verdict. Eight other indictments were quashed. Norton's financial career was one of the most spectacular of Oklahoma and the failure of his banks was that state's greatest financial disaster. The Columbia Bank and Trust Company was the largest in the state and its failure carried down two other banks which is said to have cost the state bank guaranty fund a million dollars. Norton has not been sentenced.

In some manner not yet known the rumor spread last week that a consolidation of the Omaha National Bank and the Corn Exchange National had been consummated. The report was printed far and wide and the next day was officially denied in a statement signed by C. W. Erwin, cashier of the Corn Exchange National.

In all probability the Citizens League for Kansas will meet in state convention at Wichita early in May. Robert W. Bonyng, member of the national monetary commission, will pay a visit to Wichita March 8th, where he will address a large meeting of business men on matters connected with monetary legislation.

The legal tangle growing out of the failure of the American Union Trust Company of Kansas City is becoming more complicated. Various suits have been filed against officers and stockholders in the institution by the Commerce Trust Company which has taken over the assets of the failed institution for settlement.

Banking news from Minneapolis—St. Paul financial center, and surrounding States, compiled by J. Edwards Smith

At the last call the Minneapolis banks have $103,336,668 deposits, or $13,573,337 more than January 7, 1911. The record for December 5, 1911, was $107,291,402. The December call is always the high one in Minneapolis, and the record is said to be a good one for January with $3,954,754 shy. The savings banks deposits are $20,573,123, a gain of $558,717, since December 5th and an increase of $1,153,813 since January 7, 1911.

The loans and discounts are $63,214,262 as compared with $62,242,885 in December. A year ago they were $54,912,258.

Provident Loan Society

The Provident Loan society of St. Paul will have offices in the Endicott building. The office opened Thursday. The bankers on the board are Louis Betz, W. B. Geery, F. A. Nienhauser.

Bankers of Washington

L. A. Huntoon, ex-president of the Minnesota Bankers association, was one of the five northwestern bankers to confer with the house committee on agriculture in Washington and J. W. Wheeler, St. Paul. Others are G. C. Power, St. Paul; A. G. Wedge, Jr., Detroit; W. E. Lee, Long Prairie; Joseph Chapman, Jr.; Secretary C. R. Frost, Minneapolis.

Raymond Cox Addresses Twin City Chapters

Raymond C. Cox, president of the American Institute of Banking, addressed the St. Paul clerks Saturday night and the Minneapolis clerks Monday night. He told the St. Paul men that: "Two or three banks in New York City can throw the nation into a panic at any time under the present currency system. The Aldrich plan, while it has its faults, is the best currency system advanced so far. Under the present system no relief can be obtained to check an approaching panic."

To the Minneapolis clerks he said in part: "The big banker of the future will be the product of the American Institute of Banking. We have seven chapters and 12,000 members and are growing all the time. We have passed the initial stage and are now inducing our members to take up higher work than that of the ordinary bank clerk, are promoting knowledge of financial affairs in general and of the big financial and economic questions."

St. Paul Banks Have Increased Deposits

St. Paul's six national banks showed an increase of $11,000,000 in deposits at the last call as compared with the previous one. The total deposits of the twelve banks, including savings, was given at $54,149,437, with almost complete returns. Savings banks showed the notable gains, one increasing half a million dollars.

Julius H. Block

Julius H. Block, former state treasurer is president of a new $100,000 insurance company, the United States and Dominion, with headquarters at Duluth.

North Dakota Bank Offers $50 Prize

A bank at Williston, N. D., has offered a prize of $50 for the best three hogs fattened on corn grown in Williams or McKenzie counties. The commercial club is offering prizes also. Individuals will increase the total. Alfalfa land near town is already bringing $75 to $100 an acre, but farther out it is as low as $35 to $50. Alfalfa prizes will be offered.

Banking Miscellany

The German-American Bank has been named as depository for Minneapolis city funds. More than one million dollars in bonds has been recommended for issue by the city council.

Minnesota Bank Closed

Because he believed it was not being conducted properly the state superintendent of banks, Kelsey S. Chase, has closed the Chippewa County State Bank at White Earth, Minn. B. L. Fairbanks is president, W. F. Bickel is vice-president and Charles Mee is cashier. The vice-president was charged with receiving a deposit from an Indian woman and making the check out in her name with himself as trustee.

E. J. Weiser

E. J. Weiser, president of the First National at Fargo, says that the work of the North Dakota Better Farming Association is going along well and that the experimental farms on which the practical demonstration is to become will be located soon.

Money to be Distributed Among Depositories

Something like $1,000,000 to $1,500,000 less money is to be distributed this year among the state depositories by the state treasurer than last year. The money will be forwarded to the banks as soon as possible after March 1st. Several banks have been added to the list since last year which will decrease the amount for each. Last year the state had an extra amount of money on hand, about $800,000, after it had won some suits compelling the railroads to pay back taxes. The legislature authorized payment of $1,000,000 capital certificates and several appropriations, which reduced the cash on hand.

New Association Formed

The North Dakota and Western Minnesota Bank Clerks association was organized at Fargo last week. The association will be allied with the bankers' organization.

Banking Notes

Lists of St. Paul banks and a diagram of the American National floor space were found on a man arrested in a jewelry store for passing a worthless check. The police think the diagram was to give the man a chance at the money of the institution. The First and Second National were on the list.

James T. Gregory, cashier of the Ashland National bank, Wis., has resigned to devote his time to timber interests in the west. Carl Rudinquist was promoted from assistant cashier.

President Alvin W. Krech, of the Equitable Trust Company, New York City, has announced that on and after Monday, February 26th, the business of the Trust Company of America will be merged into that of the Equitable Trust Company. The main office of the latter company will be at 37 Wall Street.

"GOOD THING" OVER IN INDIANA

By OTTO J. KRAMPIKOWSKY.

The following is a copy of a letter recently received from F. L. Sattley of the Sattley Stacker Company, Indianapolis, Ind., addressed to the largest bank in Chicago. All persons interested are requested to kindly send their opinion of the machine direct to Mr. Sattley at the above address, as there is no question but what the machine, if possible of being built, would be one of the greatest inventions of the day:

Indianapolis, Ind., February 21, 1912.
Continental & Commercial National Bank,
Chicago, Illinois.

Gentlemen:

I have under construction a machine that separates and counts the different denominations of paper money, and sets them aside in bundles of one hundred. I have made sufficient progress with the machine to know that it will do all that is claimed for it.

To accomplish this the operator places a mass of bills in the hopper of the machine. Then in its further operation, each denomination is separated from the mass and placed in the receptacle designed to receive it, and delivered therefrom, one hundred in a bundle; this work being accomplished as fast as it can be done by from three to five men.
